MARY GRIGGS'S CASE.

Witness. 2 Roll. Ab. 686.

Mary Griggs was indicted upon the statute of 1 Jac. 1, cap. 11, for that she the 28th of February 1653, was married to one Nicholas Coats, and that she afterwards, viz. the 10th of October, 1659, the first husband being then alive, married Edward Cage, &c. Upon not guilty pleaded, the first husband was produced at the trial as a witness to prove the first marriage; but the Court totally refused to admit of his testimony, and said, that a wife could not be admitted to give evidence against her husband, nor the husband against his wife in any case, excepting treason, because it might occasion implacable dissention, according to 1 Inst. 6 b. And they denied The Lord Audley's case in Hutton 116 to be law; so the prosecutor having no other considerable witness, the jury brought in the prisoner not guilty.

BATEMAN AND LAWRENCE, SHERIFF OF MIDDLESEX, versus SWIFT.

Parliament. Show. 363. Salk. 331.

Debt upon the Statute of Eliz. for poundage, for executing a writ of execution. Upon nil debet, pleaded, and a verdict for the plaintiff, Sparks moved in [2] arrest of judgment, that the statute is mis-recited, for the plaintiffs in their declaration say, that the Parliament was held 28 Eliz. and the book at large says it was held the 29 of Eliz. but upon examination it appeared by the Parliament roll that it was held the 28 of Eliz. and the printed book is false, therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide 1 Anderson 291, pl. 303, a good case concerning the commencement of this Parliament.

SEAMAN versus BARNES.

Trover. 1 Danv. Abr. 24, p. 5. 1 Sid. 263, 98. 3 Keb. 253, 507. 2 Keb. 765. Stile 358. 1 Vent. 114, 106.

Trover for two pair of pot-hooks, &c. and hangers, &c. after not guilty pleaded, and a verdict for the plaintiff, Allen moved in arrest of judgment, that hangers is a too incertain and equivocal word. Baldwin for plaintiff insisted upon it, that since pot-hooks preceded the word hangers, the Court could not intend these were any other hangers than such upon which pot-hooks use to hang. And he cited a case of trover for a billiard-table, port, sticks and balls, and adjudged good, because the port, sticks and balls should be intended things appurtenant to the table. But the Court was of opinion that it was too incertain a word, for the word does not immediately follow the word pot-hooks, but there are divers other things mentioned between; therefore judgment was stayed.

WOODWARD versus BONITHAN.

Court. 2 Danv. Ab. 262. Lat. 11. Moor. 891, pl. 1225. 4 Inst. 139, 140. 12 Rep. 103. Hob. 107, 109.

A master of a ship agreed with certain merchants concerning a voyage, and received orders from them to lay in provision of meat and drink, and also to provide mariners, &c. and after the voyage was finished the merchants refused to pay the master of the ship what they had agreed for; upon which refusal he libelled against them in the Court of the Admiralty, &c. And now Serjeant Wild for the merchants moved for a prohibition, because they are sued upon a contract made upon land, and so the Admiralty has no jurisdiction. Turner against the prohibition, insisted upon it, that when a thing is in its nature maritime, as here the mariners wages, the Admiralty shall have the conusance of it; and so it was agreed by all the justices, Hil. 8 Car. 1, 1 Cr. and of this opinion was Mallet Justice: but Foster Chief Justice and Twisden Justice held a prohibition would well lie, for the statute of R. 2, 15, cap. 3, was made at the great complaint of the Commons, and should therefore be construed most beneficially for the good of the subject; and when the ordinances and orders in the time of the late troubles were made, the constant and generally received opinion was, that for mariners wages, &c. the parties could not sue in the Admiralty, and for that reason pretended orders were made on 12 April 1648, cap. 11, and another 23 April 1649, cap. 21, to enable the Admiralty to hold plea of such things: and as to that case of 8 Car. 1, they said, that that had not only been denied by several other Judges as well as by themselves at this time, but had been renounced even by several of those Judges who are said to have subscribed to it, for which reason a prohibition was granted. But all the Judges agreed, that the granting of prohibitions is not a [4] discretionary act of the Court, but are grantable ex debito justitiæ, and they denied my Lord Hobart's opinion in his Reports 67, which Roll Chief Justice they said had frequently done before.

Error upon a judgment given in C. B. in an action upon the case for words: the plaintiff declared, that the defendant being seised of certain land, &c. said of the plaintiff, Burton had forged a deed to cheat me of my land, and he gave A. B. 40s. for ingrossing it. Resolved the words are actionable, and judgment was affirmed.

WINDHURST versus GIBBES.

Custom.

Covenant. The plaintiff declared upon a custom in London, that every freeman may take an apprentice, and that infants may bind themselves to serve, &c. After a verdict for the plaintiff, Jones moved in arrest of judgment, that this custom is only alledged in fieri, and not in facto, and consequently naught; for prescription consists in the reiteration of acts, which this custom, as here set out, has not to support it; and he cited the case of 22 E. 4, 8, a custom that every man may turn his plow upon the next land adjoining, if it is not sown with corn; adjudged naught for not adding the usage. So Pasch. 37 Eliz. Bishop's case, a custom found within a manor, that every tenant of the said manor potuit & potuisset sursum reddere, &c. and adjudged naught. So 21 Jac. Sir William Hatton's case, licet & licuit for the lord to assess a pain for the breach of a by-law, adjudged void. And the pleading of gavelkind lands, which are partita as well as partibilia, and of copy-hold lands dimissa as well as dimissibilia, seems to demonstrate that the law is so. But the Court was of the contrary opinion, and compared it to case of 21 E. 4, 28, and the Old Book of Entries 141. A custom, that every citizen and freeman might devise in mortmain, and allowed good; and to this [5] opinion the Judges inclined in The King and Bagshaw's case, 1 Cr. 347, so the plaintiff had his judgment.

DETHICK versus BRADBOURNE.

Error. 3 Danv. Abr. 242, p. 4. 2 Sid. 110, 117.

The plaintiff had a judgment given for him in B. R. upon which the defendant brought a writ of error returnable in Parliament, and the transcript of the record was certified, and errors were assigned, and the Parliament dissolved before they were determined. Now Jones moved in B. R. for execution upon this judgment, and cited 1 H. 7, pl. 5, page 20, Flourdew's case, and 2 Cro. 342, Heydon versus Godsalve, that a writ of error in Parliament is determined by the dissolution of the Parliament; the Court after grand debate how it should appear to them that the errors are indetermined above, and that the judgment is not there reversed, at another day granted execution, and the reason they gave was, because the record it self was never out of this Court, but only the transcript carried up by the Chief Justice, and there left; and when a judgment of this Court is reversed in Parliament, the transcript is returned hither, and this record made according to the transcript so returned. Quod nota.

NEWCE versus PARKER.

Intr. Mich. 12 Car. 2, Rot. 672.

Error.

Error out of C. B. upon a judgment there given in an action upon the case upon a wager, whether the eldest son of a puisne knight bachelor, or the grandchild of an elder knight bachelor should have the precedence by the judgment of a herald; and the herald gave precedence to the grandchild of the elder knight, and accordingly judgment was given in C. B. and that judgment they were here affirming, but the writ of error abated for false direction and misrecital.

Baron and feme. 1 Danv. Abr. 718, G. p. 1. 1 Lev. 25. 1 Keb. 20, 22.

Debt for 15l. for rent. Upon demurrer to the declaration, the case was such, the plaintiff demises by indenture, to Dame Ashfield a widow, a house in St. Giles's in the Fields, rendering 30l. a year rent; the defendant marries her, and the rent is behind during the coverture; the wife dies, and the plaintiff brings this action upon the indenture against the husband for this rent; and it seems the action well lies according to 10 H. 6, 11 a. But it was adjourned; and afterwards it was adjudged for the plaintiff.

BOYLESTONE versus RADCLIFFE. DEBT ON OBLIGATION.

Bankrupts. 1 Danv. Abr. 691, p. 5. 1 Lev. 17. 1 Keb. 167.

The plaintiff declares upon the Statute of Bankrupts, and on the pleadings the case was, that the defendant was indebted to one Studder and the plaintiff in a joint obligation; Studder becomes a bankrupt, and this debt is assigned to the plaintiff by the commissioners, to the use of the creditors. Finch Solicitor General for the plaintiff; This is a good assignment; and in this case we shall inquire, First, What interest the obligees have? Secondly, What power the commissioners have? Thirdly, If the commissioners here have executed their power? As to the first, the obligation cannot properly be the debt of them both, because an interest cannot be both joint and several, as Slingsby's case, in Coke's 5 Rep. 19 a. and therefore they are both possessed per my & per tout; and then one of them being a bankrupt, the commissioners have power to assign the whole debt due to the bankrupt, and for necessity, because the statute of 1 Jac. says, that the assignee shall have the same remedy as the bankrupt. Objection. The debt is not the debt of the bankrupt only, but the debt of another also. Answer. It is also the debt of the bankrupt: if the husband be jointly seised in the right of his wife, and is [7] attainted and dies, the wife dies, the issue is barred, Co. 8 Rep. 72 a. Greenley's case. And by the frank-tenement of the wife, that is intended, that she hath jointly with her husband, by the statute of 32 H. 8, cap. 28. So when the husband loseth by default land which was the right of his wife, jus uxoris is that which she had jointly with her husband within Westm. 2, cap. 3, there, and this debt is in some sort belonging to the estate of Studder, for he may discharge it. Secondly, Assignment ought to be favoured, and therefore Mich. 23 Car. Baker against Edmonds, Styles's Rep. 62. An assignee brings an indebitatus assumpsit for 42l. upon an assignment of a debt due by contract of 43l. and upon non assumpsit, and a special verdict, resolved for the plaintiff; for although in strictness of law it is not good, yet in favour of creditors it was held good. Thirdly, Whatsoever a bankrupt may forfeit, that may be assigned, and there he might have forfeited the whole obligation: and there is a difference betwixt a personal chattel in action and in possession; for of a joint personal chattel in action the King shall have all: but of a joint chattel personal in possession the King shall have only the moiety. 8 E. 4, 4 a. Plowden 259 a. Co. 3 Inst. 35. Object. Perhaps the other obligee hath released. Resp. That is not found in the verdict, and it may be as well surmised that it was in trust for the bankrupt. Wyndham, If there be two obligees, the one cannot release to the other, because a thing in action, and the statute shall not go by the rule of what thing the bankrupt may do, for he cannot assign a thing in action. Twisden, The case of the forfeiture of felo de se, of a joint debt is by prerogative, but he cannot assign the whole, and if he may, then the other may release it. Secondly, the statute saith, that the assignee shall have the same action. Here the bankrupt cannot have an action without the other. Foster, The question is, if the commissioners have power to take away the power of the other obligee to release the debt, and if the assignee dies, this survives to the other obligee; when the common law and statute-law concur, the common law shall be preferred. Et adjournatur.

[8] JERMY against SIR ARTHUR JENNY. ASSUMPSIT. SUFF.

Assumpsit. When the matters to be pleaded tend to infiniteness and multiplicity, whereby the rolls shall be incumbered in the length thereof, the law allows of a general pleading. Cro. Eliz. 749, Mints versus Bethill. 3 Bulst. 31, Cryps vers Bainton. Vide Sid. 18.

The plaintiff declares, that whereas the defendant the 8th of June 1655, at Layston, in consideration that the plaintiff at the special instance and request of the defendant would from thenceforth admit, entertain and board the defendant and his retinue in the house and family of the plaintiff, and would find, provide and allow to and for the defendant and his retinue, meat, drink and lodging, and horse-meat for his horses whensoever, and so often as should please the said defendant to repair and come to the dwelling-house to the plaintiff, did assume and promise to pay to plaintiff so much money for the same, as he should reasonably deserve, upon request. The plaintiff avers, that afterwards, (viz.) the aforesaid 8th day of June, and divers other days and times afterwards, he did admit, entertain and board the defendant and his retinue into the house and family of the plaintiff, and did find, provide and allow the defendant and his retinue, meat, drink and lodging, and horse-meat for his horses several times, and whensoever, and so often as it pleased the defendant after the same 8th of June, to repair and come to the dwelling-house of the plaintiff, and that he doth deserve 33l. 12s. and so brings his action. The defendant demurs upon this declaration, and shews for cause, 1. That the plaintiff doth not shew the time of notice when the defendant came to his house. 2. He doth not shew that the defendant after the 8th of June came to the house of the plaintiff. 3. Because the count is so defective, insufficient, incertain, and wants form, &c. Scroggs for the defendant. The declaration is incertain, because it doth not appear what days the defendant came to the house of the plaintiff, or that the plaintiff found him meat, drink, horse-meat, &c. and therefore on another action brought this action cannot be pleaded in bar; for he ought to have said, that divers days between the said 8th of June and the exhibition of the bill he entertained, &c. Raymond for the plaintiff. The count is certain enough, for as to the shewing that he entertained him from such a day [9] till such a day, perhaps the truth of the fact was not so; and then if he had declared so, and the defendant had taken issue upon it, the issue would have been found against the plaintiff. 2. If it had been divers times betwixt the 8th of June and such a day, this had been as uncertain as it is here, for the number of days would not appear, more than here, so that the jury may be ascertained what damages to give. 3. It is shewn that all was after the promise, and that nothing incurred after the bill; for the bringing of the bill shews that he hath not paid; and it seems that it cannot be better; for if he ought to have shewn all the days, or the time in particular, this would have made the declaration too prolix, and to no purpose, for upon the evidence it will appear what the plaintiff hath deserved; and upon this reason it was here adjudged in a case of the same nature, Mich. 1654, B. R. Pratt against Banks, error of judgment in the Common Bench, where the plaintiff brought an action upon the case upon a special promise, and the count was such, that whereas he was an attorney of the Common Bench, the defendant promised, that if he would prosecute a suit for him in the said Court betwixt him and A. B. that he would give to him 3s. 4d. every term; and also if he would solicit another suit for him in Chancery, and disburse the money that should be due to the officers and counsel, &c. that he would repay him, and give to him so much for his salary; the plaintiff avers that he did prosecute the said suit in the C. B. and solicited for him in Chancery, and paid divers sums of money to several officers and counsel amounting to so much, and that the defendant had not paid him, and judgment was for the plaintiff in C. B. and the defendant brought a writ of error, and assigned for error that the plaintiff did not set forth to whom the fees and money was paid, so that if the officers will sue the defendant again for the same money, he cannot plead this action in bar. But resolved, that it doth not behove him to alledge the particulars, for there is a difference where the action is grounded upon the duty, as in debt upon the contract, as Gardner and Bellingham's case, Hob. Rep. 5. And this is for conciseness of pleading, as in an action upon the statute of sending knights to Parliament, the election shall be said per majorem numerum. Plow. Com. Bulkeley's case. 2. The entertainment is at the request of the defendant, and therefore he best knows what time he was entertained; and [10] upon this reason it is adjudged, Hill. 15 Car. B. R. Canwey against Aldre, Cro. Car. 573. In an assumpsit the plaintiff declares, that where he at the request of the defendant amended such a boat, and divers other boats of the defendant, he assumed to pay to him for his labour and charges tantum quantum, and avers that he amended one and divers other boats, and that he deserved so much; and this objection was there made, but adjudged that it is good enough, by Jones, Barkeley and Croke; and the reason is, because the defendant (at whose request the said boats were mended) might well take conusance what boats they desired to have amended; and this case was well scanned, for that Justice Barkeley doubted of it at first, and there were precedents searched, and the Secondary there said, that divers precedents were in the case, and one was cited by Croke himself. Assumpsit was brought by a taylor, and he declared, that where he had made a gown, and divers other suits of apparel at the request of the defendant, he promised to pay him tantum quantum, and in Cro. James 370, in Shepheard and Edwards's case, in assumpsit for curing a fistula, the plaintiff avers, that he such a day, and divers other days and times betwixt such a day and such day, caused to be applied medicines, and that he deserved so much; and judgment for the plaintiff; Noy Rep. 16, Tayler and Charey, assumpsit to pay 4l. at Lady-Day, circiter illud tempus, and avers, that he paid it not within forty days after; and adjudged for the plaintiff, because it appears that it was not paid when the suit was commenced. 3. The entertainment is according to the agreement, which is so often as the defendant pleased to come, &c. which cannot be set forth without great prolixity and hazard; and upon debate judgment was given for the plaintiff at another day.

[11] TERM. PASCH. 13 CAR. 2, B. R.

ROBINS against COX AND WARWICK.

Debt. 2 Danv. Abr. 494, p. 16. 1 Lev. 22. 1 Keb. 1, 42, 71, 153, 250.

The case was, Kenne seised of land in fee demises to the defendants for twenty-one years, rendering rent during the term, and then grants the rent only (without the reversion) to the plaintiff and his assigns during the term, and the defendants atturn; and for rent behind the plaintiff brings debt, and shews this whole matter in his count; and the defendants plead nil debent, and found for the plaintiff. And Powis moved in arrest of judgment, because debt, as this case is, lieth not, because there is no privity betwixt the defendants and the plaintiff, and of a rent-seck there is not any remedy without seisin. Baldwin for the plaintiff. 1. Rent-service may come to be rent-seck, Lit. sect. 225, and here by the attornment there is quasi a new contract between the plaintiffs and the defendants. Wyndham Justice for the plaintiff, L. 5 E. 4, 42. Debt lies for an annuity granted for years; and 45 E. 3, 8, privity of contract may be transferred; and debt lies upon a lease of a fair, and therefore a bishop may grant a fair for years, but not for life, because debt lies. 2. The law favours remedies. Twisden of the same opinion, because the rent was originally subject to an action of debt, and therefore, although it is now in another hand, yet the contract remains, as distress for rent, which is overplus of common right; and Coke lib. 4, Ognel's case, if an annuity be arrear, and the grantee dies, his executors shall have debt, because the person of the grantor was originally charged, 9 H. 7, 16. A seignory in fee is granted for years, the grantee shall not have debt, because it is out of a fee, but after the term expired he shall have debt, 19 H. 6, 42, per Ascough, and 44 El. Bendlows against Philips, and Cro. Eliz. 895. It was adjudged that grantee of a rent-seck shall have debt, because the law favours remedies.

Mallet Justice contra, because no privity is betwixt the parties; and of the same opinion was Foster Chief Justice; [12] and therefore the Court being divided no judgment was given; mes vide Cro. Eliz. 637 & 651, Ards versus Watkins, where it is adjudged that an action of debt lies.

Mandamus. 1 Sid. 40. 1 Keb. 5.

A mandamus was prayed for one Stamp to restore him to be a steward of a court-leet and court-baron of the manors of Stepney and Hackney, of which he was displaced in the troublesome times for his affection to the King, and one Northey put in his place; and York who moved for it, insisted that such writ well lies, because it is an office of administration of justice; and it is more reasonable than for an usher of a grammar-school, which was granted in the year 1655, in Craford's case, and for an alderman, 2 Bulst. 122, in Shuttleworth's case, for a common council-man, Stiles Rep. 32. Estwick's case, for a town-clerk and constable, Noy 78. Poph. 167, for a burgess, Cro. Jac. 506, Clark's case. And the Court inclined that the writ lay to restore one to the stewardship of a court-leet, but not to a court-baron; but it was adjourned, and precedents directed to be searched.

Privilege. 1 Sid. 42, 192. 1 Keb. 3, 13, 16, 727.

Sir Richard Temple being chose burgess for Buckingham, and having a trial at the Bar to be had on Tuesday before the sitting of the Parliament, moved by Serjeant Maynard to have his privilege allowed him, but his motion was denied in regard the Parliament were not sitting, nor to sit till after the trial had, (viz.) the 8th of May, but the trial did not go on. Vide Moor Rep. 340, pl. 461, Fitzherbert's case.

RAWLINS versus HILL.

Words. 1 Keb. 6, 17.

I will indict Richard Rawlins at the next sessions, and he shall lose his estate, and it shall go hard with him for his life: but his estate he shall surely lose for marking my sheep. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment; and Jones being for the plaintiff said that these words tantamount to felony; but by Wyndham Justice, the latter words mitigate all, and therefore judgment was stayed until, &c.

[13] JOHNSON versus SAMWORTH.

Assumpsit. 1 Keb. 9.

The plaintiff counts, that the defendant in consideration that the plaintiff would give to him 5s. he would give to the plaintiff 40s. if he ever played at a game called even and odd for money or wine, and avers that he gave to him 5s. and that the defendant played at the said game such a day, unde actio accrevit. Upon non assumpsit, and verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that there was not any such play; but it was allowed, and the Court approved of the consideration to restrain young men from gaming; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Pardon. 1 Sid. 41, 4. 1 Keb. 9, 19, 108.

Memorandum, Thomas Howard (brother to the Earl of Carlisle) and his two servants, Michael Naylor and John Mills, were indicted for murder, for the killing one Proby servant of a horse-courser at St. Giles in the Fields, and found guilty of the murder, and attainted; and now on this 4th day of April they were brought to the Bar to shew a pardon which they had obtained, and shew cause why they should not be executed; and they pleaded the pardon, which was read, and it (as I well observed) recited all the proceedings upon the indictment, and then the King was informed that no evidence was given that there was any malice prepense in them in other manner than by construction and implication of law, and for that the King pardoned the killing and felony, &c. but no word of murder was in it but by description; and the Court were troubled to hear such a suggestion in the patent, because they knew the contrary to be true, and therefore they said, that upon such a pardon a scire facias might be brought seven years hence, and they might be hanged notwithstanding this pardon, and therefore they advised Mr. Howard to procure a better pardon; and Wyndham Justice said, that the suggestion of the pardon might have been grounded on the merits of the prisoners, &c. But upon this charter the prisoners have not produced any writ of allowance, and therefore the pardon was not allowed; but their execution respited till another day, at which day they produced a patent without any suggestion at all, and a writ of allowance, but the date was mistaken, and did not agree with the writ, and therefore execution was respited over.

[14] GODLINGTON versus LEE.

Debt. Debt lies on a judgment given on the sci. fac. against the bail. Inst. 236. Upon the recognizance. 1 Roll. 600. pl. 7, 8. Vide un president, Trin. 8 Jac. Rot. 805. 1 Brown. 65. Booth against Davenant, Winch 61. Sparrow vers. Sowgate, Hetley 129.

The case was, the defendant became bail in this Court for another, and judgment was given against the principal, and now the plaintiff brings debt upon this recognizance; and Allen moved for an imparlance, because debt lieth not in such case, because by this means the bail shall be ousted of his plea of no capias filed against the principal, and also abridged of his time of bringing the principal, which he hath until the second scire facias returned, for now immediately he shall be liable to the debt; and although it was objected, that there had been precedents of such action, and Bendlows in the time of H. 8 makes mention of it, he said those precedents passed sub silentio, and therefore they are not to be regarded; and for these reasons the Court granted an imparlance that such action lies not; quod nota.

BARNARD versus EWENS.

Tithes. Contra Hob. 176. Cro. Jac. 137. Hawles versus Bayfield, 2 Danv. Abr. 621, p. 7. 1 Lev. 24. 1 Keb. 5, 21.

Debt upon 2 E. 6 for tithes. The defendant pleads an agreement between the plaintiff and him for three years, and doth not alledge this to be by deed, and issue upon it, and found for the defendant; and Powis moved for the plaintiff to have a repleader, because the issue is not good; but resolved by the whole Court, although it is not such an agreement which may pass the right, yet it is a good agreement within the statute to bar the plaintiff in his action of debt; Yelv. 94, Hawks versus Brothwick 131, accordingly.

GLINISTER versus AUDLEY.

Debt. 1 Keb. 58.

Debt upon an obligation; the defendant demands oyer of the condition, which was to perform covenants, one of which was, that the defendant covenanted that he was seised of an indefeasible estate in fee-simple, and the defendant pleads covenants performed; the plaintiff replies, that he was not seised of an indefeasible estate in fee-simple, and the defendant demurs generally, because he supposed that the plaintiff ought to have shewn of what estate the defendant was seised, in regard he had departed with all his writings [15] concerning the land in presumption of law, and therefore the plaintiff well knew the title; and it is not like to Bradshaw's case, because there the covenant was with the lessee for years, who had not the writings. But resolved the breach was well assigned according to the words of the covenant; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

GRAVES versus SAWCER.

Case. 1 Lev. 29. 1 Keb. 38.

In an action upon the case, the plaintiff declares that he was owner of a sixteenth part of a ship, and the defendant was owner of another sixteenth part of the same ship, and that the defendant frandulently and deceitfully carried the said ship ad loca transmarina, and disposed of her to his own use, by which the plaintiff hath lost his said sixteenth part, to his damage. On not guilty pleaded, and verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that this action doth not lie; for although it be found to be deceptive, yet this does not help it, if the action doth not lie on the subject matter; and here they are tenants in common of the ship; and Littleton saith, that between tenants in common there is no remedy; and there cannot be any fraud between tenants in common, because the law supposes a trust and confidence betwixt them; and upon these reasons judgment was given quod querens nil capiat per billam. Vide Noy 14. Crosse versus Abbot, M. 11 H. 4. 13 a. pl. 29.

SMITH versus WARNER. TRESPASS.

Damages. 1 Keb. 49, 61. Herne's Ent. 320.

Trespass for taking goods: the plaintiff counts de una satagine, Anglice a frying-pan: and after verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, because it ought to be sartagine, for satago signifies nothing; and adjudged for the plaintiff; for if satago signify nothing, then no damages were given for it, and the difference was taken where the word signifies another thing, there it is ill, but where it is insignificant it doth not vitiate.

Trespass. If they were taken in the warren or wood of the plaintiff, they might be his pheasants. Cro. Car. 553. Child versus Greenhill. 1 Sid. 39. 1 Keb. 53, 60.

Trespass vi & armis quare phasianos suos & perdices suas cepit; and not guilty found for the plaintiff; and moved in arrest of judgment, because they are feræ naturæ, and therefore there cannot be any property in them: but adjudged for the plaintiff, because after verdict they shall be presumed dead, and then a property may be in them.

WYNNE versus LLOYD.

Error. Postea 55, 70, 96, 134. 3 Danv. Abr. 49, p. 7. 1 Lev. 72, 130, 146. 1 Keb. 351, 388, 459, 717, 748, 809, 914. 1 Sid. 213. Vid. Moor, 524, pl. 693. Clark versus Hardwick.

Error to reverse a common recovery in Anglesey, the errors assigned were in the writ of summons, and in the dedimus potestatem, and upon this a scire facias issues against the demandant in the recovery, who pleads in nullo est erratum, and then upon suggestion that Wynne was concerned, a scire facias issued to him, and he pleads that another had lands comprized in the said recovery, who is not named in the said writ of error, judgment of the writ, and on this plea the plaintiff demurred. Allen for the plaintiff; This plea is not good, because the process had been good without naming this party, for the ter-tenant only is to be there of necessity, Dyer, 321 a. and he shall only plead the thing, for which judgment shall not be reversed, and not in abatement of the writ of error, 30 H. 6, 2 b. per Fortescue. 2dly. This plea is not to any purpose, for the Court may proceed without the other ter-tenants. 3dly. Such plea is against the return of the sheriff expressly, for he hath returned the ter-tenants. 4thly. This plea is ill, because he pleads that A. is ter-tenant of divers, and doth not say what lands.

Williams contra. These questions are inquirable; 1st. If a scire facias be necessary against the ter-tenants in this [17] case. 2. If every ter-tenant ought to be returned. 3. If another ter-tenant that is not returned may be suggested at the Bar.

As to the first. A scire facias in this case is necessary against the ter-tenants, because none gains or loses but they, Dyer 321, before; and all the precedents mention this, Cro. Jac. 392, Harbert versus Binion, 160. Champernoon against Godolphin, 41 Eliz. Lee versus Holland, and Row versus Eveley, and Owen 157. Carew versus Warren, 21 E. 3, 56, Bridgman 70. Holland versus Jackson.

To the second. A scire facias being awarded generally, every one ought to be summoned.

Object. The party shall not be concluded, although he be not summoned.

Answ. He shall not be concluded if he come in due time; but the discretion of the Court will support a common recovery, and here if this ter-tenant doth not come, he shall be concluded, for it is not like to Dyer 321.

To the third. It now appearing to the Court that there is such a ter-tenant, a scire facias ought to issue against him, Fitz. Scire Facias, 38. 21 E. 3, 56, and it was adjourned, post.

Words. 1 Keb. 50, 56.

Nuttal that was Solomon Smith's clerk is a knave, and rogue, and I will prove it, and he is in Newgate, and is to be hanged for counterfeiting the King's hand and seal; adjudged for the plaintiff.

WINDSER versus SEYWELL. EJECTMENT.

Outlawry. 1 Keb. 57, 74, 76. 1 Lev. 33.

On a special verdict, the case was, A. outlawed in a personal action levies a fine, and the King seizeth the land in the hands of the conusee, and whether such seizure be good or not, was the question; and resolved, that if the seizure was before the fine levied, then the King may well retain against the conusee: but if the fine was levied before the seizure, the conusee may well take; and the book of 21 H. 7, f. 7, was denied, that the King cannot dispose of the land it self of a person outlawed, for the course of Exchequer is against that book. Vide Stamf. [18] TIPPIN AND GROVER.

Rent. 1 Keb. 62.

Debt for rent brought by executors, the plaintiffs count, that their testator was seized for another's life of certain tithes, and demised them to the defendant for years, rendering rent, and for 400l. arrear they bring debt; and on demurrer on this declaration, Jones argued it is a rent, and that the executors shall not have this rent, because it appertains to the reversion, for it is a rent although not in point of remedy. Cro. Jac. 112 & 453.

Allen contra. Debt lies upon the contract, which goes to the executors. But he perceiving the opinion of the Court to be against him, prayed a discontinuance, which was granted him.

BLACK versus MOLE. REPLEVIN.

Attornment. 1 Danv. Abr. 614, p. 8. 1 Lev. 40. 1 Keb. 93.

A copyholder makes a lease for years rendering rent, and then surrenders two parts of the reversion, and he to whose use the surrender was made distrains for the two parts of the rent, and mentions not any attornment of the tenant in his avowry, nor any notice; and upon this avowry the plaintiff demurs; and adjudged that attornment and notice are not necessary, because the surrender is a thing notorious of it self.

ANDREWS versus SHOWELL.

Attorney.

The case was, The defendant gave a warrant of attornment to one to confess judgment in debt to the plaintiff by non sum informatus at eight a clock in the morning, and at ten a clock before the judgment signed by the Secondary, the defendant dies, and now the executors of the defendant move to set aside this judgment; but resolved it was well obtained, it being for a good debt; quod nota.

On a special verdict the jury found Edward Guilford, father of the defendant, was seized of the lands in question for life, the remainder to the defendant in tail; the father enters into a recognizance in Chancery, to the lessor of the plaintiff, and dies, the lessor sues a scire facias upon the same recognizance, the sheriff returns the defendant heir and ter-tenant, & quod scire fecit the defendant, and he makes default and doth not plead; and judgment is given, that the conusee have execution, who leases to the plaintiff.

Wild Serjeant for the plaintiff, Here by the judgment upon default in the scire facias the defendant is bound until he reverses it either by writ of error, or relieves himself by audita querela, F. N. B. 104 b. Kel. 25 a. Pasch. 1652, B. R. Barcock versus Thompson, Styles's Rep. 323. If judgment be given against the bail upon two nichils, and no capias is returned against the principal, although the bail cannot reverse the judgment by error, yet he may have an audita querela, but not upon a scire feci returned. Vide Mich. 1657, B. R. Kilburne versus Rack, Ejectment, B. R. Intr. Trin. 1656, Rot. 876.

[20] Wyndham for the defendant, It seems this case differs from the cases put, because here execution is sued upon another estate than the conusor had; as if the sheriff return J. S. ter-tenant, who never had any thing in the said land of the conusor, yet J. S. may maintain an ejectment, Mich 6 R. 2, Fitz. Assise 69. And here the conusor had only an estate for life, and not the estate of which the defendant was seized at the time of the action.

Twisden for the plaintiff, Vigilantibus & non dormientibus jura subveniunt, the defendant ought to have pleaded when he had warning, and now he shall not falsify his recovery, and there is a difference when the conusor is tenant in tail, and when for life; and now the defendant is estopped by the return of the sheriff; and this differs from the two nichils.

Foster for the plaintiff, Here is a wilful contempt in the defendant, for that he came not in on the scire feci. It was adjourned, and after judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Mich. 13 Car. 2, B. R.

He is a base fellow, and I will question him ere long, for that he would have taken away the King's life. Verdict for the plaintiff. Ursula Austen versus John Mander.

Error of a judgment in Oakhampton in Devon.

Error. 1 Keb. 113.

The errors taken by Alleyn were, 1st, The venire fac. is, therefore it is commanded by the Court that he make to come twelve, &c. by whom, &c. and who, &c. in a brief manner, as in the Courts at Westminster, where it ought to be at large in all inferior jurisdictions. Answ. In the case of Osborne and Gregory of a judgment in Excester, this exception was moved and disallowed. 2dly, He doth not say that process of distringas is awarded by the Court, but as before, &c. Answ. It is good because it refers to the matter before. 3dly, The judgment is quod recuperet, and also 39s. pro misis & custagiis de incremento, and doth [21] not say circa sectam suam, and it may be that the increase was for sickness or battery, or some other collateral matter. Answ. The precedents are all so at Westminster, and it shall not be presumed for any other thing than for the said suit; and Twisden said, that the reason, for which nothing out of Inferior Courts shall be taken by intendment, is, because there they only enter short notes of their proceedings, and when they are to certify, the attornies here draw the records at large; and judgment was affirmed.

PALMER versus STAVICK. REPLEVIN.

Estoppel. Pas. 1652, B. R. Carter versus Wicker, Rot. 448. 3 Danv. Abr. 273, p. 56. 1 Keb. 95, 113. 1 Sid. 44. 1 Lev. 43.

The defendant made conusance for a rent-charge due anno Dom. 1658. The plaintiff pleads, that the defendant upon another replevin at another time, together with A. B. made conusance upon the said plaintiff for rent arrear in the year 1660, and demands judgment, if against the said avowry he shall make conusance for rent due before, and relied upon the said estoppel, and the defendant demurred. Jones for the plaintiff, It seems the defendant is estopped by the avowry as by an acquittance, and a fortiori because it is matter of record, and that an acquittance is a bar of arrearages, the books are plain, Dyer 271 a. 3 Coke 65 b. Pennant's case, 11 H. 4, 55 a. But the truth is Fitz. Bar. 79 is against me; but that case I deny, and also the case of the annuity. Obj. The avowry here is not betwixt the same parties. Answ. They are the same defendants, and the same parties in whose rights the distress is made; and if this shall not be the same action, there will be infinite vexation.

Allen for the defendant, Here is not any estoppel, because not between the same parties, and in truth the duty remains, and the bailiff cannot conclude his master.

Wyndham is clear for the defendant; and the opinion of Fitz. Bar. by three justices is good, because an annuity may be paid without acquittance.

Twisden of the same opinion.

Mallet for the plaintiff, Because an avowry is a thing upon record, and more than an acquittance; but judgment was given for the defendant.

[22] GRANGER versus HEMBOROUGH. DEBT.

Debt upon an obligation of 50l. to perform covenants in an indenture, and one is, that the defendant pay 12l. a year for a messuage to him demised quarterly, at four feasts. The defendant pleads performance of all covenants. The plaintiff assigns for breach, that he did not pay 3l. one quarter's rent. The defendant rejoins, that before the said 3l. was due, the plaintiff entered upon him, and expelled him. The plaintiff demurs.

Baldwin for the plaintiff, The rejoinder is a departure, for he might have pleaded this matter in his bar, as Dyer 291, Fitz Williams's case. In a formedon the tenant pleads a fine, the demandant replies, quod partes finis nihil habuerunt, but that such a one was seised; the tenant rejoins that the party that levied the fine was seised in use; and resolved a departure, for he alledges before a seisin at common law, and now would make this good by the statute.

Jones for the defendant, This rejoinder is a corroboration of the bar, and he ought not to have pleaded this thing at the first, because there are several covenants, and he could not know in which of them he would have assigned the breach; and there is a difference where the condition is to perform all covenants comprised, and where it is all covenants and payments, as Chapman's case is, Cro. Car. 76, there the defendant pleaded performance of all; the plaintiff assigned a breach in non-payment of the rent; the defendant cannot rejoin, that it was not demanded, because it is a departure.

Wyndham, It is a departure, and it is not like to the case of demand, because it is a discharge.

Twisden agreed with Wyndham, where the defendant pleads a general plea, he shall not make this good after by a particular thing in the rejoinder; but it was adjourned, and after ruled to be a departure, and judgment given for the plaintiff. Vide Cro. Eliz. 828, Specot and Sheers, a case directly in point.

Words. 1 Keb. 115.

Thou art a traytor and a rebel; the defendant justifies, that 28 Sept. 1659, the plaintiff was a soldier under one Captain Ceely, against the King: plaintiff demurs, presuming the general pardon had restored him to his good fame, as Hob. 81. Cuddington against Wilkins; but adjudged for the defendant, because the plaintiff ought to have shewn that he was not one of the persons there excepted.

NICHOLSON versus SHERMAN.

Case for a Legacy.

Case. 1 Danv. Abr. 207, p. 4. 1 Sid. 45. 1 Keb. 116.

The plaintiff declares, that James Glassebrook made his will, and devised to the plaintiff 100l. and that his executors should double the said 100l. and for the 200l. he brings this action, and avers the defendant hath assets beyond debts; and the defendant demurs.

Jones for the plaintiff. Here are two points. 1. If the doubling the 100l. be a devise, or that it shall be only at the discretion of the executors; and it seems clear that it is a devise, and the other part doth not oppose it. 2. If an action upon the case lies for a legacy; and held that it does. 1st, I will not insist whether there be any remedy for a legacy at common law. Glanvil, lib. 7, chap. 6, 7. 2dly, An action of the case lies against an executor upon a breach of trust, as it lies against a shepherd for not regarding his charge. And first, the law takes notice of legacies to collateral purposes, as a promise to forbear a legacy is a good consideration to ground an assumpsit; and in an action against an executor in his own wrong, it is a good plea to say that he hath paid all in legacies; and an action upon the case lies for a tort, as for not performing a contract, Cro. Jac. 544, Healy versus Duntley. Here is a breach of trust, because the executor takes upon him to perform the will of the plaintiff. Object. Legacies cannot be sued for here in specie, and it was never known before. Answ. The action of indebitatus assumpsit was a rare action before Slade's case.

[24] Wyld contra. An action doth not lie for a legacy, because it is a testamentary thing, and one of the principal, as appears by the writ of prohibition, Register 38, and the same argument that Littleton uses for the Statute of Merton may be here used, that never such an action had been used; and the rule of the civil law is not current in Westminster-Hall, boni Judicis est ampliare jurisdictionem; and true it is, the common law takes notice of a legacy; but so, as it is a testamentary thing, and as to the indebitatus assumpsit which was so rare, yet it was within the jurisdiction of the common law; and although of late time such actions have been used, yet this was left there should be a failure of justice when there was no Ecclesiastical Court; and so it was adjudged in Harwood and Peytoe's case, that an elegit might be executed in the glebe land of a parson; but if it were to be adjudged now, it would not be so ruled as it was then. 2dly, If it be a breach of trust, then it is a personal tort, & moritur cum persona, as an executor shall not be responsible for an escape suffered by the testator. Dyer 322 a.

Wyndham, The action doth not lie, for the conusance of a legacy doth not appertain to the common law, for that by our law a man cannot give any thing after his death, because post mortem tunc tua non sunt, and there is not any such duty at the common law as a legacy; and an action of the case doth not lie for every tort, for it doth not lie for non-payment of rent, and a pension raised by the constitution of the Ordinary is not suable here.

Twisden, It was adjudged here, that a legacy issuable out of land is suable here, and originally legacies were suable in the County Court; and Rastal Entries 301 a. title Execut. in Action 5, debt is brought against an executor for a legacy, but a demurrer is on the count, and no judgment given; but that which moves me against this action is, that by this way an action upon the case will be brought for every thing suable in the Ecclesiastical Court.

1 Keb. 40, 117.

Upon evidence in a trial at Bar, the case was, that Henry Crawley 6 Nov. 1645, conveys by indenture to Web and Taylor in fee, and levies a fine accordingly without any consideration, and 13 March 1645, he covenants to stand seised to the use of himself for life, the remainder to his first son in tail, who is the lessor of the plaintiff and levies a fine accordingly; the 28 March 1653, Henry Crawley and his wife, with Web and Taylor join in a voluntary conveyance by fine to William Godfrey and his heirs; Henry Crawley having issue the lessor of the plaintiff dies; William Godfrey makes his will, and of this makes the Lord Windsor and the Lord Castleton his executors, and devises the lands to be sold by them; they the 19 March 1657, sell to Skinner and Skinner for 2000l. who convey to Sir Thomas Bide and his heirs. And it was resolved by the Court, that although Skinner and Skinner paid a valuable consideration, yet the estate to Godfrey being voluntary, if the conveyance of 6 Nov. 1645, was forged, the plaintiff hath good title; but the jury found the first conveyance good, and found for the defendant.

ELIZABETH ROBINSON against MARGARET AMPS. COVENANT.

The plaintiff declares, that the defendant by indenture dated 1659, reciting, that there was a lease made to the defendant, and a recognizance acknowledged by Humfry Robinson to the defendant, bearing date with the said indenture, the defendant covenanted that if Humfry Robinson pay to the defendant such a sum 24 June 1660, &c. that then the said recognizance shall be void, and then the defendant, his executors and administrators, &c. at the costs of the plaintiff will regrant the said indenture, and redeliver the said recognizance to be cancelled and vacated, and the plaintiff assigns for breach, that 21 October 1659, the defendant prosecuted an extent upon this recognizance. The defendant pleads, that he did not [26] prosecute upon this recognizance, and issue upon it, and found for the plaintiff; and Jones moved in arrest of judgment, that here is only an implied breach, for the recognizance may be delivered up, and yet the recognizance be prosecuted.

Allen for the plaintiff. 1. Where a covenant terminates in it self, it is properly a covenant but a defeazance, Plow. 138 a. But here is an engagement to deliver up the said recognizance. 2. Here is a present breach, for when he extends, the plaintiff shall not be compelled to stay till a farther day, when the extent is a breach of the covenant, as 5 Co. 22, Sir Anthony Maine's case.

Wyndham. A covenant to do a present act is not properly a covenant; as to stand seised. And as to the second, the defendant hath disabled himself to deliver up the recognizance, as feoffee on condition takes wife, &c. and the breach here is well assigned.

Twisden to the same intent, and so the other Judges; and judgment was given for the plaintiff, nisi, &c.

EDSAR versus SMART.

Execution. 3 Danv. Abr. 311, p. 5, 334, p. 5. 1 Lev. 30. 1 Keb. 92, 132.

Judgment in debt is had against two, and one dies, and the plaintiff brings a scire facias against the survivor, and recites the death of the other, and prays execution against the survivor; the defendant pleads, that he which died had an heir, who is in full life, and demands judgment if execution, &c. plaintiff demurs. Wynnington for the plaintiff: It seems to me that the execution is well against the survivor: and as to that, 1. We ought to inquire what the common law is. 2. What alteration the Statute of Westm. 2 hath made. As to the first, at common law, if judgment had been given against two, and the one dies, the charge survives, Sir William Herbert's case. To the second, the Statute of Westm. 2, which gives the elegit, doth not take away the privilege of the plaintiff, but that he may have execution at the common law if he will, for the words of the statute are, sit in electione, and this statute was made only for the benefit of the plaintiff. Obj. And as to the 29 of Assizes, Longford's case, I answer, the same case is reported 29 E. 3, 39, and there by Thorpe the lands are equally liable, and by that it may be easily collected, they intended execution only upon the lands, and not a personal charge; but here may be a personal charge, and [27] that is the difference; for when the charge is upon the lands then it doth not survive, but when it is personal it shall; and for authorities direct in the point, vide 3 E. 3, 11, pl. 37. 1 E. 3, 13, p. 41.

Wyndham Justice. The books of 1 and 3 E. 3 are direct in the point, and the reason why this execution shall be against the survivor, is, because the plaintiff may take a fieri facias if he will, and perhaps he will not charge the land.

Twisden of the same opinion; and if upon this scire fac. the plaintiff takes an elegit, the defendant, may have an audita querela; or, 2dly, he may suggest this matter upon the return of the elegit and have a supersedeas, F. N. B. 166. 44 E. 3, 10. 4 E. 4, 39. 7 H. 4, 30. and judgment was given for the plaintiff, nisi, &c. Vide Pasc. 1 H. 5, 5 a. pl. 6.

RICHARD CAPENHURST versus CAPENHURST.

Covenant. 2 Danv. Abr. 228, p. 5. 3 Danv. Abr. 209, p. 1. 1 Lev. 45. 1 Keb. 130, 164, 183.

Debt upon an obligation to perform covenants; the case was such, A. possessed of a term for years grants so much of the term, that shall be unexpired at the time of his death; the grantee assigns, and covenants that the assignee shall enjoy against all persons, and the plaintiff assigns a breach, and issue upon it, and verdict for the plaintiff; and Bigland moved in arrest of judgment, that the action did not lie, because the original grant being void for the incertainty, as in The Rector of Chedington's case, the covenants are void also, because the bond depends on the covenants, and the covenants depend on the lease; and he cited Yelv. fol. 18, Soprani and Skurro.

Jones for the plaintiff. The term is not well assigned, but here is a covenant which stands distinct by it self, and if there be not any covenant, then the obligation is single.

Wyndham Justice. If the deed is void, no covenant in it shall bind. And judgment was stayed; but it was after adjudged for the defendant. Vide Owen Rep. 136. Waller against the Dean and Chapter of Norwich, that the covenant shall bind, though the deed be void.

[28] PLUNKET versus HOLMES.

Devise. 2 Danv. Ab. 519, p. 15. Eq. Ab. 188, p. 12. 1 Lev. 11. 1 Sid. 47. 1 Keb. 29, 119.

The wife having two sons by divers husbands (which were dead) and being seised of the lands in question, in fee, devised them to Thomas her son for the term of his natural life, and if he die without issue of his body living at the time of his death, then to Leonard another of her sons, and his heirs for ever; but if Thomas have issue living at the time of his death, then the fee shall remain to the right heirs of Thomas for ever; the woman died, Thomas entered and suffered a common recovery, and dies without issue, the recoveror made a lease to the defendant, Leonard entered upon him, and made a lease to the plaintiff; et si, &c.

Allen for the plaintiff. The points which I shall raise here are, 1st, What estate Thomas and Leonard have by the will. 2ly, What operation the recovery had upon the estate of Leonard. As to the first, There is not any estate tail to Thomas, but another estate, for the limitation to Leonard is not upon failure of issue of Thomas, but upon failure of issue living at his death. 2dly, The contingency is repeated in the second limitation, and this point hath been agreed in the argument of this case before; but now I shall consider whether Thomas hath an estate for life, or a fee determinable. And first, I hold he hath a fee determinable. 2ly, Leonard takes by executory devise, and not by way of contingent remainder.

When a particular estate is limited, and the inheritance passes out of the donor, this is a contingent remainder, and in abeyance, Plow. 35 a. But if the fee be vested in any person, and to be vested in another upon a contingency; this is an executory devise; and here Thomas had a fee-simple immediately, because first he is heir at law to the devisor; and if there had not been any devise to Thomas, but if Thomas had died, Leonard there would have been his heir.

Object. Here is an express devise to Thomas for life, and the remainder here shall be in abeyance, as in Archer's case.

Answ. In Archer's case, Robert had not only an estate for life, but also a reversion in fee-simple expectant upon an estate-tail, and therefore the case is not well reported in 1 Co. 66 b. But the remainder there was of necessity contingent, because it is only a devise in tail, and not a gift of [29] all the estate; and in our case the question is upon the limitation of the fee-simple. 2ly, Thomas hath the fee-simple, because although it be given to him for life only, yet after it is limited to his right heirs; and the words, If Thomas hath issue, then, &c. are only declaratory. 3ly, This is the meaning of the will; for the devisor took care for the younger son when the eldest died without issue, as appears by the disposition of the writings by him. 4thly, If the will be capable of divers interpretations, that shall stand which consists with the meaning of the parties, and that is, that Thomas shall have fee.

2dly, As to the operation of this common recovery, it seems to me that this executory devise is not barred by it. The reason of a bar in a common recovery, is the intended recompence; therefore if tenant in tail make a feoffment in fee, and the feoffee suffer a common recovery, this does not bar the estate-tail, because the recompence cannot go to the estate-tail; but if the tenant in tail be vouched, then it is a bar, 3 Co. 3 a. The Marquis of Winchester's case, and fol. 6 a. Cuppledike's case. Here the recompence in value cannot go to Leonard, because the one estate hath no dependance upon the other, for Leonard hath no estate in him, but in contingency. 2. Recompence in value cannot serve a fee after a fee.

3dly, Leonard cannot falsify this recovery, because he is quasi a stranger to it, and there is not any privity of estate betwixt Thomas and him; and the very same point is resolved in Pell and Brown's case, Cro. Jac. 590. And if Leonard that hath only a possibility may falsify, many conveyances may be destroyed: for admit that A. upon marriage with Jane a-Style makes a feoffment to the use of himself and his heirs till marriage; now by this way if he may destroy this contingency by feoffment or fine, &c. at any time before marriage, it would be very inconvenient.

Finch Solicitor General contra. Leonard takes by way of remainder. This case is out of the reason of Pell and Brown's case, because the devise here was first to Thomas and his heirs, and there is not any case in law where the devisee takes by way of executory devise, but for necessity, as Dyer 330 b, Clache's case, Cro. Jac. 415, Webb and Herring, and it was adjourned. Vide post.

Wyndham Justice for the defendant. The principal point in the case is upon the words of the will, what estate Thomas had by them; and it hath been objected that Thomas [30] had a fee-simple to avoid a contingency. Answ. Thomas hath only an estate for life, and not more by the will, because the express words of the will are so. 2ly, If he hath an estate in fee, there ought to be a transposition in the words of the will. 3ly, This construction avoids all the inconveniences which otherwise would happen; for otherwise it shall be to Thomas and his heirs by way of executory devise, and so such estate cannot be cut off, as Pell and Brown's case, Cro. Jac. 590. But here is a contingent remainder which may be destroyed, and it is more suitable to the rules of law, as it is agreed in Colthurst and Bejushin's case, in Plowd. Com.

2dly, When Thomas hath only an estate for life, with a remainder contingent, the estate for life being destroyed by the common recovery, the remainder falls to the ground, for the recovery vests a fee in the recoverer, and is a discontinuance to the remainder. Littleton, sect. 690.

3dly, Until the contingency happen, the fee descends to the heir in some sort, but not to confound the estate for life, but there shall be an hiatus to let in the contingency when it happens; so is Archer's case. If tenant for life grant over his estate, the grantee shall support the contingent remainder; but if he surrender, then the contingent estate is destroyed.

Twisden of the same opinion. The main stress lies upon the construction of the will; if Thomas here had been a stranger, and not heir, he had an estate for life, remainder to Leonard upon a contingency, remainder to the heirs of Thomas upon a contingency, and here the contingency doth not depend on a contingency, but the same contingency which may happen several ways. 2d, Thomas being heir, the fee in the mean time till the contingency happen is in Thomas, and not in abeiance, Hutton, Rep. 118. Napper against Sanders, and here as to Leonard, Thomas takes only for life, but by operation of law he hath a fee. And Archer's case is express in terminis, for there Robert hath an estate only for life by the will, but by operation of law he hath the fee also; and Pell and Brown's case is not like to this case, because there Thomas had an estate to him and his heirs; and in the case of Howel and Auger, Hut. 60, and Winch. 30. The Judges will not meddle with the point of limiting one fee upon another, which the Lord Hobart there calls the mounting one fee upon another; and here the recovery destroys the contingent remainder to Leonard.

WIDDRINGTON'S CASE.

Mandamus. Postea 68. 1 Lev. 23. 1 Sid. 71. 1 Keb. 2, 50, 61, 68, 79, 131, 150, 234, 458.

Doctor Ralf Widdrington, fellow of Christ-College in Cambridge, was ejected out of his fellowship by the master and fellows, and he brings a mandamus to be restored to it; and upon this writ the master and fellows return (amongst other things) that if any fellow be peccant he shall be corrected by the master and dean, and if he find himself aggrieved with his punishment, it is lawful for him to appeal to the chancellor of the university, and two senior doctors; and upon this return the Court resolved, that Doctor Widdrington shall not have remedy here; but he ought to resort to the visitors mentioned in the return; for, by Wyndham, of every hospital or eleemosynary foundation, appeal ought to be made to the visitors, for they have the supervising of all things concerning them; and if they have no visitors, then the Ordinary, vide Lindwood, tit. de Religiosis Domibus, cap. Episcop. & licebit ei appellare, is intended, that he may appeal if he will, or acquiesce in the penalty inflicted by the college, and not to give liberty to appeal to a visitor, or to this Court. And Twisden cited a case 15 Jac. Dr. Lewys was elected Provost of Oriel-College in Oxford by one part of the fellows, and Dr. Day by another part; Dr. Day appealed to the Bishop of Lincoln who was visitor of the college; Dr. Lewys appealed to the archbishop, who inhibited the Bishop of Lincoln; and then Dr. Day appealed to the chancellor; and this was referred to the Attorney and Solicitor General; and resolved the decree made by the visitor was good, and the other ill, and the doctor enjoyed it accordingly; and every one ought to appeal to the next Court, Fitz-herb. Error 87. And it was adjourned, and afterwards a writ of restitution was denied for the reasons aforesaid. Vide post.

[32] FITCH versus SMALBROOK. EJECTMENT.

Evidence. 1 Sid. 51. 1 Keb. 134.

In evidence upon a trial at Bar, it appeared that one Alcot, one of the witnesses for the defendant, was before indicted of perjury in the time of Cromwell, and verdict against him; but by the death of Cromwell judgment was not entered, but all proceedings vacated; and now the counsel of the plaintiff would offer this verdict in evidence to weaken the credit of the witness; but resolved by the Court, that the said verdict is now totally destroyed, and cannot be given in evidence.

TRAVERSE versus MERES. ASSUMPSIT.

Assumpsit. 1 Sid. 57. 1 Keb. 135, 146, 163.

The plaintiff declares, that whereas the husband of the defendant now dead, was indebted to the plaintiff, the defendant promised, that if the plaintiff would manifest and make appear that her said husband was indebted, she would pay it; and avers, that he had been at all times ready to manifest the said debt; and on non assumpsit found for the plaintiff. And Allen moved in arrest of judgment, that there is not any consideration, for that the wife was neither executrix nor administratrix. Trin. 51, Rot. 1446, Hunce versus Hinton. The son of the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff, and the defendant promised upon forbearance to pay; and there judgment was for the plaintiff, because forbearance shall be taken for total forbearance; but if he had said, that if he will forbear him, then it had not been actionable. Trin. 8 Jac. Smith versus Jonas, Rot. 882.

Twisden Justice. The difference is betwixt forbearance generally, there is a good ground of action, although the defendant be neither executor nor administrator; but upon forbearance of the defendant it ought to appear that there was some cause of forbearance.

Wild for the plaintiff. The making of the debt appear, is trouble and pains to the plaintiff, and therefore a good consideration. It was adjourned, and afterwards judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[33] TIBBS versus SMITH.

Words. 1 Danv. Abr. 146, p. 32.

Thou hast stolen our bees (innuendo a stock of bees) they are hidden under the old woman's hemp-seck, and thou art a thief. On not guilty, and verdict for the plaintiff, Serjeant Merrifield moved in arrest of judgment, that bees are feræ naturæ, and felony cannot be committed of them, Bro. Property 37, so of trees, &c. Stroud contra. The reason of stealing of trees, the words are not actionable, is because they are annexed to the free hold, but not here: and after verdict they shall be intended such bees of which felony may be committed. And words of stealing trees, apples, &c. are actionable, and of corn. Cro. Jac. 39, Kellan against Mannesby, and 114, Minors and Leeford, 231.

Wyndham Justice. There is this difference where he says, Thou hast stolen my trees, apples, corn, &c. these words are not actionable: but to say, Thou art a thief, and hast stolen my trees, &c. are actionable, because it shall be intended such trees, corn, &c. whereof thievery may be committed; and as to the justification after, that doth not make the words actionable which were not actionable before; and judgment was given for the plaintiff; nisi, &c.

FRENCH versus KENT.

Venue.

Action of the case was brought for forging and contriving a will. This action was brought in Middlesex, and the land which is comprised in it, lies in Suffolk, and the will being affirmed twice upon trial in an ejectione firmæ, they endeavoured this way to disprove it.

Jones moved to change the venue to Suffolk, and resolved it shall be altered; and the Court seemed to discountenance such action.

Replevin. Nota. Vide Noy 50. Webb versus Hind. Vide postea 474. Designey's case.

In a replevin in the county, the plaintiff doth not declare, and the avowant removes the cause to the King's Bench by recordare, and the plaintiff is non-suited without declaring; and the doubt was, what judgment the avowant shall have: for if he shall have judgment to have a return of the cattle, it doth not appear what cattle were replevied; because the plaintiff hath not shewn them by any declaration; [34] and it seems the defendant shall suggest what cattle he took, and shall have return of them. Vide Mich. 3 H. 8, Rot. 649, C. B. and Pasc. 7 H. 7, Rot. 130, C. B. The defendant upon a non-pros. makes averment what cattle were taken, and thereupon a return' habend' awarded, si vic' constare poterit allegationem præd' fore veram. Vide Rastal's Entries Replevin tit. Frank-tenement in the Old Book, fol. 515 D. Replevin de 8 cows, the defendant said that there were more replevied, and upon this it was awarded quod si vic' constare poterit, that the allegation of the defendant be true, he shall make return of the others, Hob. Rep. 16. Replevin was brought without naming a place, the count abated, but the defendant to have a return avowed in a place certain.

BARRINGTON versus VENABLES.

Privilege. 1 Keb. 137, 474.

Debt upon an obligation of 100l. After imparlance, the defendant pleaded to the jurisdiction, that none of the Privy Chamber ought to be sued in any other Court at the suit of any person, without special licence of the Lord Chamberlain of the household for the time being; and that he is one of the Privy Chamber. The plaintiff demurs, and judgment was, that he should answer over, for such plea cannot be pleaded after imparlance; and the plea it self is ill; and the Court seemed to be offended with the said plea.

THE KING versus READ.

Perjury. 1 Lev. 9. 1 Sid. 49, 66, 217. 1 Keb. 127, 138, 163, 182, 191, 198, 213, 214, 230.

In an information of perjury, and verdict for the King; the perjury was committed in giving evidence upon a trial in this Court betwixt Dun and Dawson. And Allen moved in arrest of judgment because the information was, Memorand' quod Thomas Fanshaw miles dat Curiæ hic intelligi & informari quod termino St. Hillarii 1659, in Rotulis continetur sic (viz.) that Dun brought his action; and recites the whole record of it and the trial; and that the said Read falsum præstitit sacramentum at this trial; and he moved that it is not [35] positive that the defendant took a false oath; but that continetur sic, that he took a false oath; where he ought to have said after the recital so, et ulterius dat Cur' hic intelligi, that the defendant took a false oath at that trial. And after consideration the Court gave judgment against the defendant, because the late precedents are so. And now after verdict it shall be taken a distinct sentence betwixt the recital and the et quod. And by Wyndham, the record recited being in this Court, the Judges shall take notice how far the record recited extends, and what that is that is positively rehearsed: and judgment was given accordingly.

STILES versus TRISPE.

Award. 1 Sid. 54. 1 Keb. 130, 138.

There being a trial betwixt the parties the last Assizes in the country, the parties assented to a reference, and a rule was there made of the said reference; and the referees there made an award, the which the defendant refused to obey, upon which the plaintiff moved to have the said rule at the Assizes made a rule of this Court, according to the tenor of the said rule at the Assizes; and it was granted: and then he moved for an attachment against the defendant for not obeying the said award of the referees; but it was denied; for suppose the defendant will deny that any such award was made, this Court will not try such issue by affidavits, and therefore they said that it was seldom that any advantage accrued to the parties by such reference.

DACY versus LINCH.

Words. 1 Danv. Ab. 99, p. 34, 152, p. 16. 1 Sid. 52. 1 Keb. 140, 181, 184.

Dacy is a witch, and deserves better to be hanged than Old Arthur, who was hanged for a witch. On not guilty pleaded, and verdict for the plaintiff, Serjeant Bear moved in arrest of judgment, because witch is only a word of scolding, if it be not coupled with a demonstration that he bewitched some creature. Mich. 8 Car, Cro. Car. 282, George against Harvy. Mich. 15 Jac. Rot. 636, Hutt. 13, Stone and Roberts. But it was adjudged for the plaintiff; for by Mallet, by these shall be intended such a witch that deserves to be hanged.

Discontinuance. 2 Danv. Ab. 573, p. 10, 576, p. 12. 1 Lev. 36. 1 Sid. 83. 1 Keb. 76, 141, 227, 321.

On a special verdict, Sir Francis Wortley seised of the lands in question, covenants in consideration of marriage with Hester to stand seised to the use of himself for life, the remainder to Hester for life, remainder to the heirs males which he shall beget upon the body of Hester, remainder to Sir Francis in tail, remainder to Francis Wortley son and heir apparent of the covenantor in fee, who is lessor of the plaintiff. Sir Francis and Hester after marriage in a fine with warranty to the use of Sarah Wortley daughter of the said Sir Francis and Hester, and wife of the defendant, and the heirs of the body of the said Sarah; Sir Francis and Hester die; Francis lessor of the plaintiff enters, and the defendant in right of Sarah enters upon him, and the sole question was, if Francis Wortley, lessor of the plaintiff, be barred by the said fine and warranty.

Allen for the plaintiff. These things are here considerable in the case. 1st, What estate Sir Francis and Hester had, and if the estate be executed. 2ly, What operation the fine hath. As to the first, Here is not any consolidate estate-tail in them, so that they can be said to be seised in their demesne as of fee-tail; but they have distinct estates; (viz.) to Sir Francis Wortley for life, the remainder to Hester for life, the remainder to the heirs males which he shall engender upon the body of Hester.

Object. This limitation of the remainder to the heirs males of both their bodies, swallows up the estates for life.

Answ. Here is not any execution, because all the estates are but one limitation in one conveyance, 2 Co. 60 b. Wiscot's case, 39 H. 6, 2 b. If lands be given to A. for life, the remainder to him and B. in fee, there is not any merger, because it is but one conveyance. Then an estate to the wife for life, the remainder to the husband and wife in fee, is an estate for life in the wife, and the fee is in both. 2dly, If a particular estate be limited to two persons, and a remainder is limited adequate to them to drown; as to two for their lives, the remainder to the heirs of them, the estates for life shall be consolidated; as Lewis Bowle's case is. But [37] when there is a particular estate for life or two, and the remainder is not answerable to them; as to three for life, remainder to two in fee, there they shall remain distinct estates; as A. tenant for life, remainder to B. for life, the remainder to A. and B. in fee, there shall be no merger of estates; so here the baron hath an estate for life, and the wife another estate for life, remainder to them both. 3dly, There is not any rule or case where the estates may stand, that there shall be a merger; for they shall be so taken that the intention of the parties shall stand.

As to the second. This fine doth not make any discontinuance, admitting that the estates are several. 1. To make a discontinuance there ought to be a seisin of the estate, which is to be discontinued, Littleton, sect. 658. Tenant for life, remainder in tail, he in remainder disseises tenant for life, and makes a feoffment; this is not a good discontinuance, because he ought to have the freehold and inheritance at the same time; Coke upon Littleton 347 b. And here is not any seisin by the husband in his demesne as of fee. In the case of King and Edwards, Cro. Car. 320, where Jones holds it a discontinuance; it is not like to this case, because there the husband and wife have not such divided estates; for the husband there cannot grant his estate distinctly. Here though the estate in remainder vest in both, yet it vests as a remainder, and not to execute the present estate. 2dly, This fine takes its plenary operation without prejudice to any, for by it an intire fee passes, which is the principal reason of Bredon's case; and it is not like where there is an interposing estate, as tenant in tail enfeoffs the donor, it is not a discontinuance: but if there be an interposing estate, then such feoffment is a discontinuance, Garrard and Blizard's case, Pasch. 29 Eliz. B. R. Trevillian's case. (Cro. Eliz. 56.) Tenant for life, remainder in tail, join in a feoffment, this is not a discontinuance, and here the reversion of Sir Francis doth not impede.

As to the third. Admitting the other points, the warranty operates nothing, because the estate not being devested, the estate to which the warranty is annexed, is determined.

Winington for the defendant. 1. If this fine be a discontinuance of the remainder. 2. If it devest the remainder.

[38] As to the first, It is a discontinuance. 1. This estate is an estate-tail in them both, Lit. sect. 28. 2. Where an estate for life is limited to the ancestor, the remainder to the heirs of his body, there it is an estate by limitation, and not by purchase. Here Sir Francis and Hester were tenants in tail executed. I agree, that if there be tenant for life, the remainder in tail, the remainder to the heirs of tenant for life, they are distinct estates, as in Lewis Bowle's case. But this estate-tail cannot be at any time more executed in the husband and wife than now it is. Vide 1 Co. 98 b. 3 E. 3, 31. Here the estate-tail cannot be granted without the estate for life. It seemed to the Court that the estate is executed, and doth not differ from Bredon's case. But it was adjourned. Vid. Cro. Eliz. 135, Toft versus Tomkins.

READ versus GRAPLER. ACTION SUR LE CASE, SUR ASSUMPSIT.

Costs.

The declaration upon the Nisi Prius roll varied from the plea roll, and the plaintiff at the Nisi Prius was nonsuit. And now Jones moved that the Nisi Prius roll being not warranted by the plea roll, the Judge had not any authority to try the issue, and prayed that the postea might not be entered, according to Cro. Car. 203, Aquila Week's case, Cro. Jac. 669, Young and Englefield. And upon consideration of the cases a distringas de novo was awarded, and the nonsuit not material. But then the defendant insisted to have costs, and they directed to search precedents. And it seems he shall have costs at the discretion of the Court.

ELLISON versus ELLISON.

Amendment. 1 Sid. 70. 1 Keb. 145, 168, 196, 202, 229.

In debt upon an obligation against an executor: the defendant pleads it is not the deed of the testator; and found for the plaintiff, and judgment quod defendens capiatur, where it ought to be in misericordia, because it is a denial of the deed of his testator. And the defendant brought a writ of error. And Foster moved to have it amended; and on this the Court directed precedents to be searched. And now Serjeant Maynard came and prayed that it might be amended, [39] because it is error only in the entry, and not in the pronouncing the judgment. Mich. 33 & 34 Eliz. C. B. Rot. 230, ejectment by John Wyld versus Thomas Wheeler, the judgment was quod prædict' Thomas recuperet, where it ought to have been John, and it was amended. Trin. 19 Jac. Mason against Thompson, ejectment of ten acres of land, five acres of pasture, and in the judgment the ten acres of land was omitted, and yet amended. Mich. 4 Car. B. R. Everard versus Bosvile, debt upon 2 E. 6, for tithes, and upon a nonsuit in the judgment quod defendens eat sine die was omitted, and yet amended. Mich. 12 Jac. C. B. Rot. 1106, Nelson versus husband and wife for words, there judgment was, that the husband only shall be in misericordia, and nothing said of the wife, yet it was amended. Serjeant Wild contra, Every judgment entered upon the roll is presumed to be pronounced by the Court, and therefore it is the act of the Court, and not amendable. As to the case of the ejectment, John for Thomas, it was only a perfect slip of the clerk, and not any precedent that such judgment as this hath been amended. But in the Common Pleas it may be amended, for there are dockets of every judgment, and if the entry of the judgment be defective in the roll, they frequently amend it by the docket. It was adjourned, and after resolved, that it cannot be amended in another term, and ruled accordingly.

WEEDEN versus BALDWIN.

Devise. 2 Danv. Ab. 541, p. 8, 542, p. 10. 1 Lev. 18. 1 Sid. 55. 1 Keb. 9, 95, 51, 148.

Ejectment upon a demise of Henry Baldwin. On not guilty pleaded, a special verdict was found to this effect, viz. that before the writ one Thomas Baldwin and Katharine his wife, were seized of the land in Shoreditch in the county of Middlesex, to them and the heirs of Thomas, held of the King by knight service in capite. And also the said Thomas was seized in fee of the lands in question held in socage; and Thomas being so seised devised by his testament in writing the lands in question to Katharine for life, remainder to Henry, the lessor of the plaintiff, and his heirs, and dies, Katharine enters and dies, Richard Baldwin as heir to Thomas enters, Henry enters and demiseth to the plaintiff. Powis for the plaintiff. The question is here [40] if this devise by Thomas of the lands in question was good; viz. if he may devise all his lands held in socage. And 1st, It is without doubt a good devise for two parts; and it seems to me a good devise for the whole. 1. Because the husband here hath not the lands held in capite at the time of his death, for he hath only an estate in fee in them expectant upon the death of his wife; and therefore a gift to husband and wife, and the heirs of the husband, the husband cannot dispose of the fee, reserving to himself an estate for life, 2 Co. 60 b. Wiscot's case. And if the husband dies first, the wife is sole tenant to the lord, and not the heir of the husband, and upon the death of the husband no heriot shall be paid, Pasch. 19 R. 2, Fitz. Herriot 5. Nor the heir shall not sue an ouster le main, although the land was held in capite, because it is a naked remainder, Pasch. 7 Eliz. Dyer 237 a. Macwilliam's case. 2. And here it is no more than the feme tenant for life, the remainder to the husband in fee; this remainder doth not restrain the devise, because this remainder is not held of the King, because tenant for life is tenant to the King. 9 Co. 126, Floyer's case, 2 Co. 92 b. Bingham's case, 9 Co. 129 b. Quick's case, 134 b. Ascough's case.

Object. The words of 34 H. 8. c. 5. the third clause there, are, Any one having a sole estate or interest in possession, reversion or remainder held in capite, and this estate of the husband is a remainder.

Answ. Remainder in this clause is intended such which draws to him ward and marriage by the common law, and is in the nature of a reversion, as is to be seen, 10 Co. 81 a. The case in point.

Trin. 28 H. 8. Dyer 11 a. Bakenham's case, This very case is put by Shelly Justice.

Jones contra. Here the baron hath only the inheritance, and the wife only for life. 2. The King shall have the wardship at the common law in such case: for if there be tenant for life, the remainder in tail, and he in the remainder in tail dies without heir within age, he shall be in ward. 33 H. 6 a. b. 27 E. 3, 80 a.

Twisden Justice. When there are two jointenants, and to the heirs of one of them, it often has been a question, if he that hath the fee may devise it; and there are opinions both ways.

Wyndham. In such case he cannot devise. But it was adjourned.

[41] Wyndham Justice for the plaintiff. The devise is good for the whole socage land; and in this case we shall consider, 1st, How this stood at common law. 2. How upon the statute of 33 & 34 H. 8. 3. And how upon the proviso where land is given to two and to the heirs of one of them.

As to the first. H. seised in capite expectant on an estate for life, dies during the estate for life, no wardship can be, M. 24 E. 3, 33 b. pl. 28. Fitz. Gard. 48, because there is a tenant which may do the service.

As to the second. The statute hath two clauses, and there is not any such person in this case that is intended by the statute; for remainder by the statute is intended such as is in nature of a reversion, the tenant of which shall be in ward at the common law. 10 Co. 81, Leonard Lovie's case.

As to the third. The proviso is for the wardship of the body, but not of the land, and this proviso altering the common law, shall not be amplified. Amy Townsend's case.

Twisden and Mallet to the same intent; but Foster Chief Justice contra; because this statute of 34 H. 8 is an enacting law, not only in the proviso, but through the whole statute. 2. Though the baron here is so seized, yet his heir may bring a real action, and say, that his father was seized in his demesne as of fee the day he died, as Wiscot's case. 3. The statute was for the benefit of lords, and also the people reciprocally, and here it is a benefit. 4. A judgment or recognizance acknowledged by the husband shall charge this land in the hands of his son. But because the other three justices were against him, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

WHEELER versus HONOUR. EJECTMENT.

Copyhold. 1 Sid. 58. 1 Keb. 154, 166.

Upon evidence in a trial at Bar, the case was, The defendant was a copyholder of the manor of Latham, in the county of Middlesex, and upon his admittance the lord, which was Sir Thomas Reynolds, lessor of the plaintiff, demanded of him two years purchase for a fine, and assessed it in open Court, and acquainted him with it, and appointed him to pay it half a year after. He at the time of the assessment said, that he would pay only three years [42] quit-rent, because the tenants of the manor are by the custom there only to pay so much, and not a fine uncertain. And now the said lord, for not paying the said fine, entered for the forfeiture; and this was the title of the plaintiff. And it seemed to the Court, that if there were a real doubt, whether the custom be such that the fine should be certain or uncertain; if the tenant deny to pay an uncertain fine, this is not any forfeiture, although it be found afterwards that the fine ought to be certain; and so it was adjudged betwixt Parker and Cook. But then such doubt ought to be real, and not covinous. But the counsel of the plaintiff directed to have this point found specially, if occasion be. 2. If a fine be incertain, and the place and time appointed for payment of it is assessed, it seems that there ought to be a demand, because it is in point of forfeiture: but Cro. Jac. 617, Gardner against Norman is contrary. Ideo quære, and the jury here found for the defendant, That the fine ought to be three years quit-rent.

DELABARRE AND DELAVAL versus YARDLY.

Amendment. 1 Keb. 125, 155.

In an action on the case part is found for the plaintiff, and part for the defendant; and as to that that is found for the defendant, the judgment is entered quod querens & plegii sui sint in misericordia; and Baldwin moved that the judgment should be amended, and plegii sui struck out, because they ought not to be amerced; and the Court gave day to consider of it.

COOK against NEWCOMB.

Assumpsit. 1 Keb. 158.

Assumpsit. The plaintiff declares, that in consideration of so much money the defendant promised to deliver so many livers within a fortnight, and that the defendant hath not delivered them. The defendant pleads, that within the said fortnight, scilicet such a day, he delivered 25 of the livers, and then the plaintiff discharged him to deliver more till farther order of the plaintiff. That the plaintiff had not given any farther order. The plaintiff demurs; and adjudged for the defendant, that it is a good plea, because a promise before breach may be discharged by parol: but the plaintiff prayed liberty to discontinue his action; and it was granted to him, nisi, &c.

[43] GEORGE FOSTER versus GRACE FOSTER. EJECTMENT.

Uses. 1 Lev. 55. 1 Sid. 82. 1 Keb. 160, 225, 274, 319.

The plaintiff declares, that Nicholas Foster, 12 Jan. 1658, at the parish of Haughton in the Spring, demised to him 2 messuages, 10 acres of land, 40 acres of meadow, 40 acres of pasture and 100 acres of moor in Haughton aforesaid; to hold from the 30th of Decemb. last for five years, and that the defendant did eject him. Upon not guilty the jury found a special verdict, that before the said trespass and ejectment Margery Foster was seised of the said messuages, lands and tenements in fee, and the 8th of Feb. 1652, by her deed of the same date betwixt her of the one part, and Mathew Foster, her son, of the other part, did demise, grant, bargain, sell and set over to the said Mathew Foster, his heirs and assigns, all her part and proportion of that capital messuage or farm, which formerly appertained to her father Robert Brough deceased, and then in her tenure or occupation, with all houses, edifices, buildings, lands, meadows, pastures, feedings, commons, common of pasture and arable lands whatsoever, as were appertaining or belonging to her part of that farm-hold or tenements with the appurtenances, which the said Margery Foster then possessed, then being the tenements in the declaration mentioned. The tenor of which said indenture followeth in these words following, viz. articles of covenant concluded, condescended and agreed upon, 8 Feb. 1652, between Margery Foster, late wife of William Foster of Helton in the Hole in the county of Durham, yeoman deceased, on the one part, and Mathew Foster, her son, of Helton in the Hole aforesaid, yeoman, on the other part, as followeth: Imprimis, The said Margery Foster for divers good causes her thereunto moving, and especially for and in consideration of the sum of 20l. of lawful money of England, to be paid by him the said Mathew Foster, unto the assigns of the said Margery at 50s. every half year for four years next ensuing after the decease of her the said Margery, hath demised, granted, bargained, sold and set over unto the aforesaid Mathew Foster, his heirs and assigns, all her part and proportion of that capital messuage or farm, which formerly belonged to her father Robert Brough aforesaid deceased, and now in her tenure or occupation, with [44] all such houses, edifices, buildings, lands, meadows, pastures, feedings, commons and common of pasture, and arable lands whatsoever, as appertaining or belonging to her part of that farmhold or tenement with the appurtenances, which the said Margery Foster now possesseth; to have and to hold the aforesaid moiety or part of all the aforesaid premisses with the appurtenances whatsoever, unto the aforesaid Mathew Foster, his heirs, executors and assigns for ever, she the said Margery quietly and peaceably enjoying the premisses aforesaid for and during her natural life. Item the said Margery is to have Mathew Foster's barn with free egress and regress without let or molestation during her natural life for her full third part of all the houses due to her. In witness whereof the parties above named have hereunto set their hands and seals the day and year first above written. And the jury farther finds, that after (viz.) 5 Novemb. 1658, the aforesaid Margery Foster by her deed of feoffment executed by livery and seisin, as well for and in consideration of the natural love and affection which she the said Margery Foster did bear to Nicholas Foster, her said son, as for the full sum of 20l. did grant, bargain, sell, alien, enfeoff and confirm unto the said Nicholas Foster the tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances; the tenor of which deed followeth in these words, This indenture made the fifth of November 1658, between Margery Foster of Helton, &c. of the one part, and Nicholas Foster of the same, yeoman, son of the said Margery of the other part witnesseth, that the said Margery Foster, as well for and in consideration of the natural love and affection, which she beareth to her said son, as for the full and just sum of 20l. to her in hand paid, or sufficiently secured by her said son, the receipt whereof she doth hereby acknowledge, and thereof doth acquit, exonerate and discharge him her said son, his executors and administrators, as for divers good and sufficient causes her thereunto moving, hath given, granted, bargained, sold, aliened, enfeoffed and confirmed, and by these presents for her and her heirs, doth give, grant, bargain, sell, alien, enfeoff and confirm unto him the said Nicholas Foster all that her capital messuage, farmhold and tenement situate, lying and being in Helton in the Hole aforesaid, which descended unto her from Robert Brough deceased late of Helton in the Hole aforesaid, late father of the said Margery Foster, together with all and all manner of houses, edifices, buildings, barns, byars, laithes, stables, yards, garths, tofts, crofts, folds, gardens, orchards, lands, meadows, feedings, pastures, commons, [45] common of pasture, woods, underwoods, ways, paths, passages, profits, commodities, emoluments and appurtenances to the said granted premisses, or any of them, belonging or in any wise appertaining, or to or with the same, or any of them, now or at any time heretofore held, occupied, used or enjoyed, or accepted, reputed, taken or known as part, parcel or member of or belonging to the same; and all reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders thereof, or any part or parcel thereof; to have and to hold the said capital messuage, farmhold, tenement and premisses with their and every of their appurtenances, to the said Nicholas Foster, his heirs and assigns for ever; to be holden of the chief lord or lords of the fee thereof, by and under the rents, duties and services heretofore due, and of right accustomed. And the said Margery Foster for her self, her heirs, executors, administrators and assigns doth covenant, promise, grant and agree to and with the said Nicholas Foster, her said son, his heirs and assigns, that she the said Margery Foster, her heirs and assigns shall and will from henceforth for ever hereafter stand and be seised of and in the said granted premisses, and of every part and parcel thereof, to the use before mentioned and expressed, and to no other use, intent and purpose whatsoever. In witness whereof the parties abovesaid to these present indentures have interchangeably put their hands and seals the day and year first above written, 1658. And the jurors farther say, that the estate to Mathew Foster was as well for natural love and affection, as for 20l. there mentioned to be paid; and the said Mathew Foster died, having issue Thomas Foster, and the lands in the declaration, and the lands in the deed of 1652 are the same lands, and that Margery is yet alive; and that Nicholas Foster 12 January 1658 entered into the lands in question, &c. and became seised prout, &c. and demised to the plaintiff; and the defendant by the command of Thomas Foster entered upon him and ejected him. And if Grace Foster be guilty petunt advisamentum Curiæ. And if she be guilty, then they assess damages, 2d. and costs 40s. and if not guilty, then not guilty; upon which record the case is shortly such; Margery Foster seised in fee 8 Feb. 1652, makes a deed to Margery Foster in this manner: articles of covenants concluded, condescended and agreed upon between Margery Foster of the one part, and Mathew Foster, her son, of the other part. Imprimis, The said Margery Foster for divers good causes, and especially for 20l. to be paid by the said Mathew to the assigns of Margery at 50s. every half-year for four years next after the death of [46] Margery, hath demised, granted, bargained, sold and set over unto the said Mathew Foster, his heirs and assigns, all that, &c. habendum to him, his heirs, executors and assigns for ever, the said Margery quietly and peaceably enjoying the premisses aforesaid, for and during her natural life. Item, The said Margery is to have Mathew Foster's barn with free egress and regress without let or molestation during her life, for her full third part of all the houses due to her. And this deed had not any execution besides sealing and delivery, and then the said Margery 12 Jan. 1658 made a feoffment to Nicholas and his heirs, to the use of him and his heirs; Mathew dies leaving issue Thomas, who commands the defendant to enter.

The only question was, if any estate pass to Mathew by the deed of 8 Feb. 1652 by way of raising an use.

Turner for the plaintiff. That no use arises, because 1. At the common law no freehold passes without the ceremonies of livery and seisin, or attornment, Plowd. 25 a. Nor by the statute of 27 H. 8, cap. 16, because there it is only by bargain and sale. And Coke upon Littleton 271 b. Uses are raised either by transmutation of possession, as by fine, feoffment, common recovery, &c. or out of the estate of the owner of the land by bargain and sale, or by covenant on a lawful consideration. And to raise an use there are four things requisite, Mich. 18 Jac. Winch. 59, Buckley versus Simonds. 1. Sufficient consideration. 2dly, A deed testifying it; and therefore Callard and Callard's case was that no use could rise by parol. 3dly, The covenantor ought to be seised at the time. 4thly, The uses ought to agree with the rules of common law. Here is a good consideration to raise an use according to Pledal's case Plowd. 307 a. But the express consideration is 20l. and this excludes the implied consideration of being her son, expressum facit cessare tacitum, 7 Co. 40 b. Bedel's case, 11 Co. 24 b. Harpur's case, 4 Co. 80 b. Express covenant takes away a covenant in law, 9 E. 4, 28. If an Ordinary refuse a clerk, who is a felon, generally it is good; but if he shew cause of this denial which is not sufficient, as because he wants tonsure or ornamentum clericale, he shall be fined and compelled to receive such clerk, 5 Co. 97 a. The law never inquires for an assignee in law, when there is an assignee in deed.

Object. The jury have found, that this conveyance was upon both considerations.

Answ. This cannot be aided by averment, Dyer 147 a, and it is contrariant; for the deed is found in hæc verba, and [47] therefore the jury cannot find a thing which appears contrary to the deed and record, and which is admitted by both parties. 2 Co. 4 b. Goddard's case. 8 E. 2, Fitz. Entry 78. F. N. B. 205 k.

True it is, there may be two considerations upon the raising an use. 1 Co. 176 a. Beaumont and Viller's case. But this is with this difference, when the uses are directed to several persons, and when to one and the same person, as it appears by that case and Bedal's case before.

Object. Construction of a deed ought to be such ut res magis valeat.

Answ. A freehold shall not pass contrary to the rules of law. 8 Co. 94, Foxe's case.

But admit such averment may be, yet it stands not with the rules of law, and that such estate may be so limited, viz. to reserve an estate to her for life, to pass a freehold in futuro. 1 Co. 130 a. Chudleigh's case, Trin. 15 Car. Peirce versus Pitfield, and Dyer 55 a.

Allen contra. The sole question is, if by the first deed any use be raised to Mathew the son. And here are two inquiries. 1st, Abstractive, if the 20l. had not been mentioned if any use would arise. 2dly, If the addition of the 20l. vitiate the operation of the deed for raising an use. As to the first, that an use would have risen, if the 20l. had not been mentioned; at the common law an use was only an equitable right to land, and therefore any contract either by deed or word would create an use; then the Statute of Uses doth not alter the manner of raising of uses; and therefore in London an use is raised by parol, Dyer 229 a. Chibborn's case, and Popham 47, Callard versus Callard, and the case of Dyer 296 b. is not truly reported, for the words were only in futuro, and for that cause only the use was not raised, Cro. Eliz. 345, per Coke, Mich. 10 & 11 Eliz. Page versus Moulton. Promise to make an assurance to his son will not raise an use, and the judgment in Callard's case was reversed upon the mistake that an use might be raised by parol. But now it is to inquire what contract will raise an use at this day. And in this consider, 1st, Negatively, where it appears that an estate at common law shall be conveyed by intendment of the parties, there it shall not pass by way of use, as Foxe's case is, 2 Roll's Abridg. 786. Trin. 37 Eliz. Rot. 149, B. R. Tebb versus Poplewel. A woman makes a deed to one, who shall be her husband, the consideration was causa matrimonii prælocuti, by the words dedi, [48] concessi & conformavi to the man and his heirs, and no livery: but there was a warranty in the deed. And by Clench and Fenner an use doth not rise to the baron; but by Popham contra. The reason of the two justices, because it is only a feoffment causa matrimonii prælocuti; in this case no judgment is entered. But by Popham, If I say, after the death of such an one my son shall have my land, an use shall rise. And in Vivion's case, Dyer, 302 b. Plowden would aver that the release there made was pro fraterno amore, and so to make an use arise. But this case was compounded, and the daughters at law had a small consideration, and the land was enjoyed against the opinion of Plowden. 2dly, When the deed binds to make farther assurance, there no use arises immediately. Dyer 162. Wingfield's case, Plowd. 302 b. 307 b. Bainton's case, Dyer 96 a. 235. 3dly, When the deed doth not contain a present declaration of the use but in futuro, 21 H. 8, 19. Dyer 55 a. Burrow's case, 1 Co. 129. 154. Lord Paget's case, Use was void to a stranger, and the case of Buckley and Symonds is upon the same reason, viz. because the tenor of the deed was only by covenants and words de futuro and obligatory, and not declaratory. But in the affirmative, when a covenant and grant is compleat and refers to a future act, there an use arises although the deed be in form of a conveyance at common law, and the word covenant is not necessary, as Bedel's case is: the word grant raises an use by way of covenant; because covenant is not obligatory, nor hath the effect of a covenant, and with this agrees Tebb and Poplewel's case; and Callard's case was not reversed, because the words were only give and grant, but because it was only by parol, Trin. 1649, Wats versus Dix. The case as to this point was, that Wats granted, bargained, sold in consideration that the bargainee had been at great charges for him for meat and drink, apparel and lodging, and for natural affection, and there was not any money paid, but the deed was inrolled.

Trin. 1657, C. B. Intrat. Rot. 655, Saunders versus Savil. Henry Savil seised of a rent in fee 14 June 18 Car. by indenture gives, grants and assigns to Henry and Mary his wife, and John Savil for and in consideration of good will; habendum to the said Henry and Mary for their lives, the remainder to John Savil and the heirs of his body. And by Hale and Atkins, Although the conveyance was a conveyance at common law, yet a use did arise thereby; Mich. 1657, Sympson versus Keyles, in ejectment, on not guilty [49] pleaded, a special verdict was, that John Pullen the father seised of land 1 Septemb. 1640, by deed gave to his son in these words, viz. The father in consideration of tender affection hath absolutely given, and livery was indorsed, but not made; and adjudged an use did arise to the son. And a difference taken where the father by feoffment gives to a stranger to the use of himself, remainder over, there no use arises; but when the conveyance is to the party himself, there the use will arise.

Object. Cro. Jac. 127, Osburn's case.

Answ. There it was good by confirmation, and that was only on evidence.

Object. Hill. 11 Car. B. R. Rot. 439, Pitfield against Pierce in ejectment: on not guilty pleaded, a special verdict found, that Thomas seised in fee makes a deed, which the jury found to be in consideration of marriage, and it was in these words: Know all men that I have given and granted, and do give and grant to John my son the lands in question after my death, habendum to him and to the heirs of his body. John dies and hath issue Elizabeth, John the father enfeoffs Thomas the second son. And if any estate passed to John, the son, was the question; and adjudged that no estate passed.

But it was answered. This was a plain case, that the lessor of the plaintiff cannot have title; for when tenant for life makes a feoffment, this is a forfeiture. And the reason of this case is within the second rule before laid down, because there is not any present execution, but after death. But in our case here, 1st, There is a deed well executed, for she grants the enjoying it; and Callard's case is the same case in point. 2dly, This case is not capable of farther execution, because there cannot be livery. 3dly, Here is allotment of dower. 4thly, When a deed hath two intendments, it shall be construed to establish, and not to destroy an estate. As to the 2d, the addition of 20l. doth not alter the case; the words of the statute are, that the deed ought to be enrolled, when land is conveyed by reason only of any bargain and sale, and here it is not a deed that vests the freehold by bargain and sale only. And if there are two considerations, and both express, then it would be without question, Plowd. 4, Manxel's case. 2. If no consideration had been expressed, it might be averred, as Mildmay's case is. And although one be expressed, yet the other may be averred.

[50] Object. As to Bedel's case,

I answer. That case is not agreed, but by the council, 11 Co. 24 b. True it is, another consideration shall not be presumed, but it may be averred. And as to Beaumont's case, Dyer, 146, where the difference is, when it is to another person, and when to the same person, that is all one when money is given by a third person. But here needs no averment, because it is for divers good causes and considerations, as well as money; and the Court here may take notice of the consideration of him as son; and it was adjourned. And after in Hill. 14 Car. 2, upon solemn argument at the Bench it was adjudged for the plaintiff. Vid. as to this point a good case in Ley's Rep. 57, Buckley's case, Trin. 15 Jac. in the Court of Wards.

COLLINS AND WALKER.

Repleader. 1 Keb. 164.

Trespass for beating and imprisoning his wife, &c. The defendant justifies by warrant of the sheriff. The plaintiff replies de injuria sua propria absque tali causa, and issue upon it; and verdict for the plaintiff. And it was moved for a repleader, because de injuria sua propria is not a plea to matter of record, but the plaintiff ought to have traversed the warrant. But judgment was given for the plaintiff, because it is good enough after verdict; and so it was resolved betwixt Osburn and Desmond, and Peter against Stafford, Hob. Rep. 244. Vid. 2 Leon. 81, Moor against Sir John Savage.

MAY versus SPENCER.

Scire facias.

Scire facias against the bail upon a writ of error according to the statute of 3 Jac. The defendant prays oyer of the condition of the recognizance, and upon that he pleads that the plaintiff prosecuted the writ of error with effect, and that thereupon the aforesaid judgment was reversed. Et hoc paratus est verificare, where it ought to have been prout patet per recordum. And for this defect the plea was ruled ill, and judgment given for the plaintiff.

[51] HODGES versus HODGES.

Amendment. 1 Keb. 203, 281, 292, 299, 310, 313. 3 Bulstr. 61, Haver versus Gibbons. Noy Rep, 121, Thimblethorp's case. Hetley 59, Wolfe's case. Marsh. Rep. 17, pl. 40 & 46, pl. 72, ibid.

Error of a judgment in the Common Pleas; the error assigned was, that there were not any pledges: and Powis for the defendant in the writ of error, insisted that this is amendable, or at least aided by 18 Eliz. cap. 13, because in the Common Bench the pledges are always indorsed upon the original, and when there is not an original there are not any pledges; but then the Court advised to pray a certiorari upon alledging diminution; and upon return that there was not any original, the Court debated it largely. And to Wyndham Justice it seemed that it is aided by the statute of 18 Eliz.

But Foster and Twisden contra. But upon examination, and no diminution alledged, that there was an original, an amendment was awarded. Vid. Dyer 288, pl. 53. F. N. B. 31, fol. 195. H. 8 Co. 61 b. Beecher's case.

ORTON versus FULLER.

Words. 1 Danv. Abr. 106, p. 20. 1 Lev. 65. 1 Keb. 293, 303.

Action on the case for words, viz. Orton says, I am a perjured knave, but he is perjured knave as well as I; for he and Field swore one for another: after verdict it was moved in arrest of judgment, because the defendant fires perjury upon the plaintiff only by relation, viz. As well as I, &c. But adjudged for the plaintiff.

[52] Term. Mich. 14 Car. 2, B. R.

Buxton versus Bateman. Derby.

Case. 1 Lev. 71. 1 Sid. 88, 201. 1 Keb. 345, 370, 386, 420, 433, 457.

Action upon the case: the plaintiff declares that he is seised of an ancient messuage, and of lands within the parish of S. and that he and all those whose estate he hath in them, have time out of mind used to sit in a seat in such an aisle in the church in the same parish, and that the defendant had disturbed him, to his damages, &c. The defendant pleads not guilty, and found for the plaintiff. And Allen moved in arrest of judgment, because the plaintiff hath not averred that he and all they, in whom he prescribes, have used to repair the said seat, which he ought to have done according to the cases, Co. 3 Inst. 202. Corven versus Pym, Cro. Jac. 366. Frances and Ley, 604, ibid. Dawny and Dee, Hob. 69. Boothby versus Bayly, 2 Bulstr. 150. May versus Gilbert; and the ordering of seats in the church being of ecclesiastical conusance, the temporal law will not meddle with it, without special reason.

Twisden Justice. I have conferred with most of the Judges in this case, and they are of opinion that the declaration is good enough without such allegation of repairing, this being in an action of the case; but if it had been in a prohibition, there perhaps it had not been good. But when it is as to such house belonging, it is parcel of his franktenement, and then he doth not sit there by the licence of the Ordinary. Wyndham and Mallet of the same opinion, but Foster for the defendant. But upon perusal of the record it was not tanquam messuagio prædict. pertinent. but only that he and all those whose estate he hath in the said messuage, have used to sit in the said seat, &c. And upon this Wyndham and the other Judges said, that they would advise; and upon that it was adjourned.

Case. 1 Danv. Abr. 179, p. 1. 1 Lev. 64. 1 Sid. 77. 1 Keb. 288, 346.

Action upon the case: the plaintiff counts that the defendant had the custody of the records of this Court, and ought to keep them safely; and that William Walker brought an action upon the case against the plaintiff for words, and recites the whole record, and that he recovered against the plaintiff, and had judgment upon it, and damages 106l. And that this judgment was entered, that the plaintiff here capiatur: and on this the plaintiff brought a writ of error in the Exchequer Chamber, and that pending this writ, the defendant Paget tam negligenter custodivit the records, that this error was amended, and made, that the defendant there sit in misericordia, by which the plaintiff is made liable to pay the 106l. The defendant pleads not guilty. And now this issue was tried at Bar, and upon evidence it was proved, that all the clerks of the office have liberty to go into the Treasury and to view the records, and so have the Clerk of the Nisi Prius for Middlesex, and his clerks, and all the philizers of this Court, although they are not clerks of the office. And also that the records have been frequently amended after error brought; and in 4 Car. in C. B. in the Lord Savil's case, it was resolved, that a record may be amended before a recordatur entered upon the roll; and upon all this evidence the jury found for the defendant.

Attainder. 1 Lev. 73. 1 Keb. 349, 436, 549, 615, 745.

In ejectment. On not guilty, a special verdict found that George Lord Cobham being seised in fee of the lands in question 13 Jan. 1557, made his will and devised them to Anne for life, remainder to William for life, remainder to the first son of William, remainder to George for life, remainder to his first son, &c. And having two daughters Eliz. and Katharine limits them to Elizabeth for life, remainder to Katharine for life, remainder to the heirs males of his brother Thomas, remainder to the heirs of the body of William, his eldest son; George dies 4 & 5 Ph. & Mar. Anne dies, George dies without issue; William hath issue, Henry and George; George hath issue William; William hath issue Pembroke; William enters, Henry enters, Henry and George are [54] attainted 1 Jac. In 3 Jac. an Act is made reciting the attainder, and confirms it; and then follows a proviso in these words, Provided, and be it enacted, that the manor of Cooling (the lands in question) shall be and remain and be held and enjoyed to Duke Brook, and the heirs males of his body, remainder to Charles, remainder to William Brook, and the heirs males of his body, remainder to such estates-tail as are mentioned in the will of George the devisor; Sir William the son of George 7 Jac. was restored; Henry dies 13 Jac. Sir William survives and hath daughters Pembroke, Hill, Margaret and Frances, Sir William the father of Henry dies, 39 El. Frances one of the daughters of Sir William demises to the plaintiff.

Baldwin for the plaintiff. The point is upon the Act 3 Jac. which takes notice of the attainder of Henry and George, by which Frances hath good title as heir of the body of William, eldest son of George. 1st, This clause is relative to the will of George, just as if it had been particularly recited, and so is the construction of relative clauses in grants, 9 Co. 30. a. 20 E. 3. Bro. Patents 31 and 91, so in Acts of Parliament, Plow. 130, Buckley versus Thomas.

1. Obj. The words of this proviso are imperfect, (viz.) and for default of such issue shall be for such estates in tail, and doth not mention the estates.

Answ. In an Act of Parliament words ought to be taken according to common parlance, as in arbitrement, &c. and so held and enjoyed are sufficient.

2. Obj. At the time of this Act Henry was attainted of treason, and alive, and so no person in esse to take as heir of the body of William at that time.

Answ. By this Act there are five estates-tail to be spent before the will of George is to take place, (viz.) of Duke, Charles, William, Calisthenes, John; and then comes the will of George by this Act, and there is no estate in that will to Henry in particular; and it is sufficient if the estate take effect when the particular estates are determined. 1 Co. 63, Archers case. And though in strict and legal sense William had not an heir at that time, yet Henry dying before the particular estate spent, the daughters shall take, and the daughters are heirs, as appears by the record; for Henry died 17 Jac. Suppose these four daughters should bring a formedon by the aid of that Act of 7 Jac. they shall mention Henry and George in the writ, because that Act purges the attainder.

[55] 2. The intent of an Act of Parliament ought to be observed in its exposition, and that was here, that as long as there was any issue of George in being, the land should not revert to the Crown, for they had a care that none of the remainders should be barred; and heirs here shall not be taken as in a conveyance, but in an equitable sense, as 8 Assises pl. 5, per Thorpe, 8 Co. The Prince's case.

3. This Act is quasi an Act of Restitution, which is materia favorabilis, Co. 3 Inst. 241. I agree if this Act had limited immediately estates according to the will of George, it had been a doubt whether good; but here it is after five estates-tail spent.

Jones for the defendant. This Act of 7 Jac. hath no operation in this case, because there is a proviso in it, that it shall not extend to the lands forfeit for treason.

2. Henry at the time of his attainder had two estates in him, (viz.) one in possession, and another in remainder; I agree that the relative words make the thing pass as well as if they had been verbatim expressed; but here Henry cannot take as heir to William, which he must do, if he takes at all, (viz.) by purchase; and when a man takes by purchase, all the estate ought to be described, Hob. 31 and 34. Ashenhurst's case; so in Foster and Ramsey's case, a devise to the heir of his brother, who was an alien; he could not take.

Object. He is capable of taking when the remainder falls.

Answ. There is no intent that there should be any contingent remainder. Et adjournatur.

WYNNE versus LLOYD.

Error to reverse a common recovery in Wales. Antea 16.

Error. Postea 70, 96, 134. 3 Danv. Ab. 49, p. 7. 1 Lev. 72, 130, 146. 1 Keb. 351, 388, 459, 717, 748, 809, 914. 1 Sid. 213.

Upon the scire facias ad audiendum errores, the sheriff returned several ter-tenants, who pleaded several pleas, the one that he is but tenant for years of the demise of one Owen, another that there are other ter-tenants of the land, (viz.) A. B. &c. not named in the writ, judgment of the writ. A third, that the plaintiff had entered into part pending the writ: to these pleas the plaintiff demurred.

Allen for the plaintiff. That these pleas are none of them good, because should these be allowed, the plaintiff might be infinitely delayed.

[56] Williams for the defendants, that these pleas are good, because the ground of a scire facias to the ter-tenants, is, that they may shew something to maintain their possession, and they may either plead in bar or abatement, and they may demand oyer of the record, Dyer 321 a. and they may have a release to plead, they may plead jointenancy, Hill. 42 Eliz. Cro. Eliz. 739. Holland versus Dansey. See in the same book 129 Charnoch versus Worsley, Cro. Jac. 332. Bartholomew versus Belfield. Then as to the plea of entry of the plaintiff pendant the writ, it is a good plea in abatement. 1. Because the nature of a writ of error is not to bar the right of the land, but to the action; and it lies not but when the plaintiff is prejudiced, and here the plaintiff is not prejudiced so long as he continues in possession, be his possession right or wrong; so for this reason the bail shall not reverse a judgment given against the principal, because it is but a consequential prejudice. 2dly, The end of the writ of error is to have restitution, which he needs not, when he hath already entered; but here is a difference between possession by act in law, and when by the act of the party. Bridgman 56, Lloyd versus Bethil. 2dly, As to the plea that he is but tenant for years, it is a good plea, for it is no more than an aid prier of him of whose lease he holds. Owen 157, Carew versus Warren. So the parol shall demur upon such a scire fac. for nonage, Cro. Jac. 392, Herbert versus Binion.

Object. It is in the discretion of the Court to grant a scire fac. in such case to the ter-tenants.

The Court hath now awarded one, and the tenants now may have those advantages as are incident thereunto; and there are many pleas which the ter-tenants may now plead, which after the reversal of the judgment they cannot plead, as a release of errors.

The Court was of opinion that the pleas are but frivolous, and awarded that they plead in chief. Vid. postea.

HURST'S CASE.

Mandamus. Postea 94. 1 Lev. 75. 2 Sid. 94, 152. 1 Keb. 349, 354, 387, 558, 675.

One Edward Hurst an attorney of the Town-Court of Canterbury being turned out by the commissioners within the late Act for Corporations, moved now for a mandamus, and though it was suggested that it is a place concerning the administration of justice, and a precedent shewn Mich. 1651, in the case of an attorney in Southwark, yet [57] Foster and Wyndham denied it, but Twisden and Mallet allowed it; so the Court being divided in opinion no writ could be had. Post. 94.

SOUTHCOT versus RIDER.

Account. 1 Danv. Abr. 229, p. 27, 234, p. 2. 1 Keb. 354, 395.

Account against the defendant as his receiver; the defendant pleaded that the 20l. in demand was delivered to him by the plaintiff to pay over to such persons as

Sir George Monk, &c. should think fit, and that they did award that they should deliver it over to one Hatchall, &c. absq; hoc, that he was his receiver aliter vel alio modo; and verdict for the plaintiff, and judgment quod computet; and before the auditors he pleaded a special plea; (viz.) the Act of Oblivion; and upon that the plaintiff demurred.

Jones for the plaintiff. It is not a good plea, because it ought to have been pleaded in bar to the action, and not before auditors, for otherwise such suits will be endless.

Polexfen for the defendant. Many things may be pleaded in bar and in abatement too, 41 E. 4, 31. 9 E. 4, 15, Bro. Accompt 43 and 48. Latch. 59, Hopton versus Offal, and payment to the plaintiff or a stranger is a plea in discharge, and yet may be pleaded in bar, Rast. Entr. 16. 19 H. 6, 5, and this is a proper plea in discharge, for otherwise it would be infinite. The Court seemed that the plea was well enough, but the defendant pleads ill as to the time, and when the plaintiff charges him as receiver from such a time to such a time, he must answer that precisely; and for that cause judgment was given for the plaintiff.

HOLE EXECUTOR OF &C. against BRADFORD, EXECUTOR OF B.

Executor. 1 Sid. 88. 1 Keb. 344, 356.

Debt upon the Statute of Ministers for fifths against an executor. The defendant pleads nil debet, and verdict for the plaintiff. Stroud moved for the defendant, that this action shall not charge the executor, it not being a duty in the testator. But, by the Court, the executor is chargeable, because it was a duty in the testator; but escape lies not against the executor, because the action is founded ex delicto; but it lies upon the statute of 2 Ed. 6. [58] for tithes; and judgment was given for the plaintiff by the whole Court.

BAKER versus BERISFORD. COVENANT.

Custom. 2 Danv. Abr. 440, p. 9. 3 Danv. Abr. 387, p. 6. 1 Lev. 154. 1 Sid. 76. 2 Sid. 1, 9. 1 Keb. 285, 356, 480, 509, 515, 838, 893.

The plaintiff declares, that Abraham Baker was seised in fee of copyhold land in Westham in the county of Essex, and alledgeth a custom in the said manor of Westham, that the wife shall be endowed of the moiety of all such copyhold lands as her husband was seised of, and that Abraham died having a wife named Mary, who had a moiety of the said land assigned her for her dower, and that John his son had the other moiety, and that Mary and John joined in a lease for years to the defendant, rendering 100l. per annum (viz.) 50l. to Mary, and 50l. to John, and that John dies, and the plaintiff as his widow demands 25l. And on nil debet, and verdict for the plaintiff,

Jones moved in arrest of judgment, that the breach is not according to the custom, because the wife is but to have a moiety, but here she claims a moiety of a moiety, and a custom ought to be pursued strictly; but by the Court it is directly within the custom, and adjudged for the plaintiff.

BILLING'S CASE.

Charge. 1 Keb. 303.

Billing was committed to the Marshalsea for divers misdemeanors, and he being in prison for the said offences was charged with actions, and judgments obtained against them; and the Court was moved he might be discharged of those actions; and resolved by the Court, when a man is in prison for criminal matters he is not chargeable with a civil action without leave of the Court; but if he happen to be charged, fieri non debuit, sed factum valet, but they ought to have moved the Court first; but now once charged he cannot be discharged.

[59] DOVE versus DARKIN. EJECTMENT.

Error. 1 Lev. 80. 1 Sid. 93. 1 Keb. 368, 375, 413. P. 31 H. 6, 15 a. plac. 4.

Judgment was given against the defendant, and he brings a writ of error, and assigns for error, that the plaintiff was dead at the time of the judgment given. The plaintiff's entry is, that the aforesaid plaintiff by A. B. his attorney venit & dicit, that he is in life, and issue thereupon, and found for the plaintiff in the writ of error that he was dead; and Serjeant Maynard moved that the judgment might be reversed.

Allen contra, because there ought to have been a scire fac. against the executors of the party dead.

Wild. There is neither executor nor administrator.

Wyndham Justice. It is well enough, and a precedent comes near it, Rastal's Entries, tit. Brief in Mort. pl. 1, fol. 108. And it was adjourned. Post.

WISEMAN versus COTTON. HILL. 13 CAR. 2, ROT. 476.

Custom. Postea 76. 2 Danv. Abr. 441, p. 2. 1 Lev. 79. 1 Sid. 17, 135. Hard. 325. 1 Keb. 288, 372, 492, 505.

The plaintiff counts, that whereas there was a discourse concerning the manor of Farningham, and the plaintiff affirmed that it was devisable by the custom of Kent, in consideration that the plaintiff would give the defendant 5s. the defendant assumed to give the plaintiff 40s. if it were not devisable, and avers that it is not devisable. The defendant pleads that it is devisable by custom; and upon that a special verdict, that by Act of Parliament 2 E. 6 the lands of Sir Henry Isles amongst others should be from henceforth to all intents, constructions and purposes as lands at the common law: they find that lands in gavelkind are devisable; and if the Act of Parliament takes away the other collateral qualities, as well as the partibility, was the sole question.

Jones for the plaintiff. By this Act all qualities of gavelkind are taken away.

Winington for the defendant. Devisable or not, is not an essential quality of gavelkind. Lambert's Perambulation 584, 585. Spelman's Glossary, Gavelkind 412. 1 Inst. 140. Lambert 25 and 26. As for other particular customs they ought to be [60] specially alledged, as dower of a moiety, 2 E. 4, 18 b. 5 E. 4, 8, but gavelkind ought not; but the Court takes notice thereof, Cro. Car. 561, Launder versus Brook, and Davies 50. Adjournatur. But the Court inclined that the Act had not destroyed this quality. Post.

MOULD versus WALLIS. COVENANT.

Covenant. 1 Lev. 81. 1 Sid. 142. 1 Keb. 376, 469, 512.

The plaintiff declares upon an indenture of apprenticeship. The defendant pleads, that at the time of the entering into the said indenture he was an infant. The plaintiff replies, that by the custom of the City of London, if one under age binds himself an apprentice, that it shall be good against him. The defendant demurs.

Jones for the defendant. It is a departure. 1 Inst. 304 a. If H. intitle himself in his former plea by the common law, in his second plea he shall not enable himself by a custom, but should have pleaded it at first; so is Keilw. 75 b. The Abbot of Bokefast's case.

Howel for the plaintiff. The case in 21 H. 7, pl. 29, is otherwise, where in assize the defendant pleads feoffment of a stranger: the plaintiff replies, that the feoffor was an infant; the defendant rejoins, that there was a custom that he might make a feoffment at fifteen; and resolved no departure: 'tis true, 37 H. 6, 5, there was a departure, because he began with a general custom, and concluded with a particular one; and this seems to be good by Cro. Car. 652, Walker versus Nicholson; but no judgment is there given.

Wyndham Justice. It is not any departure from the title, but only a plea to the disability.

Twisden Justice. Hutt. 63, Jennings versus Pitman, seems to make it a departure, Cro. Car. 179, Guilbert versus Fletcher. The action here is founded upon the covenant, and he doth not come in the replication and maintain his action, but answers to the disability, and so no departure.

Jones. The book of 21 H. 7, 17, is contrary to Yelv. 14. Adjournatur. Vide Godb. Rep. 122, the same case pl. 143. Moor 135, pl. 280, Stanton's case, ante, Granger versus Hembrough.

[61] LAWSON versus WITHERINGTON.

Condition. 2 Danv. Ab. 68, p. 8. 1 Lev. 85. 1 Keb. 380, 415.

Debt upon an obligation conditioned to pay 100l. upon the tenth day of January, upon three months warning. The defendant pleads that the plaintiff had not given three months warning. The plaintiff demurs.

Weston for the plaintiff. I conceive three months warning shall be taken upon any tenth day of January after three months warning given by the plaintiff, and if it shall be so taken, then the defendant's plea is but in abatement of the writ, and so he pleading in bar, it is naught. Cro. Eliz. 202, Isham and Paget versus Hitchcock.

Twisden Justice. Pleading in bar when it is in abatement, is not good.

Wyndham Justice. Although it had been to pay on the tenth of January after the date of the obligation, upon three months warning by the obligee, though the obligee omit the warning, yet the money shall not be lost; and so it hath been resolved in the time of Roll Chief Justice, and the other shall be bound to pay it at any three months warning. Adjournatur.

SAUNDERS versus EDWARDS.

Case. 1 Danv. Ab. 212, p. 5. 1 Sid. 95. 1 Keb. 389.

In an action on the case, the plaintiff counts that he is a clerk of the Inrolment Office, and that the defendant crimen felonicæ ei imposuit, by which he had like to have lost his office. The defendant pleads, that as to the imposition of felony, otherwise than by speaking of scandalous words, not guilty; and as to the speaking of the words, non infra duos annos. The plaintiff demurs.

Wild for the plaintiff. This is not within the Statute of Limitations, no more than slander of title.

Jones for the defendant. The imposition of felony is actionable by it self, and then the other words are within the statute.

Wild. Crimen felonicæ imponere cannot be by words alone, but by some act, as carrying him before a justice of peace, &c.

Twisden Justice. If the words are actionable at first, then the damages after do not give cause of action; and the first plea is a full bar, and the other fruitless, and of that opinion was the whole Court; and so judgment for the defendant, nisi, &c.

[62] JAMES NORFOLK versus AYLMER.

Sheriff's bond. 1 Lev. 209. 1 Keb. 391.

Debt upon an obligation, conditioned that whereas Smith was committed to the serjeant at arms by the House of Commons, if the said Smith shall be a true prisoner, and pay all fees due, &c. that then, &c. The defendant pleads the statute of 23 H. 6. The plaintiff demurs.

Powys for the plaintiff. A serjeant at arms is not within that statute, for it begins with keepers of gaols, and a serjeant at arms is above such a one, according to the rule given 2 Co. 46, and the office of serjeant at arms is properly to attend the house, and not to be a keeper of prisoners. It is true, that Cro. Eliz. 66, Bracebridge's case is, that the marshal of the King's Bench is without question within that statute. Serjeant at arms within the marches of Wales is out of this statute. Cro. Car. 309, Johns versus Stratford.

Levinz for the defendant. This obligation is void by 23 H. 6. for it is within the words of the statute, which are keepers of prisons, or other the officers aforesaid. Cro. Eliz. 108, Trussel versus Aston. And as to the objection that a serjeant at arms is above a sheriff, I deny it, and here this statute ought to be taken according to equity, as sometimes penal statutes are, Trin. 9 H. 6, 19, pl. 13. Debt by the mayor of the staple, Plow. 35. Debt against the keeper of Ludgate, Dyer 321. Debt against the marshal. 2dly, This condition is void at the common law. 1st, It restrains trade and livelihood, 2 H. 5, 5, and Owen 143. 2dly, That he shall pay all fees due, &c. until he shall be discharged by the House of Commons, which may never be, because they may be dissolved. &c. 3dly, It is an obligation to pay fees before they are due, which is extortion. Co. 2 Inst. 210. Hut. Rep. 52. Et adjournatur.

Words. 1 Keb. 393.

For words of a broker, speaking of his profession, He is a cheating knave, he hath cheated me with brass money. After verdict Pemberton moved in arrest of judgment, and cited Hutt. 13, Gitting versus Redseam's case; but resolved by the Court, that to call a tradesman a cheat, an action will lie if he speaks of his profession; but to speak it generally it will not; and adjudged for the plaintiff.

[63] LITTLEBOY versus WRIGHT. ERROR, MARSHALSEA.

Jurisdiction. 2 Danv. Abr. 300, p. 4. 1 Lev. 69. 1 Sid. 85, 95. 1 Keb. 328.

Action upon the case for words (viz.) You are a whore, &c. per quod she hath lost her marriage, and verdict for the plaintiff and judgment; and now Serjeant Maynard assigns for error, that it doth not appear that the cause of action, (viz.) that the loss of marriage was within the jurisdiction of the Court, and the other words are not actionable, and for this cause judgment was reversed. Vide Cro. Car. 570, Ireland versus Blackwel, contra.

[64] TERM. HILL. 14 CAR. 2, B. R.

Sir Robert Foster, Chief Justice; Sir John Mallet, Sir Thomas Twisden, Sir Wadham Wyndham, Justices.

PALMER versus RICHARD.

Discontinuance.

Replevin. The defendant makes conusance to A. that one Knight was seised in fee of the place in which, &c. and granted a rent-charge to A. and so makes conusance for ten years rent. The plaintiff replies in bar, that Knight was not seised in fee, and the defendant demurs. And Serjeant Wild moved for the plaintiff to amend his plea, because it doth not appear by the whole record that Knight is dead; and then, though Knight be not seised in fee, yet if he be alive the grant shall be good during his life.

Twisden. If Knight were alive at the time of the distress, the defendant ought to justify; for if tenant for life grant a rent, if the grantee distrain, and after tenant for life dies, he ought not to make avowry nor conusance, but to justify, because the taking was lawful. In this case the record being entered, Read for the plaintiff came too late to have it amended; but then Wild moved to have leave to discontinue, and it was granted.

Covenant. 1 Lev. 88. 1 Keb. 424, 426.

In covenant, the plaintiff declares upon an indenture dated 7 Sept. 1657, whereby the defendant covenants, that he one T. W. would deliver to the plaintiff so many maunds of salt-peter at such a rate before the 20th of October ensuing, the plaintiff paying so much a maund, and to the performance thereof the defendant binds himself in 500l. The defendant demands oyer of the deed, and by the same it appears, that between the same covenant and the obligation, there is a proviso, that if the defendant should between that and the said 20th of October be disabled by the sea, &c. to deliver the said salt-peter, then the deed should be void. The defendant pleads, that he within the time aforesaid had prepared one thousand maunds of salt-peter, and that the boat wherein it was put was cast away, and so he was disabled. The plaintiff replies, that the defendant had sufficient salt-peter over and above what was cast away; and issue thereupon, and found for the plaintiff, and damages 300l. And Allen for the defendant moved in arrest of judgment, that there is a variance between the deed and the declaration, for in the declaration the proviso is omitted.

Jones for the plaintiff. 1st, The action is brought upon the covenant, and not upon the penalty, and the reciting of the penalty is but surplusage. 2dly, The declaration is sufficient without recital of the proviso, according to Ughtred's case, and the defendant ought to plead the proviso; and of this opinion was the whole Court; and judgment was thereupon given for the plaintiff.

THE KING versus GISLIFER.

Apprentice. 1 Lev. 84. In a case between the parish of Henton in Kent and Steers, 1654, B. R. the question was, whether the defendant was compellable to take an apprentice, by 43 Eliz. And Rolls Chief Justice said, that if by any means he could, he'd construe the stat. to compel the party, because it was so advantageous a thing to the common-wealth. But the business was referred to the Justices of Assise, who ordered that Steers should take an apprentice, and for disobeying this order, an attachment was granted.

The churchwardens and overseers of a parish in the county of Derby place a child, which was the bastard child of one Mary Newton with the defendant, according to the statute of 43 Eliz. c. 2. and do appoint the defendant to receive the said child; the defendant appeals to the sessions, and there the justices make an order, that the defendant shall take the said child as his apprentice; and now the defendant brought his certiorari and removed the said order into this Court.

[66] Allen moved to quash the said order; and some exceptions he took to the form of it, (viz.) 1st, It doth not appear that this child was a poor child. 2dly, Nor in what trade he shall be an apprentice. But to these exceptions the Court answered; 1st, That it shall come on the other part that she is not a child within the statute. And 2dly, Husbandry is intended by that statute, and so shall be construed to be meant in the order until the contrary do appear. But the main question upon the order was, whether the defendant within this statute may be compelled to take an apprentice. And Allen moved that he could not. 1st, By this statute the churchwardens and overseers may bind out such an apprentice as well out of the parish as within it, and then it shall be inconvenient that strangers shall be compelled in this case. 2dly, The words of the Act are, that it shall be binding to the apprentice, as if he or she had been bound themselves by indenture; so that the intent of the Act was, that the apprentice chiefly should be bound, and not be chargeable again to the parish, and not the party who may be but tenant at will. 3dly, This Act extends over all England into corporations, London, &c. And if any one shall be compelled to take an apprentice, an alderman or any other person of quality may be charged to take such an apprentice.

Bigland contra. That it hath been the received opinion so amongst the Judges from time to time. And at length per Foster, Mallet and Wyndham the order is good; but Twisden contra. And Wyndham said the Judges of Serjeants Inn in Chancery-lane were divided in this case. And Twisden said that the Judges in Fleet-street were of his opinion; and thereupon it was ordered, that the order should be confirmed; and that the law might come in debate, an information should be exhibited against the defendant for not performing thereof.

BRAHAM versus ASPINAL, C. B. ERROR.

Visne.

In debt upon an obligation, conditioned to pay money at the house of one Yarrow in Woodstreet Magna, London. The defendant pleads, that he paid the money at the said house in Woodstreet, but names no parish, and upon that a venire fac. issues to the parish of St. Michael Woodstreet, and found for the plaintiff, and judgment; and the defendant brings a writ of error, and after the record certified, [67] alledges diminution in the venire fac. and upon the return thereof it appears to be as before, and the now plaintiff assigns this for error, for that the parish of St. Michael is not named in any part of the record.

Twisden. The words of the statute of 21 Jac. cap. 13. are by reason the visne is sued out of more places or of fewer places than it ought to be, so as one place be right named, are to be intended when some of the places are named in the record: and therefore if an action is laid in D. and a venire fac. issues de corpore comitatus; there although the venire fac. be awarded to more places, yet it is not good, because the body of the county was not named before in the record; and it was adjourned: but afterwards it was ruled good being after verdict, because it shall be intended St. Michael is in Great Woodstreet; and judgment was affirmed.

THE KING versus HARDY.

Indictment. 1 Keb. 423, 428, 435.

Indictment of a forcible entry, for entering into a copyhold, and that the defendant ejecit & disseisivit the party: and Powis moved to quash it, because it ought not to be disseisivit upon 21 Jac. cap. 15, and so is Coke 4 Inst. 176 in the margent; and for this cause the indictment was quashed.

STONEHOUSE versus BODVIL.

Assumpsit. 1 Danv. Abr. 27, p. 10. 1 Keb. 439.

The plaintiff declares upon an indebitatus assumpsit for physick, wares and commodities provided and delivered for the daughter of the defendant at his request; after non assumpsit, and verdict for the plaintiff, Williams moved in arrest of judgment, because it is a collateral promise, and so no debt, and consequently the plaintiff ought to have declared specially: but the whole Court resolved it well enough. For that, 1st. It is for wares provided and delivered (for) not (to) the daughter of the defendant, and so after a verdict it shall be intended delivered to the defendant for the daughter. 2dly. An action of debt will lie for this; as if the father desire one to find physick for his daughter, debt lies against the father, and so indebitatus assumpsit; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Contempt. 2 Danv. Ab. 292, p. 8. 1 Keb. 451, 465.

Debt for 40s. imposed as a fine upon the defendant at a court leet of the plaintiff's, for a contempt there committed; the contempt was, that he put on his hat in the court, and upon the steward's admonishing him of such his doing, he answered, I do not value what you can do. And adjudged for the plaintiff.

VERNON versus ALSOP.

Condition. 2 Danv. Abr. 24 b. p. 4. 1 Lev. 77. 1 Sid. 105. 1 Keb. 356, 415, 451.

The plaintiff declares upon a bond of 14l. The defendant demands oyer of the condition, which is, that if the defendant pay 2s. a week till 14l. be paid, and upon default of payment the obligation shall be void. The defendant pleads, that the 17th of October such a year he made default of payment; judgment si actio. The plaintiff demurs, and adjudged for the plaintiff, because the condition is senseless, and then the obligation is in force and single.

If H. be convicted upon verdict upon an information or indictment, his fine ought to be set in open Court, and not privately in the Judge's chamber.

DR. WIDDRINGTON'S CASE.

Mandamus. Antea 31. 1 Lev. 23. 1 Sid. 71. 1 Keb. 2, 50, 61, 68, 79, 131, 150, 234, 458.

Doctor Widdrington having formerly brought his mandamus to be restored to his fellowship in Christ-College Cambridge, and upon that the master, Dr. Cudworth, and the fellows made a return which seemed to the Court sufficient, and thereupon he could not obtain a writ of restitution; but he finding that the return was very false, brought his action upon the case, and thereupon a reference was procured to certain commissioners, (viz.) The Bishop of London, the Lord Chamberlain, and some of the Judges; and upon hearing the whole business Dr. Widdrington was cleared, and awarded to be restored: and now he moved by Allen, that in regard the return was scandalous, and might hereafter tend [69] to his disparagement, and since the other side were willing that all things before past might be buried in oblivion, the said return might be taken off the file, which he said might be, since all parties concerned were consenting thereunto. But the Court did somewhat doubt of that, they not knowing any precedent for the withdrawing any record of the Court: but they made a rule, that the record should be dashed through in the nature of a cancellation; and with that Allen was content.

TOWNSEND'S CASE.

Mandamus. 1 Lev. 91. 1 Sid. 107. 1 Keb. 458, 470, 659.

Townsend having served as an apprentice for seven years, in Oxford, with a tailor, his master refused to make him free; and Serjeant Holloway moved to have a mandamus to be directed to the mayor and others to make him free; and though at first it was doubted whether such a writ would lie any more than for one who had seven years studied the law to be called to the Bar, yet it was at last agreed, because it differed from the case of the barrister; for in the last case there is no person to whom the writ should be directed; but here the mayor & corporation are to be commanded to do it; and if this writ would not lie, it would be a great discouragement to trade; and a precedent was shewn, Pasch. 18 Car. in Norwich, of a mandamus granted by Bramstone. Vide postea.

Revocation. 1 Salk. 87.

The plaintiff obtained a judgment in debt, and received the money, and made a letter of attorney to another that he might acknowledge satisfaction; and afterwards, and before satisfaction acknowledged, revokes his warrant: and Allen moved that the attorney might proceed, and that the Court might save him harmless; and the Court gave rule, that no proceeding should be upon the judgment without motion first made in Court for it. Vide Latch fol. 8.

[70] WYNNE versus LLOYD.

Error. Antea 16, 55. Postea 96, 134. 3 Danv. Abr. 49, p. 7. 1 Lev. 72, 130, 146. 1 Keb. 351, 388, 459, 717, 748, 809, 914. 1 Sid. 213.

The dilatory pleas being now over-ruled, the plaintiff in the writ of error assigned errors, which were now argued.

Finch Solicitor General for the plaintiff. Here is a recovery against the vouchee, who appears by attorney, and there is no warrant of attorney; and 1st, All recoveries are erroneous if the party does not appear either in person or by attorney, and here is no good warrant, because the commission to take a warrant of attorney issues before the summons ad warrantizandum, which is, 1st, Contrary to the nature of a warrant of attorney to be given before plea pleaded; and a general warrant of attorney is not good. 2dly, It is contrary to the words of the commission, which says, that a writ of summons now dependeth. Cro. Jac. fol. 11, Arundel versus Arundel.

2. The caption of the warrant of attorney is naught, because before the commission. 3. This shall not be supplied by an intendment, that there was another dedimus, and that this cannot be right, because, 1. The writ of error commands to send up the record cum omnibus ea tangentibus.

2. 'Tis a dedimus between the same parties.

Object. Cro. Eliz. Johnson and Pavie's case was objected.

Answ. There is nothing there could falsify that intendment; but here are strong presumptions to the contrary; so is Cro. Jac. 392, Herbert and Binion's case.

Williams contra. Here is a good record in a common recovery, and the errors alledged are only in the way, and proceedings thereunto. 1. These errors are repugnant to the record of the recovery it self, and not assignable, no more than that there was no such person as the Judge before whom the recovery was had. Mich. 38 and 39 Eliz. Cro. Eliz. 531, Hobert's case. Yelv. 33, Arundel versus Arundel. Then as to the errors themselves, here are all the necessary parts of a recovery. As to the first, of a dedimus being before the warrant of attorney, these things are to be considered. 1. The nature of a dedimus, that it is not any part of the recovery. 2. Admit it to be a part, yet it is no substantial part, and so helped by the statute. 3. The common practice. 4. The judgments in these cases. 5. The course in North-Wales. 6. The warrant here upon the roll. As [71] to the first, At common law a fine or recovery could not have been levied by dedimus, for the statute of Carlisle 15 E. 2 gave first the dedimus; but that statute is only directory, and at the discretion of the Court, and 5 Co. 38 a. Tey's case, and 40, Dormer's case, where the parts of a fine are reckoned up, a dedimus potestatem is no part thereof; and this objection had been pertinent to have stopped the judgment, but now factum valet, as Tey's case was. As to the second, It is helped by the statute of 27 Eliz. cap. 9, as a venire fac. wanting, or as Norris's case cited in Gage's case, 5 Co. 45 b. As to the third, It is the constant practice. As to the fourth, Recoveries have always been construed favourably for the upholding of them, and therefore a common recovery may be of an advowson, 5 Co. 40, Dormer's case; and yet a writ of entry will not lie thereof, 4 E. 3, 162. So it shall bind an infant, Cro. Car. 224, Newport's case, and variance in a fine hurts not, Cro. Jac. 77, Earl of Bedford's case. And a like error in a fine alledged, and allowed well enough, Cro. Eliz. 275, Argenton and Westover. As to the fifth, It is the constant course in North-Wales to take fines before dedimus. As to the sixth, Here is a good warrant upon the record.

Twisden Justice. There is a great difference between a fine and a recovery; for a dedimus potestatem is not part of a fine, but a warrant of attorney is part of the recovery; and it was adjourned. Post.

WILLIAM BAILY versus THOMAS BIRTLES AND KATHERINE UX. EJUS, EXECUTRIX OF RICHARD BAILY.

In an action upon the case, the plaintiff declares, that het he 26th of Oct. 12 Car. 2 was possessed of a cow of the value of 4l. 10s. and being so possessed 23 Nov. in the twelfth year he did deliver the said cow to the said Richard in his lifetime, to keep the same in his pasture safely for the use of the said William, to the said William to be redelivered when Richard should be requested; which cow the said Richard afterwards, (viz.) the said 23d of November did sell and deliver to one William Wodard for 4l. 3s. 4d. and the said monies did convert and dispose to his own use; and that the said Richard in his life-time, nor the defendant after his death dum sola, nor the defendants after marriage did not pay the [72] 4l. 3s. 4d. The defendants plead that their testator was not guilty; the jury find him guilty ad damnum 4l. 3s. 4d. and 53s. 4d. for costs; and in arrest of judgment it was moved by Bigland, because this is a tort for which the executor is not liable to answer, but moritur cum persona.

Raymond for the plaintiff. I agree that things which imply a wrong in themselves, as actio personalis moritur cum persona, as the wrongful taking of the profits of the land, Cro. Eliz. 206, Tooley versus Wyndham: so of an escape or any misfeasance: but for non-feasance the executors shall be chargeable; as for not payment of money levied upon a fieri facias, as Cro. Car. 539, Dickenson versus Gilford, this very difference agreed; for non-feasance shall never be vi & armis, nor contra pacem, 9 Co. 50 b. Count de Salop's case; for this reason an action lies against the executor upon 2 E. 6, for tithes: so this term, antea fol. 57, Hole against the executors of Bradford for fifths due to the widow of a sequestered person. But notwithstanding this the Court said it was a tort, and that the executor ought not to be charged with it. Mes vide Savile Rep. 40, difference prise, 3 Leon. 241, Sir Brian Tuck's case.

[73] TERM. PASCH. 15 CAR. 2, B. R.

Needham an attorney of this Court prayed for the filing of a scire facias, which was sued forth five terms ago against the bail, and two nichils returned upon the same, and he had neglected the filing of it; but the Court would not grant it.

FITCH versus VINOR.

Case. Antea 38. Read versus Grapler.

In an action upon the case, the plaintiff at the Nisi Prius was nonsuit, because the Nisi Prius roll is, that the plaintiff was in such a benefice in the year 1662, whereas the plea roll is 1626, & so the plaintiff is destitute of his proof; and now Wild Serjeant moved to set aside the nonsuit according to Week's case, Cro. Car. 203, and it was adjourned.

TURNOR versus FELGATE.

Intr. Trin. 1656. Rot. 130.

Execution. 3 Danv. Ab. 325, p. 2. 2 Sid. 125. 1 Sid. 107. 1 Lev. 95. 1 Keb. 453, 478, 482, 488, 822.

The case was thus, Felgate recovered against Mole, and Turnor was his bail; Felgate obtained execution against Turnor, and his goods were levied; and thereupon Turnor moved the Court, for that there was some miscarriage in the proceedings against him in obtaining that execution, because there was no ca. sa. sued out against Mole, that the matter might be referred to Mr. Hern the Secondary; and upon his examination he found the process unduly sued forth, and so the execution was superseded against Turnor, and a vacate made of it; and then Turnor brings trespass against Felgate for taking his goods, and upon debate upon a special verdict the plaintiff had judgment, and recovered damages for his goods taken; and now Turnor [74] brings a scire facias to have restitution for his goods taken upon the aforesaid erroneous execution, and for which he had already recovered damages in an action of trespass; and upon motion made by Felgate the scire facias was superseded as being a very unreasonable thing for Turnor to have double satisfaction.

THE KING versus WRIGHT.

Perjury. 1 Sid. 148. 1 Keb. 531.

Information of perjury set forth, that Sir John Lee brought trespass in C. B. for cutting of trees against Garward, and that the defendant there pleaded not guilty; and upon the trial there the defendant swore that the said William Garward ultimo Junii 12 Car. 2, did cut sixty trees of the value of 80l. ubi revera he did not cut sixty trees of the value of 80l. and verdict against the defendant.

Allen moved in arrest of judgment. 1. In recital of the action brought in C. B. and the issue joined, it is said that it was awarded, quod venire faceret hic duodecim, which is in B. R. and so the trial was coram non judice, and then no perjury can be committed. Yelv. 111. Pain's case, 3 Inst. 166.

2. It is said, that in that action jurata ponitur in respectum coram domino Rege, so an action is begun in C. B. and tried in B. R. and it is not after a verdict, for there is no mention of a verdict to be in that action of trespass, and so not helped by any statute; and for this cause it was staid until, &c. But afterwards the exceptions were over-ruled, and judgment against Wright to stand on the pillory, and be fined 20l.

THE EARL OF STAMFORD versus GORDAL.

Bail. 1 Danv. Abr. 681, p. 3. 1 Lev. 39. 1 Mod. 16.

Foster moved that the defendant might put in good bail to the plaintiff's action; for although the action is but for words, yet the same being spoke against an earl, the Court may compel special bail; and it was granted, nisi.

Note; Justice Twisden declared, that there is a rule made among the Judges, when any one prays a certiorari at a Judge's chamber, to remove an indictment out of London or Middlesex, he ought to give notice of his desire to the other side three days before, otherwise the certiorari is not to be granted; and there it was questioned whether an inmate be a nusance at common law.

[75] WHITEHEAD versus BROWN. ERROR IN THE PALACE COURT.

Court. 3 Danv. Abr. 301, p. 10. 1 Lev. 96. 1 Keb. 481, 512, 522.

In an assumpsit the plaintiff declares, that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff within the jurisdiction for nursing a child; and for error it was alledged, that it is not set forth that the nursing was within the jurisdiction.

Twisden. The jury within the particular jurisdiction cannot take notice of that which was done out of it.

Wyndham. There is a difference between a debt arising upon a collateral act, and an indebitatus assumpsit; for in the later it is a debt every where, as it is a duty vested in the plaintiff.

Foster Chief Justice. In debt for money due upon the sale of an house, the plaintiff must shew that the house is within the jurisdiction; but when it is indifferent to the Court, where the debt may arise, it shall be presumed to be within the jurisdiction of the Court.

Twisden. Particular jurisdictions are not to be supported by implication and intendment; and it was adjourned.

HARVY versus MARTIN.

Words. 1 Keb. 485.

The plaintiff declares, that he is, and hath been, and was such a day the master of a bark. And the defendant said to him, Thou art a cheating knave and a cheating rogue, and thou hast cheated my son-in-law, John Bradley, of a cable-rope, which belonged to the bark. On not guilty, and verdict for the plaintiff, Jones moved in arrest of judgment, because the words are not applied to the plaintiff's profession as he is master of a bark, as Hill. 1656. Geighton versus Kiffen, of a reeder, You cheated Mr. Rawley of a pannel of reed, is not actionable. Wyndham seemed for the plaintiff. Twisden. I remember the case of the reeder. Et adjournatur.

[76] WISEMAN versus COTTON. SEE BEFORE, 59.

Custom. 2 Danv. Ab. 441, p. 2. 1 Lev. 79. 1 Sid. 17, 135. Hard. 325. 1 Keb, 288, 372, 492, 505.

Allen for the plaintiff. The Act of 2 E. 6 hath taken away the custom of devising, and the custom of gavelkind is altered to all purposes, and that appears, 1st, From the words of the Act. 2. From the meaning thereof. 3. From the construction that hath been made thereupon. As to the first, the words are, that the lands be clearly changed, and be no wise departible, and shall be from henceforth to all intents, constructions and purposes as lands at the common law, and as if they had been of the nature of gavelkind. As to the 2d, the meaning, every Act of Parliament ought to be interpreted according to the words, if there be not a particular reason to the contrary.

Here it is objected, that the words shall only refer to the partibleness.

Answ. In construction of an Act of Parliament that is most reasonable which makes all the words thereof operative. 2. If that had been the meaning thereof, there was no reason why the words should be so general, (viz.) to all constructions and purposes. 3. The meaning was, that their estates should be altogether according to the common law, they being gentlemen, it being prejudicial, that their lands should be according to the custom in gavelkind; as to devise is inconvenient in the opinion of gentlemen of that country. And by the custom of gavelkind upon a writ of right four eslisors ought to choose the grand assize, and not the knights. And the grand assize ought to consist of gavelkind men. As to the 3d, the construction and consequence of law upon this Act, 1. The custom of devising is of the same nature of being endowed of the moiety, of being tenant by the curtesy without issue, and other customs. Now consider the form of pleading these customs. The book of customs of Kent, Vet. Magna Charta 147 b. begins thus: These are the customs which the men of Kent do claim in their gavelkind tenure. So that gavelkind is the mother custom, Pasch. 4 E. 1, C. B. Rot. 2, Margerie quæ fuit uxor Johannis Daggenham petit medietatem of such land. The defendant pleads, quod mulier amittet dotem si, &c. The plaintiff replies, quod bene & verum est que la est tiel custom, mes el ne unque fuit covert secundum legem de gavelkind. The defendant rejoins, quod fornicata est. The jury finds that it is not necessary by such custom, [77] and that the law of gavelkind ceases when gavelkind ceases. 2. These customs are taken notice of to be incident to gavelkind, and there needs no prescription for them, but only in gavelkind, Fitzh. Aid 114, 129. Rastal, Dower in Demand 6. There, for the moiety of dower in gavelkind, the custom is only laid in gavelkind; but it is other of dower of a moiety in a city, for there the custom is more particularly alledged. Ibid. pl. 7, in Norwich. So in process 1 & 2, and voucher 10.

Object. To be indowed of a moiety is not incident to gavelkind; for in North-Wales, where is gavelkind land, the feme is not dowable of a moiety.

Answ. There it is otherwise.

Object. It ought to be otherwise alledged.

Answ. The gavelkind is thus pleaded, and so are the cases put upon it; and the case 5 E. 4, 8 b. pl. 23, is mistaken; for where it is said there, that they ought to prescribe, it should be, that they ought not to prescribe, for otherwise it is not sense; quod Curia concessit.

Wild Serjeant for the defendant. Where an Act is dubious we ought to consider, what was the mischief which it intended to prevent. Now the mischief here was the division of families. 1 Inst. 140 b.

Wyndham Justice. If it had been the intent of the Parliament to take away all gavelkind customs, they would have mentioned more than only the partibleness.

Twisden accordant, and he denied the opinion of Lambert, that if the King purchase gavelkind land, that it shall go to all his sons; for Lambert had it out of Plowden 247 a. from Southcote's opinion; and he from 35 H. 6, 28 a.

Mallet and Foster of the same opinion. And judgment was given for the defendant.

NURSE versus BARNS.

Damages.

The plaintiff declares, that the defendant in consideration of 10l. promised to let him enjoy certain iron mills for six months; and it appeared that the iron mills were worth but 20l. per annum, and yet damages were given to 500l. by reason of the loss of stock laid in; and per Curiam the jury may well find such damages, for they are not bound to give only the 10l. but also all the special damages.

Court. 1 Keb. 489, 500, 515, 542, 552.

A prohibition was prayed to the Court of Admiralty, for that the plaintiff here did sue upon a recognizance there, taken by way of stipulation, by one that was but surety in the nature of bail; and that Court not being a Court of Record, they cannot take any recognizance. Noy 24. But after long debate resolved, in favour of trade, such a stipulation is good, and shall bind the sureties. Vid. Godbolt 260. Greenway versus Barker, pl. 359.

[79] TERM. MICH. 15 CAR. 2, B. R.

Sir Robert Hide, Chief Justice. Sir Thomas Twisden, Sir Wadham Wyndham, Sir John Keeling, Justices.

Memorandum, this last vacation Sir Robert Foster Chief Justice of this Court died, and the first day of this term Sir Robert Hide was sworn Chief Justice.

MURCH versus LANDS.

Trial. 1 Keb. 561, 667.

At a trial at the Nisi Prius the plaintiff changed the venire fac. and panel, and had a jury which the defendant knew not of, and he moved by Jones for a new trial. And Twisden Justice upon that cited a case upon a trial at Essex Assises, in which the jury was changed. And resolved by all the clerks of that Court in the time of Hosden Secondary, that the defendant cannot be aided, if the first venire fac. was not filed, because the defendant may have resort to the sheriff and have view of the panel to be prepared for his challenges. But if the first venire fac. was filed, then the defendant shall have a new trial; and after this the defendant took care to file the venire facias: and upon this case put by Twisden the Court inclined against a new trial; but it was adjourned to inquire of the clerks for the course in this Court.

[80] KITCHIN AND KNIGHT versus BUCKLEY.

Intr. Trin. 15 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 1256.

Covenant. 2 Danv. Ab. 239, p. 1. 1 Lev. 109. 1 Sid. 157. 1 Keb. 565, 572. Vide Bendl. 89. Kel. 114 a.

The case was, that two tenants in common bring covenant against lessee for years for not repairing the thing demised, and whether they ought to sever or join was the question after verdict for the plaintiff; and the Court inclined they ought to join, because it was a personal action; but it was objected, that it favoured of the realty. And where Littleton speaks of actions personal, it is to be intended that the action is grounded upon the contract or possession of the plaintiffs; and it was adjourned.

Afterwards Jones argued for the plaintiff, and cited Littleton, sect. 311, 312. In all actions real tenants in common shall not join; but in personal, where damages only ought to be recovered, there they shall join, as in debt for rent; and that to Kelw. 114 a. I oppose Pasch. 18 H. 6, 6 & 7, that tenants in common may join in a forger of faux faits; they shall join in detinue for deeds, 1 Inst. 197 b. And they shall join in a warrantia chartæ, 1 Inst. 97, and Hill. 28 E. 3, 90 b. pl. 12, which is intented there by Coke. They shall join in waste in the tenuit, Moor 40, pl. 127. Baldwin pro defendente. In all actions personal, where the possession is concerned, there they shall join, Littleton, sect. 315. In mixt actions they may either join or sever, as in a parco fracto, Moor 452, pl. 617. So in account, Godb. 90, pl. 101. So if two tenants in common make a lease for years rendering rent, and then one of them dies, the executor and the survivor shall join in debt, or they may sever at their pleasure. But if the lease be for life, they ought to sever. Godbolt 283, pl. 504, and Dyer 326, pl. 1, Huntley's case. Debt by one tenant in common against lessee for years, and a demurrer upon it, and Moor 40, pl. 127. In actions that favour of the realty they shall not join, as in a cessavit, nor in an assise, Lit. sect. 314, nor in an avowry, 317. And this action favours of the realty; and so it was ruled in Mich. 1657, B. R. Baker and Berisford, Bro. Joinder in Action, 35.

Hide Chief Justice. Although the thing of which, (viz.) the house, is in the realty, yet the action is not so.

[81] Twisden Justice for the plaintiff, and also Wyndham; and as to Berisford's case it is not law.

Kelyng Justice. The case of Littleton is upon the personal contract; but it is a question if the tenements be conveyed over, and this contract destroyed, if the tenants in common may join. And in all cases by Litt. the parties are jointenants of the profits; but here it is a covenant, and this concerns the profits, and so of necessity they ought to join; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Pain was convicted of perjury upon an information at common law for giving evidence, and was sentenced to stand on the pillory two days, at Westminster and Aldersgate-street; and to be imprisoned a month without bail or mainprise, and fined 100l.

LONG versus EMOT.

Ejectment was brought in this Court, of lands in the county of Lancaster; and upon trial the Judge at Lancaster Assises caused the postea to be marked, and to be moved in Court, if it lies, the defendant being in custody; and it was adjourned. Vid. Mich. 2 R. 3, 18, pl. 45. Hill. 27 H. 6, 6 a. pl. 35.

Forgery.

Farr was indicted at common law for forgery of a warrant of attorney, and he demurred upon the indictment, and adjudged against him, and his sentence was, that he shall be set upon the pillory the first day of the next term with a paper, and then at the Exchange, and pay 100 marks, and imprisonment during the pleasure of the Court.

HAWES & UXOR versus WHEELER.

Words. 1 Lev. 116. 1 Keb. 578.

The plaintiff brings an action in London for these words, Thou art a whore and my husband's whore, and the defendant removes this by habeas corpus into this Court, and Simpson moved for a procedendo; and it was granted by three justices, Hide Chief Justice dissenting.

[82] Some part of this term I attended in C. B. during which time Bridgman Chief Justice argued this case that follows.

BATE versus AMHERST AND NORTON. SUSSEX, C. B.

Devise. 2 Danv. Abr. 515, B. p. 6. Eq. Ab. 212, p. 5.

Ejectment for lands of the demise of Peter Underwood. Upon not guilty pleaded, the jury found a special verdict to the effect following: Stephen Norton seised in fee of the lands in question the 20th of February 1651, made his will in writing, and by it gave divers legacies, (viz.) 300l. to, &c. Item. I give to my brother Anthony Norton, 30l. per annum. Item, I give all my land in Kent and Sussex to one of my cousin Nicholas Amherst's daughters that shall marry with a Norton within fifteen years. And I make Nicholas Amherst my executor. Nicholas Amherst had three daughters, Elizabeth, Anne and Mary; Stephen Norton the defendant marries Elizabeth; the lessor of the plaintiff marries the heir at law. And the sole question was, if the heir at law or the devisee shall have the land.

Bridgman Chief Justice. Here are two things to be considered, 1. Here being a devise to one of the daughters of Nicholas Amherst, who marries with a Norton; if this devise be not void for the uncertainty; if it had been to one of the daughters without more saying, it had been without question void, for two may marry with a Norton. But as to this point all agreed, that the devise is good notwithstanding the uncertainty. As to the second point, admitting the devise is good in respect of the person; yet if it be good altogether, because here is an immediate devise to one of the daughters who marries with a Norton. 2. Being limited to Nicholas Amherst to gather rents, &c. and then to Nicholas for fifteen years, and then to the devisee that shall marry with a Norton. As to the first, although the words are not, who shall first marry with a Norton, yet it is all one with them, for these reasons: first the law supplies these words in a deed, 6 Co. 36 b. The Bishop of Bath's case. 2. In the King's grants, if two constructions be made, and one makes the grant void, then the other shall stand; so here. 3. It is agreeable with the reason of the law, because a thing which once vests shall not after be devested. 4. Non præsumitur pluralitas, that more than one shall marry with a Norton, and the words in the will fix in a single person. And there is a difference when there is incertainty in the [83] event, and when in the person, as in all cases of contingencies: and as to Taylor and Sayer's case, Cro. Eliz. 742, that is not law. As to the second point, if it had been immediately devised to the daughters, then if a devise to such of the daughters as should marry a Norton be good. 2. Nicholas his interest for fifteen years be determinable upon the marriage of one of the daughters with a Norton. As to the first construction, without question there may be a contingent executory devise without an estate precedent limited to that, because it leaves an estate in the devisor and his heirs till the contingency happen; and where it is to a stranger till such a thing happen, there is difference betwixt them, the reason of law holds in both. If I covenant to stand seised to the use of such a son as J. S. shall name, it is a good conveyance, if he nominate, 1 Co. 176 b. Mildmay's case, 8 Co. 95 a. Manning's case. And here it is to be considered if Amherst had an estate for fifteen years, here he leaves nothing to the heir, because Nicholas had the profits till marriage, and then to the daughter; and then it is a devise made to one for years, the remainder in contingency, which is void. 1 Co. 130 a. Popham 3, the case of The Earl of Bedford. But here is a contingent certain, as 2 Bulstr. 127, Robert's case, and Jay and Brown's case in C. B. The question is if good by immediate devise, Dyer 304, pl. 50. A devise to an infant in ventre sa mere is not good. So a devise to a college which is not yet erected, Hob. 32, Cunden and Clerk. In an executory devise it is not void, but shall descend to the heir in the mean time. 1. Although in a conveyance a freehold cannot commence in futuro, yet in an use or a devise it may. As a devise or feoffment to the use of A. after my death, remainder over, is a good conveyance, because it rises out of my estate. Mich. 13 Car. 1, B. R. Long against Smith. In case of a devise, Cro. Eliz.

919, Hainsworth versus Pretty, and 878, Pain's case. Devise to J. S. for fifteen years, remainder to the right heirs of J. D. is not good; but for fifteen years, remainder to the first son of J. D. is good; because the devisor takes notice that he hath not a son, and intends a future act, and the law aids him which was inops consilii; so here the devisor intends futurely.

As to the other point, that if it were an immediate devise, it is a devise to an infant in ventre sa mere for 15 years, if it be with a remainder over it is good by way of executory devise. An estate in futuro and a contingent precedent makes an executory devise; these executory devises were grounded upon the common law, as Goodcheap's case, 49 E. 3, 16 a. cited [84] in The Lord Stafford's case, 8 Co. 76 b. 7 Co. 9 a. 11 H. 6, 13 a. Bro. Devise 32. And the words of the statute of 32 H. 8 are not that H. devises to any person or persons, but at his will and pleasure; and see Cro. Jac. 394, Blandford versus Blandford; and so he concluded for the defendant, and judgment was given accordingly.

In the case of one Ferrars, against whom an information was exhibited for forgery: it was resolved by all the justices, that although the jury be charged and sworn in the case of a plea of the Crown, yet a juror may be drawn or the jury dismissed, contrary to common tradition, which hath been held by many learned in the law.

HERBERT versus TUCKAL. EJECTMENT.

Evidence. 2 Danv. Abr. 516, p. 5. Eq. Ab. 172, p. 4. 1 Sid. 162.

Upon evidence in a trial at Bar the question was, if one was of full age at the time of his will made by him. And upon evidence it appears, that he was born the 14th of February 1608, and he made his will when he was of the age of 21 years within two days; and to prove his nonage the defendant produced an almanack, in which his father had writ the nativity of the devisor, and it was allowed to be strong evidence.

THE KING versus BURGESS, &C.

Restitution. 1 Sid. 149. 1 Keb. 334, 343, 538, 600, 614.

On an indictment of forcible entry removed here in B. R. The defendant pleads to it in bar of restitution the statute of 31 Eliz. cap. 11. That J. S. is tenant for life of the tenements, and that he was in possession for the space of three years and more before the indictment, and that the defendants as servants entered as to them best seemed fit; and upon this plea the King demurs.

Winnington for the King. 1st, Here being particular estates set forth in the plea, it is not shewn how they commenced, which ought to have been. 2. It appears, that the parties indicted have not any estate, but that they are only servants to him who hath the estate. 3. They entered as servants, and it is not well pleaded where the command was made.

Jones for the defendant. As to the 3d, the constant pleading over-rules this; for to say, that he entered as servant, without saying by his command, is well enough. As to the 2d, [85] they are within the statute, because their possession is the possession of their master, and so the statute intends. As to the 1st, this plea is not like to a plea where a man is to derive an estate.

Hide Chief Justice. As to the 1st. although it had been only said, that he was in possession for three years, it had been good enough. As to the 3d, the command is not traversable. As to the 2d, there is not any accessary in this case, and the possession of the servant is the possession of the master.

Twisden Justice. To the 2d, a servant is within the statute.

Wyndham Justice accordingly, as to the 2d, for the reason aforesaid. As to the 1st, it is good according to the words of the statute. As to the 3d, it is only formal.

Kelyng Justice. To the 2d, here the person enters with force, and then the party ousted shall be restored, and the statute of 31 Eliz. cap. 11 shall be taken strictly.

Hide Chief Justice. Restitution doth not lie without conviction.

Twisden and Kelyng Justices. Restitution is of duty, but re-restitution is of grace. But after resolved, that the plea was not good, because it is not said that the defendants were in possession three years before the inquisition found, according to Dyer.

GUILBERT AND MARTIN. COVENANT.

Visne. 1 Lev. 114. 1 Sid. 157. 1 Keb. 575, 601.

The action is laid in the county of Hampshire for not repairing of an house in Barkshire; and upon non infregit conventionem, a verdict was found for the plaintiff: and it was moved in arrest of judgment. And Guidot for the plaintiff said, where the foundation is in one county, and the breach in another, the plaintiff hath election in which county he pleaseth to bring his action; and here is not any mis-trial, because the covenant is transitory, as in an escape.

Sawyer for the defendant; and he cited Bro. Visne 19. 22 H. 6, 13, pl. 16. 16 H. 7, 1.

Twisden Justice. The deed is now agreed to be where the plaintiff hath alledged it, and therefore good for the plaintiff.

Wyndham Justice for the plaintiff. If the issue had been special the trial ought to have been in Berkshire; but here is matter general alledged by the defendant, and he doth not [86] join in a particular issue, and he may give in evidence any collateral thing.

Kelyng for the defendant. The thing in itself is local.

Hide Chief Justice. It is not a general issue, but upon a particular breach, viz. the repair of the house.

Twisden Justice. The general issue here was non est factum. And because two justices were against two, the case was adjourned.

LEE versus RAYNES.

Assumpsit. 1 Keb. 566, 578.

The plaintiff declares, as executor of Vavisor, of a promise made thirteen years before: the defendant pleads non assumpsit infra sex annos. The plaintiff replies, that he assumed within six years. The defendant rejoins, as before; and issue was joined upon it, and found for the plaintiff. And it was moved in arrest of judgment, because the plaintiff in his replication hath departed from his count. Cro. Car. 228, Tyler against Wats.

Hide Chief Justice, Twisden and Wyndham Justices for the plaintiff. Because if the defendant had demurred upon the replication, it had been for the defendant; but here he hath joined issue, and therefore good.

Kelyng Justice for the defendant. Because the plaintiff ought to have given an account of the time betwixt the time laid in the count and the replication; but after judgment was given for the plaintiff.

TERRY versus HOOPER & UX'.

Words. 1 Danv. Abr. 122, p. 6, 168, p. 2. 1 Lev. 115. 1 Keb. 602, 644.

The plaintiff declares, that he is a lime-burner, and gets his living by buying and selling thereof; and the defendant said of the plaintiff in arte sua, John Terry is a runaway, and he is a base cheating rogue, and John Terry shall never think to bring John Webb where he is himself, and rather than so I will spend 20*l.* On not guilty pleaded and found for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, because he doth not say, that the defendant spoke of the trade of lime-burning, but de arte sua generally, and he may have another trade.

Jones for the plaintiff. In ancient time it was the constant course in declarations to lay a colloquium of the plaintiff; [87] and it was a grand doubt if it was good without it, until Cro. Jac. 673, Smith and Ward's case. And there resolved de quer' supplies the colloquium, Cro. Car. 515. Words of an attorney in his profession. And 2. Lime-burner is such a profession of which he may be scandalized.

Wyndham Justice. Lime-burning is such a trade of which a man may be scandalized, and so in any lawful occupation whatsoever, for it is his livelihood. 2. The flourishes in a declaration are of no effect, but only to aggravate damages. 3. The saying here de arte sua are applicable to his profession; and a man may speak occasionally to the prejudice of the plaintiff without having discourse of his profession. As if two are speaking together of one another, and a third person comes in and affirms a scandal of him; this is commonly the worst scandal; and therefore judgment for the plaintiff.

Twisden to the same intent.

Kelyng Justice for the defendant: that de arte sua cannot be applied to his profession of lime-burning.

Hide Chief Justice for the defendant. Buying and selling is not incident to the art of lime-burning; and he cited a case in C. B. 1655, accordingly, and because the Court was divided no judgment was given.

PALMER versus FLESHEES.

Case. 3 Danv. Ab. 421, p. 7. 1 Lev. 122. 1 Sid. 167, 227. 1 Keb. 533, 625, 704, 836.

The plaintiff declares for stopping his lights. Special verdict finds that H. seised of a piece of ground, and building a messuage upon part of it, he grants the other part of the said ground to A. who builds upon it, and obstructs the lights of the first messuage; and if he could, was the single question upon the special verdict. And by Twisden and Wyndham Justices, that he may; but by Kelyng, that he may not. Vid. Cro. Eliz. 118. Bury and Pope, 1 Leon. 168, pl. 234.

[88] TERM. HILL. 15 & 16 CAR. 2, B. R.

Sir Robert Hide, Chief Justice; Sir Thomas Twisden, Sir Wadham Wyndham, Sir John Kelyng, Justices.

SHARROCK versus BOURCHIER. PROHIBITION.

Prohibition.

The plaintiff suggests that in the county of Lincoln there is a prebend called Langford Prebend, within the county of Oxford; and the prebendaries of that prebend and their farmers have had, time whereof, &c. the granting of the office of commissary within the said Prebend of Langford, and that Dr. Pocklington prebendary there made a lease to Copley of this prebend for three lives; and that the lessee grants to the plaintiff the commissaryship; and the defendant pretends that the disposal of this commissaryship belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln, who had libelled for it in the Court of Arches, and that the freehold of it would come in question.

Wyndham Justice. The prebendary cannot grant this power to make a commissary over to his lessee, no more than he may grant a thing which is annexed to his spiritual function.

Twisden Justice. Although it is not grantable, yet the freehold or power to grant is determinable at common law.

Kelyng Justice. It may be granted by the prebendary, for it seems to be a peculiar, and that this office runs with the prebend which is demised, and is not an assignment of the spiritual function, and therefore a prohibition lies.

Hide Chief Justice. The grant of the prebend cum omnibus advantagiis doth not pass this power to grant the commissaryship; but it is meerly ecclesiastical. And because the Court was divided, no prohibition was granted, but the rule was, that all things stay as before the motion till farther [89] consideration. But after Hide Chief Justice said, that the right of the office did come in question, and upon that a prohibition was granted.

YOUNG versus COLLET.

Audita querela. 1 Keb. 264, 556, 634, 640.

Audita querela. The plaintiff declares, that whereas John Collet in Hill. 1685, brought an action of trespass of assault and battery and false imprisonment against him to his damage of 500l. and had a verdict for 80l. damages, and 4 marks costs, and had judgment. And by an Act of Parliament held 25 April 12 Car. 2, it is enacted, that all offences, &c. viz. the Act of Oblivion. And in fact says, that this assault and imprisonment was by virtue of an ordinance for the regulating the excise, and in pursuance of it. The defendant pleads that it was not in pursuance of that ordinance; and found for the plaintiff.

Widdrington Serjeant moved in arrest of judgment, that an audita querela lies not in this case; for it is said by Stoner 27. E. 3, than an audita querela is a new kind of action, and that it commenced only 10 E. 3, and not before. And it doth not lie where there is any other remedy at law for the plaintiff, either by plea or otherwise. And here the plaintiff might have pleaded this ordinance, by virtue of which he justifies the imprisonment in evidence upon the trial, 1655, upon the Meal Act, and no audita querela lies where remedy may be had in another manner. 1 Inst. 290 b.

Wild Serjeant for the plaintiff. The Meal Act doth not appear to the Court, nor can the Court take notice of it; and this writ is grounded upon an Act of Parliament subsequent.

Kelyng Justice. The intention of the Act of Oblivion was to prevent new animosities, but for those things that were reduced to judgment, it was not intended that they should be undone, and therefore an audita querela doth not lie.

Twisden Justice. It seems that the defendant hath waived this exception; but if he had demurred upon the count it had been for him without question.

Wyndham. The Act of Oblivion is more comprehensive than any course before.

Hide Chief Justice. The Act of Oblivion only discharges acts of hostility, and not judgments obtained for such acts. And it was adjourned.

[90] CARPENTER versus MARSHAL.

Attornment. 1 Danv. Ab. 613 g. p. 1, 614, p. 11. 1 Lev. 28. 1 Sid. 189, 1 Keb. 643, 713. 1 Leon. 151. The Lord Howard and the town of Waldens case. Co. 7. Rep. 32.

Ejectione firmæ at the Bar, of a lease by Phillips, dated the 5th of April 1659. The defendant pleaded not guilty. The plaintiff made title, that the land in question is dutchy land lying out of the County Palatine, and there was a lease for years made of it to A. rendering rent, and shews a grant of the reversion the 7th of Jac. to Ferrers and Phillips under the Great Seal, County Palatine seal and dutchy seal, and that Phillips survived, and the rent was constantly paid to him during the lease, which ended in the year 1658, and in the year 1659, Phillips made the lease ut supra. The defendant shews a patent 8 Car. 1, to him, reciting that former patent to Ferrers and Phillips, and that it was void, because it passed only an interest in reversion, and no attornment had, and so grants the reversion to the defendant; and this being doubtful whether the former patent were good to pass the estate without attornment, and that upon Co. 4 Inst. 209, 210, it was found specially; the only question in this case being, whether attornment was necessary or not in this case.

Jones for the plaintiff. That the grant is good without attornment. 1. Some things are to be premised concerning the three seals here, the seal of the dutchy is pleaded, Rastal's Entries 524 and 636. But by the statute of 37 H. 8, cap. 16, lands lying out of the County Palatine shall pass under the dutchy seal. By the common law lands coming to the King in his natural capacity participate of the prerogative, Plow. 213 a. and b. And now it is to see if the statute of 1 H. 4, hath altered this; and it seems it hath not, the words are, that the lands taliter & tali modo pertractentur, &c. sicut pertractari deberent si ad culmen dignitatis Regiæ assumpti minime fuissemus.

The ends of this statute were, 1. To preserve inheritances. 2. To preserve the reputation: and yet to more purposes the lands partake of the prerogative where the ends are not crossed; as the King within age may grant them: so to have aid, Plow. 221 a. before issue joined, Cro. Eliz. 240. Double usurpation doth not put the King out of possession of a church he hath in the right of his dutchy. As to livery, 21 E. 4, 60 a. 26 H. 8, 9, the reason of that is, that it is a privilege adherent to his person, and cannot be separated, as livery, tender of a ring, demand of rent, &c.

[91] 2. If these lands do not pass without attornment, the King will be in a worse condition than a common person, for a common person may compel the tenant to attorn, but the King cannot; for a quid juris clamat doth not lie for the King, because a fine by the King is always by render, 6 Co. 68 a. If a fine be levied to an use, the cestuy que use shall have the rent without attornment, 4 Inst. 210. It is said that the tenant is compellable by English writ; but this only forces the person, and imprisons him, but does not pass the land it self. And as to that that is said, that it hath been used; there cannot be an usage time without memory &c. because it begins since 1 H. 4. For authorities in the case, there is Co. 4 Inst. 209, and so concluded for the plaintiff.

Weston for the defendant. Attornment is as necessary as livery, and no difference betwixt them; and so are the books 21 E. 4, 60. 26 H. 8, 9. The reasons of attornment are, 1. Notoriety. 2. Election of the tenant of his landlord, Moor 153. In Bonnie's case; by Beaumont attornment ought to be: and the statute of 2 & 3 Phil. & Mariæ, cap. 20, saith, that the lands there annexed shall pass by attornment, &c.

Kelyng Justice. No difference betwixt livery and attornment in this case.

Twisden. Coke, when he delivers the opinion in 1 Inst. well knew how these lands should pass out of the Crown, being Attorney General; and it is the constant course that no attornment shall be adjoined. But afterwards it was adjudged for the plaintiff, for they were guided by precedents; for Twisden and Wyndham said, that if it were res integra they could not find any reason why attornment should not be as well as livery upon a feoffment; but because the precedents are contrary, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Ordinary. 1 Keb. 638, 647, 651, 669.

In a prohibition the plaintiff suggests, that the defendant libelled for defamation in the Court of Arches, and he is an inhabitant within the diocese of London, contra formam statuti 23 H. 8, cap. 9.

Powis for the defendant, that a prohibition shall not go; he cited Cro. Car. 339, Gobbet's case, where a prohibition in such case was denied, because there had been a composition betwixt the Bishop of London and the archbishop, for such [92] jurisdiction; and the archbishop doth not visit in the diocese of London for that cause.

Kelyng Justice. The diocese of London is not within the jurisdiction of the Arches, but the archbishop hath a peculiar jurisdiction there, consisting of 14 parishes, Co. 13 Rep. 4, and the mischief here was intended to be prevented by the statute; and so is Mich. 5 Car. 1. Cro. Car. 162. Cadwalder versus Bryan, Hob. 185. Jones versus Jones, and therefore a prohibition lies.

Wyndham. A prohibition doth not lie, because the Arches is within the diocese of London; and if there be any cause to remit the jurisdiction of the Bishop of London to the Arches, it ought to be determined by the civilians, according to the statute; and the composition mentioned in Gobbet's case amounts to a licence.

Twisden Justice. A prohibition lies. Although there was a composition before, yet now the statute takes it away, and the agreement betwixt the Ordinaries cannot prejudice the people for whom the statute was made; and as to Gobbet's case, the reason there is not good, for the Bishop of London cannot agree that the archbishop shall not visit; and 2dly, the composition intended ought to be pleaded.

Hide Chief Justice. A prohibition doth not lie; and he affirmed that such writ is ex gratia, and not ex debito justitiæ; but Kelyng and Twisden positively denied that; and because the Court was divided the matter rested as before.

TOWNSEND'S CASE.

Mandamus. Antea 69. 1 Lev. 91. 1 Sid. 107. 1 Keb. 458, 470, 659.

The Mayor and Commonalty of Oxford return to a mandamus to them directed, that if any person binds himself to be an apprentice it is by the course of their corporation to be inrolled, and that the said Townsend by indenture obliged himself to be an apprentice to one Colley, by which he covenanted that he would not contract matrimony during his apprenticeship, and that the said indenture was inrolled according to the said usage; and that the said Townsend within the first two years of his apprenticeship did marry, and after this he served rather as a journeyman than an apprentice. And to this return Holloway took exceptions; 1. Although he covenants that he will not marry, yet if he marry, this is only a breach of his covenant, but not any cause to bar him of his freedom. 2. The return that he [93] served rather as a journeyman than as an apprentice is uncertain and not positive; and for this cause the writ of restitution was awarded.

SANDS'S CASE.

Administration. 3 Danv. Abr. 407, p. 1. 1 Sid. 179, 403. 1 Keb. 667, 683. 3 Salk. 22.

The eldest son of Sir George Sands having a wife dies intestate, and administration is granted by the Prerogative Court to Sir George Sands as the next of kin; and now the wife libels in the Ecclesiastical Court to repeal these letters of administration, and to grant them to her; and Sir George upon this moves for a prohibition; and the Court granted it; and resolved by the statute of 21 H. 8, it is in the election of the Ordinary to grant administration to the wife, or to the next of blood. 2. The father is next of blood; and the case of my Lord Brook cited in Ratcliff's case is not law. 3. When the Ordinary hath once granted administration, he cannot repeal that, and grant it to another, because he hath executed his power. Cro. Car. 49, Fotherbie's case.

KEYS versus BRAYDON. ERROR IN IRELAND. EJECTMENT.

Error. 1 Keb. 705, 740, 755.

The plaintiff obtains a judgment against his own ejector, in a case where an infant was in possession; and the party concerned in the land brings a writ of error in the name of the feigned defendant. The plaintiff pleads in the writ of error the release of the defendant; and the Court held such release shall not be allowed. And the Court will not permit the party to proceed to try the issue if the release be good or not, because it is to bar the right of a third person.

And Hide Chief Justice said, that such release was offered in C. B. in a case between the Lord Leceister and the Lady Holborn, and the Court of C. B. refused to allow it.

Mandamus. Antea 56. 1 Lev. 75. 1 Sid. 94, 152. 1 Keb. 349, 354, 387, 675.

A mandamus was granted in the case of Hurst to restore him to the place of an attorney in the Town-Court of Canterbury, and upon the return of the writ, restitution was granted, because an attorney is not such an office of which the commissioners for corporations have a power to intermeddle.

MORGAN versus MAN.

Award. 1 Lev. 127. 1 Sid. 180. 1 Keb. 678.

Debt on an obligation. The defendant demands oyer of the condition, which is to perform an award; and then pleads nullum fecer' arbitrium. The plaintiff replies, and sets forth the award, and assigns breach for non-payment of the money. The defendant rejoins, that one Anne Collins the testatrix of the plaintiff recovered against him on a judgment in an action of battery and false imprisonment, and this judgment was one of the causes submitted, and the arbitrators had notice of it, and they did nothing concerning it. The plaintiff surrejoins, that the award was as well concerning that judgment as of other things betwixt them; & hoc paratus est verificare. The defendant demurs; and Jones for the defendant, here the plaintiff ought to have concluded to the country, and not to have said, et hoc paratus est verificare, for here is an affirmative and a negative, which make a good issue, which may be tried.

Wild Serjeant for the plaintiff. 1. This is aided upon a general demurrer, because only matter of form. 2dly. Here is a departure, because the defendant cannot rejoin concerning an award, when he hath pleaded before that there was no award; and upon debate it was resolved, this is a departure, and therefore adjudged for the plaintiff; but the saying, et hoc paratus est verificare, where he ought to have concluded to the country, is matter of substance; but for the departure judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[95] WILKS versus RUSSEL.

Prohibition.

It was moved for a prohibition to the Spiritual Court.

The plaintiff suggests, that the defendant sued him being executor, for tithes, and to have double damages, which doth not lie against an executor.

Kelyng Justice. If by the common law an executor shall not be charged, if the Spiritual Court will sue him; there a prohibition lies, because it exposes the executor to a devastavit; but the reason of Kelyng was disallowed, and a prohibition was denied. Vide Fitzherbert's Nat. Br. 51. Roll, 1 part, 919.

[96] TERM. PASCH. 16 CAR. 2, B. R.

The Judges being Sir Robert Hide Chief Justice. Sir Thomas Twisden, Sir Wadham Wyndham, Sir John Kelyng, Justices.

Theodorus Humfrys one of the clerks of Mr. Paget, custos brevium of this Court, complained of the said Paget for hindering him to take clerks fees due to him for transcribing records of Nisi Prius for the Western Circuit: and the Court ordered Paget to refund upon account, or else to be committed.

It is a rule of this Court, that if bail be put in before a Judge, the plaintiff hath twenty days to accept or disallow of it, and after that to file it under the pain of ten shillings.

[97] BOWMAN versus MILBANKE.

Devise. 2 Danv. Abr. 527, p. 16. Eq. Ab. 207, p. 1. 1 Lev. 130. 1 Sid. 191. 1 Keb. 719.

Upon a special verdict found, &c. (viz.) I give all to my mother, all to my mother; and resolved lands do not pass by these words, by the whole Court.

Brocket in ringing was taken up by the bell-rope, and by it he was killed ; and now the coroner took an inquisition upon his death, and found the bell to be a deodand. And Siderfin for the church-wardens moved, that the bell is not to be a deodand, because a bell is already given to God and to the church. And bells were invented about the year of our Lord 400 by Paulinus a bishop here; and by Hide Chief Justice, the case of Fitzh. Corone 389, of a mill-wheel, is not law. And it was adjourned. Vide Stamf. Placit. Corone, lib. 1, cap. 12, fol. 20 a. Fitz. Corone 405.

[98] TERM. TRIN. 16 CAR. 2, B. R.

CHARLETON versus FINNEY.

Pleading. 1 Sid. 215. 1 Keb. 759, 766. Dyer 121 a. pl. 14. 3 Leon. 90, 129. Bunny versus Bunny, 2 Roll. Rep. 63. Gray versus Gray.

In debt upon an obligation, the condition was, that if he paid all sums which should be expended about, &c. that then, &c. The defendant pleads that he paid all. The plaintiff replies that he had not paid all ; & hoc paratus est verificare. The defendant demurs generally, and alledged for the defendant, that the plaintiff ought to have concluded to the country in his replication, because there is an affirmative and an negative ; for otherwise there shall never be an end of pleading, but it shall be infinite ; and so is Cro. Car. 164, Duncomb versus Smith, and Yelv. 137, Alexander versus Lane. And of this opinion was all the Court. And Twisden put a difference when the plea is involved, and when it is direct.

Jurors.

Leech and five others being of the jury at Justice-Hall in the Old-Baily this last sessions, refused to find certain Quakers guilty according to their evidence, and upon this they were bound to appear here this first day of the term, and they appeared accordingly, and the Court directed an information to be drawn against them, and upon that they were fined. Vide the same case, 3 Leon. 147. Vide postea 138, The King against Wagstaff.

Note ; 1 H. 8. It was laid to Empson's charge, that he being Recorder of Coventry, and there sat with the mayor and other justices of the peace upon a special gaol-delivery within that city, on the Monday before the Feast of St. Thomas the Apostle, 16 H. 7. A prisoner that had been indicted of felony, for taking out of a house in that city certain goods to the value of 20s. was arraigned before them, and because the jury would not find the said prisoner guilty for want of sufficient evidence (as they after alledged) the said Sir Richard Empson supposing the same evidence [99] to be sufficient, caused them to be committed to ward, wherein they remained four days together, till they were contented to enter into bond in 40l. a-piece to appear before the King and Council 15 Hill. whereupon they keeping their day, and appearing before the said Sir Richard Empson and other of the King's Council according to their bonds, were adjudged to pay every of them 8l. for a fine, and accordingly made payment thereof, as they were then thought worthy so to do. But after at a sessions holden at Coventry 1 H. 8 an indictment was framed against him for this matter, and thereof was found guilty, as if therein he had committed some great and heinous offence against the King's peace, his Crown and dignity. Hollinshed, part 2, in the time of 1 H. 8, fol. 804, and fol. 1104, in the case of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton, 1 Mar.

[100] TERM. HILL. 16 & 17 CAR. 2, B. R.

ADAMS versus TOMLINSON.

Debt. 2 Danv. Ab. 499, p. 9. 1 Lev. 153. 1 Sid. 236. 1 Keb. 827.

Judgment was given for the plaintiff in B. R. upon which the defendant brought a writ of error in the Exchequer-Chamber, and after the writ of error brought, the plaintiff in the first action brings an action of debt upon the judgment, to which the defendant pleads nul tiel record. And resolved the plea is naught; for notwithstanding such a writ of error an action of debt lies upon the judgment, as Dyer 32 b. pl. 5 and 6, and 18 E. 4, 7. But Bendl. 20, pl. 31, takes this difference, that when the action of debt is brought before the writ of error, the action continues good. But if the writ of error is first brought, debt does not lie; but in Limbny and Langham's case the Judges held it was all one, and that a writ of error is not any supersedeas to an action of debt; and that notwithstanding the writ of error, the bail may bring in the principal in discharge of the mainpernors.

Escape. 3 Danv. Ab. 117, p. 8. 1 Lev. 159. 1 Sid. 269. 1 Keb. 845.

In an action upon the case for an escape against the Sheriff of Nottingham. The defendant pleaded, that during the time the prisoner was in his custody he received a writ of privilege from the Marquess of Newcastle, reciting that he was a justice of peace of the said county, and custos rotulorum, and that the said prisoner was convened before the justices at the Quarter-Sessions, and that by the law of England the prisoner ought not to be molested eundo & redeundo during the time that he had causes there depending, and commanded the sheriff to dismiss him, which the defendant accordingly did. To this plea the plaintiff demurred; and it seemed an ill plea, because the justices can't cause an arrested person to be dismissed. Vide Browl. [101] l. 1, 15, Wilsons against The Sheriffs of London, where the Court held, that if a man was arrested in the face of the Court, the Court had power to discharge him, but not otherwise.

PATRICK'S CASE.

Mandamus. 1 Lev. 65. 1 Sid. 346. 1 Keb. 289, 294, 298, 551, 610, 665, 835. 1 Keb. 65, 164, 259. Hollingshead fol. 765, l. 2, dit que le feme de E. 4 erect cest college.

A writ of mandamus was directed out of the King's Bench to Richard Bryan, the senior fellow of Queen's College in Cambridge, to admit and pronounce Simon Patrick president of the said college, being debito modo electus president, or to shew cause to the contrary. After an alias and pluries Richard Bryan makes this return: viz. that King H., 6 30 Martii 26th of his reign, by letters patent under his Great Seal of England, gave licence to Margaret Queen of England, his consort, that she might found a college to consist of one president and four fellows (more or less, as the revenues of the said college should happen to fall out) in the University of Cambridge, and ascertains the place ad studendum & orandum. Which president and fellows for the time being, according to such statutes as the Bishop of Coventry, John Somerseth Chancellor of the Exchequer, and others whilst they lived, or the greater part of them should live, should make, should be governed, punished and deprived. That Andrew Ducket should be the first president, and names the other four fellows, clerks. That the said president and four fellows may afterwards admit more fellows. That the name of the college shall be Reginale Collegium Sanctæ Margaretæ & Sancti Bernardi in Universitate Cambrigiæ. That 15 April 26 H. 6, Margaret founded the college accordingly, and made the said Ducket president, and the other four fellows, and that they might choose others. The Bishop of Coventry, Somerseth and the others before appointed, make and ordain statutes and orders; amongst which they ordain, 1. That the college be called Queen's College, and that in the same be one president, whom all others in omnibus licitis & honestis must obey. That there be nineteen fellows, whereof every one must take holy orders within two years after they become masters of art, unless the president and greater part of the fellows shall give them longer time. 2. That none of the fellows sow discord, and if any be found so doing, they injoin the first time admonition by the president or his deputy; the second time by the president and two fellows; the third time expulsion. And if [102] discord arise between the president and the fellows, or any of them, the president must call the fellows together three several times in three days space; and if they cannot compose the differences, then as well the president as the fellows are bound to stand to the award of the chancellor, and the greater part of the præpositi of the colleges, under pain of expulsion. That King James 9 Martii 3 Jac. confirmed all former charters and grants to the university and scholars of the same. And farther, that the chancellor of the said university for the time being (if within the town or suburbs) or in his absence, the vice-chancellor, per cancellarium universitatis prædictæ in ea parte deputat' sive appunctuat', should be ordinary visitor (where no special visitor was nor should be otherwise appointed) of all colleges and halls in the said university. That no special visitor is appointed of this college. That Dr. Edward Martin late president died 7 April 14 Car. 2, and that ever since Edward Earl of Manchester hath been chancellor, and out of the town of Cambridge and suburbs thereof. That Dr. Dillingham is his vice-chancellor. That the town and University of Cambridge are within the diocese of the Bishop of Ely. That at the death of Dr. Martin, and ever since, Mathew Wren was and hath been Bishop of Ely. That Simon Patrick hath not made his appeal to the chancellor, vice-chancellor or bishop, and therefore he the said Richard Bryan cannot admit or pronounce the said Simon Patrick president.

Masters pro Patrick. I conceive the return to be insufficient, and the statutes of the college recited are not material, and the letters patent are not well applied. 1. It is said that the college is within the diocese of the Bishop of Ely; but it is not said, that it is within the jurisdiction of the bishop; and it may be within a peculiar of the diocese, in which the bishop hath nothing to do. 1. A college is a temporal corporation, Coke sur Litt. 250 a. Dyer 255 b. Finch. 92. 2. A college is temporal, viz. to pronounce him president. Dyer 209. Deprivation is a temporal act, et contrariorum eadem est ratio. And it is not requisite that the president be in orders. 44 Ass. 9.

Object. This college is founded ad studendum & orandum, which implies that it is spiritual.

Resp. Coke sur Lit. 342 a. An hospital, though founded ad orandum, is lay, for every one is bound to pray; and ad studendum doth not refer to divinity. And the fellows here are to enter into orders, but it doth not here appear that the fellows are in orders.

[103] Object. An impropriation cannot be to a lay corporation, but it may be to a college.

Resp. It may be to a nunnery, Plowd. and yet that is no spiritual corporation. And this Court is the proper place for redress and examination of this matter, because otherwise here would be a failer of justice. Co. Inst. 4, 71. And here can be no prejudice to any one by allowing a mandamus; for notwithstanding such a writ, the party grieved may try his right, viz. the party whom the seignior fellow hath already admitted president.

Authorities in the case are these; Fitz. Assise 150. 8 E. 3, 69. 9 H. 6, 32. Dyer 209. 6 H. 7, 14. In the case of a free chapel. So in case of the granting of letters of administration, Luskin versus Carver, Stile's Rep. And in case of the usher of a grammar school, Crawford's case; and so prays a mandamus.

Brampston contra. This college being founded for a spiritual end is a spiritual corporation, Linwood 111, & 155. The Orders of the Carthusians. 8 Ass. pl. 29 & 31. L. 5 E. 4, 127 and Allen and Nashe's case.

Jones pro Patrick. This return is insufficient, because it doth not contain an answer to the writ; for the return says that Mr. Patrick hath not appealed; but shews no cause he should appeal, 34 H. 6, 41, but in truth, the return is to the jurisdiction of the Court. I shall consider the return in two points, 1. As without reference to the letters patent; and 2. What influence the letters patent have upon the same.

As to the 1st, the King gives licence to the Queen to erect a college ad studendum & orandum, and no visitor is appointed; and whether there be any remedy in this Court to restrain a grievance, is the question. This Court hath jurisdiction to restrain and take cognizance of all misdemeanors extrajudicial. Co. 11, 98, Bagg's case. 1. If there be no remedy for this here, there is remedy no where.

Object. Mr. Patrick ought to appeal to the visitor.

Resp. It doth not appear by this return that there is any visitor. And 1. The foundation doth not appoint any visitor. And 2. The law doth not appoint the founder to be visitor; and if it did, Queen Margaret the foundress here was a foreigner and died without issue: and we shall not intend any visitor when 'tis not mentioned, because a return ought to be certain, and is not to be construed by intendment, for the party cannot reply to it.

Resp. 1. There is no authority in our law for that, in case of a college. 2. The experience in the university is totally against it; for the bishop appoints visitors, but not the bishop of the diocese. 3. When the letters patent recited in the return were made, the law was not so taken, for 'tis added as a supplement, who shall visit. 4. The nature of this corporation doth not allow the bishop to be visitor; for I take it for a rule, that where the head of the corporation is constituted without the concurrence of the Ordinary, there the Ordinary hath no jurisdiction, be the corporation spiritual or temporal. 1. For a spiritual corporation, as an hospital. F. N. B. 42 b. 50 p. In case of a free chapel the Ordinary shall proceed per pœnam corporalem & non pecuniariam. The King's chaplain may be visited as a private person, but not in his politick capacity. 6 H. 7, 7. He cannot visit a chaplain, because he comes not in by his act. In case of a dean, in temps Ed. 6, Br. Præmunire 21. In case of an abbot, 9 H. 6, 32. If he comes in by election without the concurrence of the Ordinary. 2. For a temporal corporation, it is plain; and here this college is not a spiritual corporation, because neither the persons nor employment are spiritual. The president is not to be in orders; the employment ad studendum & orandum; all learning; ad orandum. So must all lay professions, hospitals, a private school, a workhouse is ad operandum & orandum. It is the duty of every one.

As to the 2d, let us consider what influences the letters patent have in this case; I conceive they alter not the use. 1. Here are no restrictive or negative words, as to the jurisdiction, as in Act of Parliament, or as in the grant of conusance of pleas, Ieo quod nullus justiciarius se intromittat. 2. It doth not appear that there was any visitor at the time of the return. The vice-chancellor ought to be thereunto appointed, and he doth not visit quatenus vice-chancellor.

Object. A presidentship of a college is not an office of a publick nature.

Resp. Bagg's case is, that this Court hath conusance of all wrongs, be they private or publick. 2. But then is of a publick nature more than the petty corporations in Cornwal, or any petty borough.

And for authorities, there was no president for Bagg's case; but the Judges finding the mischief, did out of the foundation of law frame that writ; and here the president cannot have an assise, and therefore ought to have this writ.

[105] Finch Solicitor General contra. I agree the power of this Court to be very great, and Bagg's case taken cum grano salis is good law. But in all cases where the foundation of a corporation is eleemosynary (be it lay or spiritual) the Ordinary is visitor thereof. Linwood cap. de Religiosis Domibus Verbo Ordinarius. Locus pius non potest fundari eo modo quod non possit episcopus se intromittere. And if the Ordinary is not, then the founder is visitor; and if neither, then the King, as fountain of authority; and if so, then the King grants this authority by his letters patent. A man cannot resort to this Court, but either it must be per saltum or per gradus, Hob. 23, Dr. James's case, and Kenne's case. Deprivation is not questionable here, and 13 Jac. Huntley's case. The consequence is great. Where the founder names a visitor and prohibits appeals from him, yet an appeal from the visitor is not restrained. Magdalen College in Oxford is so founded, absque ullo appellationis remedio; and resolved inter Dr. Pierce and Dr. Yarbury, such clause doth not restrain an appeal from the visitor; although it was there objected, that he might come into this Court, but resolved he ought to resort to the visitor, and the words are contrary to common right. See the clause of omni appellatione remota, Co. Inst. 4, 340.

Raymond pro Patrick. I shall waive the exceptions to the form of the return, which is at the best but argumentative; and out of which the consequence intended cannot without much incertainty be deduced, to wit, that the college is within the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Ely, therefore not within the jurisdiction of this Court of B. R. For a man in some cases may have redress in both jurisdictions F. N. B. 51 b. He may sue here and there for a pension; and that it is within the diocese of the bishop, therefore it must be within the jurisdiction, whereas it may be within some peculiar. Such a return by a sheriff hath been resolved naught, as Plowd. 14 a. Manxel's case. In habere facias seisinam the sheriff returns, that another is tenant of the land, and so he cannot give possession without trespass, it is no good return. But I shall waive these exceptions, and speak only to the main point intended in the return, which is this, that this college is within the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Ely, who is proper Ordinary, and that Mr. Patrick ought to apply himself to the bishop and not to this Court, which in short is, that the bishop of the diocese, where no special visitor is appointed, is de communi jure visitor of colleges in the universities. In examining of which point, as to our case, [106] I shall humbly crave leave to premise three things, which I conceive will be granted me on the other side, for they are very plain.

1. Upon the whole record, upon view of the writ and of the return thereof together, it doth most plainly appear to the Court, that the plaintiff Mr. Patrick is greatly injured, and that by the defendant Mr. Bryan, and so deserves no more favour than a tort-feasor; for the plaintiff by the writ suggests, quod debito modo electus fuit præsidens ejusdem collegii, & in locum præsidentis collegii prædicti admitti se obtulerit; and that notwithstanding, Richard Bryan the defendant being seignior fellow, & cui pertinet præsidentem sic electum pronunciare, & personam sic electam admittere, & facere electum præsidentem jurari & coram communitate collegii in capella ejusdem ad mensam domini personaliter præsentari, prædictum the plaintiff in præsidentem admittere renuit. The defendant returns, the foundation of the college, and some certain statutes (so many as he thinks make for his turn) the letters patent, and that the college is within the diocese of the Bishop of Ely, &c. and so he cannot admit him; but not one word that the plaintiff was not duly elected, nor that Mr. Bryan is not the person that hinders the plaintiff's admittance, both which by silence are agreed unto by Mr. Bryan; but that the plaintiff hath not taken a right course.

2. That the letters patent as to the matter in question are of no concernment: 1. Because they are not restrictive, so as none other shall visit but the chancellor or vice-chancellor. 2. Because the vice-chancellor must be in ea parte deputat' sive appunctuat', which is not here alledged to be done: so that they make nothing in this case, and this being observed already, I shall speak no more to them.

3. That (contrary to what hath been by the way alledged, but not proved on the other side) every eleemosynary foundation is not visitable by the Ordinary; 'tis said, 8 Ass. pl. 31, that the Ordinary shall not visit but where he hath institution and induction; and with that agrees the opinion of Keble, Hill. 6 H. 7, 14, pl. 2. But admit that the Ordinary may visit where he hath not induction, yet his power shall not extend to all eleemosynary foundations; for Regist. Orig. 35 a. A prohibition is to an officer of the Court of Canterbury and his commissary for the holding plea concerning the grammar school of Fernedon, in a suit between the Abbot and Convent of Battel and William Pipod, Regist. 41 a. Another prohibition [107] to the Archdeacon of Taunton for holding plea concerning an hospital, and yet nothing can be more eleemosynary than schools and hospitals. And could the Ordinary by the common law have visited all foundations eleemosynary, the statute of 2 H. 5, cap. 1, had been to no purpose, which doth enable the Ordinary to correct the abuse of lay-hospitals erected for the purposes therein mentioned. So that I do conceive, as it is of hospitals, so of all other eleemosynary foundations, and without special visitors. 8 Ass. pl. 29 and Coke l. 10, 31 a. If the hospital be spiritual, the bishop shall visit; if lay, the patron: for so the writ in the Register before cited is, fol. 41. Totum in temporalibus fundatum existit. And the Statute de Circumspecte Agatis, 13 E. 1. Episcopus teneat placitum in Curia Christianitatis de iis quæ mere sunt spiritualia. And Linwood 53, expounding what are merè spiritualia, says, quæ non habent mixturam temporalium. And if there be no visitors specially appointed, then in common reason, and according to the rule of law, ne deficeret justicia, the King. So that now, whether this college upon the whole record be of a lay or spiritual foundation, is the question: for if it be spiritual, then I must acknowledge the Bishop of Ely (admitting the Court shall intend its being within the compass of his diocese to be within his jurisdiction) in all things spiritual ought to visit; but if it prove a lay corporation, then I conceive the King is to visit, for no founder appears, ne Curiæ Regis deficerent in justitia exhibenda, Co. Inst. 4, 213. And I do conceive this college, as it is here described, to be of a temporal and lay foundation. In the proof whereof I shall make no difference between it and other colleges of the universities; for if any difference, it will be on my side, the foundations of other colleges being more spiritual than this.

1. From the end and purpose of its foundation, viz. ad studendum & orandum. 1. Ad studendum, which may be, and by experience we see hath always been humane learning principally, viz. logick, philosophy, mathematicks, &c. And the constant practice founded upon the opinions of learned men concomitant with practice. Camden in his Britannia 381, describing the University of Oxford, says, that the places of learning were in old time called studia, for that they were designed pro bonarum literarum studiosis; and in his description of Cambridge, having repeated all the colleges in that university, amongst which he names this of Queen's, speaking in commendation of this university, I will, says he, [108] let pass little monasteries and religious houses. So that he makes a plain distinction between the colleges in the university and religious houses. And Stow in reckoning up all the colleges of both universities and their foundations, fol. 450, &c. shewing some originally founded for grammar, others for logick, others for other sciences, reckons none of them barely for ecclesiastical matters. Linwood 155, K. cap. de Magistris, says, A college is only habitaculum scholarium; and 161, cap. de Hæreticis, Verb. ipsius loci, where treating of the jurisdiction of the Ordinary in punishing hereticks, puts this question: What if the place be non habens ecclesiam parochialem, qui est locus religiosus, vel collegium, aliusve locus qui non subest ecclesiæ parochiali? So that collegium (which I take to be in the university) is a place distinct from locus religiosus. And in truth, if we observe the foundation of all religious and ecclesiastical corporations and societies, not one was ever seen whose end was ad studendum. Their design was either to pray pro animabus, or to observe such and such canonical hours, according to such and such an order, their mattins, vespers, compline and other divine offices tending to divine worship, which was already by the Church prepared to their hands, and such as men of little or no learning might perform. They might contemplate upon what was already invented and studied, and agreed on to their hands, but not excogitate new matters in religion. They went on in a circle, and where they left off at night, they began the next morning. They were not injoined ad studendum, but ad celebrandum divina. True it is, some members of such foundations have been students, and have profited in arts, and have written learned tracts, but they were not injoined to do so; for 'tis not study, but celebratio divinorum makes an ecclesiastical corporation. For suppose a man should erect a society, and direct that it should be to study the school-men or the fathers, to enable them in the polemical parts of theology, or to paraphrase or make a comment upon the Bible, as the Schola Conimbricensis did upon Aristotle, this would not be a spiritual corporation; for that the spiritualty consists in celebrando divina & fungendo divinis officiis, and not in studendo. 2. Ad orandum is no more than what is implied, for with all studies that must be concomitant. A lawyer by the Lord Coke's rule of quatuor orabis may be as well an ecclesiastical person, if ad orandum should make him ecclesiastical. I may say of this word ad orandum, as Lindwood expounds the words [109] of circumspecte agatis, de mortali peccato. 1. Says he, non intelligas de omni peccato mortali, sed de tali cujus punitio de sui naturâ spectat ad forum ecclesiasticum; for if the Church should take conusance de ratione cujuslibet peccati mortalis periret temporalis gladii jurisdictio, for that every evil act would have something of mortal sin in it. So if the injunction of saying one's prayers would make a corporation spiritual, none almost of those, which are out of doubt lay hospitals, but in their creation would be spiritual. Nay in Pit's and James's case, Hob. 121, prayer for souls was injoined, and yet the hospital was lay. And denomination is from the greater part of the imployment, viz. If it be to celebrate in ecclesiasticis, 'tis that makes an ecclesiastical person. They were divino mancip' servitio, and did Deo servire. As to the objection, that the fellows are here injoined to be in orders, it hath been answered: 1. The president is not injoined. 2. They may be dispensed with amongst themselves.

2. From the use. 1. How they are used in the commonwealth. 2. What acts they do not compatible with a spiritual corporation. To the 1st, 8 Ass. pl. 29. A spiritual corporation is not chargeable with subsidies, nor taxed amongst the laity. Now a college in the university is so taxed in every Act for subsidy, as we may see 21 Jac. 3, Car. 1, and the last Act for subsidies, 15 Car. 2, only there is a proviso to dispense with their payment. 2. The university sends burgesses to the Parliament, which they could not do if they were a spiritual corporation, et eadem est ratio partis & totius, if the whole be lay, the essential parts cannot be spiritual.

3. From their constant application to the temporal power upon all occasions of grievances amongst them, and the balking the bishop of the diocese. Linwood fol. 155, cap. de Magistris. When books of Wickcliff were spread abroad, and others pretended to expound the Scriptures, a canon was made, that none should do so, but by licence from twelve of either of the universities, to be allowed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, not the Bishop of Ely, or of the diocese. 5 E. 2, M. 8, Riley 533. One Roger Baketon having a desire to take his degree in the university, was denied, and thereupon he brought his mandamus directed to the chancellor and masters of the university. Teste Rege 28 die Martii al York. Riley 534. In the same year the university thought themselves so far from being a spiritual corporation, [110] that they excluded certain scholars who were of the Order of the Predicants, and denied them any privilege of the university, and thereupon these scholars (waiving the bishop of the diocese) apply themselves to the King, and obtain a mandamus directed to the chancellor, regentibus & non regentibus of the university, commanding them to allow the complainants the privileges by them challenged. Teste Rege, 29 Martii 6 E. 1. Co. 2 Inst. 640. Rex non intromittit se de his quæ spectant ad forum ecclesiasticum, prosequatur coram Ordinario jus suum. Riley 601. Claus. 19 R. 2, M. 24. Robert Lichlade, a scholar in Oxford for maintaining Lolardy was complained of, and the university was remiss in punishing him; the bishop takes not upon him jurisdiction though in a cause of heresy, but the King directs his writ to the chancellor of the university to remove him: in which writ the words are very remarkable, that this Lichlade did publicare, communicare & docere opiniones nefarias, ac conclusiones detestabiles in fidei Catholicæ læsionem, & universitatis prædictæ subversionem, nisi brachio Regiæ Majestatis (not the visitation of the Ordinary) citiùs resistatur; and then commands that they shall examine per inquisitionem vel alio modo legitimo si ipsum talem inveniri contigerit: per inquisitionem according to the common law, and not by ecclesiastical process. 50 E. 3, pars 2, membrana 8. John Wolverton's case. A mandamus to restore a fellow in Cambridge, who was turned out of the university; and F. Corody 6, the very sending the writ shewed a right to the jurisdiction till the contrary be shewed. 21 E. 1, C. B. Rot. 318, March 181. Habeas corpus for a scholar imprisoned by the vice-chancellor, no application to the bishop which had been proper, if oppressed by false accusation for heresy, &c. All which precedents shew that the colleges were of temporal conusance, or at least not subject to the visitation of the Ordinary, 5 Mar. A commission issued to visit the University of Cambridge, amongst which visitors were some bishops, viz. Chester and Chicester, but the Bishop of Ely was none. The letters patent in the return do imply that the bishop had nothing to do with this matter.

I will not repeat the answers which have been made to the objections, as 1st, that an impropriation may be to a college, which 1st, hath not been resolved; for none have so been. All the impropriations they now have being heretofore impropriated to religious houses before the dissolution. 2. It was not resolved, whether an appropriation may not be to a lay [111] corporation, there being no judgment in Alden and Tothil's case. 2. That the act to be done is temporal, and no more than the writ de admittendo clerico, F. N. B. 38, and induction is a temporal thing. 8 Jac. Bulstr. l. 1, 179, Holt's case. And an action lies against the archdeacon for not inducting, F. N. B. 47 H. 3, 51 b. and then Coke sur Lit. 96 b. If there be remedy in foro sæculari, then none in ecclesiastico. As for Dr. Lewes's case it was not resolved judicially, and if it had, this point was not in question. As for Dr. Widdrington's case, I conceive though the conclusion of that case do not, yet the reason given by the Court upon granting the mandamus will make for me; for then the writ was opposed with the argument, that there were special visitors, the Court ruled, that a writ should go, because it appeared not to them till the return, that there were such. So that they took no notice that the bishop should visit; who is notorious.

As for precedents, Hob. 270, tantum habent de lege, quantum habent de justitia, and they are built upon reason and justice; now though I am not able to produce any other precedents, than what I have before mentioned; yet (as hath been by those who have argued on my side already observed) there is as much reason for this writ (if not much more) as to swear a town-clerk, churchwarden, constable, mayor or head of some corporation; nay for a scavenger, to command him to take upon him that office. Mich. 1652. The case of The inhabitants of Clerkenwel, and in Bagg's case, and 4 Inst. 71. In any case where there is oppression, which I conceive extends to this case, it appearing to the Court that my client hath right to this place, but held out by a dilatory return. Lastly, This writ will not conclude the right of either party; but duly elected or not elected will be tried in an assize, or other action, as in the case of The Abbot of Fountain, 9 H. 6, 32 b. And this very argument was prevalent with Bryan Chief Justice in 6 H. 7, 14, where the case was, a free-chapel was annexed by licence to Magdalen College in Oxford, the master avows for rent by the name of master of the college and custos capellæ; and it was objected, that whereas it was set forth, that the union was by the licence of the Ordinary, it did not appear whether the Ordinary had any jurisdiction or no; and no resolution as to that point: but ruled by Bryan that it was all one to the tenant, whether it was a free chapel or visitable; for the rent was due, and no prejudice could be to the tenant by determining either way. The prejudice was the thing considered [112] by the Court. So here no prejudice in granting, but much by not granting; and so I pray the writ to swear Mr. Patrick.

Baldwin contra. There are 4 things inquirable in this case. 1. Whether this college be a spiritual or a temporal foundation. 2. Whether by this return it appears, that there are any special visitors for this college. 3. Whether this Court may intermeddle with the government of the college. 4. Admitting it may, whether it may do it per saltum, or whether Mr. Patrick ought not first to have appealed to the bishop. 1. 'Tis a spiritual foundation, the fellows are called clerks, and (ergo) their study is theology, and the statutes of the college are, that they must enter into orders, and every college is of a spiritual foundation. 1. From the end, for the advancement of learning, 11 H. 4, 47, per Thirning. A grammar school is spiritual, Seld. Hist. de Dismes, 121. Hospitalers and Templers are religious, and yet no part of the clergy. Linwood de Religiosis 118. 2. Colleges are governed as other ecclesiastical corporations. 8 Ass. pl. 29, and 31. 3. Spelman's Gloss. verb. Visitator, Trin. 13 Car. 1, Allen versus Nash. Ejectment of the demise of Huntley. The defendant gave in evidence a deprivation of the lessor by the High Commissioners; but resolved, that if he had been deprived by the Ordinary, the Court could not have intermeddled. 2. Ab inconvenienti. For if a mandamus should lie for putting in a fellow, it would lie for a fellow that is turned out; and so it would be a charge to the scholars, and it would be against the dignity of this Court to take notice of every trivial offence arising between the scholars in the universities. 3. This Court did never intermeddle in this kind. So Dyer 376. Error of a judgment in the Cinque-Ports.

Object. Dyer 209. Covenye's case.

Resp. That case makes for Bryan my client.

Object. Hern's case, who was a fellow, and had a mandamus to restore him, being turned out.

Resp. The visitor of that college was then the Archbishop of Canterbury, and that see was then vacant, and so there was no proper visitor in being. As to Crayford's case, Resp. [113] Hobart Rep. 17, James's case. The King is fountain of justice and distributes it accordingly. 4. Admitting that resort might be made to this Court, yet it ought not to have been per saltum. 5 E. 3. Fitz. Error. Curia advisare vult.

THE KING against THE CITY OF CANTERBURY.

Privilege. 1 Lev. 159.

An information was exhibited against John Percival, Thomas Godfry and Walter Wilford, Esq; for a riot and assault by them made upon one Baker, a messenger of the King, at the Three Kings Inn in Canterbury. To which the defendants pleaded not guilty, and a venire facias issued to the Sheriff of the City of Canterbury (which is a county of it self) and the sheriff returned a venire feci duodecim, &c. Then there went out a distringas, and upon that the sheriff returns, that the City of Canterbury is an ancient corporation, &c. known by such name; and that by letters patent bearing date the sixth of his reign, King James granted to the said city, &c. that they should not be compelled to go out of the said city upon any cause whatsoever, &c. the sufficiency of which return was very much questioned by the Court.

Hardres counsel for the sheriff, to make it good, argued, that the grant of exemption is good in point of creation, for which he cited 18 H. 8, 5. 42 Ass. pl. 5. 39 E. 3, 15. But the question (he said) would be, whether the words are sufficient in the King's case; and he conceived they were, because they are, that the citizens, &c. shall not be compelled to appear before the King, or any Judge in any jury, assise, recognition, &c. (excepting high treason), and the occasion of the granting this patent he hoped would make it apparent, that it was the King's intention they should be exempted; for 23 H. 6. Exemption was granted to the citizens, and yet they went out of the city to Assises, notwithstanding the first charter was confirmed 1 E. 4. But 4 Jac. a question arose upon a clause of this charter, when one Robert Lad was indicted for murder, and it was referred to the Lord Chief Justice Hobart and the Attorney General, and they certified that the charter was not sufficient, because the B. R. was not comprised in it, according to 8 H. 6, 21. 21 E. 3, 64. 11 Co. Rep. 64. Dr. Foster's case coram Rege; then comes this charter of 6 Jac. and if this does not aid in cases where the King is concerned, the patent will serve for nothing, for the [114] precedent charters have all the other clauses included in them. He confessed exemption did not extend to the King, unless he be named, and the words licet tangat nos. 42 Ass. pl. 5. 8 H. 6, 21. 39 E. 3, 15. But here the words are equivalent, and that is well enough. 8 H. 6, 19. Then as to the time of pleading this charter, it comes soon enough upon the return of the distringas, for it can't come upon the return of the venire fac. because no man is mentioned in it till it is returned. 18 H. 8, 5. Citizens shall not have advantage of a charter upon an appearance, but upon the return. 27 H. 6, 5. 34 H. 6, 25. 35 H. 6, 42. And if the return is naught an action will lie against the sheriff, because he did not obey the writ of allowance, which is also returned. 2 Inst. 130. 18 H. 8, 5. 22 E. 3, 20. Debt against a Grecian; the defendant prays to be tried per medietatem linguæ upon the distringas, and it was allowed, because it appeared upon the declaration he was an alien. And it differs from the case in Dyer 357, Stanf. 89, because there it did not appear in the declaration that the defendant was an alien, for which reason he prayed the return might be allowed. But at another day in Easter-term 17 Car. 2, the Court was of opinion that the return was naught. 1st, Because the sheriff having returned upon the venire fac. that there were probi & legales homines, and now upon the distringas returning, that they ought not to appear, &c. contradicts himself, and is estopped by his first return. 2. The sheriff ought not to claim this privilege, but every singular person that is desirous to have the benefit of it. 3. He ought to have averred that there are no inhabitants in the city besides men of the corporation; for which reasons the return was quashed, and the sheriff fined a hundred pounds, and an alias distringas was issued out.

[115] TERM. PASCH. 17 CAR. 2, B. R.

Sir Robert Hide Chief Justice. Sir Thomas Twisden, Sir Wadham Wyndham, Sir John Keeling, Justices.

Words. 1 Danv. Abr. 95, p. 9. 1 Sid. 241. 1 Keb. 862.

In an action upon the case for speaking these words of the plaintiff, You are a baud, and I will prove you a baud, and you took 5*s. for a clean pair of sheets for two whores and two rogues.* And at another day, She is a baud, and I will prove her baud, and will have her carted for a baud. Upon not guilty pleaded, and found for the plaintiff for all, and intire damages given; it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the first words are not actionable; for it is one thing to call another baud, and another thing to say she keeps a baudy-house. But by Kelyng Justice, an action lies for calling one baud, because a baud is punishable in the Spiritual Court by ecclesiastical censures; but judgment was staid until, &c.

THE KING against MIDDLETON.

Error. 1 Keb. 867, 879.

Middleton was indicted at Guild-Hall in London, and the sessions there were adjourned to the sessions at Justice-Hall, and there he was tried, and judgment given against him for assault, battery and wounding of J. S. And now he brought his writ of error, and assigned for error, that all the adjournments of the sessions are in the preter-tense. But by the Court 'tis the usual course in indictments, and therefore [116] well enough, and all the precedents are so, and therefore judgment was affirmed.

WILLIAMSON versus BOLTON AND OTHERS.

Custom. 2 Danv. Ab. 312, p. 3. 1 Lev. 162. 1 Sid. 250. 1 Keb. 851, 868, 895.

In trespass and imprisonment, the defendant justifies that London is an ancient city, &c. and in it there is, and has been time out of mind, a Court of Orphans which hath governed them, and granted the custody of them; and that there is, and time out of mind has been such a custom, that if any takes away and eloigns an orphan, the Court may commit the eloignor to Newgate till he discovers where the eloignee is, and that one Amos Pain, a citizen, died 1 Jan. 14 Car. 2, leaving issue an infant named Mary of the age of thirteen years, who was committed by the said Court to the defendant Bolton, &c. and that the plaintiff took her away out of the defendant's custody and eloigned her, and that upon this the defendant was summoned to the said Court, and appeared, and there refused to discover where the infant was; upon which the Court adjudged that he should be imprisoned; and this is the same imprisonment. To this plea the plaintiff demurred. And Williams for the plaintiff argued, 1. That the custom of it self is naught. 2. That it is not well pleaded. As to the first, that the custody of orphans appertains to the mayor and aldermen, and that they may commit without summons. By Bagg's case there ought to be notice and summons to the party, 2 Inst. 46. 2. There is no lawful trial for the party to acquit himself, but only the discretion of the mayor and aldermen, confession of the party and examination of witnesses. 3. The duration of the imprisonment, because the party may be innocent; and the words, till he be discharged by due course of law, do not aid him, because there is no remedy by habeas corpus nor by appeal. 4. The extent of the custom is to all manner of persons, and so may extend to peers, and others not citizens; besides the party has an ordinary remedy, viz. Ravishment de Gard. F. N. 142 g.

Object. The custom is confirmed by Act of Parliament.

Resp. That is of no value, if the custom is unreasonable. 2 Inst. 142. Dyer 245 b. 22 Car. 1, B. R. Estwick's case. As to the second, the custom is not well pleaded. They ought to shew how this appears that he is guilty, Specot's case. 3. This case is out of the custom, because it appears that [117] Mary Pain was not married at the time of the commitment. 4. The custom is to have all her estate, though it be in any part of the realm, and out of the liberty of the city.

Wild Recorder contra, for the defendant. 1. This crime of eloignment of a child is in the nature of a theft, and he called it a plagiary. As to the 2d, It is in vain to plead summons for him that is present in Court. As to the 3d, There is a difference betwixt a plea and a return, for a plea shall be taken according to common intendment. As to the 4th, This is a Court of Record, and a Court of the City of London, and grounded upon the custom of London. Hutt. 30, Andrew's case, Hob. 247, Luck's case.

As to the 1st objection, Here is a conviction without trial.

Resp. The Court hath no other course by custom than examination, which shall be intended legal examination.

As to the 2d objection, Duration of imprisonment, that is grounded upon the reason of the common law, as in a homine replegiando, Reg. 79.

As to the 4th objection, (viz) The extent of this custom to peers.

Resp. 1. Person shall be intended such which shall be subject to imprisonment. 2. Peers are not exempt from contempts. 11 H. 4. 15.

As to the 5th objection, That there is an ordinary remedy, F. N. B. 142.

Resp. This is only for damages, but here it is for the person it self.

As to the 6th objection, He ought to have shewn how this appears.

Resp. This appears upon examination, and the offence appears, (viz.) the taking away the orphan.

As to the 7th objection, That the case is not made according to the custom, because it does not appear that Mary Pain was unmarried.

Resp. Consider the time in the plea, (viz.) 1 Jan. 14 Car. 2. Amos the father died leaving Mary within the age of fourteen, and the twenty-seventh of the same month the custody was committed to the defendant, and the twenty-ninth of the same month she was eloigned, and she shall not be intended to be married without making it appear; and the plaintiff ought to have shewn this; and the whole Court was for the defendant; and judgment was given accordingly for the defendant.

Infant. 2 Danv. Abr. 773, p. 3. 1 Lev. 163. 1 Sid. 252. 1 Keb. 896, 900, 934.

Error upon a judgment in C. B. in a formedon in remainder. The plaintiff counts of a feoffment, 38 H. 8. by Alexander Amcots, and makes title to himself; the tenant being an infant, by guardian pleads, that John Amcots was seised in fee, and prays that the parol may demur; the guardian dies, the demandant counter-pleads the age, and traverses the seisin in fee and discent; and upon this was a special verdict; and judgment for the demandant; the tenant brings a writ of error, and assigns for error in the manner of the judgment, (viz.) that it is final where it ought not to be so.

Newdigate Serjeant for the plaintiff. In the writ of error the judgment ought not to be final, but only a respondes ouster.

Here are four things to be premised. 1. That it is all one in a special verdict as in a general verdict. 2. The nature of the plea is considerable. 3. The infant had no disadvantage. 4. There is a difference when there is a demurrer upon such plea, and when a special verdict, and when a demurrer is in the same term, and when in another term. 1. In respect of the nature of dilatories in general, 1 Inst. 134. In all pleas by the tenant, in disability, the law giveth liberty to pray in aid and voucher. 9 Co. 84. Conye's case. In a cessavit against an infant, the parol shall demur, 2 Inst. 291. Infancy is preferred before dower, Cro. Jac. 398.

Object. Here is a verdict.

Resp. It is the same as if verdict, and no difference in reason; for the plaintiff might have demurred, and a demurrer is more tedious than a verdict. 2. When it is an issue upon a collateral point, the judgment shall not be final, but a respondes ouster. Appeal 18 E. 3, Fitz. Outlawry 47. Bro. Peremptory, 28 Assise, pl. 52. 6 Assise, pl. 1. 40 Assise, pl. 2. L. 5, E. 4, 90. Bro. Peremptory 44. Fitzh. Issue 14. Bro. Peremptory 69. 1 Inst. 135. Co. Entries 321.

Object. Delay.

Resp. We must distinguish between delays, for dilatories are allowed in real actions. If it be a delay that an infant shall not be prejudiced but with a contempt, it shall be one. Cro. Eliz. 467, Holford versus Plat, 8 H. 7, 8. It is error to deny a dilatory; this plea is not found to be false, (viz.) minority.

[119] Object. 24 E. 3, 76. Bro. Peremptory 22, by Wilby, 25 E. 3, 80, pl. 2.

Resp. The reason of that case is, if he had been of full age it should be peremptory; but here the plea is not false.

Object. If a demurrer in another term. Fitz. Voucher 17 and 119.

Resp. It is the same reason, for none shall be prejudiced by the act of Court; as adjournment, continuance, &c. Voucher is instead of a plea in bar; it is not a delay with contempt no more than 8 H. 7, 5. Plow. 364. Fitz. Assise, 43. The delay is by the demandant himself, for he imparled four terms.

Object. Latch 177, Cademan's case.

Resp. The conclusion was not good; the demandant himself prayed only that the tenant shall be ousted of his age, and therefore no other judgment shall be given in a plea after darrein continuance. Yel. 18, Hawkin's case.

Jones for the defendant. As to the prayer of the demandant, it is so in all pleas to the writ, quod breve cassetur. It is a general rule L. 5 E. 4, 90 b. in every action, if issue be joined and found, it is peremptory for the tenant or defendant; and no difference betwixt an infant and another, if the books and authorities do not contradict this. In the case of a counterplea of a voucher, this is not in nature of a plea in bar, because it is not peremptory after demurrer, before the Statute of Westm. 2, cap. 6, Excommunication, 3 H. 4, 3. 50 E. 3, 20. But these differences are to be observed, 1. In every dilatory plea, after issue against the tenant, it is peremptory. 2. Upon dilatory demurrer it is not peremptory in one case, (viz.) after the Darrein Continuance, L. 5 E. 4, 139. 2 E. 4, 10. Yelv. 112. Fitz. Issue 14 and Age 122, by inspection it is not peremptory, because by the Judges. The reason is. 1. Upon a verdict the delay is greater. 2. The matter of fact lies more in the intelligence of the plaintiff.

Twisden Justice. This is a ground, if a dilatory be pleaded and found against him, it is peremptory. Adjournatur.

Parliament. 1 Lev. 165. 1 Sid. 245. 1 Keb. 871, 884, 887, 850, 525.

The House of Lords in Parliament made an order for the apprehending of Pritchard to commit him to prison. Before the order executed the Parliament was prorogued. The serjeant at arms five days after the prorogation of the Parliament arrested the said Pritchard, and had him in custody, and now he brings his habeas corpus.

Coleman for the defendant. 1. The return here is insufficient, because it is not shewn that he was committed by virtue of an order of the House of Lords. 2. Because the commitment is not lawful, for every prorogation is quasi a new Parliament. 3. He is committed for not payment of fees: and it doth not appear what.

Kelyng Justice. If a man be committed by Parliament which is prorogued, the Court may bail him. Here the return is not sufficient, because no day is mentioned when the warrant came to the serjeant at arms, and therefore the party ought to be discharged.

Wyndham Justice to the same intent, because it shall be presumed that the party was taken after the Parliament prorogued. Bro. Parliament 86. Every sessions is a new Parliament. 1 H. 7, 20, Flowerdew's case. Judgment given in Parliament may be executed by the Chancellor quia transit in rem judicatam.

Twisden Justice accordingly: Be the person taken before or after the Parliament prorogued he is to be discharged.

Hide Chief Justice of the same opinion. 22 E. 3, 23. A writ came to the Chief Justice of this Court to remove a record. By the Court he was discharged.

WHALEY versus ANDERSON.

Mich. 14 Car. 2, Rot. 399.

Treason. 1 Sid. 260. 1 Keb. 329, 874, 905, 909, 933.

In ejectment of a demise from Springate and Stapley. On not guilty pleaded, the jury found a special verdict, that William Marquess of New-castle being seised in fee the 19th of May 16 Car. 1, demised to More, Wolrich and Alestry for ninety-nine years, upon condition to pay 2500l. in the year [121] 1700, and 200l. per annum in the mean time; More dies, and then Wolrich and Alestry 12 Febr. 17 Car. 1, assign to Warren and Lanyon. Edward Whaley purchases the reversion. Warren and Lanyon 1 November 1656 assign to Sir Charles Harbord, and agree, that if Whaley pay half a year's interest and principal upon the 17th of Novemb. then the assignee shall be in trust for him. Edward Whaley doth not pay the principal in 1658 by indenture betwixt Springate, &c. for the use of his daughter upon marriage with John Whaley. Harbord assigns to Springate in trust by the direction of Edward Whaley to permit John Whaley to take the profits of 200l. per annum, the remainder to the wife for life, and the residue for the charges of the trustees, and after to Edward Whaley. The 2500l. was paid by Springate to Sir Charles Harbord; the marriage took effect; the last indenture was not in trust for Edward Whaley. The 25th of April 12 Car. 2, by the Act of Attainder Edward Whaley was attainted, and all manors, &c. of which he was seised were forfeit; and upon the whole matter, if for the plaintiff, &c. and the main question was, if this trust shall be forfeit to the King by the Act of Attainder.

Jones for the plaintiff. The King hath no title in law to these lands. 1. What right or interest Edward Whaley had by these indentures. 2. What may accrue by this forfeiture. As to the 1st, there are three indentures, and so many pretences. 1. A reversion upon payment of 2500l. 2. Edward Whaley had a contingent trust by the second indenture. 3. The residue of the profits was to him. 1. He cannot have a right by the redemption, because the King shall not be in a better plight than Whaley himself. As to the 2d, touching the interest upon the contingent, this is passed, and depends upon an act to be done, which was not done, (viz.) payment upon November following. The third upon the third indenture. If by this limitation of the residue of the profits, the King hath a title to the land? And he conceived not. 1st, The verdict finds that the trust was to John Whaley for 200l. a year, and to the trustees for their expences, and then to Edward Whaley. The jury doth not find that any residue remains, nor that the land is of any value, and then no surplus shall be intended. To the 2d, if the interest of the King shall swallow the whole land? And he conceived not. 1. I agree, that in case of forfeiture upon attainder the King is intitled to personal things intirely; as in the case of an obligation, a horse, &c. the attainder [122] of one jointenant shall forfeit all, but not of things in possession, which may be divided. 3 Inst. 55. Chattel real in possession; and Plow. 243 intimates so much, because he instances only in intire chattels.

Object. Dame Hale's case, lease for years forfeit by a jointenant.

Resp. The pleadings of this case shew the case to be of a lease assigned to baron and feme after marriage, and so no moieties betwixt them. 2. The reason of this case is the relation from the time of the forfeiture, which is there a disposition; but in case of jointenancy the one may grant only a moiety; but in our case there is no jointure, and they cannot take the profits together; but there is a priority of time between them, they may be tenants in common by perception of the profits. The words of the Act of Parliament are, All lands &c. of which Edward Whaley had any estate, or any in trust for him, shall be vested in the King, &c. But there is also a saving to all strangers; the King shall have the same estate in law as the party had in equity, and not more; and therefore if the trust had been for John for life, the remainder to Edward, the King shall have only the remainder, and not the possession.

Here Edward can never have the possession of the land. If Edward had brought his subpœna, he should never have the possession, for there are precedent estates; but the trustees shall deliver the surplus to Edward. It is like to the Statute of Uses, for this Statute of Attainder executes trusts. If the trust had been, that the trustees shall permit the cestuy que trust to perceive and take such annual sum, it shall be vested in the King.

Bigland for the defendant. Consider the case, 1. Without reference to the deed of settlement, and then the case is, 1. When Edward Whaley purchases the reversion he hath a right of redemption. 2. When the mortgagee and the reversioner join in an assignment; although the money was not paid at the day, yet the trust remains. Where an estate is once vested in the King, nothing shall devest it. 1 Inst. 118. Cro. Jac. 82. ——— versus Wyndham, Moor 196, 815, Palmer's case. If the trust had been, that Edward Whaley shall have all the profits, then the term it self shall be in the King, Adam and Lambert's case; the King shall have all because a mixt interest. Plow. 423. Here the King hath something, and if it do not appear what part he shall have, he shall have all.

Wyndham Justice. A lease upon condition to pay at a day to come, and then the lessor makes another lease by estoppel, [123] and then procures another to pay the money; the lease by estoppel shall take place.

Kelyng Justice for the plaintiff.

Twisden Justice. The question is, if the equity of the trust be forfeit, and it seems not; and it was adjourned; and after judgment was given for the plaintiff.

WILLAN versus GILL.

Prohibition.

George Allington makes his will, and Gilham and Denhurst his executors; Denhurst makes his will, and executors, and dies; Gilham dies intestate, his administrator sues the executor of Denhurst for a legacy due from Allington. Simpson moved for a prohibition.

Twisden Justice. Here by the spiritual law the plaintiff may sue the executor of Denhurst as executor de son tort.

Kelyng Justice. The executor of Denhurst may be sued as executor of his own wrong, but then he cannot be sued as executor of Denhurst, but as executor of Allington.

Twisden Justice. In our law it is so; but in the ecclesiastical law perhaps it is otherwise.

Wyndham Justice accords with Twisden, it is more proper for an appeal than a prohibition.

Twisden accords, and a prohibition denied by three against Kelyng.

BUCK versus ANGEL.

Assumpsit. 1 Danv. Abr. 74, p. 1. 1 Lev. 164. 1 Sid. 246. 1 Keb. 872.

The plaintiff counts, that whereas he had procured one Woodward at the request of the defendant to surrender a lease, the defendant would pay, &c. On non assumpsit pleaded, and verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, because it is not said that the defendant assumed and promised. And to Twisden Justice it seemed not to be a good declaration, and so it was ruled in the first case that he ever moved in this Court. But it seemed to Kelyng Justice to be only matter of form. But judgment was stayed until, &c.

Inquiry. 1 Sid. 246. 1 Keb. 882.

Detinue for a deed, and verdict for the plaintiff, that the defendant detained the deed, and 20l. damages; and then issued out a distringas to deliver the deed or the value, and after that a writ of inquiry issued for the value, and found a different value from the first verdict; and it was moved that the last damages found on the writ of inquiry shall stand. Rast. Entr. 214, 219, tit. Judgment in Detinue, c. 3. And Chenye's case here doth not oppose this, because here attaint doth not lie.

Kelyng Justice. There cannot be damages and a writ of inquiry also.

Twisden Justice. There ought to be both; and it was adjourned, and after adjudged for the plaintiff.

ERRINGTON versus HIRST.

Intr. Trin. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 505.

Debt. 1 Keb. 883.

Debt upon an obligation against an executor. The defendant pleads non est factum; and upon this the jury found a special verdict, viz. that the testator of the defendant sealed and delivered the obligation, and that the plaintiff was a commission officer, and detained the said testator in prison until he had entered into this obligation. And they found the Act of Oblivion that pardons all acts of hostility, and all appeals and personal actions by reason of them shall be discharged, and that all persons may plead the general issue, that the defendant nor testator are not excepted.

Turnor for the plaintiff. There are two points. 1. If this obligation be nulled by this Act; and it seems that it is not. 2. If the defendant may plead non est factum? And it seems he cannot.

To the 1st, It is not within the words of the Act, because there is no mention of an obligation given to another.

2. It is not within the meaning, because it is not a crime or offence. Plowd. 173, Hill versus Grange. Words ought to answer the sense of a statute; the Act was intended for the benefit of the plaintiff, who was a commission officer.

[125] Object. Or relating thereunto.

Resp. This obligation is collateral to the offence, and not relating; for relating ought to be preceding and not subsequent, and therefore it was adjudged, Dyer 14 b. Tunc is extended until, 164 and 286. 5 Co. Clayton's case, 2 Inst. 112. A statute ought to be expounded to prevent prejudice to a third person.

As to the 2nd, He cannot plead non est factum, but the special matter, and conclude issint nient son fait. 1 H. 7, 15. 5 Co. 119. Whelpdale's case, Hob. 72.

Linley for the defendant. As to the 1st, It is within the words of the Act in a legal sense. Personal actions include the causes of action. 1 Inst. 285. 8 Co. 153. Littleton sect. 512, it extends to obligations. There is another clause, viz. that all differences betwixt the subjects, &c. and all that had followed upon it. Here this act of hostility which occasioned the obligation. 2. This is within the intent, which was to take away all those things which might be the cause of future disturbance.

As to the 2d, If the Act had said that the obligation shall be discharged, then it ought to be pleaded; but here it is that the obligation shall be void, and that the defendant may plead the general issue.

Kelyng Justice. The Act enures between man and man, as a release; that the imprisonment is discharged is clear, then it seems the obligation shall be discharged.

As to the 2d, The general issue aids where the defendant cannot justify at common law; here may be a justification at common law.

Wyndham Justice. A contract seems not to be discharged by this Act, although many of them were forced by acts of hostility. A man takes a horse in those times, trespass doth not lie, but upon demand trover lies.

Twisden. Acts of hostility shall be intended matters of force.

As to the 2d point, The Act gives a latitude to the party. And it was adjourned.

[126] MERREL versus RUMSEY.

Remainder. 1 Sid. 247. 1 Keb. 888.

Ejectment for land in in the county of Monmouth. Upon not guilty the jury found a special verdict, viz. that Edmund Williams seised in fee 20 Aug. 15 Car. 1, by indenture covenanted in consideration of marriage, and 600l. portion to levy a fine to the use of the conusees till a recovery had, and then the recoverors should be seised to the use of Edmund and Dorothy for their joint lives, the remainder to the heirs of the body of Dorothy by Edmund ingendered, remainder (Dorothy surviving Edmund) to Dorothy for life, remainder to the right heirs of Edmund; the marriage takes effect, a fine is levied, but no recovery was had; and there is a clause in the deed, that if there was not any recovery, that then the conusees should stand seised to the uses before mentioned. Edmund and Dorothy have issue two daughters, Rachael and Elizabeth; Edmund dies, his widow marries William Watson, the daughters are lessors of the plaintiff.

Winnington for the plaintiff. The design of this conveyance was, that if the husband died before his wife, that his issue should have it; here Dorothy hath no title, but the daughters.

1. When the freehold determines.

2. If it determines upon the death of

3. If the contingent remainder fail, if the other takes.

As to the 1st, This freehold upon which all the remainders depend, determines upon the death of the husband, because it is for their joint lives; although a joint estate to two shall be intended to the survivor, 5 Co. 9, Brudnel's case; but if a particular limitation be, it is otherwise.

To the 2d, Remainder to the heirs of the feme ingendered by the baron, these are words of purchase and not of limitation, and then contingent, so they cannot take, as 1 Inst. 22 b. Where the ancestor takes an estate for life, the remainder over to him and his heirs, it shall be by limitation and not by purchase. There is a difference where the freehold is absolute and intire determinable upon life, and not upon a determinable estate for life, where by possibility it may [127] continue and consolidate. An estate to A. for life, the remainder to B. for life, remainder to the right heirs of A. they are words of limitation. But not when a determinable freehold, as an estate during widowhood, remainder to his right heirs; here they are words of purchase. 10 Co. 85, Lovie's case. Lands given to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder after the death of A. to B. and his heirs.

To the 3d, Then the contingent remainder is destroyed. 3 Co. 20, Boraston's case.

Powis for the defendant. Here is an estate-tail executed in the wife; it had been clear if the wife had died first.

2. If the estate be limited to A. for life, the remainder to the heirs of his body, it is an estate-tail executed, 1 Co. 204, and there is no difference in this case.

1. It is within the words of Shellie's case, 1 Co. 104, because an estate limited to one for life is a freehold indefinitely. 21 H. 6, 54 a. 33 H. 6, 5 b. 40 E. 3, 20 & 21. It behoveth not that the freehold continue; and Lovie's case cited on the contrary part is not to the purpose; the case in point is in Perkins sect. 337.

2. The wife hath a freehold for life. And it is like the case where land is given to baron and feme, and to the heirs of the body of the feme, and she dies. Dyer 99. Fitzh. Br. 81.

Kelyng Justice for the defendant. This estate is an estate-tail executed sub modo, (viz.) not as to division of the jointure; but it is to other purposes; and so all the other justices held, and judgment was given for the defendant.

HUNT versus SWAIN.

Assumpsit. 1 Danv. Abr. 57, p. 57. 1 Lev. 165. 1 Sid. 247. 1 Keb. 890, 900. 2 Keb. 62.

The plaintiff declares that the father of the defendant was obliged to the plaintiff in an obligation, and that the defendant is his son and heir; and that the plaintiff notified to the defendant, that he intended to sue him; and upon this the defendant, in consideration that the plaintiff would forbear the defendant, promised to pay the money due upon the obligation. The defendant pleads non assumpsit, and found for the plaintiff. And it was moved in arrest of judgment, that it is not said that the heir was obliged in the said obligation with his father.

[128] Wild Serjeant for the plaintiff. That it shall be so intended; and he cited the case of Seignior St. Paul and his Wife against The Earl of Rivers.(1)

Twisden Justice. By this way presumption shall aid any thing: but I confess that Rolls, when he was Chief Justice, was of the opinion, that it was good in this case after verdict; but I conceive the material thing is omitted.

Wyndham Justice. The defendant hath admitted himself to be bound, by the desire to give time to pay, and therefore it shall be presumed that he was bound, and so the plaintiff shall have judgment.

Kelyng Justice. The forbearance only will not maintain the action; for in the action against an executor he ought to shew that he is executor, but here it is laid that he is heir; as if I lay a man to be executor, although he hath no assets, it is good.

Hide Chief Justice. There is a grand difference between an heir and executor; and it was adjourned. Vid. Hob. 18. Wollaston versus Web, 1 Leon. 114. Grey's case cited in Stone and Withypool's case, 2 Cro. 602. Bard versus Bard, contra Yelv. 56. Fish versus Richardson.

ROGERS versus MASCAL.

Process. 1 Sid. 248, 259. 1 Keb. 890, 908. 2 Keb. 7, 17.

Trespass in assault and imprisonment. The defendant pleads that the 26th of Feb. in the Palace Court one levies a plaint against the plaintiff, and the defendant as serjeant of the said Court takes him by virtue of process upon this plaint. The plaintiff demurs.

Offley for the plaintiff. The justification is by several process out of the Palace Court, and doth not say it is by prescription or letters patent.

2. It is said that Cage levied a plaint in the nature of an action upon the case, and upon this a capias issued, and the [129] officer returned it. The immediate process here is attachment by the goods, where it ought to be a summons. 34 H. 6, 49 a.

3. Capias is not a process within an Inferior Court, because the statute which gives a capias doth not extend to it. F. N. B. 92 G. 100 D. The statute of 19 H. 7, cap. 9, gives a capias in B. R. and C. B. but not otherwise; and there is a difference where the jurisdiction is general, erroneous or void, process doth not expose the officer to false imprisonment. 10 Co. 76. But otherwise it is in an inferior jurisdiction. Cro. Car. 394, and 395, Nicholas versus Walker.

(1) Trin. 1656, B. R. St. Paul and his Wife against The Earl of Rivers. The plaintiffs declare, that whereas the father of the defendant obliged himself to the plaintiff's wife, dum sola fuit, in the sum of 400l. for the payment of 200l. which father is now dead, and the defendant is his son and heir, to whom the plaintiff repaired, and intimated that he intended to sue the defendant as son and heir for the said debt; the defendant upon consideration of forbearance assumed to pay, &c. And upon non assumpsit pleaded, and a verdict for the plaintiff, Serjeant Twisden moved in arrest of judgment, because it is not said, that the father obliged him and his heirs, and therefore it does not appear the defendant was liable to an action, and so the consideration is void. But adjudged that it should be intended, it being found by the jury, according to Bidwel and Catton's case, Hob. 216, and the plaintiff had judgment upon my own argument; but otherwise adjudged between Barber and Fox, Trin. 22 Car. 2, B. R.

4. It doth not appear the Court had jurisdiction. It is said generally, that the plaint was in nature of an action upon the case, and it may be such an action as cannot be brought in an inferior jurisdiction. Mich. 17 Car. 1, Bye versus Olive, Rot. 545, or 548.

Pemberton for the defendant. As to the 2d, It is a Court of Record which ought to have such process. 2. Summons doth not lie in an action upon the case, but a capias lies in trespass in any case, and it is a general entry in all Courts; and the case of Dye and Olive is not to the purpose. To the 3d, Summons is not a process in an action upon the case, but a pone, F. N. B. 92 and 93.

Object. It is not said, quod profert hic in Curia the letters patent by virtue of which the Court is held.

Resp. The defendant is only a bailiff, and cannot have them, upon the reason in Leyfield's case, and Dyer 29. Sub-lessee ought to shew the lease, but sub-collector and under-sheriff not. 36 H. 6, 14. 22 H. 6, 42. An incumbent shall not shew the title of his patron. 36 H. 6, 14.

Object. It is not said of what sum or place the Court had jurisdiction.

Resp. It is a Court of Record, and so hath conusance of all sums; and so is the plea of conusance of pleas, the plaint is not levied of any sum but generally. As to the place, it is said to be within the jurisdiction, and cannot be traversed how many miles it extends, but only that it is not within the jurisdiction.

Object. A capias doth not lie within an inferior jurisdiction.

Resp. 1. Admit this process doth not lie in an Inferior Court, yet the Court having jurisdiction the officer is not to be punished. 10 Co. 76. 2. By the equitable interpretation of the statute of 19 H. 7, cap. 9, it will extend to other Courts. As the statute that gives debt against the warden of the Fleet [130] extends to the sheriff. This statute of 19 H. 7 doth not give the capias alone, but at the common law where originally there was not summons, but a pone, and then a capias. Capias is not the process by this statute, but the exigent. 35 H. 6, 6 a. pl. 9. Capias infinitè was before, and not the exigent. Experience shews that before the statute a capias issued in these Courts. Rast. Entr. 293 a. A memorandum made that the process given by this statute is an exigent.

Twisden Justice. This exception has been taken, but it is cured by appearance.

Wyndham Justice. It seems process in an action upon the case was a capias infinitè. But after it was adjudged for the defendant by all the Judges besides Hide Chief Justice, who was then dead.

Memorandum, The first day of this term died Sir Robert Hide Lord Chief Justice, who was a man expert in the pleas of the Crown, but especially in those which concerned a justice of peace.

[131] TERM. TRIN. 17 CAR. 2, B. R.

There being then only three Judges, viz. Sir Thomas Twisden, Sir Wadham Wyndham, Sir John Kelyng, Justices.

WORRAL versus BRAND AND OTHER TWO EXECUTORS.

Death. 1 Lev. 165. 1 Sid. 259. 1 Keb. 902, 906, 925. Escape against two sheriffs, and the one dies. Noy 72. Cro. Eliz. 625, Bannion versus Watson, &c.

Assumpsit against two executors. After issue joined, one of the executors dies, and then the plaintiff suggests upon the roll that the other was dead, and upon this there is a trial against the other.

And now Jones for the defendant moved in arrest of judgment, and the question was, if the death of the one abate the writ as to both; and it seemed to him that it did.

1. In all actions of trespass, which are grounded upon a tort, the death of one shall not abate the writ of the other; but if it be founded upon contract, as nihil debet or ne unques receiver, &c. there by the death of one the writ is abated against the other. In debt, 4 E. 3, 26 b. 50 E. 3, 7. In accompt, Fitzh. Br. 263, 344. Authorities in the case it self. Plowd. 186 b. Woodward versus Darcy, 37 H. 6, 16, are cases in point, 10 H. 4, 18. In detinue, 2 H. 4, 18 b.

Pemberton for the plaintiff. There is no reason for this difference put by Jones; in 50 E. 3, 7, there it was, that he was dead before the action brought, and the writ was false. 37 H. 6, 16. A writ of error was brought, and it was moved for the plaintiff, but it was never argued; there is cited the 14 E. 3, but there is no such case. As to Plowd. nothing was done, and no judgment there given; Cro. Car. 426, Tiffen's case, an action against two and one dies, and no suggestion before the venire fac. and yet good. 41 E. 3, 3. Account against two, and one dies, the other shall answer over. Bro. tit. Respondes Ouster pl. 4. No reason for one more than another, as in outlawry. Here [132] is no other action or better brief, and the abatement shall be a mischief to the plaintiff, but none to the defendant by the allowance; for the defendant may plead plenement administer, and the promise survives. And there is a difference where there are two plaintiffs and where two defendants. Resolved by the Court that the writ is abated; and they relied upon Woodward and Darcy's case, and 37 H. 6. But see Hern's Precedents 102, 139, to the contrary.

OPEY versus THOMASIUS.

Estate. 3 Danv. Abr. 195, p. 4, 198, p. 9. 1 Lev. 167. 1 Sid. 260. 1 Keb. 778, 910.

Upon a special verdict in an ejectione firmæ of land in Devon, the case was to this effect. Rous seised of lands in fee, by indenture makes a lease to Thomasius for 99 years, if three lives live so long. And then settles the reversion upon himself in tail, with a power to make leases for one, two or three lives, or for 21 years in possession; and then he leases for 21 years to commence after the first lease, and then conveys over the reversion by fine; the first lease determines; and the question was if the conusee may avoid this second lease, which, as was admitted, was not within the power, because it was not in possession.

Jones for the plaintiff. There are two points. 1. If the second lease be pursuant to the power in the first indenture. 2. Admitting that it is not, then if the conusee shall avoid this lease made by the tenant in tail.

As to the 1st, There be two parts of powers: 1. To make leases in possession. 2. Leases in reversion. It doth not come within the power to make leases in reversion, because they are tied up to special particulars for any number of years determinable, &c. 6 Co. 33. Leper and Wroths case, Cro. Eliz. 5.

Object. It is a lease in possession, because there shall not be two leases extended by one and the same power, and it is quasi a possession.

Resp. 1. Observe the intent of the deed. 2. In pleading, possession may be of a reversion, but not in a conveyance; for there it ought to be according to ordinary parlance, and the subject matter guides the thing. Cro. Jac. 318, Hawkin's case.

As to the 2d, Tenant in tail of a reversion makes a second lease after the expiration of the first, and then levies a fine to a stranger, if the conusee shall avoid the second [133] lease; and it seemed to him he should. 1. If this second lease be void or voidable; and he held it was void. 2. If the conusee may avoid it.

As to the 1st, It is void, Westm. 2, cap. 1. Tenant in tail shall not have power to alien to the prejudice of his issue, but otherwise it is voidable. Tenant in tail grants a rent-charge, it is void against the issue, tenant in tail makes a lease without reserving a rent, it is void. Plow. 436. 12 H. 8, 8. The reason of these cases is, because it an apparent prejudice to the issue; and the statute doth not measure the acts which the tenant in tail doth by his estate, but with the consequence of the prejudice that may come to the issue by them; and here is an apparent prejudice; for if he may make a lease in futuro he will deprive his issue of the liberty of alienation according to the statute, and also to levy a fine. This upon the reason since the statutes of 32 H. 8. 4 H. 7. 6 Co. 41. 1 Inst. 223. This lease is a clog. 2. This lease being by way of future interest, the issue is in paramount this future interest, for it is not an estate until it is executed, for a surrender may be notwithstanding it. When tenant in tail makes a lease in futuro the statute preserves the issue. Cro. Jac. 445, Griffins case. A lease after death is void, although a rent be reserved. Dyer 279, per Manwood.

As to the 2d, The conusee shall have the same power, Plowd. 437, Smith versus Stapleton. Feoffee may enter upon lessee, 1 Inst. 46 b. and no difference betwixt conusee and feoffee.

Object. Dyer 51. Tenant in tail makes a feoffment, and makes a lease for years.

Resp. No resemblance, for when tenant in tail makes a feoffment the tail is discontinued, and then the joining with the feoffee is good.

Object. Cro. Jac. 692, Croker versus Kelsey.

Resp. The issue there had barred the intail and himself, and therefore the conusee shall not have more power than the tenant in tail himself.

Winnington for the defendant. This lease is pursuant to the power, which is to be regarded at the time of the creation; possession may be applied when it is to take effect in possession. Intent of the parties, I confess, Hawkin's case in Cro. Jac. 318, to be against this opinion, but the record of that case doth not warrant it. And Yelv. 222, reports the same case wholly different from Crook; but admit that the power is not pursued, yet 1. This lease is only voidable. 2. Not voidable by the conusee.

[134] As to the 1st, Tenant in tail makes a lease in futuro, rendering rent, this lease is only voidable. Plow. 434, is a case in point. 1 Inst. 46.

Object. Dyer 279.

Resp. Catlin there denies the opinion of Manwood. It had been good although no rent had been reserved, till avoided. Hutt. 102.

To the 2d, The conusee cannot avoid this lease. Westm. 2, de Donis. The issue hath power to elect post prolem suscitatam, tenant in tail hath power by the common law. The conusee doth not come in in privity of the estate-tail. Dyer 51 b. 7 Co. 9, Count de Bedford's case. Tenant in tail makes a lease in futuro, and then levies a fine, the lessee enters, the conusee enters upon him, and the fine is reversed. Dyer 263.

Kelyng Justice. The first point concerning the power is the principal point; tenant in tail makes a lease in futuro, it is not void, but voidable only, and the conusee shall here have advantage of election as well as the issue.

Wyndham Justice. If the lease be in esse at the time of the settlement. A lease made by the power to commence after the lease in being is determined, is good. Dyer 357. There is a difference when the land is in possession, and when it is in lease. Tenant in tail makes a lease without rent, it is not void, but voidable, because there may be covenants in it, and there is also fealty, &c.

Twisden Justice. Powers are to be expounded according to the intent of the parties. Tenant in tail makes a lease, it is only voidable, the conusee shall not avoid it, because the estate-tail is barred, and he cannot come in in privity; and matter of election is transferable. Latch, Arnold and Warner's case. And it was adjourned.

WINNE versus LLOYD. SEE BEFORE.

Error. Antea 16, 55, 70, 96.

A writ of error was brought to reverse a common recovery in Wales, and judgment in the common recovery is affirmed; and now Williams moved for costs for the defendant in the writ of error, according to 3 H. 7, cap. 10, he cited Co. Inst. 162. Cro. Eliz. Grove's case, and Cro. Eliz. Penruddock's case; and although there is not any delay here according to the words of the statute, yet this is to be intended where execution may be; but here is no [135] execution to be had. But the Court denied to give costs, because there is not any delay of execution; and at the common law there was no costs in a writ of error.

LOW versus BEARDMORE.

Case. 2 Danv. Abr. 210, p. 11. 1 Lev. 169. 1 Sid. 261. 1 Keb. 881, 915.

An action upon the case against the defendant for falsely and maliciously indicting the plaintiff for a rescous. And on not guilty found for the plaintiff, Powis for the defendant moved in arrest of judgment, that such action upon the case doth not lie for indicting one for a bare trespass, and this indictment was but a trespass.

And as to the objection, that the plaintiff declared, that the defendant scienter indicted him, Resp. It is the common declaration which is falso & malitiose.

Wyndham Justice. The case of Langly and Clark was debated for an action for an indictment for taking his wife with an intent to ravish her; and it seemed there for the defendant.

Twisden Justice. In Chamberlain and Prescot's case (1), it was resolved in this Court, that the action lies for such indictment; but the judgment was after reversed in the Exchequer Chamber; but it seemed a hard case if the action should not lie.

Kelyng for the defendant. Such actions would deter men from prosecuting, and he seemed to be for the defendant; but it was adjourned. Vid. postea Henly versus Burstal 180.

JEMOT versus COOLY.

[See Doe. d. Biass v. Horsley, 1834, 1 Ad. & E. 769.]

Estate. 3 Danv. Abr. 163, p. 4. 1 Lev. 170. 1 Vent. 193. 1 Saund. 112. 1 Sid. 223, 262, 344. 1 Keb. 784, 915. 2 Keb. 20, 184, 270, 295. 3 Keb. 6. Postea 158.

Ejectment of the demise of Sir Ralph Bovey of lands in Amersham in the county of Bucks; on not guilty pleaded, the jury found a special verdict, viz. that Francis Drake 20 July 1651 for 6000l. granted a rent-charge to the lessor of the plaintiff of 420l. a year, and in the deed was [136] this clause; and the said Drake doth grant that if the said rent shall be in arrear at any of the days of payment above twenty days, that then it shall be lawful to and for the said Bovey to enter into the said lands, and the same to retain until he be satisfied the said arrears. The rent is behind at one of the days, and the lessor enters and demises to the plaintiff.

Jones for the plaintiff. The sole question is, if the lessor of the plaintiff hath any interest in the land it self by these words. Here it is not any question, if the interest be an inheritance, freehold or chattel, because Sir Ralph Bovey is alive; but that this estate is an interest. Littleton sect. 327. There it is not a condition, because then he ought to avoid the whole estate by his entry. 1 Inst. 217. This interest is a chattel created by the agreement of the parties. Littleton doth not put it by deed indented, but it ought to be so intended; for a feoffment in fee rendering rent cannot be without deed, because not good by way of reservation. 1 Inst. 143. It hath been held that a rent upon a feoffment may be by deed poll. Doct. & Stud. 74. 11 H. 7, 22. 14 H. 7, 36. This interest is a chattel, because it is a penalty annexed to the rent. Cro. Jac. 510, Havergil versus Hare.

Object. It is a fee, because heirs is in, and then it doth not pass without livery.

(1) Mich 1659, Chamberlain versus Prescot. The plaintiff brought a special action upon the case for maliciously indicting him upon 8 Eliz. cap. 2, for procuring the defendant to be arrested in another man's name, who disowned the suit; and the plaintiff declares that he being a freeman of London, and a merchant, and reciting the statute, the defendant caused him falsely and maliciously to be indicted upon that statute. And upon not guilty pleaded, and a verdict for the plaintiff, Allen moved in arrest of judgment that this action would not lie, it being only a trespass in its nature; and if it should be allowed, it would discourage prosecutors: but notwithstanding the plaintiff had his judgment.

Resp. These words do not design what estate, but who shall have the remedy.

Authorities in the point, Hill. 13 Jac. C. B. Rot. 868, Brown versus Hagger, cited in Price and Vaughan's case. If tenant by elegit make a lease to try a title, it is good, although he hath an incertain interest, 1657, B. R. Harrison's case, the case of a tenant-right.

Thursby for the defendant. It cannot be a chattel-interest because incertain. Lit. sect. 380, Bracton, Britton, &c. do not mention any such incertain interest. 37 H. 6, 26. Quas tenuit dum sola fuit, quamdiu se bene gesserit. 4 Co. 30. Durante viduitate. Bro. Leases 67. Pet. Bro. sect. 462, & 463, ibid. & 468. But it doth not appear that livery was made. 14 H. 8, 10, & 14. 8 Co. 96, Cordel's case, it cannot be raised by grant. 1 Inst. 42, and the reason is because suppose the land will not answer the debt, then it shall be a perpetual chattel, yet 258, Green versus Edwards, at some times it may be created, 1. By Parliament, as tenancy by elegit. 2. Things in a grant may be so, as a rent. 11 Ass. pl. 8. Common 17 Ass. pl. 7. In the case of the King. 8 H. 4, 17. Quamdiu in propriis [137] manibus, because no other ceremony is requisite, but here it is in the case of land. 3. In case of a will it may be so granted. Cro. Eliz. 315. Cordel's case, 3 H. 7, 13. 4 Co. 82. 4. In a feoffment upon condition to hold till the feoffee be satisfied, &c. Litt. sect. 327. 44 Ass. pl. 3. Plowd. 524. Fitzh. Barr 280, & Done 210, but this is only as a pledge, and not an estate. In case of a replevin, a condition may be so. 1 Inst. 146. Fortior est obligatio hominis quam legis. It is not an estate for years, nor a freehold. Not a freehold, 1. Because it commences in futuro. 2. It is without livery, and therefore it is only an estate at will, and it is not found that it is not determined. Tenant at will cannot make a lease to try his title against his lessor, Blundel and Baugh's case; and here the defendant enters by command of the lessor.

Twisden Justice. The case cited of Brown and Hagger is material.

Wyndham Justice. The lessor hath only an estate at will.

Kelyng Justice. The case of Littleton cannot be maintained by reason, but only by the authority of the author, and it was adjourned. Vid. postea.

MARKE versus JOHNSON.

Office. 1 Keb. 898, 919.

In an ejectment. On not guilty pleaded, the jury found a special verdict, which was in effect, that a lease is made by the King for years, provided that upon non-payment of the rent the lease shall be void. And the question was, if the rent is arrear, the King may grant this term de novo, without finding by office that the rent was unpaid at the day.

Kelyng Justice. The statute of 21 Jac. cap. 25 makes an alteration of the common law; for now a lease shall not be void, as before; but now an office ought to be found, that the rent is not paid, and here is no office found: but upon this special verdict there is a special conclusion, and therefore good enough. But it was adjourned.

THATCHER versus ULLOCKE.

Pleading. 1 Keb. 920.

In trespass quare clausum fregit. The defendant pleads, that H. 8 was seised in fee, and so the lands descended to the King that now is, and that he as servant, &c. The plaintiff replies, that H. 8 granted to the plaintiff, and doth [138] not traverse the dying seized of King Charles the First, and it might come to the King otherwise. Dyer 170.

Twisden Justice. A traverse needs not, and if it came to the King again, this ought to be shewn in the rejoinder; the last seisin shall be traversed, if it might be gained by disseisin. Adjourned.

THE KING versus WAGSTAFFE AND OTHERS.

Juror. Hard. 401. 1 Sid. 272. 1 Keb. 934, 938.—fo. 99. See before Leeche's case.

Wagstaffe and others, citizens of London, being sworn upon a petty jury at the sessions at the Old-Baily, to try Gosse and divers others, indicted upon the late Statute of Conformity, refused to find the parties indicted guilty, contrary to their evidence, which in the opinion of the Judge was full and pregnant; and upon this the Court fined them 100 marks a-piece, and ordered them to be imprisoned till they paid the said fine. And now they bring a habeas corpus, and upon the return of this, all this whole matter appeared, and upon mature consideration they were remanded.

And by Justice Kelyng (who was in the same Court, and gave the rule at the same sessions for the same fine and imprisonment) it is clear that the law is so; yet see Hollinshead Chron. par. 1, lib. 2, cap. 4, fo. 155, and part 2, 1405, and 1126, Throckmorton's case, and Leeche's case before.

And by Twisden Justice. The Judge is intrusted with the liberties of the people, and his saying is the law, and a man could not have a bill of exceptions at the common law, till Westm. 2. And now this doth not lie in matters of the Crown. And so it was adjudged, that the return was sufficient, and the prisoners were remanded.

[139] TERM. MICH. 17 CAR. 2, B. R.

This term was adjourned to Oxford by reason of the plague in London; and in this term no special verdict was argued, nor judgment given upon any demurrer, or special verdict by order and proclamation. And only two returns of the term kept, that is to say, octabis & Martini. And this term Justice Kelyng, who was Puisne Judge, was made now Lord Chief Justice, and Sir William Moreton Knight, the King's Puisne Serjeant, was made a Judge in the place of Justice Kelyng.

[140] TERM. PASCH. 1653, C. B.

Intr. Hill. 1651. Rot. 1732.

THOMAS CORBET PLAINTIFF, FRANCIS STONE DEFENDANT.

Hartford. Remainder.

In ejectione firmæ. The plaintiff declares upon a demise of Robert Slingsby Esquire, of one messuage, 200 acres of land, 60 acres of pasture, 40 acres of meadow, 20 acres of wood in Barkeway, dated the 11th of August 1651. Habendum for seven years from the 10th of August aforesaid. The defendant pleads not guilty. And the jury at the Bar gave a special verdict.

As to the house and 60 acres of land, &c. That Frances Duchess of Richmond was seised thereof in fee, and being so seised, June 1632, 8 Car. 1, by indenture made between her of the one part, and John Lord Powlet, Sir Edward Gourdon, Sir Edward Hungerford, and Sir Richard Young, of the other part, in consideration that Henry Prannel, her late husband, did out of his affection convey (amongst others) the lands in question to her and her heirs, and that she had no issue of her own to inherit, she by way of loving contribution thought fit to convey the same to his next heirs, and for execution thereof did demise the same to the said John Lord Pawlet and the rest; to have and to hold to them from thenceforth for 40 years, if she lived so long, in trust that she might receive the profits during her life; and after her decease, then the one moiety thereof shall be, remain and come unto Mary Clark, wife of John Clark, Esquire, eldest sister of the said Henry Prannel, and the other moiety unto Joan Brook widow, some time the wife of Robert Brook Esquire deceased, and to their executors, administrators and assigns severally and respectively, for and during the term of 1000 years from the death of the said Frances.

Trin. 10 Car. 1, after a certain fine was levied with proclamations, &c. by the said John Clark and Mary his wife, and find it in hæc verba.

[141] And it is of the moiety of the manor of Newsils, &c. and other lands.

That afterwards the 21st of February 1634. By indenture between the said Joan Brook of the one part, and Frances Brook and Katharine Brook of the other part, the said Joan Brook did thereby recite the said indenture made by the said duchess and the grounds thereof; and did grant unto the said Francis Brook and Katharine Brook her two daughters the said term and interest of 1000 years in the said moiety.

That the 3d of June 1637. The said duchess and Henry Brook did seal and deliver an indenture made between her and one Denzil Hollis, and Dorothy his wife, and the said Henry Brook of the one part, and Sir Richard Young and Edward Savage of the other part, whereby in consideration of her near alliance to the noble and princely family of the Howards, and the support of the high titles and dignities that may come and descend to Thomas Howard, grandchild and heir apparent of the then Earl of Arundel, she covenants with Sir Richard Young and Savage, that she will before St. Andrew's Day next levy a fine of all those manors of Newsils, and of all other her lands in the county of Hartford, to the use of her self for life, afterwards to Thomas Howard aforesaid for life, remainder to his first son, &c. in tail male, &c. with divers remainders over.

Trin. 13 Car. 1. The fine was levied, &c.

That the duchess at the making of the deed, 21 Feb. 1634, and at the fine levied continued possession.

And that Sir Richard Young in the first deed, and Sir Richard Young in the fine, is the same person.

Ult. Octobris 1639. The duchess died.

3 Nov. 1639. The said Thomas Howard the younger, now Earl of Arundel, entered, claiming by the same fine and indenture.

That after the said fine levied and before the ejectment lease, the interest of the said Mary Clark, and of the said Frances Brook and Katharine Brook, to the lands in question, came to the lessor, Robert Slingsby.

Afterwards and before the ejectment lease the said Joan Brook died intestate.

Afterwards, &c. 50 Junii 1651, administration was committed to the said Robert Slingsby, who afterwards upon the possession of the said earl did enter and was possessed prout, &c. who the said 11th of August 1651, made the lease to the plaintiff prout in the declaration, who was possessed until the defendant Stone did by command of the said now Earl of [142] Arundel enter upon him, and actually eject him. And if for the plaintiff, for the plaintiff; and if for the defendant, for the defendant.

Glyn Serjeant. I pray judgment for the plaintiff.

The points are, 1. Whether the estate limited to 1. Mary Clark, 2. Joan Brook, be good, and what kind of estate?

2. Whether the fine levied by Mary Clark, and her husband, 10 Car. 1, do operate any thing upon her interest?

3. Whether the fine levied by the duchess doth turn the estate of the sisters to a right, so that they can any way be barred thereby by that fine and non-claim?

4. Whether a good title be found by the jury for the lessor Mr. Slingsby?

1. Point. I conceive the limitation to Mary Clark and Joan Brook is a good remainder for 1000 years.

Every deed shall be taken most strictly against him that makes it. And if it cannot take effect as the parties express: yet it shall take effect as it may, rather than the deed shall be void. Bredon's case, 1 Co. 76. If tenant for life, the remainder in tail, the remainder over, tenant for life and he in the first remainder levy a fine sur conusance &c. to another in fee, who renders a rent-charge to the tenant for life; resolved this is no forfeiture or discontinuance; ut res magis valeat quam pereat. And the law construes this, the grant of the remainder man first, and after the grant of tenant for life. 38 H. 8, Bro. Fine 118 there cited. If tenant in tail, and A. levy a fine to a stranger, who grants and renders to A. for years, rendering rent, and by the same fine grants the reversion to tenant in tail and his heirs, this is good. And although all be by one fine in an instant, yet in judgment of law the lease precedes the grant of the reversion, ut res magis valeat.

30 Ass. pl. 47. If tenant for life, and he in reversion in fee make a feoffment by parol, it shall be the surrender of tenant for life, and the feoffment of the reversioner. But if by deed, otherwise. Vid. 6 Co. 14, 15. Treport's case applied.

In this case it appears, that the intention of the duchess was to give an estate for 1000 years, and the words are, And after her decease, then the one moiety shall be, remain and come, &c. And the scope of the deed was that she would advance her nieces, being the sisters of Prannel her former husband.

1. Object. That no estate passed because it is by indenture, and the sisters not parties, and so they cannot take. Hob. 313. Winsmore's case, 314, Greenwood.

[143] Resp. The difference will be between a present estate and an estate in remainder. It's true, he that is not party to the indenture, cannot thereby take a present estate, but may take by way of remainder. Lit. sect. 374 proves this, where he puts the case, If a man by indenture grant an estate to H. for life, the remainder to another in fee, upon condition, this is a good remainder, and he shall be bound to perform the condition though he was no party. 1 Inst. 131. Coke on this section takes this very difference that I have taken. And Hob. 313, 314, are judgments in the very point, with that difference. Greenwood's case was, Lord Sturton seised in fee, by indenture demised to Thomas Hobart, habend. to the said Thomas Hobart and Michael Hobart, and to one John Hobart and Henry Hobart, the sons of Thomas, for term of their lives, and the life of the longer liver of them successivè. Resolved by the Court upon great debate, that none could take immediately, but Thomas Hobart, because he is only party to the deed, and the rest not named but by the habendum, then they cannot take but by way of remainder; yet in this case they could not so, because of the incertainty who should take first, according to the book of 20 Eliz. Dyer, the words being omitted prout nominatur in charta, and the same difference agreed in Greenwood's case, fol. 314.

2. Object. That the sisters were not named in the premisses.

Resp. That is not material; and in truth when a remainder is limited it is most proper to come in the habend. and it cannot be otherwise; and the cases before cited grant the estates in the habend. The common conveyances of England prove it; a lease for life to A. remainder to the right heirs of J. S. 2 Co. 81, Bredon's case, &c. Plow. 160 a. Tracy and Nicholson's case 93. An estate may be granted in the habend. to whom none is in the premisses. So I conclude this point that Mary Clark and Joan Brook have a good remainder for 1000 years.

1. Because the grant shall be expounded best for the grantees.
2. Because of the intention.
3. It hath a present estate to support it.

Now the next question upon this point will be, what kind of remainder this is, viz. whether a remainder vesting presently or a contingent?

It is a contingent remainder. For the lease made by the duchess to the Lord Pawlet, &c. is for forty years, if she [144] live so long; and after her death, to come, remain and be as to one moiety to, &c. so the remainder is not after the end of the term, but after the death of the duchess, which may be within the forty years, or after the forty years; so that its doubtful whether the remainder will vest eo instanti that the precedent particular estate shall end or not.

In which case by the rule of our books the remainder is contingent. 3 Co. 20, in Boraston's case. If one grant to J. S. for life, remainder to the right heirs of J. D. this is a contingent remainder, viz. its a good remainder if J. D. dies in the life of J. S. but otherwise if J. S. dies before this vest.

10 Co. 17, Lampet's case. A termor devises his term to A. for life, remainder to B. It is there agreed that this is a contingent possibility. Upon the same reason, if A. shall live after the term, the remainder shall never vest; but if during the term he dies, it shall vest.

In Plowd. the case put in Colthurst's case, a lease is made to A. for life, the remainder to R. for life; if B. dies before A. the remainder to C. for life, this is a good remainder upon a contingency, viz. if B. dies before A.

So in our case the lease is made to the Lord Pawlet and others for forty years, if the duchess live so long, and after her death the remainder to Mary Clark and Joan Brook for 1000 years; this is a contingent remainder; for the particular estate on which it depends is the estate for forty years, which may or not determine before her death; if it determine before, then the remainder, as a remainder, is gone.

Object. My brother Bernard would seem to object that this remainder should not be good because of that manner of limitation; for it is not to begin after the forty years, but after the death; and so the life of the duchess interposed, and compares it to the case put in Colthurst's case, Plowd. 25. If the estate be limited to A. for life, and after the death of A. and one day after, to remain to D. for life, that is a void remainder, which is law.

Resp. But the reason is because there is no probability for the remainder to vest when the particular estate ends, which is a necessary incident to every remainder: but there is a possibility in our case, for if the duchess die within the forty years, then the particular estate ends when the remainder commenceth. This is expresly agreed in 3 Co. 20, Boraston's case. If a lease be made to A. for twenty years, if B. shall so long live, and after the death of B. a remainder over in fee, this remainder is void, because if the remainder shall [145] be good, then shall the fee-simple be in abeiance, which the law will not suffer. But if the remainder had been for years it had been good, for that may be in abeiance; and so he concluded the first point.

2. Point. Now the estate being thus settled (viz.) a remainder for 1000 years to Mary Clark after the death of the duchess, the jury find that afterwards Trin. 10 Car. a certain fine with proclamations thereof made according to the form of the statute by the said John Clark, and the said Mary Clark his wife, in C. B. the tenor whereof followeth, and recites in hæc verba, &c. whereby it appears, that Thomas Roper, Esq; and Robert Pickring were plaintiffs, John Clark and Mary his wife deforciants. The fine was of the moiety of the manor of Newsils Rookey, Walter Andros and Berwick, eight messuages, four cottages, and three tofts, and divers numbers of acres in Barkway, Barley and Royston; so the point is whether Mary Clark by this fine hath passed away her interest, or extinguished it in the lands in question: and he held she had not.

1. Because it is not found that the fine was levied of the lands in question, and if it be not found, being matter of fact, the Court will not presume it.

Object. That it appears that the fine is levied of lands of the same name, and in the same place, as are mentioned in the indenture of June 1632.

Resp. If it were so, unless the jury find it to be the same lands, the Court cannot presume it; for it may be of lands of the same name and in the same place, and yet not the same lands; and the presumption is against it; for if it had been the same, the jury would have found it so: and it were dangerous for the Court to supply it by intendment, for thereby they might subject the jury to an attaint.

2. But in truth it doth not appear the fine was levied of lands in the same place or name, as in the indenture of June 1632.

For the lands given Mary Clark by the indenture are the moiety of the manor of Newsils, &c. situate in the parishes of Barley, Read and Royston in the counties of Hartford and Cambridge, or one of them; and the fine is of lands in the county of Hartford, and so non constat whether the same.

[146] 2. Admit the fine were of the same lands; yet I conceive the estate of Mary Clark is neither given away or extinguished.

The case for that is,

The Lord Pawlet is lessee for forty years, if the duchess live so long; this is in trust that the duchess might receive the profits, the remainder after the death of the duchess to Mary Clark for 1000 years. The duchess being in possession, Mary Clark levies a fine to a stranger sur conusance de droit come ceo, &c.

1. Nothing passeth from Mary Clark; for Mary during the life of the duchess, hath not any interest in her to grant; for the remainder being contingent is not grantable over, 10 Co. 47, Lampet's case, resolved, devise of a term to A. for life, and after his death to B. this being but a possibility is not grantable during the life of A. and yet this is an executory devise, which is much favoured, 4 Co. 66 b, in Fulwood's case accordingly, and 8 Co. Mathew Manning's case. One devises a term to baron and feme for one and twenty years, remainder to the survivor of them; neither baron nor feme during their joint lives may grant this over; so that with some clearness he held that the fine doth not give the estate of Mary Clark, because it is not grantable.

2. This contingent remainder is not by the fine either released or extinguished, 10 Co. 48, in Lampet's case, it is said, that a right or title to a freehold or inheritance, whether it be present or future, may be released in five manners. 1. To the tenant of the freehold in deed or in law without privity. 2. To the tenant in remainder. 3. To him in reversion without any privity; but an estate cannot be enlarged so. 4. To him that hath a right only in respect of privity, as if a tenant be disseised, and the lord release the services to the disseisee. 5. In respect of privity without right. But in our case the conusees of the fine levied by Mary Clark have not any of these qualities, for they have neither estate in the land in question, nor privity, or right, &c. therefore the fine cannot operate by way of release.

3. By way of extinguishment or estoppel it cannot be; for the right in remainder is not in the conusor; and it is not an estoppel to any but those who claim under the conusees of the fine; for an estranger shall not take advantage of it, because it is not reciprocal. Vid. 2 Co. Buckler's case.

[147] 3. Point. If the fine levied by the duchess to Sir Richard Young puts the remainder to a right, so that for default of entry within five years, this is a bar, or the remainder is destroyed. I hold that the fine doth not touch either the estate for forty years, nor the remainder for 1000 years.

As to that, the case is, the Lord Pawlet and Sir Richard Young are lessees for forty years, if the duchess live so long, the remainder over to the sisters. Now the clause in the indenture is, that the duchess shall take the profits, and the continuance in possession makes her lessee at will to the Lord Pawlet and Sir Richard Young.

Now that she is tenant at will, vid. 1 Inst. 171 a. If H. enter into lands by the consent of the owner, he is tenant at will, Littl. 108. H. makes a feoffment in fee upon condition to perform his will, and the feoffor enters, Littleton's opinion is, that he is tenant at will; Coke is of that opinion, and so upon debate it was resolved, Hill. 11 Car. 1, B. R. betwixt Wilkinson and Meriam, Cro. Car. 323. In case of a mortgage the perception of the profits doth make the mortgagor become tenant at will to the mortgagee, and there adjudged that the mortgagee might devise the lands, Cro. Jac. Powseley and Blackman; so that the duchess here hath a rightful possession, and a fee-simple in the reversion. And then I conceive the fine doth not stir any of the estates for years, for these reasons.

1. Because it is a fine which works by way of grant, and if there be an estate large enough in the grantor to satisfy the grant, the law will never expound it a tort, if it may be otherwise. Now the duchess by fine grants a fee-simple, and she hath a fee-simple to grant, and therefore no wrong: upon this reason it is in 1 Co. 76, Bredon's case, tenant for life, remainder in tail, tenant for life and he in the first remainder levy a fine to a stranger; adjudged there that it is not any forfeiture of the estate for life, neither any discontinuance of the remainder, because it is by fine; yet in this case, if it had been by feoffment without deed, it is there agreed to be a forfeiture and discontinuance. But any estate by fine that operates by way of grant, the law to avoid wrong expounds it so, that every one grants that that he may lawfully grant, 10 Co. 98, Sir Edward Seymour's case. Upon the same reason, if tenant in tail bargain and sell in fee, and then levies a [148] fine, this fine shall work no discontinuance or wrong. But the law to avoid a tort doth expound it to operate upon the base fee that was formerly granted, which wrought no discontinuance, as it is there adjudged; and yet if the fine had been levied before the bargain and sale, there it had been a discontinuance; for then the law had had no means to expound it otherwise.

2. Reason. Because the duchess being tenant at will continues the possession, as well at the time of the fine levied, as after, even to her death; and the possession of the tenant at will is the possession of him in remainder, and this preserves the estate without any wrong done to it, or turning it to a right. 1 Inst. 270. The possession of the particular tenant is the possession of the lessor, and the possession of the remainders. The possession of a guardian in chivalry or a guardian in socage is the possession of him in reversion. 29 Assises pl. 161. 20 Assises pl. 9. 22 E. 4, 14 a. &c. And the possession of a tenant at will doth much more intitle him in reversion to the possession than any other. For if tenant at will commit any voluntary waste and dies, and his heir enters, in such case the lessor may have an action of trespass vi & armis, &c. without any entry. Litt. sect. 82. 5 Co. 13. 10 E. 4, 18. 21 H. 7, 12. But in case of tenant at sufferance the lessor cannot have trespass without entry. Hence follows that the possession of the duchess is the possession of the lessor, so long as the will continues. The levying of the fine by the duchess is no determination of the will, for she continues her possession still; and the levying of the fine by her is a lawful act, and a lawful act shall never determine the will. 1 Inst. 85. A lease at will reserving the trees, &c. If the will be determined yet her continuance in possession makes her tenant at sufference, which still continues the possession of the lessor. And the fine being a lawful act doth not turn the estate to a right. 9 Co. 104, Podger's case. 10 Co. 96, Seymour's case.

The 3d, and main reason. Because the fine is levied to Sir Richard Young, who is one of the lessees for years, and by the statute of 27 H. 8, cap. 10, the estate of Sir Richard Young is expresly saved, as appears by 7 Co. Lillingston's case. If there be lessee for years to the use of another, and the lessor infeoff the lessee for years to uses, the term for years is saved by the proviso of the statute. So if the [149] lord infeoff a copyholder to the use of another, the copyholder's estate is preserved. Then if the estate of Sir Richard Young by express proviso of the statute of 27 H. 8 is saved, and no wrong done to it, it follows that the remainder is not touched.

The conclusion. If by the fine no wrong is done, and the estate for years not turned to a right, then no bar can be, and no claim is necessary; and this is resolved 5 Co. 124, Sander's case, cited to be adjudged in Saffine's case. If a man hath a future interest, and the lessor is disseised, and the disseisor levies a fine, the future interest is not touched, and because it is not turned to a right he is not bound to make claim. And the case put out of Plowd. 373, Stowel's case. If H. levy a fine in which another hath title of common, and five years pass, the commoner is not barred, because the fine doth not do any wrong to it.

3 Co. 77, Farmor's case, agreed that a fine and non-claim doth not bind the estate, but the right; and therefore when the fine doth not turn the estate to a right there needs no claim. 9 Co. 105, Margaret Podger's case.

2d Resolution. That no fine bars any estate in possession, reversion or remainder, which is not devested and put to a right; and there it is also said, that he that at the time hath not any title of entry shall not be barred, so the possession continuing in the lessees, and not being turned to a right, there it is not touched nor barred by the fine.

4th Reason. Because the remainder limited to Mary Clark and Joan Brook is contingent, so that at the time of the fine levied it is not vested in them, but in the custody of the law, in which case a fine levied by a stranger doth not bar it, 9 Co. Podger's case, it is said when the estate is so settled, that he who claims the interest of it, cannot by any possibility enter and make his claim, he shall not be barred by the statute; for it is not reason that he shall be barred by non-claim who is not guilty of any laches; and therefore H. who had a future interest at the time of the fine levied shall not be barred. So in the case of feoffee upon condition, if he levy a fine, and five years pass, and then the condition is broken, he is not barred. And now in our case at the time of the fine levied the sisters could not enter, for their estate was not in them, and therefore not touched, Hill. 29 Eliz. Rot. 8240, C. B. Grant's case. John Grant seised of lands [150] in fee, held in socage, devises them to his nephew John Grant when he comes to his age of twenty-five years, to hold to him and the heirs of his body; John Grant the nephew, after his age of twenty-one levies a fine of 'em to a stranger, and having issue after attains to his age of twenty-five years, and dies.

Three points were adjudged.

1. That the gift and devise to John Grant the nephew, was in contingency and futuro at the time of the fine levied.

2. That the estate-tail in contingency was not barred by the statute of 4 H. 7.

3. That this estate in contingency was barred by the stat. of 32 H. 8, cap. 26. And this by force of the words of that statute, All fines levied by proclamation, &c. of any mannors, lands, &c. before the time of the said fine levied, in any wise intailed to the person so levying the fine, or to any of his ancestors: and this is a resolution for us, and our case is more strong; for in our case the fine is levied by a stranger, but in Grant's case by the party himself, and yet not touched by the statute of 4 H. 7. And our case clearly is not within the statute of 32 H. 8, for that there is no intail per que, &c. And admit the particular estate of 40 years should be turned to a right, and displaced, this right supports the remainder. 1 Co. Archer's case, Co. Chudleigh's case.

Object. The last thing objected was to the verdict, which found, that the interest of Mary Clark, Katharine Brook and Francis Brook came to the lessor, and doth not find how.

Resp. It is good enough; for when the jury finds the interest to come to the lessor, the Court intends all circumstances which conduce to that fact; for the Court does not doubt when the jury doubts not. 4 Co. Fullwood's case 65. The jury found that Thomas Castle came before the Recorder of London, and mayor of the staple, and acknowledged himself to owe to Thomas Rivet 200l. Exception was taken, that there was no finding of any statute there, for it was not found that this was secund' formam statuti, and that it was by writing.

Resp. It is good enough, for all circumstances shall be intended.

The Court did object and doubt that the remainder limited by the two sisters was void, because, 1. That it could not pass to them by way of present estate, because they were not parties to the indenture. 2. It could not be a [151] contingent remainder, being a remainder for years depending on an estate for years; and there cannot be a contingent estate for years; because a lease for years operates by way of contract, and therefore the particular estate and the remainder estate operate as two distinct estates grounded upon several contracts; but it is true, such a remainder may be of a freehold, as upon an estate for life, the remainder to the right heirs of J. S. and then in law the particular estate, and the remainder, is but as one estate in law, and is created by the livery.

2. The Court objected, that the sisters were barred by the fine and non-claim: for admit it to be by way of contingent remainder, when the remainder vests the sisters are bound within five years after to enter; as in case where tenant in tail, remainder in tail doth levy a fine, and tenant in tail dies without issue, he in remainder is bound to enter within five years after the death of the tenant in tail, else he is barred. Judgment for the plaintiff.

[152] TERM. PASCH. 18 CAR. 2, B. R.

Mandamus. 1 Lev. 162. 1 Keb. 868, 880. 2 Keb. 1. Privilege.

Mills had a mandamus to restore him to the place of one of the approved men of Guilford; and upon the return appeared just cause of restitution, and upon that the parties submitted by rule of this Court to Onslow and Weston, who made an award that Mills should be restored, and the approved men refused to restore him. And upon this Serjeant Wild moved for an attachment against the approved men. But by the Court an attachment doth not lie against a corporation: but if it be granted nisi, and the corporation will not restore him, the Court will grant a restitution.

Dixon had a debt due to him from Killegrew, a grand officer of the King's household, and for that he could arrest him, he took process and outlawed him, and Killegrew hearing of it, caused the plaintiff to be imprisoned, and Dixon obtained an habeas corpus of the Chief Justice in the vacation, and an alias & pluries, and upon speech with the King, the Chief Justice informed him in this manner (as the Chief Justice reported in open Court), (viz.) That his servants are free of arrests, and therefore he should not be deprived of them without his leave; but this privilege is for the advantage of the King, but not for his servants, and therefore they may be sued, so as he be not deprived of them, and so may be outlawed. But notwithstanding this resolution, Dixon was arrested again and imprisoned; and now Kelyng moved for a plur. habeas corpus, and the Court granted a habeas corpus but not a pluries, because none was granted before in open Court.

[153] ——— versus HARVEY EXECUTRIX OF SIR JOB HARVEY.

Survivor.

In debt. The defendant pleaded a joint judgment against the testator, and Erasmus Harvey who is now alive, and that he had not assets beyond the said judgment to satisfy. The plaintiff demurs; and adjudged for the plaintiff, because the lien survives, and the executrix not liable. Vide antea 26, Edsar and Smart.

Mandamus.

A mandamus was granted to restore the Recorder of Barnstable, directed to the mayor of the corporation; and he returned quod non constat nobis, that he was ever elected; and the return adjudged insufficient, and restitution awarded.

BRETTON versus PRETTIMAN.

Assumpsit. 1 Danv. Abr. 45, p. 24. 1 Sid. 283. 2 Keb. 26, 44.

In assumpsit. The plaintiff declares, that the defendant promised, that in consideration that the plaintiff would take an oath that money is due to him, he would pay him; and the plaintiff avers, that he swore before a Master in Chancery. The defendant demurs; and adjudged for the plaintiff, because it shall be intended an affirmation upon solemn protestation, and not such an oath for which he may be indicted, Cro. Eliz. 470, Knight versus Rushworth, Mich. 1658, Perkins versus Binck. In consideration the plaintiff would come before a Master in Chancery and swear, he will pay; and adjudged for the plaintiff; and here the subject matter expounds the thing. Vide Mod. Rep. 166, Amy versus Andrews.

A week before this term Sir Robert Bernard, Serjeant at Law, died, who was a baronet, and of the county of Huntington.

[154] TERM. TRIN. 18 CAR. 2, B. R.

This term was very defective in business, and therefore I did not attend above two or three days, in which no case remarkable occurred; except the case following.

Courts.

Presentment was in a leet in Westminster against divers persons for using several trades, having not served as apprentices for seven years, according to the statute of the 5th of Eliz. and upon this presentment Benet chief bailiff of this liberty would have levied 40s. a month upon them, and they removed the presentments by certiorari; and it was now debated if the leet had conusance of such things by the last clause of 31 Eliz. cap. 5, and it seems not, because the offences there mentioned, and the Courts, shall be expounded, reddendo singula singulis.

THE KING against THE EARL OF DORSET, IN CHANCERY.

Scire facias. Postea 177.

Upon a scire facias against Richard Earl of Dorset, and others, members of Sackvile College in East Greenstead in Sussex, to shew cause why the letters patent, which incorporated and constituted the said hospital, should not be repealed as they concerned Edward Earl of Dorset, and the heirs males of Robert Earl of Dorset who was the founder of the said hospital, and cancelled, and the inrolment of them vacated. The scire facias recites the will of Robert, and that he devised to his executors, by which it was provided, that his executors should found and endow the said hospital, and make by-laws, and that the heirs of Robert should have the patronage and visitation of the hospital; and the King by letters patent intending to incorporate the said hospital according to the said will, and that the charitable cure might be performed according to the intent of the founder, constituted the corporation, and granted licence to purchase the endowment intended. And he farther granted, that Edward Earl of Dorset, who was heir [155] male of the founder, should have the patronage and visitation. The scire facias recites, that the Lady Thanet, and the Lady Compton are heirs of the founder, and that Edward Earl of Dorset had taken upon him the patronage and visitation of the hospital, to the disinherison of the said ladies; and upon this scire fac. the Earl of Dorset demurs in law.

Finch Solicitor General, for the Earl of Dorset; and he said that this scire fac. is rather process in the name of the King, than the process of the King himself; and such process doth not consist with the interest of the Crown; and reduced his argument into five heads. 1. This scire fac. need not to be brought in the name of the King. 2. This scire fac. doth not lie at the suit of a subject. 3. A scire fac. doth not lie to repeal part of a patent. 4. This patent is good in toto. 5. Admit it is not good in toto, yet it is not fit to repeal this patent at this time.

As to the first. Because the conclusion of the writ is ad damnum of a particular subject, and the King cannot have a scire fac. but where the thing is in deceptionem Regis, or ad gravamen populi. 10 Co. Magdalen College's case. The King is called sponsus Regni, and the writ of ad quod dammum is, ita quod patria non gravaretur; but if the writ be not brought against a publick injury, the King cannot make a private quarrel himself; and no scire facias lies to repeal a patent but in two cases. 1. A scire fac. to repeal a prior patent is always at the suit of a subject, 2 E. 3, 7 b. Hill. 16 E. 3, Fitz. Grant. 53, the case of The Burgesses of Wells, 17 E. 3, Dyer 269 a. pl. 18. Lands held of the Bishop of Winton were conveyed to the King by covin to make the bishop lose his seigniory, and the King sede vacante granted them to the brothers Carmelites; and this grant was repealed by scire fac. Mich. 21 E. 3, 47 a. pl. 68, and in The Prince's case, 8 Co. the King brought the scire fac. But the King there had an interest, and the prince could not have those lands without the King by seisure. 2. Here it doth not appear to the Court that the ladies ever petitioned to the King to have any such writ of scire fac. Pasch. 27 Eliz. Sir Henry Nevil in Chancery brought a scire fac. to repeal a patent, and the writ was unde nobis supplicavit.

Object. The King may maintain this scire fac. because it is in deceptionem dom. Regis.

[156] Resp. Admit that it is, yet no deceipt will be sufficient ground for any such writ, if it be not to his damage, or to the damage of his people.

2. The King here is not deceived, because he recites the will, and yet goes contrary to it, which is according to his prerogative; and there is a difference where the King takes notice of the estate of the testator, and where he hath not notice, but only by the suggestion of the party.

To the second point. Such scire facias doth not lie at the suit of a subject, for two reasons. 1. Because although the King may bring a scire facias in Chancery to repeal a patent; yet when a subject repeals a patent of another, not upon privity but grievance, there it ought to be repealed in Parliament. Hill. 16 E. 3, Fitzh. Brief. 651. Mich. 21 E. 3, 46 b. pl. 65. It ought to be grounded on matter of record, and not upon suggestion of matter of fact only. If the King grants two patents of the same thing, the second patentee cannot have a scire facias against the first. Mich. 7 E. 4, 22 b. by Catesby. Dyer 176, 277 a. pl. 54. Where the title of a subject appears upon record, there he may have a scire facias, otherwise not. 11 H. 4, 67. Fitzh. Scire Fac. 70. 12 R. 2, Fitzh. Forfeiture 20. 41 Assise, pl. 25. Fitzh. Scire Fac. 133. Pasch. 49 E. 3, 11. Fitz. Traverse 19.

To the third point. A scire facias doth not lie to repeal part of a patent. Letters patent may be void in part, and good in part, but they cannot be repealed in part; 1. Because the record of the patent is intire. 2. The form of the entry of the judgment in a scire facias to repeal a patent, is quod literæ patentes vacentur, and not part of them. Dyer 197. In the prince's case they are repealed quoad maneria, &c. but it doth not appear there were other lands. And there is a difference between a scire facias and a quo warranto, for a quo warranto may be good for part, and ill for another part, because the record is not to be touched by it; but upon a scire facias the record is to be cancelled. 5 R. 2, Rot. Parliamenti 89, the case of Laystoffe. Reversal of records in part, Cro. Jac. 303, King versus Marlborough, and Croker in ejectment against an infant and others, reversed against all. Hill. 1653, B. R. Symonds versus Bockle.

[157] Object. English's case. Where a fine is reversed quoad an infant, and good for the other, and F. N. B. 98 b. Fine of lands in ancient demesne, and at common law, reversed as to the lands in ancient demesne, and stood as to the others.

Resp. Upon the Book of Entries appears a rational difference; for if a fine be reversed, generally the writ issues to the custos brevium to cancel the fine. Coke's Entries 252, Gage's case. Rastal's Entries 278 a. But when there is a reversal as to part, there is no such writ. Coke's Entries 257 b, Peirs and Parmiter's case. So a fine may be reversed in part, but not cancelled in part; and as to the case of ancient demesne the fine may be reversed by writ of deceipt; but the judgment is only quod dominus rehabeat Curiam suam. Rastal's Entries 100 b. 7 H. 4, 44, Countess of Kent's case. In case of an obligation for performance of covenants, the obligation may be good for part, and not good for the other part; but the obligation cannot be cancelled for part, and stand good for another part; and here the judgment ought to be quod literæ patentes concellentur. There are precedents in point, Pasch. 27 Eliz. Privit versus Ward. In a scire facias to reverse a patent for a walk in Cranburn chase; the judgment ought to be given in B. R. when the record is brought there to try the issue, but judgment was not given, 28 Eliz. The Countess of Bath brought a scire facias to repeal a patent for a market; vide such a scire facias, Mich. 11 H. 4, 5, pl. 13.

Object. Then all the patent is to be repealed if any part be defective.

Resp. It cannot be repealed upon this writ. 2. Then the whole corporation is dissolved, and all the revenue returns to the defendant.

To the fourth point. This patent is good in the whole, because although the King takes notice of the will of Robert, yet he is not tied to pursue those rules in the erection of the college prescribed in the said will, because a corporation is a creature of the King. 11 H. 7, 27 b. and 28. 21 E. 4, 7 a. by Choke, 2. Ab inconvenienti, if any variance will destroy corporations, Sutton's hospital and the school of Sevenock in Kent, and many others would be destroyed. 3. I will go over the desire of this writ of scire facias.

[158] To the fifth point. It is not fit to repeal this patent at this time, because the Court will not repeal the patent without calling the guardians and assistants of the hospital; and here they are not parties. Keilway 194, Sir John Savage's case.

Maynard Serjeant contra, and it was adjourned. See after 177.

JEMOT versus COOLEY. SEE BEFORE 135.

Estate. 3 Danv. Abr. 163, p. 4. 1 Sid. 223, 262, 344. 1 Lev. 170. 1 Saund. 112. 2 Vent. 193. 1 Keb. 784, 915. 1 Keb. 20, 184, 270, 295. 3 Keb. 6.

In ejectment of the demise of Sir Ralph Bovey. Upon not guilty the jury found a special verdict. Francis Drake seised in fee of the land in question, in consideration of 6000l. grants a rent-charge of 420l. per annum to Sir Ralph Bovey and his heirs, and in the deed of grant is this clause; And the said Drake doth covenant and grant to the said Sir Ralph Bovey, that if the rent be arrear above twenty days after any day of payment, that then the said Sir Ralph Bovey and his heirs, &c. may enter into the lands and receive the profits until he shall be satisfied of the arrears; the rent is behind, and Bovey enters and makes a lease to the plaintiff; and if Bovey hath such an interest as he may maintain an ejectment, was the question.

Morton Justice for the plaintiff. Here an inheritance passes, and not a chattel, and the rent is the principal, and the power to enter is a farther remedy, Littleton sect. 327, it is more than a penalty. For Cro. Jac. 511, Hare versus Havergil. This grant is in the nature of a common assurance, and therefore ought to be favoured; and it is of more antiquity than a common recovery. 19 E. 3, Fitz. Bar. 280. 13 R. 2, Fitz. Done 10. Authority in point, Hill. 13 Jac. C. B. Rot. 868. Brown versus Hagger, cited in Price and Vaughan's case; and Trin. 14 Car. 2, Rot. 2511, C. B.

Eger versus Malin. Ejectment upon a lease of the Lord Byron. Special verdict was found; Sir John Byron seised in fee, by indenture grants a rent-charge for life to commence after the death of the grantor; and if the rent be arrear, that the grantee may enter and take the profits without account till the rent and arrears shall be paid; the rent was arrear, and the grantee enters and makes a lease to the plaintiff.

[159] And by Bridgman Chief Justice, there is not more difference betwixt a grant and feoffment, than betwixt one egg and another; and the justices agreed for the plaintiff there, besides Brown Justice.

Wyndham Justice accordingly. Here the thing granted is only a power, and not the term it self, and it is as a distress; but this power produces a real effect, when the grantee hath entered he hath only a pernancy of the profits; for he cannot cut trees, or pull down houses, and if he doth, trespass lies against him, as against him who abuses a distress; this power goes to the heir, but the inheritance subsequent goes to the executors, and follows the arrears of rent.

Twisden Justice, and Kelyng Chief Justice accordingly; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[160] TERM. HILL. 18 & 19 CAR. 2, B. R.

RYMES versus BAKER.

Covenant. 2 Keb. 139.

In covenant. The plaintiff counts that he demised to the defendant certain land for thirteen years, to pay to him 40l. quarterly, and doth not say annuatim. The defendant pleads non est factum, and found for the plaintiff, and after plea pleaded, the plaintiff amended his declaration, and inserted the word annuatim.

And Powis moved for the defendant, that it should be examined.

But by Kelyng Chief Justice, and Wyndham Justice, the addition of annuatim is no more than what was implied before.

And by Twisden Justice. The defendant ought to have demanded oyer of the deed, and now he having pleaded non est factum he is not prejudiced by the amendment; and therefore let the amendment stand.

Presentment. 2 Keb. 130.

Ayres was presented at the leet for digging cony-boroughs, and breaking the soil in the waste.

Winnington moved to quash it, because it is not ad commune nocumentum. Cro. Jac. 156, Leicester Forest's case. 27 Ass. pl. 6.

Kelyng Chief Justice. A leet cannot amerce for things done to the damage of the lord; and the presentment was quashed.

[161] TERM. PASCH. 19 CAR. 2, B. R.

BILTON versus JOHNSON AND OTHERS.

False Imprisonment. 2 Keb. 173, 198.

Trespass and false imprisonment in London. The defendant pleads that J. S. sued forth a writ of latitat the last day of Trinity term, directed to the Sheriff of R. and by virtue of that the sheriff of the said county made a warrant to the defendant, and he upon that took the plaintiff, which is the same imprisonment, absq; hoc, that he is guilty in London, vel aliter vel alio modo. And the plaintiff replies, that the said writ was truly prosecuted after the imprisonment, (viz.) the 9th of August. And upon this the defendant demurs; and adjudged for the plaintiff, because although the teste of the writ is upon record, and the plaintiff cannot aver against it; yet here great inconveniencies will be, if the plaintiff cannot set forth the very time of the purchase of the writ, and the relation of the teste is only to prevent fraud, and not justify a tort; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Rescous. 1 Lev. 214.

The sheriff returns a rescous against Syms, and others; and the return is, that A. being in custody of my bailiffs, the defendant rescued him out of the custody of the bailiffs; and Stroud moved to quash it, because it ought to be out of the custody of the sheriff.

Twisden Justice. This hath been ruled both ways, for it is good, e custodia mea secundum veritatem legis, and good e custodia ballivi mei secundum veritatem facti; and if an action of the case be brought for the rescous, it ought to be, that he returned the prisoner being in custodia ballivi; but the other justices ruled that it ought to be ex custodia vicecomitis, and upon that the return was quashed.

[162] TERM. MICH. 19 CAR. 2, B. R.

KNIGHT versus BUCKLEY.

Debt. 2 Danv. Abr. 485, p. 9. 1 Lev. 215. 1 Sid. 338. 2 Keb. 260, 277.

Debt for rent by the assignee of a reversion. The defendant pleads, that before any rent arrear he had assigned to another. The plaintiff demurs; and adjudged for the plaintiff, by Kelyng and Wyndham, contrary to the opinion of Twisden; because the defendant doth not alledge that he gave notice to the reversioner of this assignment. Vide Cro. Eliz. 22, Serjeant and Gibson's case.

This term proclamation was made in Court for the county of Middlesex, for the rates and prices of hostlers, viz. hay for a night and day for one horse 9d. with litter; hay for one day 4d. For one horse without hay 2d. oats 8d. by the peck, and not more.

SNOW versus CUTLER. SEE BEFORE.

Devise. 2 Danv. Abr. 520, p. 16. Eq. Ab. 188, p. 10. 1 Lev. 135. 1 Sid. 153. 1 Keb. 567, 752, 800, 851. 2 Keb. 11, 145, 296.

In ejectment of the demise of Henry Chomeley of lands in Hackney. A special verdict found, that Sarah the wife seised in fee of a copyhold, surrenders to the use of her self, and Robert Jaques her husband, and the heirs of the husband; the husband after surrenders to the use of his will, and makes his will, and by this devises his land in these words; My lands in Hackney which were my wife's, and now her's for life, I give to the heirs of the body of my said wife, if that he or they live till fourteen years of age; and for want of such heirs, then to William Jacob and his heirs. 10 August, 1 Car. 1, Robert Jaques dies, Sarah survives and marries Henry Chomeley, by whom she had issue the lessor of the plaintiff. Henry Chomeley suffers a recovery, 20 Febr. 15 Car. 2. Sarah dies, and the lessor of the plaintiff enters and the heir of Robert Jaques, the devisor, enters upon him.

[163] The points were two, viz. 1. What passes by the will. 2. What operation the recovery hath.

Moreton Justice. 1st, If this devise of the remainder in fee be good to the heirs of the body of the wife, by way of executory devise. 2. If the recovery be a good bar to the executory devise.

As to the second point he did not meddle; but as to the first, he held it is a void devise. Conveyances at common law are good directions for wills. 1 Co. 85. Perkins 97. There ought to be a devisee, as well as a devisor in rerum natura and in esse at the time of the devise. 2 H. 7, 13. 9 H. 6, 23. Moor 637. To an infant in ventre sa mere. Dyer 303. Trin. 16 Car. 2, C. B. Woodley versus Nightingale. There was a good executory devise, but not better for being a surrender. Cro. Eliz. Clamp's case.

Object. It passes by way of reversion, and the inheritance descends in the mean time.

Resp. It cannot, because there is a remainder over. 9 H. 6. A use to a monk, the remainder to J. S. and his heirs, the remainder vests immediately, and cannot pass as an executory devise, because there ought to be such manifest intent, and not by averment. Shelton versus Bine, Pasch. 17 Car. 2. A devise of land to one after the death of J. S. is a present devise; and a devise to the first son of J. S. when he is born, is void without an estate of freehold precedent.

Wyndham Justice accords with Moreton Justice. The questions are:

1. If the devise to the heirs of J. S. (he being then alive) be good?
2. The feme here having an estate for life, if this alter the case?
3. If the recital here alter the case?
4. If the words (viz.) If he live to fourteen years, alter the case?

As to the 1st, It is a ground, that Judges ought to keep within bounds: and it is said, that if Matthew Manning's case had been to be adjudged now, it would have been otherwise determined. A devise to the heirs of J. S. he being alive, is a void devise. Power to make leases to one, two or three persons, he cannot make a lease for the life of the first son of J. S. because the person ought to be in esse, per Noy Attorney General.

As to the 2d, The estate for life of the wife doth not alter the case. 40 E. 3, 9, Beverly's case. A lease for the life of A. remainder to his right heirs, A. hath an estate in fee presently.

[164] To the 3d, The recital doth not alter the case, because in no case where there is a present devise there shall not be a contingent executory devise; Wild's case express in the point.

Object. Devise to an infant in ventre sa mere is good.

Resp. The greater opinion is, that such devise is void; yet an infant in ventre sa mere is in esse, and may be vouched; The Earl of Bedford's case.

To the 4th, It is a contingent upon a contingent.

Twisden Justice contra. It is a good devise to the heirs of Sarah; and he took a difference between acts executed, and devises, because a devise may be in futuro; as a devise to J. S. when he marries such a one, there no estate vests in him till marriage. 11 H. 7, 17. As to the devise to an infant in ventre sa mere, 11 H. 7, 13, it is frequent. Moor. 177. Dyer 342. This is a contingent pursuant to the course of nature.

To the 2d point of the recovery it works nothing, because copyhold and a recovery of a copyhold doth not dock the remainder without custom.

Kelyng Chief Justice agreed with Twisden, and so the Court was divided.

[165] TERM. HILL. 19 & 20 CAR. 2, B. R.

JOHN PEMBLE versus STERNE.

Intr. Hill. 16 & 17 Car. 2, Rot. 1521.

Estate. 2 Danv. Ab. 752, p. 5. 3 Danv. Abr. 244, p. 2. 1 Lev. 212. 1 Sid. 316, 416. 2 Keb. 213, 230, 325, 440, 460, 464, 484, 525.

On an ejectment a special verdict found, that the lands in question were parcel of the inheritance of the Archbishop of York, and usually and anciently demised by lease. For 12 Decemb. 1604, the Archbishop of York on surrender of a former lease demises this to Robert Nevil for 21 years under the old rent. Nevil surrenders this in the year 1630, to Harsnet Archbishop, ea intentione to preserve this land for the maintenance of his successor; the archbishop enters, and dies 1631, after whose death Neal was made archbishop, who died in 1641, and William was made archbishop, during all which time the land was in the hands of the archbishops. In 1642, an ordinance was made for sequestering the lands of the church; and after (viz.) in 1646, there was a sale of the lands of the church; Williams died 1646, and after (viz.) in 1660, Fruyn was made archbishop, who made a lease for 21 years to the lessor of the plaintiff; Fruyn dies, and Stern is made archbishop, who demises the land to the defendant.

The question is, if this lease made by Fruyn be good?

Moreton Justice for the defendant. Because the verdict is insufficient and void:

1. Because here is a demise of divers things, and the verdict finds only for part, and nothing for the residue. 30 E. 3, 33. 1 Inst. 227 a. 2. The jury finds that the lands in question are part of the inheritance of the church of York, and commonly demised, and doth not say for what time, which ought to be for the greater part of 20 years.

As to the matter in law, the lease is not good by 32 H. 8. And to this point it is to be considered, what the law was before this statute: the bishop could not by himself do any prejudice to the church, he could not disclaim, release, grant an annuity. 1 Inst. 102. He might grant the inheritance with [166] the confirmation of the dean and chapter; and before the third Council of Nice 710, without such consent, receipt of rent by the successor would bind him. In this statute the proviso is considerable; the statute doth not mention bishops, and the greater mischief is of tenants in tail; and this statute aimed at the benefit of the successor; leases ought to be in the form there prescribed. Bridgman's Rep. The Bishop of Chichester and Freedland's case. Here was 32 years without any demise, but kept in demesne; and it ought to be demised within eleven years before. 1 Inst. 44. Cro. Eliz. 707.

If the temporalities continue twenty years in the hands of the King, this doth not hinder the demise, because the King cannot charge the church.

A bishop is not compellable to demise his lands, no more than another lord of copyhold. If tenant in tail make a lease for 21 years, which expires, and then the land continues twelve years undemised, and tenant in tail dies, his issue cannot demise this land by the statute.

Wyndham Justice for the defendant. He took the like exception to the verdict which Moreton took; and as to the matter in law, this part of the proviso ought to be as strictly observed as any other part of it. Sequestration doth not hinder the demise; but if it be in the King's hands it is a great doubt, and this statute being an enabling law, implies a strong negative, that it shall not be otherwise, being an introductive law. For authorities, the case of Cro. Eliz. is a stronger case, Cro. Eliz. 708, Mallet versus Mallet, and Sir John Marvin's case in Harpur's Rep.

Twisden Justice for the plaintiff. As to the exception to the verdict, the first he allowed, but not the latter. As to the matter in law; in this statute there is an enacting part and a restrictive part; this case is of a new nature, and never brought in question before.

Here it is to be inquired, 1. If land be kept in the hands of the bishop, if it may be after demised by the successor?

2. If the lessee surrenders, and the bishop keeps the land?

3. It was demised here in 1604, and Octob. 1630, surrendered to Harsnet, and it was not for eleven years together in the hands of any bishop.

The statute extends directly, and not obliquely to bishops. Here is a shell and a kernel, words and meaning. Space, and term of twenty years is not all one here. The preamble is the key for reformation thereof, &c. which implies a mischief before. They were to pay first-fruits, and yet they could not [167] raise money without the chapter, who would have money also to consent. The meaning arises from the time of making the statute, where many lands were which never were demised, as palaces. But those which were then demised, and had gained a customable rent, the successor could not devest this power after by not demising it. The Act doth not force bishops to keep lands in their hands. A bishop makes a lease of a reversion of a copyhold, it is a demise within this statute. 6 Co. 39. Moor. 719. A demise for years of tithes is good within this statute, Denton's case. As to Mallet and Mallet's case, the chief gist of that case was concerning the comprize of lands by the name of a manor. Whatsoever comes within the body of the Act ought to be averred, but not when it comes in by the proviso. Plowd. 376. As to Scrog's case, Cro. Eliz. that makes nothing to this case. And as to the case in Harpur's Reports, it is only, nota, dictum fuit per Catlin and his companions.

As to the 2d, If a bishop make a lease for years, and the lessee surrenders, and the bishop keeps the land in his hands, as long as the lease hath existence, the successor notwithstanding may demise the land. 1. Because the lease hath existence to some purpose, 9 E. 4, 18, and The Lord Abergavenny's and Davenport's case, 8 Co. 140. Litt. sect. 636, and this case is not like the case of a fine.

If the words (most commonly) extend to eleven years, those mischiefs will ensue on such construction: in case of tenant in tail he takes a wife and dies, the feme lives above eleven years, and hath this land in her hands: so of an infant tenant in tail. Dyer 271, and Ninian Menvile's case. 26 Eliz. Haines versus Holland, Shute's Rep. Cox Bishop of Ely's case. No lease questioned, although the bishoprick was in the hands of the Queen for twenty years.

Kelyng Chief Justice for the plaintiff. He agreed that the first exception to the verdict is good; but as to the point in law he concluded for the plaintiff. A bishop makes a lease for one and twenty years of lands never demised, and dies, the King keeps it in his hands. Dyer 261. As to the twenty years before this lease made, seventeen years of it the land was in the hands of a disseisor. Statutes are to be construed according to the design of the makers of them. Plowd. 106, Fulmerston Sherrard, Magna Charta, cap. 11. F. Br. 661. Marbl. cap. 4. Literal interpretations are not necessary. Grotius de Jure Belli & Pacis, page 30. The design of this statute was for the benefit of the lessees in one degree, and for the [168] bishop in another; it was to avoid long leases, and in reversion, and the ancient rent ought to be reserved. If this statute shall be construed for the defendant these inconveniences will ensue.

1. A lease expires, and then the bishop is disseised for twelve years, then he recovers. The drift of the statute was only to restrain the demises of ancient palaces and demesnes, and not other things.

2. It shall be in the power of a bishop to repeal this statute.

In the proviso are two clauses of qualification, viz. Let to farm. 2. Or occupied by farmers by the space of twenty years; the words by the space of twenty years extend only to the second part of the disjunctive, and not to let to farm. And this hath been the exposition of this statute in the case of The Bishops of Winchester and London for their houses lately. And as to the cases of Mallet and Mallet, and Scrogg's case, they are not to the purpose; and so he concluded for the plaintiff. And for that the Court was divided, no judgment was given. But the cause was adjourned. Et sic pendet.

[169] TERM. MICH. 20 CAR. 2, B. R.

BARKER versus DURRANT.

Award.

Debt upon an obligation to perform an arbitrament. Upon no arbitrament pleaded, the plaintiff replies and sets forth the award, which consisted of two parts (amongst others) to which exception was taken (viz.) 1. That the defendant shall make a release to the plaintiff until the time of the arbitrament, and then the bond of the submission is discharged. But it was not allowed, because divers things are to be done together, and if all had been done the release shall be no prejudice; and so it differs from the case where money is to be paid after the release is to be given. 2. The award was in part of satisfaction, which is not good. Mich. 45 E. 3, 16 a. pl. 18, and Trin. 1653, B. R. Penros versus Tubb. Sed non allocatur, because it is tant. existen' partem redditus, which is only a description when he will pay it, and not by way of discharge of rent in controversy: and judgment was for the plaintiff.

SMEDLY versus HEAP.

Words. 1 Lev. 250. 2 Keb. 404.

The plaintiff declares, that he is a mercer, and the defendant said to him these words, viz. Thou art a cheating knave and a rogue. On not guilty, verdict for the plaintiff.

And Bigland moved in arrest of judgment, because there was not any communication by the defendant of the trade of the plaintiff: and therefore stay, &c.

[170] TAYLOR versus BROWN.

Prohibition. 1 Vent. 5. Clift's Entries 13.

A prohibition was granted to the Ecclesiastical Court, because they refused to deliver a copy of the articles; and the rule was, that a prohibition go until they deliver such a copy, and the writ of prohibition was absolute without a quousque.

And Linley moved for a consultation; but the Court would not grant a consultation, but a supersedeas; and farther resolved that the statute of 2 H. 5, cap. 3, extends where the proceeding in the Ecclesiastical Court is ex officio, as well as betwixt party and party; and the report of Moor 756, is ill reported; for Cro. Jac. 37 is contrary, and that a prohibition lies for not delivering the copy of a libel in such case.

Information against Buckworth and others for perjury, in ejectment. The defendants justify; upon not guilty, and now upon evidence to prove the perjury, one was produced to prove what one, that is since dead, swore upon the first trial.

And by Kelying Chief Justice, It shall not be allowed, because betwixt other parties.

But Twisden and Morton contra. And it was allowed.

WARD versus CULPEPPER.

Inquiry. 1 Vent. 40. 1 Lev. 255. 1 Sid. 380. 2 Keb. 409, 431, 536.

Replevin. The defendant avows for a rent-charge. The plaintiff pleads in bar non concessit; and upon this issue is taken according to the statute of 17 Car. 2, c. 7. And the jury found the value of the cattle, but not the arrears.

And Winnington moved in arrest of judgment upon the said verdict; because perhaps there are only 20l. arrear, and the value of the cattle are 50l. And the Court ruled that judgment shall not be entered upon this finding, but the avowant may have judgment at common law, if he will, and then the plaintiff is put to a second deliverance.

[171] RUMSEY versus RAWSON.

Common. 1 Vent. 18, 25. 2 Keb. 410, 493, 504.

In replevin. The defendant avows as a commoner for taking goods damage-feasant in loco in quo, &c. The plaintiff pleads in bar of the said avowry, that the Parson of Dale is seised of such glebe land, and that he had common in loco in quo, &c. for two hundred sheep levant and couchant upon the same glebe land, and that the plaintiff by the licence of the said parson put in his cattle, and issue is taken upon the levant and couchant, and found for the plaintiff.

And Serjeant Maynard moved in arrest of judgment for the avowant, because licence cannot be given by a commoner to put in the cattle of a stranger, and here the plaintiff was only a trespasser upon the parson, and such licence cannot be without deed, 2 Cro. 574, Monk versus Butler: and stay until, &c.

NEEDHAM versus BENNET.

Return. 1 Sid. 407. 2 Keb. 410, 464. Vide ante, fo. 81. Long versus Emot, ejectment in B. R. of lands in Lancashire. See after fo. 206, Draper and Bailie's.

Upon a judgment in B. R. a fieri facias issued (after a testatum) to the Sheriff of Chester, who returns quod fieri fecit the goods, but that they remain in his hands pro defectu emptor', and upon that a venditioni exponas issues to him, of the which he doth make no return, nor gives satisfaction to the plaintiff; and upon this he moves for an attachment.

And Williams moved to stay the attachment, because a fieri facias cannot issue out of this Court to the County Palatine of Chester, and made a difference betwixt a judgment originally given in this Court, and when a judgment is removed hither by writ of error; in the second case it lies, but not in the first, Mich. 21 H. 7, 33, pl. 32. Judgment in Callais or Wales cannot be here reformed, because not parcel of the realm, otherwise of Lancaster; sed non allocatur, and an attachment was granted.

[172] DANBY versus PALMES.

Estrepement. 1 Sid. 369. 2 Keb. 376, 381, 413, 580.

A writ of error to reverse a judgment given in C. B. in a writ of partition upon a nihil dicit, of divers manors, and view of frankpledge, and free warren, and other things of great value. Upon in nullo est erratum pleaded, the counsel for the plaintiff in the writ of error assigned divers errors, some in form, and others in the substance of the proceedings.

And as to the form Coleman shews, 1. The executory judgment is quod partitio fact. and not fit, or fiat, and so not sense. 2. The precept to the sheriff after the executory judgment is quod per sacramentum proborum hominum in comitatu, &c. and doth not say, de comitatu. 3. Here is a discontinuance, because there is not any continuance for the tenant per idem dies, when the partition shall be made.

The errors in substance are: 1. No mention is of the view of frankpledge, and yet in the writ is mention of the view of frankpledge, not as appurtenant to the manors, but distinct; and here is not any mention of it in the partition; and cum pertinentiis shall not supply it. 2. The sheriff returns unam medietatem eorundem, (viz. the premisses before) to be delivered to Danby, viz. such manors per parcella medietatis suæ, and other manors to Palmes, and then again, alteram medietatem to Danby again, and so Danby hath two moieties. 3. The sheriff delivers quartam partem of such a thing, and doth not say per metas & bundas; and if the parties have a fourth part, then the writ ought to be so. 4. The sheriff divides the rents without shewing which (viz.) copy or free, or upon leases for lives, years or at will. 5. The sheriff delivers to Danby and Margaret his wife, whereas it appears upon the writ, that Danby was only seised in the right of his wife, and now by this delivery he hath an interest in his own right. Sed non allocatur per Curiam. 6. By Offly upon the return of the sheriff he doth not conclude that those are all the lands comprehended within the writ to him directed, as it is in Co. Entr. 412 a. pl. 2, and by Weston 7. The demand is of 400 acres of wood, and no mention of that in the partition, but only of a park una cum omnibus arboribus eidem pertinent', which is not the wood here. 8. Divers things are delivered in the partition, which are not demanded or mentioned in the writ, and yet the writ of [173] partition lies of them, viz. pasture for six beasts, shopas, &c. 9. The sheriff delivers three acres of meadow lying in the meadow of Middlefield, excepting duobus rodis, and there is not any disposal of those two rods after or before. 10. The writ is that the sheriff shall go to the advowson, which cannot be, because it is incorporeal. Et adjournatur.

CRISPE versus MAYOR AND COMMONALTY OF BERWICK.

Trial. 1 Lev. 252. 1 Vent. 58, 90. 1 Sid. 381, 462. 2 Keb. 391, 397, 414, 602, 676. 1 Mod. 36.

On covenant upon an indenture the plaintiff counts that the defendants at York demised to him certain messuages in Berwick, for years; and that they covenanted that they had power to demise them, and that the plaintiff should enjoy them quietly, and assigns a breach, that such a one entered upon him and ejected him out of the said messuages. The defendants plead that the strangers did not enter upon the possession of the plaintiff; and upon this issue is joined, and a suggestion is made upon the roll, that the King's writ doth not run in Berwick, and therefore that the venire fac. shall be of the next vill to Berwick, which is Belfort; and upon this a venire fac. is directed to the Sheriff of Northumberland to make to come twelve out of Belfort to try this issue, and the jury found for the plaintiff.

And now Stote for the defendant moved in arrest of judgment, that this trial is not good, because Berwick being out of the realm, the trial ought to be where the action is brought, viz. at York, and not at Belfort. And there is a difference betwixt a County Palatine, which is part of the realm, as Lancaster, Chester and Durham, and Wales, which is not part of the realm, and Berwick here, Fitzh. Trial. 4. Kelw. 202 a. pl. 19. Mich. 18 Eliz. C. B. Christmas's case. Appeal doth not lie in B. R. for the murder of a man in Berwick.

Object. There will be failer of justice, because the defendants are judges.

Resp. The law of England doth not take conusance of that which is out of its jurisdiction; and Berwick is not part of England, 7 Co. Calvin's case, 23 b. And by the same reason that such trial shall be of a thing in Berwick, it shall be in Ireland, &c. And the privileges of Berwick are confirmed by Alexander King of Scotland, and 42 Eliz. C. B. Rot. 630, Shepardson versus Chambers, in debt upon an obligation conditioned [174] to pay money in Berwick, was tried at Belfort, but then the action was laid there.

Shafto for the plaintiff. Here would be a failer of justice, Mich. 19 H. 6, 12 b. pl. 31, per Askue, a thing done in Wales shall at common law be tried in the next county adjoining, and there no mention is made of it, which Fitzh. in the abridgment of this case mentions tit. Trial 4, a more strong case of a thing in Ireland tried in the county of Salop, which is alleged to be the next county to Ireland. 2 Roll. 597, pl. 8, Barnwel versus Ratchford, and a writ of error lies to Berwick or Callais, 4 Inst. 282, and there is a like suggestion for York, Dyer 279 b. pl. 10. Moor 581, pl. 796. 8 Co. 125 a. Lands in Wales are pleadable here. Fitzh. tit. Jurisdiction 34, and Scotland, Br. 551, and 12 H. 4, 16, pro Normandy.

Wyndham Justice. It ought to be tried in York, where the action is brought as Co. Dowdale's case is. And adjourned; and after resolved for the plaintiff in this point.

This vacation died Sir Wadham Wyndham Knight, one of the Justices of the King's Bench, and of the county of Somerset, who was a good and prudent man.

[175] TERM. HILL. 20 & 21 CAR. 2, B. R.

WATSON versus BAKER. ERROR, B. R.

Condition. 2 Danv. Abr. 18, p. 1. 1 Sid. 387. 2 Keb. 446.

In debt upon an obligation. The condition being that the defendant being Parson of A. should resign upon request. The defendant pleads that he did resign according to the condition, and found against him, and judgment for the plaintiff; and now brought a writ of error because a simoniacal condition: but judgment was affirmed, because the condition is good.

This term in the place of Justice Wyndham came Baron Rainsford, who being a Baron, before that Morton was Judge, was now made the third Justice of this Court, and took place of Morton.

SALMON versus SMITH.

Pleading. 1 Lev. 263. 1 Saund. 206. 1 Sid. 405. 2 Keb. 467, 470.

In debt for rent. The plaintiff counts of a demise of four rooms. The defendant pleads, that as to part actio non, because the plaintiff demised to him the said four rooms; and also another room into which the plaintiff entered before any rent due, and is in possession of it. The plaintiff demurs, because the defendant doth not traverse the demise by the plaintiff set forth in his count.

Sanders for the defendant. And he cited Mich. 5 E. 4, 8, pl. 19, where such a case is cited without a traverse. But judgment was given for the plaintiff by the whole Court, because the plea doth not answer to the count, nor is it ad idem, Mich. 32 H. 6, 3 b. pl. 1, and Mich. 35 H. 6, 38 a. pl. 47, and the pleading in the case of Dyer 32 b. pl. 7 is not controverted; and this case is resolved, 1 Leon. 43, Kempton and Bellamy, and so are all the precedents.

[176] TERM. PASCH. 21 CAR. 2, B. R.

Sir John Kelyng, Chief Justice; Twisden, Rainsford and Morton, Justices.

SKINNER versus GUNTON, LYON, AND OTHERS.

Case. 1 Danv. Ab. 208, p. 5, 213, p. 3. 1 Vent. 12, 18, 19. 1 Saund. 228. 2 Keb. 473, 476, 497. 3 Keb. 118.

In an action upon the case. The plaintiff declares, that the defendants, with others, conspired together to arrest the plaintiff in a grand action in London, and took out a plaint in the Sheriffs Court there, of 300l. with an intent that the plaintiff should not find bail; and upon this the plaintiff was arrested, and was compelled to continue in prison twenty days and nights, ad damnum of 100l. Upon not guilty, one only was found guilty.

And Sanders for the defendant moved in arrest of judgment. 1. Because the plaintiff doth not shew that there was any end or determination of that suit, which ought to be shewn. 2. It is an action of conspiracy, which doth not lie against one only.

Pemberton for the plaintiff. The complaint is only of an arrest, and not any other proceeding as joint, &c. And as to the 2d, it is only an action upon the case. F. N. B. 116 a. And before the Statute de Conspiratoribus made 33 E. 1, page 89, an action of conspiracy doth not lie for any thing, besides for indicting for felony or treason; but by this statute it lies for trespass, and so against one only. Trin. 11 H. 7, 25, pl. 7. And this action is only an action upon the case in the nature of a conspiracy. Cro. Eliz. 701, Marsh against Vaughan. And judgment was given by the whole Court for the plaintiff.

Apprentice. 2 Keb. 480. Trem. 465.

The town of Nottingham impose by order of the sessions an apprentice upon one Mr. Selwin, and he moved by Bigland for a certiorari to remove this order, with an intent [177] to quash it, because the statute of 39 Eliz. cap. 2 doth not compel any to take an apprentice.

Kelyng Chief Justice. The validity of this clause is to be tried in an action.

Twisden Justice. It hath been an opinion, that a man cannot be constrained to take an apprentice: but of late time it hath been held otherwise.

Kelyng Chief Justice. It was held in King Charles the 1st's, that an apprentice might be imposed; and so it was given in charge by the Lord Keeper in the Star-Chamber; and there is no inconvenience, because the master may assign the apprentice over.

Twisden Justice. If the apprentice may be imposed, it will be hard for merchants in London, &c.

Morton Justice. It was always ruled by Damport Chief Baron, in his circuit, to confirm such orders. See this case before.

THE CASE OF SACKVILE COLLEGE. SEE BEFORE IN CHANCERY.

Scire facias. Antea 154.

Twisden Justice for the plaintiff. The questions in this case are three. 1. If these grants are repealable, and are void? 2. If this be an apt scire facias, being to repeal part of a patent? 3. If this writ may conclude to the exheredation of the heirs?

As to the first. These letters patent to Edward Earl of Dorset, and his heirs male, are void, and ought to be repealed, and may be repealed though void. Hill. 12 H. 7.

Kelw. 19 a. by Keble. And that these letters patent are void, appears, 1. Because they are contrary to the intention of the King. Hob. 223, Anne Needler's case. 10 Co. 110 b. Vowe's case. 2. The King cannot deprive the patron of those rights which are appendant to him, which is jus patronagii, & jus visitandi, which are in Earl Robert and his heirs.

As to the second. This grant may be repealed in part. Dyer 276 b. pl. 53, because it consists of things of several natures; and as a patent may be good in part, and naught in part, so it may be repealed for part, and stand for another part.

As to the third. Here are apt persons, because the heirs are concerned, because the question is, Who is the dotator? not the executors, but Earl Robert and his heirs, and the executors are only instruments; and the conclusion ad [178] damnum of the heirs doth not vitiate, because the Court knows to whose damage the patent is.

Object. If this grant shall be repealed, the indowments of the hospital fail.

Resp. It was subject to repeal originally in the creation.

Hale Chief Baron contra. I premise three things, 1. Why I cannot give an opinion to repeal these letters patent without grand cause. 2. How the case stands here upon the patent and the will. 3. The reasons why this writ of scire facias will not lie in this case.

As to the first. This is the first case in which clauses which have a general influence through the whole patent may be repealed. 2. It is a case of great moment in particular, because by this repeal the indowment is void; as the case of the Abby of Fountain is; and here no master nor other officers may subsist. 3. Because there is no necessity to repeal them, because there are void clauses, and they may be tried at law; and that is the reason that judgment upon an issue tried in a scire fac. to repeal a patent in B. R. is not there given, but the record is to be returned into this Court, which is not in another case; and those things are of long continuance, (viz.) from 6 Jac. for then was the will, and the letters patent were 7 Car. 1, and it cannot be known what transactions have been passed betwixt the King and the heirs of Richard Earl of Dorset during the time.

As to the second observation, upon the patent and the will. 1. No will of Robert appears by other record than by recital in these letters patent. 2. Although Richard son and heir of Robert was dead at the time of the letters patent, it appears not. 3. Although de facto Edward was father of Richard, it appears not. 4. It doth not appear that the land, upon which the hospital was built, was the indowment of the hospital; and if no indowment, no hospital. 1. It cannot be understood that Edward was heir to Robert, because here is an averment contrary; and he might be heir male in vulgar appellation. 2. The clauses are not substantive and independent clauses, but have an influence through the whole letters patent: and so by the repeal of them the patent shall be vitiated, viz. the naming and appointment of the several officers making of rules, constitutions and by-laws; and in this particular, this patent is not like to the patent in the prince's case. 3. If here were not derogatory clauses, viz. to create a corporation according to the intention of the will, this will create a right to the heir [179] to nominate; but here are derogatory clauses in it secundum voluntatem, which shall be according to the King's pleasure, otherwise the name shall be altered. 4. The licence to amortize. 5. Those clauses are not simply void, but only voidable, because the King takes notice of the will of Earl Robert. 6. The grant made to Edward to make by-laws, is to him, and the heirs male of his body; but concerning election of members, this is to Edward, and the heirs male of the body of Robert.

As to the third. Such scire facias lies not in point of form. 1. A patent may be repealed in part, but this shall be only in clauses independent. Fitzh. Petition 19. 2. There will be an infinite inconvenience, if by this way part of this patent may be repealed; for by this way a good patent may be made naught, and e contra. 3. The King hath said how he will have this corporation qualified, and he is dead, and now we will make other patrons after his death. 4. The King hath said how it shall be governed, and not otherwise. And here is no necessity to repeal this, because if there be void clauses they may be tried in assize, and therefore the writ is ill. 2. It doth not lie for the matter. 1. Because the King takes notice of the clauses in the will which are desired to be repealed, and therefore he is not deceived in this grant. In the creation of the hospital sunt tres actores fabulæ. 1. Earl Robert. 2. The King, whose right is to grant the incorporation. 3. The executors, which ought to indow this hospital. 2. The executors are not at any prejudice, because they are not compellable to indow this corporation, if it be not according to the will of Earl Robert. 3. If the executors have indowed the hospital, being so created, it is a breach of trust.

Object. The King cannot dispose of the right of another, and here the founder was Earl Robert.

Resp. There is no patronage till the foundation of the hospital, and the heir of Robert hath not to do with it till the foundation; and the executors do not break the trust. The Lord Keeper would advise, and so it was adjourned.

8 Maii 1669, William Lenthal was sworn in the office of Marshal of the King's Bench, in the place of Sir John Lenthal, his grandfather, who died the last vacation.

Privilege. 2 Keb. 477, 486, 491, 508. This privilege denied Sir Walter Vane, Captain of the Guards, which see before. 2 Keb. 309, 321. 1 Sid. 355.

Stone an Attorney of B. R. having land within the manor of Harrow in the county of Middlesex, ratione tenuræ, ought [180] to serve as reeve there, when elected; and he being now elected, prayed a writ of privilege, that he should not be compelled to gather the rents of the lord, and to serve in that office.

Kelyng Chief Justice. This writ lies here, and is a stronger case than Prouse's case. Cro. Car. 389.

Twisden Justice. A tenure may be created to such intent to collect the rents of the lord; and Coke's Entr. 436, an attorney exempted to be a soldier; so of a clerk of the bank, Cro. Car. 8, Venable's case. 2 Roll. 271. March 30, pl. 65. Et adjournatur.

1915: 1 K.B. 601

SIR ANDREW HENLEY versus DR. BURSTAL.

Case. 1 Danv. Abr. 211, p. 17. 1 Vent. 23, 25. 2 Keb. 486, 494. Vide before 135, Low versus Beardmore, for indicting the plaintiff of a rescue, an action doth not lie.

An action upon the case for maliciously indicting the plaintiff, being a justice of the peace, for delivering a vagrant out of custody, without examination, contrary to law. Upon not guilty pleaded, a verdict found for the plaintiff; and Swain moved for the defendant in arrest of judgment, that such action doth not lie, because it deters a man from prosecuting for the King.

Maynard Serjeant for the plaintiff. Where the indictment is preferred maliciously, and such indictment contains matter of imputation and slander as well as crime; there the action lies; but otherwise where the indictment contains crime without slander, as forcible entry, &c. but here is slander as well as crime; and of that opinion was all the Court; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

PRICE versus CROSS AND OTHERS. MICH. 1657, B. R.

Case.

An action upon the case in nature of a conspiracy, for indicting the plaintiff of barretry; one of the defendants is only found guilty.

And Baldwin moved in arrest of judgment, that one cannot be guilty of a conspiracy alone. But per Cur. it being but an action on the case it is well enough, and the plaintiff had his judgment.

[181] CRAFT versus WINTER.

Mistrial. 1 Danv. Abr. 456. 1 Vent. 22. 1 Sand. 246. 2 Keb. 496.

The plaintiff declares, that the defendant in London spoke these words to the plaintiff, Thou art a thievish fellow, and stoledst the plate from Wadham College in Oxford.

The defendant justifies, that the plaintiff stole the said plate in Oxford. The plaintiff replies, that the defendant spoke the words de injuria sua propria; and the issue tried in London, and found for the plaintiff.

And Sanders moved for the defendant in arrest of judgment, because a mistrial, because the issue ought to be in the county of Oxford where the justification is laid, and not in London; but adjudged for the plaintiff, because it is aided by the new statute of 16 and 17 Car. 2, cap. 8. But the defendant might have demurred upon it.

Kelyng, Chief Justice; Twisden, Rainsford, and Morton, Justices.

LADY BROUGHTON versus VOSEY.

Pleading.

Trespass for taking two horses. The defendant pleads, that the Dean and Chapter of Westminster have a court-leet in a particular jurisdiction, called the sanctuary in Westminster, within which the plaintiff hath a house, and that she by reason of the tenure of that messuage, ought to have that part of the street before the door, and for not paving she was presented at the leet held such a day, and affeered to 5l. and estreated, and the defendant as bailiff justifies the taking for the said 5l. The plaintiff replies, and traverses the ratione tenuræ, that she ought to repair, and concludes, et hoc paratus est verificare, unde petit judicium, if the plaintiff ab actione sua prædicta præcludi debeat; and upon this the defendant demurs specially, because she doth not conclude unde petit judicium, & damna sua occasione transgressionis prædict' sibi adjudicari, &c. and for this cause the Court seemed for the defendant; but a rule made by consent to take traverse and trial upon the tenure, upon payment of costs to the defendant.

In the last vacation died Sir Edward Atkins Knight, one of the Barons of the Exchequer.

PORDAGE versus COLE.

Covenant. 2 Danv. Ab. 229, C. p. 1. 1 Lev. 274. 1 Sid. 423. 1 Sand. 319. 2 Keb. 533, 542.

Debt upon a deed poll concerning the purchase of land made by the defendant, of the plaintiff, dated the 1st of May 1668, where the plaintiff declares, that by the said deed it was agreed betwixt the plaintiff and defendant, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff so much money, upon such a day, for the said land, the which he hath not done, unde actio accrevit; and upon this count the defendant demurs. And Withins for the defendant alledged the cause to be, because the plaintiff doth not aver that the defendant enjoyed the land; and where there is not a mutual remedy (the deed being only poll, and not being by indenture) there ought to be such averment. 1 Roll. 518, pl. 3, Holder versus Taylor. In covenant to repair, where the lessee for years covenants to repair, proviso, that the lessor find grand timber, there in an action of covenant the plaintiff ought to aver that he offered grand timber. So 5 Co. Gray's case, 78 b.

Jones for the plaintiff. Here the defendant covenants to pay at a certain day, and perhaps the conveyance cannot be made by that day; and it doth not appear that the land was not conveyed before.

Kelyng Chief Justice. It seems no agreement of the other part, for it is not by indenture.

Twisden Justice. In covenant the words were, the plaintiff putting the house in repair, the defendant covenanted to keep it so repaired. Resolved they were mutual covenants. Cro. Jac. 645, Salter versus Stone, Styles 140, Brag versus Nightingale.

Rainsford and Moreton Justices. It seems a covenant by it self; and judgment was given for the plaintiff; but the defendant brought a writ of error in the Exchequer Chamber upon the matter in law.

[184] DRAKE versus HILL.

Words. 1 Danv. Abr. 128, p. 38. 1 Lev. 276. 1 Sid. 424. 2 Keb. 549.

The defendant said of the plaintiff being a merchant and maintained himself and his family by buying and selling; Austen Drake is broke, and gone for Virginia; I have ill fortune, for Austen Drake is failed, and I have lost my monies. Austen Drake is a beggarly fellow, and not worth a groat, and not able to pay his debts, and rides abroad with his man double armed for fear of bailiffs. Upon not guilty, verdict for the plaintiff.

And Serjeant Maynard moved for the defendant in arrest. 1. That the last words are not actionable; for beggarly fellow are only words of reproach, and not worth a groat, the case of Moon and Moxam, 14 Car. 1. Judgment was there reversed in the Exchequer Chamber; and there is a difference when the words of themselves are not actionable, yet if they be accompanied with special damage, they are actionable, as Low and Harwood's case. Judgment in Winsor reversed where he said, that the defendant said, that the plaintiff had not title to land, by reason of which he could not sell, and Nevill and Francis's case. And bankrupt is a crime that implies deceit, but to be poor is no crime.

Kelyng Chief Justice. To say that he is not worth a groat, is not actionable, because he may be an honest man notwithstanding; but it seems that the other words seem actionable.

Twisden Justice. H. may pay his debts, and yet not worth a groat after; but to say that he is not able to pay his debts is actionable; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[185] TERM. HILL. 21 & 22 CAR. 2, B. R.

Coin.

Stinton, keeper of the Turnstile-Tavern in Holbourn, was informed against for uttering brass halfpence, and he came in and confessed the fact laid in the information, and his fine was pardoned, and he was bound by recognizance not to utter any more.

Trespass for taking forty sheep, and chasing of them, by reason of which chasing one of them died; and the defendant pleads, that the place in which the chasing is supposed was his freehold, and that he leniter chased them, quæ est eadem transgressio. The plaintiff replies, and justifies for common. The defendant rejoins by inclosure; and the plaintiff demurs. And Lèvinz for the defendant urged that the bar is not good, because he doth not answer to the chasing of the sheep, for he ought to have traversed it. Cro. Eliz. 384, Hill versus Prideaux, and Trin. 19 Car. 2, Copley versus Perry.

Jones for the plaintiff. It is frequent in trespass to answer to the beating & male tractation', and that he molliter manus imposuit, quæ est eadem transgressio.

Twisden Justice. The plaintiff relies by his replication upon the common, and waives the staying of the sheep, &c. and therefore it is good enough; and with this agreed the whole Court; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

This term Timothy Littleton, Serjeant at Law, was made one of the Barons of the Exchequer.

[186] TERM. PASCH. 22 CAR. 2, B. R.

Contempt. 1 Mod. 44. 1 Lev. 288. 1 Vent. 66. 2 Keb. 635.

Smith, Hains, Tunman, and others, commissioners of sewers in Middlesex, made an order concerning the amendment of a breach at Blackwall, and assessed the inhabitants of White-Chappel to contribute, and the inhabitants procured a certiorari, and notwithstanding that the commissioners proceeded; and upon this an attachment was granted, and they were committed to the Marshalsea for the said contempt.

Ways. 1 Vent. 69. 2 Keb. 617.

Frere of Rayneham in the county of Kent was indicted at the sessions at Maidstone, for not contributing to the repair of highways, contrary to the form of the statute of 2 & 3 Phil. & Mar. cap. 8, and removed this by certiorari; and when the record of the indictment was removed into this Court, he came before Justice Morton, and submitted himself to a fine, who fined him upon two indictments to 20s. last Michaelmas term; and now the inhabitants suggest by motion and affidavit, that Frere hath eight plow-lands, and consequently that he ought to have found eight carts for six days, and that the Judge was surprised; and although that his land was pasture, yet the Court set aside the fine, and ordered, that he proceed to trial upon these indictments, if he do not agree with the parish before next Assizes, for by his own confession he hath 1700 acres of arable and pasture.

This term died Sir Jeoffry Palmer, Knight and Baronet, Attorney General, and Sir Heneage Finch Solicitor General succeeded in his place, and Sir Edward Turnor was made Solicitor General.

[187] COPPING versus HURRIER.

Intr. Hill. 20 & 21 Car. 2, Rot. 1261.

Award. 2 Danv. Ab. 540, p. 2. 1 Lev. 285. 1 Sid. 428. 2 Saund. 129. 1 Mod. 15. 2 Keb. 562, 619. Postea Denovan versus Mascal.

Debt upon an arbitrement, the submission was to two, ita quod they make their award before the last day of Michaelmas term, and if they cannot agree, then to A. who then shall be umpire to make the award within the said time; and the plaintiff declares, that the arbitrators did not make any award, but the umpire made his umpirage, and shews it; and the defendant demurs upon this count, because the umpirage was void, because the arbitrators had all Michaelmas term, and the umpire cannot intermeddle during that time, and for that it was adjudged for the defendant; and in this case was cited Roll 261, 1 part, Lumley and Hatton's case and Barber and Giles's case, and Dyer 347, and Barnard and King's case. Vide Godbolt 241, pl. 334, Fial versus Varier, contra.

HORSELEY versus POTTON.

Case. 1 Lev. 286. 1 Sid. 457. 2 Keb. 620, 647.

In an action upon the case; the plaintiff declares, that he did lend his gelding to the defendant to ride from Swaffham in Norfolk to Peterborough in the county of Northampton, and the defendant abused the said horse in itinere. Upon not guilty pleaded, verdict was for the plaintiff. And Holt Junior moved in arrest of judgment, because there is not any visne where the abuse of the gelding was, but only in itinere, Cro. Jac. 266, and Cro. Car. 20, White versus Risden; and judgment stayed till the other party moved.

CHESTER AND WILLAN. EJECTMENT.

Release. 1 Vent. 78. 2 Sand. 96. 1 Sid. 452. 2 Keb. 641.

A devise to eleven and their heirs; the defendant being one of the eleven, by indenture for 100l. granted, bargained, sold and confirmed to another of the eleven; and if any estate passed was the question, (viz.) where one joint-tenant grants to another, if this amounts to a release; and adjudged that it doth. Roll 810. 1 part, Cro. Jac. 314.

[188] TERM. TRIN. 22 CAR. 2, B. R.

Mandamus. 1 Lev. 291. 1 Vent. 77, 82. 1 Sid. 461. 2 Keb. 641, 656.

Dighton, town-clerk of Stratford upon Avon, was turned out of his place by the corporation, and he prayed a writ of mandamus to restore him; and it was granted; and upon this the corporation returns, that the King by his letters patent grants, that they shall have a town-clerk which shall continue durante bene placito of the mayor and aldermen, and that the said Dighton was made town-clerk, and they turned him out; and upon this return the question was, if the corporation hath an arbitrary power to turn out the said town-clerk, or ought to shew reasonable cause.

Jones for Dighton. Many corporations have such officers, and it is of consequence. Cro. Jac. 540, Warren's case. An alderman cannot be so turned out; and as to Blackgrave's case this was not argued; and here they did not give notice: but by all the Court, the continuation of him in his office is in the will and pleasure of the corporation; and upon this restitution was denied; but the Court advised to repeal the patent because inconvenient.

This term Hugh Wyndham Serjeant at Law was made Baron of the Exchequer.

[189] TERM. MICH. 22 CAR. 2, B. R.

The Justices being Kelyng, Chief Justice; Twisden, Rainsford and Morton, Justices. But Kelyng was sick the whole term.

MICHEL versus BISBY.

Prohibition.

The defendant sued the plaintiff in the Court of Feversham upon an assumpsit for wares; the defendant there, and the plaintiff here, tenders a plea, that the contract upon which the action is brought, was made out of the jurisdiction, and demands judgment if the Court will take conusance, &c. the Court there refused to allow this. And Jones moved for a prohibition, producing an affidavit of the said tender of the plea and refusal; and the Court granted the said prohibition.

RINCH versus ———.

Error.

The case was such. Rinch brought two actions on the case against a widow in the Pipowder-Court in Gloucester about two years ago; and about January last brought two other actions of the same nature against the same party. Upon the two first, judgments were given long since, and upon the two last the defendant had demurred, and judgment given against her, and writs of inquiry were executed, but no final judgment given. The defendant brings two writs of error, which were allowed by the mayor and town-clerk, and the two first judgments removed; whereas in truth [190] the defendant intended to have the two other causes removed, and not the two first, for that they were long before satisfied; but notwithstanding the said writs of error, after the return thereof was out, the plaintiff entered judgment upon the two last actions, and took out execution upon the same; and the defendant moved by Saunders for the attachment. But resolved per Cur. there is no contempt, because when there were two judgments formerly entered, the town-clerk might certify them to satisfy the writs of error; and he could not certify the other two, because no judgment was given upon them, and the writ of error commands to certify si judicium redditum sit, and the defendant might have helped this by moving the Court below after costs taxed to have judgment entered in the two last actions as well as the plaintiff, for judgment ought to have been given at the request of either party; and so the contempt was discharged.

LASSELS versus CHATTERTON.

Condition. 2 Danv. Ab. 38, p. 24. 1 Sid. 467. 1 Mod. 67. 2 Keb. 685. Vide Syd. 467. Mod. Rep. 67.

Debt for 1000l. upon an indenture. The plaintiff declares, that by indenture the defendant did covenant with the plaintiff to convey certain lands in Bowmer, demised to Bointon to the plaintiff, by such conveyance as the plaintiff's counsel should advise; and that the plaintiff, by the advice of his counsel, did tender to the defendant a conveyance by lease and release, and sets forth both in hæc verba, which release contained several covenants, amongst which one was against a stranger; and also here was comprehended a warranty against the defendant and his heirs, and that the plaintiff tendered the said conveyance, and the defendant refused to seal the same. The defendant pleads, that he did not tender the said conveyance; and issue was taken thereupon; and verdict pro quer'.

And Levinz for the defendant moved in arrest of judgment, because the conveyance tendered is not such as is warranted by the said articles, because it comprehends covenants, which it ought not to have done, and that the articles had been to make such reasonable assurance as counsel should advise, and perhaps reasonable covenants might have been inserted, but not any covenant against a stranger, nor warranty. 2 Cro. 571, Coles versus Kinder. 1 Roll 424, pl. 13, per Coke 2. The agreement is to convey all the lands in Bowmer demised to Bointon; and the conveyance is not only of them, [191] but of all other his lands whatsoever; and for his last exception, Weston for the plaintiff acknowledged that it cannot be good, and thereupon judgment was stayed. But by Twisden Justice, The law is altered since Cole and Kinder's case as to covenants in a coveyance, if they be reasonable, but not that he is seised of an absolute estate in fee-simple, or the like.

Nota. By Twisden Justice. It was resolved in one Long's case, that upon an information upon the Statute of Usury, he who borrows the money may be a witness after he hath paid the money, but not before.

ELLIS versus WINNE.

Prohibition.

The defendant sued the plaintiff in the Court of the marches of Wales at Ludlow, for a legacy of 50l. and a brass pot; and the plaintiff prayed a prohibition, by Williams, & habuit, because this Court by their instructions have not power to hold plea of a legacy.

DOMINUS REX versus WILD.

Apprentice. 1 Lev. 296. 2 Keb. 686.

An informatien upon the statute of 14 Car. 2, cap. 5, against the defendant, being a worsted weaver in Norfolk, for retaining above two apprentices, contrary to the form of that statute. Upon non culp. pleaded, verdict was found against the defendant.

And Jones moved in arrest of judgment because the statute is misrecited, because it is said, at a session of Parliament holden at Westminster by prorogation, 18 Febr. 14, Car. 2, following the printed book of Mr. Manby. Whereas the Parliament roll is, and so is the print set out by the Company of Stationers, at the Parliament begun at Westminster the 8th of May 13 Car. 2, and there continued till 19th of May 14 Car. 2, and thence prorogued to the 18th of February then next following; and this misrecital vitiates the count, for there was no such session of Parliament as is alledged; and so was Partridge's case, Plowd. 84 a. Although it be a Private Act, for the Judges are to take notice judicially of all Parliaments and their sessions.

[192] Twisden Justice. There is a difference when the information or action is grounded upon an Act of Parliament, and the conclusion is, contra formam statuti prædicti, there the information is not good, if the statute be misrecited; but if the conclusion be contra formam statuti in hujusmodi casu editi & provisi, there it may be good, notwithstanding the misrecital, because the Court can take notice of a good Act of Parliament to punish the offence mentioned. But judgment stayed until, &c.

BOLUS versus HINSTORKE.

Extinguishment. 3 Danv. Abr. 419, p. 12. 1 Vent. 97. 2 Keb. 686, 707.

Trespass for breaking his close, and taking and impounding the plaintiff's oxen. The defendant pleads, that Sir Henry Vernon was seised in fee of the close called the Low Leasow in Peplow, being the place where the taking is supposed, and he being so seised demised the same such a day to the defendant for ninety-nine years, determinable upon three lives, by virtue whereof he entered, and was thereof possessed, and justifies taking the beasts damage-feasant and impounding them. The plaintiff replies, and confesses the seisin of Sir Henry Vernon, and the lease to the defendant; but he farther says, that Sir Henry Vernon was also seised of another close called Bowns, adjoining to Low-Leasow Close, and that there is and hath been time out of mind a custom in Peplow, that the occupiers of Low-Leasow Close ought to repair the fences between the said closes; and that the said fences were out of repair, and that the cattle went into the defendant's close pro defectu sepium. The defendant takes issue upon the custom, and a verdict for the plaintiff. And Serjeant Baldwin moved for the defendant in arrest of judgment. 1. That the replication was not good, because the custom, if good, is extinguished by the unity of possession in Vernon. 2. Admitting it not extinguished, yet that custom laid in occupiers is not good; but it ought to be laid in them who have the inheritance. 1 Cro. 302, 418, Baker versus Brereman.

Twisden Justice interrupted, and said, that point had been adjudged both ways. As to the unity of possession, it doth extinguish the prescription. Dyer 295 b. pl. 19.

And by Twisden and Morton Justices, the prescription is gone by the unity. But it was adjourned, and stayed, &c.

[193] BLAND versus LEVIT.

Officer.

The plaintiff takes out a latitat against the defendant, with an ac etiam billæ for 60l. directed to the Sheriff of Cambridgeshire, who sends it to the bailiff of the franchise of Ely, who arrests the defendant, and takes sureties upon a bond of 40l. and then returns cepi corpus, but never brings in the body, but combining with the defendant lets him go at liberty, and the bailiff himself lives out of the franchise and employs a deputy. Several distringas's issued, but the bailiff is worth nothing, and so the plaintiff is like to lose his writ; especially the sheriff having already returned issues upon the bailiff, he cannot return nichil; and thereupon Levinz moved for an attachment against the bailiff; and it was granted, nisi.

DOMINUS REX versus LADSINGHAM.

Verdict. 2 Danv. Abr. 651, R. p. 1. 1 Lev. 299. 1 Vent. 97, 104. 1 Mod. 71, 288. 2 Keb. 687, 697. Postea 205.

An information was exhibited against Mr. Ladsingham of Devonshire, lord of a manor there, for oppressing his tenants, and for several misdemeanors; and upon not guilty pleaded, he was found guilty; and Stroud moved to set aside the verdict, because unduly given. The information being laid in Devonshire, and the trial there, and yet the jury gave a privy verdict in the county of the City of Excester, which was illegal. 1. To give a privy verdict in a criminal cause, contrary to Coke upon Litt. 227 b. 2. To give the verdict out of the county. But to both these the Court answered thus. To the first. 'Tis intended that no privy verdict can be given in criminal cases which concern life, as felony, because the jury are commanded to look upon the prisoner when they give their verdict, and so the prisoner is to be there present at the same time; but in criminal cases, where the defendant is not to be personally present at the time of the verdict, a privy verdict may be given. And as to the second. Custom hath always been to give the verdict in that place; and the Court did not think the first point fit to be moved, because contrary to the record, but however they resolved as before. Vide post.

Case. 1 Danv. Ab. 190, p. 3. 2 Keb. 688, 716.

A special action upon the case, wherein the plaintiff declares, that one Proctor brought an action against the plaintiff, in which the defendant was attorney for the said Proctor, and that there was a trial in the same against the now plaintiff; and that after the trial, and before the rules were out according to the custom of the Court, the defendant did enter judgment against the now plaintiff, by reason whereof he was prevented from moving in arrest of judgment. Upon this declaration the defendant demurred, but did not appear to maintain his demurrer. But Justice Twisden thinking it hard that an attorney should be sued after the said judgment was set aside, and consequently the plaintiff not damnified, respited the giving judgment for a while.

THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF WINDSOR versus GOVER.

Rent. 1 Lev. 308. 1 Vent. 98. 2 Saund. 296, 302. 2 Keb. 688, 722, 737, 775.

Debt for rent due for six years, upon a lease for years to the defendant, of tithes; the defendant as to the two years pleads nil debet, and as to the other four years he pleads, that before any of the said rent incurred, he assigned over the said lease and tithes to one Vaughan, of which the plaintiff had notice, and did receive rent from him; judgment si actio: and upon this the plaintiff demurred generally.

Jones for the plaintiff. The points are, 1. When the dean and chapter make a lease of tithes rendering rent, whether the money reserved be a sum in gross, or a rent. 2. Admitting it to be a rent, yet the case being concerning a politick body, whether the acceptance shall bind, as in case of a private person. 1. This is a sum in gross, and doth not pass by the grant of the rent, neither is the assignee liable thereto. 5 Co. 3 a. Juel's case, 2 Roll. 446 and 451. That rent issues not out of tithes. Co. Lit. 47 a. The rent shall not pass with the grant of the reversion. 2. Admitting that it be a rent, yet this acceptance alledged in the plea shall not bind the corporation, because they can do nothing but by attorney or bailiff made by their common seal, and cannot by themselves take notice of this assignment.

[195] Saunders for the defendant. If it should be a sum in gross, then the plaintiff had no cause of action, for all the days are not yet incurred; and 2 Cr. 111, Talentine versus Denton, it is a good lease, being for years: and it would be mischievous if it were not a good lease, for if it were only a personal contract it would only go to the executors of the dean or bishop, and not to the successor, which would be contrary to the intent of the parties; and it is a rent payable for the tithes, though not issuing out of the tithes. As to the second point, it shall be presumed that the plaintiff accepted the rent from Vaughan legally.

Twisden Justice. As to the second point 'tis resolved in Magdalen College's case, 11 Co. 79 a. that such acceptance is void. Adjournatur.

MORTLOCK versus CHARLETON. ERROR IN NOTTINGHAM.

Amerciament. 1 Danv. Abr. 479, H. p. 1. 2 Saund. 191. 1 Mod. 73. 2 Keb. 688, 704. 2 Rol. Rep. 45, Gerard vers. Warren. Vide post. Powel vers. Row.

Debt upon a bond; the defendant pleads non est factum, and afterwards relicta verificatione cognoscit actionem, and judgment for the plaintiff, and the defendant in misericordia; and this assigned for error, because the judgment ought to have been, that the defendant capiatur, 8 Co. 60 a. Breecher's case; but because 2 Cro. 64, Devis versus Clerk, is, that it shall be in misericordia, and so the books vary. Adjournatur.

YARD versus FORD.

Nusance. 1 Lev. 296. 2 Saund. 172. 1 Vent. 98. 1 Mod. 69. 2 Keb. 689, 706.

In an action upon the case. The plaintiff counts that he is possessed of the manor and borough of Newton Abbots in the county of Devon, and hath and ought to have a market every Tuesday in the said town; and that the defendant at Ashburton in the same county, within seven miles of the said Newton Abbots erected a new market, and keeps the same every Wednesday, to the plaintiff's prejudice. Upon non culp. pleaded, verdict was found for the plaintiff. And Jones for the defendant moved in arrest of judgment, that this action will not lie, because it appears that the erecting of this new market cannot be to the plaintiff's damage, it not being kept on the same day that the plaintiff's market is kept. 2 Rol. 140, pl. 2.

[196] Twisden Justice. There seems no difference when the new market is kept, whether on the same or any other day, so as it be to the plaintiff's prejudice, which is here found: but let it stay for a while to consider; et adjournatur. But afterwards it was adjudged for the plaintiff.

DOMINUS REX versus MORE.

Peace. 2 Keb. 689.

More together with Turner and Smith enter into a recognizance to the King, upon condition for the good behaviour of More; then More is indicted, for that he being so bound, did assault J. S. and so he hath forfeited his recognizance; and Williams moved to quash this indictment, because More ought to have been prosecuted by scire facias and not by indictment; and for this reason the indictment was quashed.

JONES versus POWEL. ERROR IN C. B. FOR WORDS.

Words. 1 Danv. Ab. 118, p. 1. 1 Lev. 297. 1 Vent. 98. 1 Mod. 272. 2 Keb. 710.

The plaintiff declares, that he is an Attorney of C. B. and that the defendant and he had discourse of the plaintiff, and of his profession; and that the defendant said to the plaintiff in auditu quamplurimorum, Thou canst not read a declaration, by reason of the speaking of which words, A. B. and C. the plaintiff's former clients deserted him, ad damnum. Upon not guilty, a verdict for the plaintiff, and a judgment; and the said judgment was affirmed.

DOMINUS REX versus ALLEN.

Usury. 2 Keb. 690. 1 Mod. 69.

An information upon 12 Car. 2, cap. 13, for taking excessive usury. The information is, that the defendant 16 November 20 Car. 2 did lend to J. S. 20l. till June then next following, and that afterwards, viz. ad finem termini prædicti, he took of the said J. S. corrupte & extorsive, for the loan aforesaid, 30s. which was above the rate by the said statute allowed. Upon not guilty pleaded, a verdict was found against the defendant; and Kelyng moved for him in arrest of judgment, because the corrupt agreement ought to be within the statute at the making of the contract, and not at the end of the term, as it is laid in the information.

[197] Twisden Justice. There is this difference, if the party who lends the money contracts for more than 6l. per cent. all the assurance is void: but if he doth not contract for more than the statute allows, and afterwards he will take more, the assurance shall not be avoided, but the party shall forfeit the treble value; as if a man when money was at 8l. per cent. lends money, and takes bond for the same, and then the statute of 12 Car. 2 is made, and he will continue the old interest upon that bond, the bond shall not be avoided by such acceptance of interest, but the party shall forfeit the treble value by the statute; but judgment was staid till the other side moved, because the Court would advise.

TWYFORD versus BERNARD. TRIN. 22 CAR. ROT. 586.

Obligation. 2 Keb. 690, 733.

Debt upon a bond of 300l. The defendant pleads that the said writing was delivered as an escrow to one Godfrey Woodward a stranger, upon condition, that if the plaintiff shall procure a demise of certain tenements to the defendant from a certain company in London, or should give good security that he would procure the said demise before such a day, that then the said Woodward should deliver the same, ut scriptum suum to the plaintiff, otherwise that he should keep the same in his hands; and the defendant pleads, that the said Woodward did not procure the said demise, nor give security as aforesaid; & sic non est factum suum. The plaintiff demurs, because he anwers not the deed, for Woodward never had authority to deliver his writing ut factum, but scriptum suum, which is not good; and such was the opinion of Twisden and Rainsford Justices; but Morton contra. But Simpson being of counsel for the defendant, moved that the plaintiff might take issue upon the special plea, scriptum being made factum; and judgment thereupon was staid entering for a time.

[198] FOXWIST AND FOUR OTHERS EXECUTORS OF MR. PINSENT, LATE ONE OF THE PROTHONOTARIES OF THE COMMON PLEAS, against TREMAIN. TRIN. 21 CAR. 2, ROT. 1512.

Executor. 1 Danv. Abr. 604, p. 3. 3 Danv. Abr. 412, p. 3. 1 Vent. 102. 1 Lev. 299. 1 Mod. 47, 72, 296. 2 Keb. 625, 633, 691, 698, 537. 1 Sid. 449. 2 Saund. 212. Vide post. 243 S. Barbe versus Burton.

Indebitatus assumpsit for monies received to the testator's use for damage clere. The defendant pleads in abatement, that two of the plaintiffs (and names them) are under the age of seventeen years. The plaintiff demurs, and whether the three that were of full age, and the infants ought to join in this action was the question. Coleman for the defendant, that they cannot join, because the infants under seventeen years are not capable of administering, but there ought to be an administrator durante minori ætate, as Sir Moil Finch's case is, and therefore they cannot be more able by being joined with others.

HATTON versus MASKEW AND ANOTHER.

Trin. 15 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 1117.

Executor. 3 Danv. Abr. 412, p. 3. 1 Lev. 181. 1 Lev. 750.

In a writ of error in the Exchequer-Chamber, upon a scire facias brought by Maskew and one other to have execution of a judgment in debt; the plaintiff sets forth in the writ of scire facias, that the testator made the plaintiff and another his executors, and that the other is under the age of seventeen years; and the defendant demurred upon the writ, for this very cause, that the other upon the plaintiff's own shewing was a joint executor, and not joined in the action. But resolved the writ was good, because the infant ought not to join, and so judgment was here given, and also affirmed in the Exchequer-Chamber.

Offley for the plaintiff. There is a difference where there is but one executor, and he an infant under the age of 17, and where there are other executors joined with such infant; for in the first case the infant cannot sue, but in the other case an infant may be joined with the others. True it is, the executors of full age may sue without the infant, and set it forth in their declaration, as in Hatton and Maskew's case cited by Coleman; but 'tis as well where they all join. [199] 1 Roll. 288, pl. 2, and the very case ruled in Yelverton 130, Smith versus Smith, and 3 Cro. 378. If three executors, and one be an infant, yet they shall all join in the action by an attorney, and the infant shall not sue by guardian, because they all make but as it were one person, and represent their testator jointly.

Twisden Justice. The action is well brought by all the executors jointly, and no administration can be granted during the minority of the infants, and all make but one person; and it may be brought either as Hatton and Maskew's case is, or this way, and both good. Sed adjornat. But afterwards adjudged quod def. respondeat ouster, by Rainsford and Moreton against Twisden, who held the plea good, because an infant is an executor, quoad esse, non quoad exercitium.

HAYMAN versus TRUANT.

Pleading. 1 Vent. 101. 1 Mod. 72. 2 Keb. 692.

In assumpsit. The plaintiff declares that the defendant such a day and year bargained and sold to the plaintiff certain corn, affirming the same to be his own, and warranting it to the plaintiff, whereas it was the corn of one Stokes, who since recovered damages against the plaintiff for the same. The defendant pleads a prior action for the same matter still depending in abatement of the bill. The plaintiff replies, that the contracts are several, and cause in the former action and this are several and for several matters, absque hoc, that they are for the same matter. And the defendant demurs specially, viz. because the plaintiff ought to have concluded to to the country, and not taken a traverse; for by that means the defendant might have rejoined, and so an infinity might be in the pleading; and so seems 3 Cro. 755, Huish versus Philips.

Twisden Justice. The pleading is well, and so is the constant practice. And the case of Huish and Philips was adjudged upon another point, viz. for defect in the plea, because it is, et prædictus Bush (un stranger) dicit, pro le defendant. As appears in Yelverton 38, & 3 Cro. 13, where the same case is also reported. Et judgment fuit done pur le plaintiff quod def. respond' oust'.

Damages. 2 Danv. Abr. 460, p. 12. 1 Lev. 299. 2 Saund. 169. 2 Keb. 693, 697.

In a special action upon the case for inticing his apprentice out of his service. The plaintiff declares, that 16 Car. 2 he entertained A. his apprentice to serve him for nine years, and that the defendant inticed the said A. from his said service, per quod he hath lost his service for the whole term of nine years: upon non culp. pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff.

And Saunders for the defendant moved in arrest of judgment, because the plaintiff hath brought his action too soon, or at least hath laid his damnification too large, because he hath alledged his damage to be by the loss of the apprentice's service for the whole term, whereas it appears that some years of the nine are yet to come; and so the jury have given damage for what the plaintiff hath not sustained loss, and the apprentice may return, and yet the plaintiff recover for his absence; and of this opinion was Justice Twisden, and therefore the judgment was staid till farther motion to be made by the plaintiff; and afterwards judgment was arrested, because the jury was guided by the per quod.

GUILLIAMS versus MUNNINGTON. HEREFORD.

Replevin. 1 Lev. 308. 1 Vent. 180.

On replevin for taking his cattle; the defendant avows for that A. was seised in fee in the place where, &c. and being seised, by his deed hic in Curia prolat', granted to Anne Munnington a rent-charge out of the said lands with a clause of distress to Anne Munnington, who by indenture of bargain and sale duly inrolled in the sessions at Hereford, granted the said rent and arrears thereof to the defendant; and because so much was in arrear, the defendant avows the taking. The plaintiff pleads in bar to this avowry, that the defendant took the said cattle de injuria sua propria, absque hoc, that the said Anne Munnington did grant the said rent and arrears to the defendant; and issue is taken thereupon, whether Anne Munnington did grant the rent and arrears to the defendant; and verdict for the defendant.

And Jones moved for the plaintiff in arrest of judgment. 1. Because the grant is alledged to be of a rent and of the arrearages thereof, and issue is taken thereupon, and the [201] jury find the grant of the rent and arrearages; whereas it is impossible that any such grant can be, because the arrears are not grantable over, because things in action, and therefore there ought to be a repleader in this case. Hob. 112, Tasker versus Salter, Moor 867, pl. 1198. 2 Cr. 131, Marham versus Pescod. And though issue be found for the avowant, yet it being impossible. 1. It will not be helped. 2 Cro. 682, Buckland versus Otely. 2. The avowant hath not made a good title to the rent, because he pleads it by way of bargain and sale, and that by virtue thereof, and of the statute for transferring uses into possession he was seised, and yet alledges no consideration, not so much as pro quadam pecuniæ summa, which is not good.

Twisden Justice. The first exception seems of little validity after verdict, but the second is material, and judgment staid until, &c.

DOMINUS REX versus SAUNDERS.

Scandal.

Information for writing a scandalous letter to Hatton Rich, brother to the Earl of Warwick, who was indebted to him 300l. and this Saunders having been delayed for three years by the said Mr. Rich's obtaining a protection, and at length taking the prison of the King's Bench, he wrote a letter to him, wherein he tells him, that if he had any honesty, civility, sobriety, or humanity, he would not deal so by him; and that he would one day be damned and be in hell for his cheating, or words to the like effect, and cited several places of Scripture to make good his allegations. And in the information was laid, that he published this letter in the presence quamplurimorum; and upon non culp. the defendant was found guilty of all; whereas (in truth) if the matter had been taken care of at the trial, the publication was not proved.

And now Saunders moved in arrest of judgment, for that the substance of the letter is not scandalous, but impertinent and insignificant, and shews a zeal in the defendant to manifest his sense of the injury he hath sustained by the non-payment of the money.

Twisden Justice. The letter is provocative, and tends to the incensing Mr. Rich to break the peace, and therefore an information lies: mes adjornat'. And afterwards the Court adjudged the letter scandalous; and Saunders was fined 40 marks.

[202] DOMINUS REX versus SYKES.

Perjury.

Information for perjury; upon not guilty pleaded, upon the trial the record of the trial wherein the defendant is alledged to be perjured, was produced, and it varied from what it was laid in the information, and at the Assises it was allowed to be found specially: and upon opening the verdict by Bigland for the defendant, it was resolved by Twisden Justice and the whole Court (absente Kelyng Chief Justice) that the jury cannot have conusance of any variance between the record and the information; but the Judge at the trial ought to have determined it; and so a venire facias de novo ought to issue.

POWEL versus ROW.

Amerciament. 1 Danv. Ab. 479 H. p. 1. 2 Keb. 674, 694. Vide ante Northlock versus Charlton.

Error to reverse a judgment given in Bristol. In an action of debt upon an obligation, the defendant pleads non est factum, and afterwards relicta verificatione confesses the action, and the judgment thereupon is entered, quod defendens sit in misericordia. And the error assigned was on that part of the judgment, whereas it ought to be capiatur, according to Dyer 67, pl. 19.

Aires for the defendant. That it is well enough, for that no book warrants the case in Dyer, but 8 Co. 60 a. Baker's case; and if we look into the reason, it is plain, that it ought to be misericordia, because the judgment is upon the confession of the action, and not upon the defendant's former plea: and of this opinion is 2 Cr. 64, Davidge versus Clark. Mich. 33 H. 6, 54 b. pl. 44. Mich. 34 H. 6, 20 a pl. 37. Keilw. 42 a. pl. 4. Rast. Intr. tit. Debt, in Recovery 4, and Judgment 3. 1 Roll. 224, Wrign's case, and so is the constant course, and so are all the precedents in B. R. and C. B. And the case of Dyer is but as he found it recorded, but Trin. 9 E. 4, 24 a. is misericordia.

Twisden Justice. As for the book of 2 Cr. it is but the opinion of Fenner and Williams againt Gawdy, and Coke and Dyer are for a capiatur, and therefore it seems it should be [203] so; but if the precedents are misericordia it will alter the case. Et adjornat'. Mich. 44 E. 3, 42 b. pl. 47. Mich. 45 E. 3, 11 a. pl. 4.

COCK versus HONYCHURCH.

Accord. 1 Danv. Ab. 240, p. 18. 2 Keb. 696.

Trespass and assault. The defendant pleads a concord between him and the plaintiff, viz. that he should pay the plaintiff 3l. in hand, and should undertake to pay the plaintiff's attorney's bill; and avers that he paid the 3l. and that he was always ready to have paid the attorney's bill, but he never shewed him any. To this the defendant demurred.

Pawlet for the defendant. That it is a good plea.

The grand objection is, That here is no execution of this agreement.

Resp. 'Tis an execution, for the payment of the 3l. is made, and the agreement is not to pay, but to undertake the payment of the attorney's bill, which is accordingly done. And upon his undertaking, the plaintiff or the attorney may have a remedy, and so good according to Plowd. 11 b. and in Peytoe's case, 9 Co. 77 b. there was an obligation given for payment of the money, and here is a promise made, which are of the same nature.

Twisden Justice. This accord is not good, because not executed; and of that opinion was the whole Court (absente Kelyng Chief Justice) and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

SMITH versus SMITH. ASSUMPSIT.

Assumpsit. 1 Mod. 284. 2 Keb. 695, 703.

The plaintiff declares, that he and the defendant were executors to A. and the defendant did receive all the estate of the testator, whereas a moiety thereof did and doth belong to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff did threaten the defendant to sue him to come to an account; and thereupon the defendant, in consideration that the plaintiff did promise to forbear the said suit, and to shew an account concerning the estate of the testator, the defendant promised to pay to the plaintiff 100l. The plaintiff avers that he did forbear the said suit, and did shew an account to the defendant, and yet that he hath not paid the 100l. Upon non assumpsit pleaded, and verdict for the plaintiff,

[204] Jones moved in arrest of judgment. 1. The plaintiff doth not set forth where he would have sued the defendant, and perhaps it was in some Court which had not jurisdiction. 2. He avers that he shewed quoddam compotum, which is not good; but he ought to have said compotum prædictum. Dyer 70 b. Pasch. 1 H. 7, 19, pl. 4. But notwithstanding these exceptions, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

PIERSON versus RIDDLEY. REPLEVIN.

Distress. 2 Danv. Ab. 636, p. 7. 1 Vent. 105. 2 Keb. 701, 739, 745.

The defendant avows the taking, for that he is seised of the manor of A. to which he hath a leet belonging, and that by custom time out of mind used, the inhabitants of D. used to send a constable to the said leet; and that he before H. his steward at A. held the said leet, and gave notice thereof at D. and that they did not send a constable, and thereupon the said steward imposed a fine of 39s. 11d. upon the inhabitants, and that he distrained the plaintiff for the said fine. The plaintiff traverses the custom, and found for the avowant.

And Shafto for the plaintiff moved in arrest of judgment for two causes. 1. Because the avowant ought to have alledged a custom to distrain for the fine, as well as for the sending the constable, which he hath not done. 1 Leon. 242, pl. 327. Blunt versus Whitacre, 11 Co. 44 b. Godfrey's case; for it is against common right. 2. The fine is unreasonable.

Weston contra. To the 1st. A distress is incident to a fine of common right; and when he alledges a custom to impose a fine, a distress is thereby implied, and it differs from an amerciament in a court baron.

To the 2d. All the ville is amerced, and 39s. is no great fine for a whole township.

Twisden Justice. When a duty is raised by custom, a distress for that duty must be maintained by the like custom. Sed adjornat'.

GIBBS versus STRATFORD.

Discontinuance. 2 Keb. 702.

Trespass of false imprisonment. The defendant justifies by virtue of an arrest in obedience to a precept out of Warwick Court, returnable ad proximam Curiam; and upon this the plaintiff demurs, because the process ought to [205] be returnable on a day certain, and not ad proximam Curiam; for so the Court not being held, the party may be perpetually imprisoned, and so is 2 Cr. 314. Johns versus Smith, Dyer 262 b. pl. 33. 3 Cr. 105, Leat versus Jennings.

Twisden Justice. The case of Dyer was good enough notwithstanding that error; but the judgment was reversed for other errors, as appears, 1 Roll. 486, pl. 2, Jesson versus Laxen. Sed adjornat'.

DOMINUS REX versus LESINGHAM. ANTEA 193.

Verdict. 2 Danv. Ab. 651 R. p. 1. 1 Lev. 209. 1 Vent. 104. 1 Mod. 71, 288.

Information. For that the defendant did outrageously make distresses upon his tenants, and was a perturber of the peace and common oppressor; and upon not guilty pleaded, the jury found him guilty.

And Jones moved in arrest of judgment, 1. For that at the common law a lord was not punishable for distraining, and so no information lies therefore; but the party is to be amerced by the Statute of Marlb. cap. 4, not fined, as he must be upon an information; and an action upon the case did lie at the common law. 2 Co. Inst. 107.

2. Admit that an information lies in this case, yet it is not good without shewing when he distrained, which is not done but in general, his tenants, which is uncertain; and also he ought to shew how the distresses were unreasonable.

3. The information is, that he is perturbator pacis & communis oppressor, which is too general; true it is, that communis barrectator without other circumstance is good, but in no other case, as communis latro, 29 Ass. pl. 45 a. as oppressor multorum hominum without saying whom, is not good. 2 Roll. 79, pl. 2. Moor 302, pl. 451, Cornwall's case.

Twisden Justice. The information can never be made good, because too general; and information lies not for distresses, because private offences: and so judgment was staid.

DENOVAN versus MASCAL.

Award. 1 Danv. Ab. 541, p. 5. 1 Lev. 302. 1 Mod. 274. 1 Keb. 714. Copping versus Hurrier, ante 187.

Debt upon an obligation, conditioned to stand to the award of A. and B. Ita quod they make their award upon or before the 19th of February, and if they shall make no award, then to stand to the umpirage of such a one as the arbitrators shall chuse. And the words are: But if they do [206] not award, then I bind myself to stand to the award of such umpire as they shall chuse. And upon nullum arbitrium pleaded, the plaintiff sets forth an umpirage, and the defendant demurs; and adjudged for the defendant; for though the arbitrators may chuse an umpire at any time during the continuance of their power, yet that umpire cannot act till the arbitrators time is expired, which in this case is now. By Twisden and Rainsford Justices.

DRAPER versus BLANEY.

Writs. 1 Lev. 291. 2 Keb. 649, 657, 724. 2 Saund. 193. Nedham versus Benet, ante 171.

Upon a judgment in this Court, a fieri facias issued out; and upon a nulla bona ret' in London, the plaintiff takes out a testatum fieri facias directed to the Sheriff of Montgomery to levy the monies in the hands of the defendant executor. The sheriff returns that this is a county in Wales, and that breve domini Regis non currit in Wallia.

And Saunders moved that the sheriff may be amerced, and amend his return. By the statute of 1 E. 6, cap. 10, the sheriffs of Wales ought to have their deputies in the Courts at Westminster, and the sheriff cannot dispute the process of the Court. 2. This writ doth lie in Wales. The question in the old books is concerning original writs, as quare impedit, &c. but no question concerning writs of execution, and by the statute of 27 H. 8, cap. 26, Wales is made parcel of the realm of England; and in 34 & 35 H. 8, cap. 26, there is a clause, that all process for weighty causes shall be directed into Wales by the Chancellor and Council, which is intended the Judges. And here is a weighty cause; for unless this process be allowed, the plaintiff hath no remedy for his debt; for an action of debt lies not in Wales upon judgment given here.

Object. The statutes of 1 E. 6, cap. 10, and 5 E. 6, cap. 26, in the recital.

Resp. An original out of the Chancery here doth not run in Wales, as in a County Palatine; but a writ of execution doth. Het. 18, Manser versus Lewys, elegit lies and a fieri facias, 2 Cr. 484, Carp's case, a certiorari, and by Dodderidge a capias upon a recovery, 2 Bulstr. 156, Bedo versus Piper, and 54, Hall versus Rotheram. And afterwards it was adjudged an ill return by Twisden, Rainsford and Morton Justices.

[207] VIVIAN versus WILLET.

Words. 1 Danv. Ab. 128, p. 40. 2 Keb. 718.

The plaintiff declares, that he was at the time of the words spoken, and yet is, a merchant; and there being a communication of him the defendant spake these words of him: I believe all is not well with Daniel Vivian; there are many merchants that have lately failed, and I expect no otherwise of Daniel Vivian. After verdict adjudged for the plaintiff.

WILSON versus ARMOURER.

Heir. 1 Lev. 287. 1 Vent. 78, 87, 106. 2 Keb. 642, 643, 667, 719. 3 Salk. 157.

Debt upon an obligation against the defendant as heir; the defendant pleads riens per discent, and issue taken that he had assets; and the jury find a special verdict, viz. that William Armourer the defendant's father, was seised in fee of the manor of D. and 8 April 1657, made a feoffment to Bray and others of all the said manor, except the two meadows in question, during his life, to the use of the defendant in tail; and whether the meadows excepted did descend to the defendant, was the question.

And after argument at the Bar several times, judgment was delivered by Mr. Justice Twisden in the name of the other Judges for the plaintiff, that the meadows did descend: wherein these points were proposed.

1. Whether the exception of these meadows for his life only, be a good exception? And resolved a void exception, because contrary to the rules of law to have a livery operate in futuro; otherwise perhaps it had been if the exception had been for years only.

2. Whether in this case the exception be all good, or all void? And as to this point some of the Judges differed. This is a quære in Plowd. Quæries 71, pl. 146. But though it be void, yet it doth amount to an indication of the intent of the feoffor, that the same should not be according to the limitations of the other lands. So Plowd. 85. Lease of an house with the lands thereto appertaining, though lands cannot properly belong to an house, yet it declares the intent of the party that it should pass, and so it is as much as therewith used. Perkins 13. Dyer 319. 11 Co. Auditor Curl's case. [208] And judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vid. Dyer 264 b. pl. 40. 1 Anders. 52, pl. 129.

Outlawry upon an inquisition for a deodand for the death of one Barker, existen' infra ætatem quatuordecim annorum.

Coleman moved to quash the inquisition, because no deodand is due therefore. 1 Stamf. cap. 12. 3 Co. Inst. Fitz. Corone, 8 E. 2.

Twisden and Morton Justices. There is no reason for that opinion. Mes adjornat.

HARRISON versus GROSVENER. REPLEVIN IN ESSEX.

Distress. 2 Keb. 692, 704, 726, 823, 836, 841.

The case was, Sir Thomas Smith devised his estate to trustees in fee to such charitable uses as the Lord Lumley, Sir Henry Hen, &c. shall dispose. They declare 5l. to the poor of the parish of St. Mary in Chester; and the commissioners decree that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of St. Mary shall distrain for this 5l. And upon this two questions were made: 1. Whether the commissioners may add a power of distress, where there was none by the original gift? And 2dly, Whether the commissioners in Cheshire can bind lands in Essex with such clause adjoined? Adjudged for the avowant in both points.

TERM. PASCH. 23 CAR. 2, B. R.

This term Sir Matthew Hale, Lord Chief Baron, was sworn Chief Justice of the King's Bench after the death of Sir John Kelyng, who was a learned, faithful and resolute Judge.

BURNET versus HOLDEN.

Executor. 3 Danv. 386, p. 13. 1 Lev. 277. 1 Mod. 6. 2 Keb. 549, 559, 592, 783, 800.

A scire facias against an executor to have execution upon a judgment obtained against the testator. The defendant demands oyer of the record, and by it it appears that the plaintiff brought an action upon the case upon a promise against the testator. And upon non assumpsit pleaded, a trial by Nisi Prius; and between the trial and day in bank the testator died. The defendant pleads a debt due to him from the testator upon an obligation, and that he retains so much in satisfaction of his said debt, and that he hath not assets ultra. The plaintiff demurred; and the sole question rests upon the construction of the statute of 17 Car. 2, cap. 8, whether that Act shall supply the death of the defendant, so as to make the judgment good against the defendant's debt; and after argument adjudged for the plaintiff.

Officer. Mandamus. 1 Vent. 143, 153. 2 Keb. 802, 807, 820.

Isles, sexton of the parish church of Kingsclere in Hampshire, moved for a mandamus to be restored to his office: and the Court gave time to consider, whether any precedents would warrant such a writ. And it was afterwards allowed.

DAVISON versus HANSLOP. ASSUMPSIT.

Executor. 1 Danv. Abr. 31, p. 11, 53, p. 33. 3 Danv. Ab. 380, p. 2. 2 Lev. 20. 1 Vent. 152. 2 Keb. 813. Oath. 1 Vent. 171. 2 Keb. 825, 830.

The plaintiff declares, that one Fenwick was in arrear to him in 100l. for an annuity, and that the defendant was bailiff and receiver of the rents of the said Fenwick, who appointed the defendant to account with the plaintiff, and to pay all which should be found in arrear of the annuity, out of the next rents due at Martinmas; and that upon an account there was 100l. found due to the plaintiff; and the defendant adtunc existens receptor of the rents of the said Fenwick assumed to the plaintiff, that if he would forbear the said arrears for a month after the said Martinmas, that he would pay the same, and avers, that he staid accordingly, and that yet the defendant hath not paid. Upon non assumpsit pleaded, a verdict was found for the plaintiff.

And Weston moved in arrest of judgment, for that it doth not appear that the defendant had effects in his hands at the time of the promise.

[212] Per Curiam. It shall be presumed that he had effects after a verdict, being alledged that he was adtunc receptor; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Theophilus Green and others were indicted at Justice Hall in the Old Baily for refusing the oath of allegiance contained in the Act of 3 Jac. cap. 4. And being convicted, judgment of præmunire was given against them according to the drections of that statute; and they brought a writ of error; and by Coleman assigned for error, that the oath injoined by that statute is not now in force, but expired with the death of King James: for that the words thereof are, That King James is rightful King, &c. and doth not mention his heirs or successors; and the statute says, they shall take the oath, and the indictment is, for refusing the oath, in his Anglicanis verbis, and sets forth the oath verbatim, and so it is not like 7 Jac. cap. 4, which orders taking the tenor of the said oath; and the words King JAMES shall not include his successors. Moor 176, pl. 311.

Hale Chief Justice. The constant practice hath been otherwise, and the same objection may be made to the oath in 1 Eliz. cap. 1. And the word tenor is as much as that it were verbatim; and the name of the person is only an instance of the thing intended, and the word King extends to his successors; and judgment was affirmed.

Murder. 1 Vent. 158. 2 Keb. 829.

John Manning was indicted in Surrey for murder, for the killing of a man. And upon not guilty pleaded, the jury at the Assizes find that the said Manning found the person killed committing adultery with his wife in the very act, and flung a jointed stool at him, and with the same killed him; and resolved by the whole Court, that this was but manslaughter; and Manning had his clergy at the Bar, and was burned in the hand; and the Court directed the executioner to burn him gently, because there could not be greater provocation than this.

[213] SACHEVEREL versus FROGATE. COVENANT.

Heir. 1 Vent. 148, 161. 2 Lev. 13. 2 Saund. 367. 2 Keb. 798, 819, 833, 839.

The plaintiff's ancestor (whose heir the plaintiff is) seised in fee, demises to the defendant, rendering rent to the lessor, his executors, administrators and assigns during the term. And the plaintiff declares as heir, and the defendant demurs in law; and adjudged for the plaintiff. For though the reservation be but to the lessor, his executors, &c. and not to his heirs, as it ought to be to intitle the heir, yet it being (during the term) it shall run with the reversion. And the case of Richmond and Butler, 3 Cr. 217, is mistaken in the law, for the case there intended, viz. 12 E. 3, Fitzh. Assise 86, is contrary, as appears by the antithesis there used. And Latch. 274, Wooton versus Edwyn is without the words durante termino; and agreeing with this judgment is Latch 99, Sury versus Brown.

Nota. Upon an indictment against Houghton of Somersetshire, for stopping a way, it was declared to be the course of this Court, that the offender is admitted to a fine upon his submission before verdict, if there be a certificate that the way is repaired. But if the party be convicted by verdict, such certificate will not serve, but the party ought to cause a constat to issue out to the sheriff, who ought to return, that the way is repaired, because the verdict, which is a record, ought to be answered with matter of record.

Extortion. 2 Lev. 71. 3 Keb. 32, 89, 92, 106, 151.

The lady Broughton, keeper of the Gate-house prison in Westminster, was informed against; and upon not guilty pleaded, she was found guilty; and her crime was extortion of fees, and hard usage of the prisoners in a most barbarous manner; and after she had by her counsel moved in arrest of judgment, and could not prevail, she had judgment given against her, viz. she was fined one hundred marks, removed from her office, and the custody of the prison was at present delivered to the Sheriff of Middlesex, till the dean and chapter should farther order the same, salvo jure cujuslibet.

Memorandum, This last vacation Justice Morton died, and all this term his place was vacant.

[217] TERM. HILL. 24 & 25 CAR. 2, B. R.

This last vacation Justice Archer was amoved from sitting in the Court of Common Pleas, pro quibusdam causis mihi incognitis; but the Judge having his patent to be Judge quamdiu se bene gesserit, refused to surrender his patent without a scire facias, and continued justice of that Court, though prohibited to sit there, and in his place Sir William Ellis, Knight, was sworn.

Also the day before this term began, Justice Wild was removed out of the Court of Common Pleas into this Court, and sworn privately; and in his room Baron Windham was sworn to be one of the Judges of the Common Pleas, and in his place Sir Edward Thurland, Knight, of the Inner Temple, the second day of this term was made serjeant at law, having his coif put on in the Treasury, and immediately sworn one of the Barons of the Exchequer.

Also this vacation Sir Orlando Bridgman, Knight and Baronet, was removed from being Lord Keeper, and in his place Anthony Earl of Shaftsbury, was made Lord High Chancellor of England.

Also this last vacation Francis Winnington, utter barrister of the Middle Temple, was knighted, and made solicitor to the Duke of York, and the first day of this term was called within the Bar.

Serjeant Baldwin was made King's Serjeant.

BLACKET versus LUMLEY.

Error. 1 Vent. 240. 3 Keb. 103, 116.

A writ of error to reverse a judgment given in the court of the Royal manor of Hexham in Northumberland. In a replevin the defendant avows for damage-feasant; the plaintiff pleads in bar to the avowry, that Fenwick was seised in fee of the manor of Fallowfield, and that he and all those whose estate, &c. have used time out of mind to have common of pasture in loco in quo, &c. for all his farmers and copyholders; and that he is a copyholder, and held of the said manor, and justifies for common belonging [218] thereunto. The avowant replies and traverses the prescription, and it is found against him; and judgment for the plaintiff; and now the errors assigned were, the venire facias is ill awarded, for that it is præceptum est per seneschallum Cur. præd. quod ven. fac. duodecim tam de vicineto de Hexam quam de vicineto manerii de Fallowfield infra jurisdictionem, &c. quia nec, &c. quod sint hic ad horam secundam post meridiem hujus diei.

1. 'Tis not per Cur. nor per seneschallum in Cur. and it may be it was out of Court, and process in private jurisdictions shall not be taken by intendment; and of this opinion were Twisden and Wild; but Hale Chief Justice contra, because 'tis returned the same day; and the Court shall be presumed to be continued the whole day.

2. The manor of Fallowfield is not laid to be within the jurisdiction, as it ought to be, in the pleading of the prescription; and the saying in the awarding of the venire facias that 'tis so is not sufficient. And to this opinion Hale agreed.

3. The quia nec for qui nec is not good; but they ought to have put it at large, and not as 'tis in B. R. And quia nec is nonsense. And Twisden and Wild allowed this exception; but Hale Chief Justice did not; but upon the consideration of all the exceptions, judgment was reversed, and so pronounced.

shall forfeit the treble value by the statute; but judgment was staid till the other side moved, because the Court would advise.

TWYFORD versus BERNARD. TRIN. 22 CAR. ROT. 586.

Obligation. 2 Keb. 690, 733.

Debt upon a bond of 300l. The defendant pleads that the said writing was delivered as an escrow to one Godfrey Woodward a stranger, upon condition, that if the plaintiff shall procure a demise of certain tenements to the defendant from a certain company in London, or should give good security that he would procure the said demise before such a day, that then the said Woodward should deliver the same, ut scriptum suum to the plaintiff, otherwise that he should keep the same in his hands; and the defendant pleads, that the said Woodward did not procure the said demise, nor give security as aforesaid; & sic non est factum suum. The plaintiff demurs, because he anwers not the deed, for Woodward never had authority to deliver his writing ut factum, but scriptum suum, which is not good; and such was the opinion of Twisden and Rainsford Justices; but Morton contra. But Simpson being of counsel for the defendant, moved that the plaintiff might take issue upon the special plea, scriptum being made factum; and judgment thereupon was staid entering for a time.

Executor. 1 Danv. Abr. 604, p. 3. 3 Danv. Abr. 412, p. 3. 1 Vent. 102. 1 Lev. 299. 1 Mod. 47, 72, 296. 2 Keb. 625, 633, 691, 698, 537. 1 Sid. 449. 2 Saund. 212. Vide post. 243 S. Barbe versus Burton.

Indebitatus assumpsit for monies received to the testator's use for damage clere. The defendant pleads in abatement, that two of the plaintiffs (and names them) are under the age of seventeen years. The plaintiff demurs, and whether the three that were of full age, and the infants ought to join in this action was the question. Coleman for the defendant, that they cannot join, because the infants under seventeen years are not capable of administering, but there ought to be an administrator durante minori ætate, as Sir Moil Finch's case is, and therefore they cannot be more able by being joined with others.

HATTON versus MASKEW AND ANOTHER.

Trin. 15 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 1117.

Executor. 3 Danv. Abr. 412, p. 3. 1 Lev. 181. 1 Lev. 750.

In a writ of error in the Exchequer-Chamber, upon a scire facias brought by Maskew and one other to have execution of a judgment in debt; the plaintiff sets forth in the writ of scire facias, that the testator made the plaintiff and another his executors, and that the other is under the age of seventeen years; and the defendant demurred upon the writ, for this very cause, that the other upon the plaintiff's own shewing was a joint executor, and not joined in the action. But resolved the writ was good, because the infant ought not to join, and so judgment was here given, and also affirmed in the Exchequer-Chamber.

Offley for the plaintiff. There is a difference where there is but one executor, and he an infant under the age of 17, and where there are other executors joined with such infant; for in the first case the infant cannot sue, but in the other case an infant may be joined with the others. True it is, the executors of full age may sue without the infant, and set it forth in their declaration, as in Hatton and Maskew's case cited by Coleman; but 'tis as well where they all join. [199] 1 Roll. 288, pl. 2, and the very case ruled in Yelverton 130, Smith versus Smith, and 3 Cro. 378. If three executors, and one be an infant, yet they shall all join in the action by an attorney, and the infant shall not sue by guardian, because they all make but as it were one person, and represent their testator jointly.

Twisden Justice. The action is well brought by all the executors jointly, and no administration can be granted during the minority of the infants, and all make but one person; and it may be brought either as Hatton and Maskew's case is, or this way, and both good. Sed adjornat. But afterwards adjudged quod def. respondeat ouster, by Rainsford and Moreton against Twisden, who held the plea good, because an infant is an executor, quoad esse, non quoad exercitium.

HAYMAN versus TRUANT.

Pleading. 1 Vent. 101. 1 Mod. 72. 2 Keb. 692.

In assumpsit. The plaintiff declares that the defendant such a day and year bargained and sold to the plaintiff certain corn, affirming the same to be his own, and warranting it to the plaintiff, whereas it was the corn of one Stokes, who since recovered damages against the plaintiff for the same. The defendant pleads a prior action for the same matter still depending in abatement of the bill. The plaintiff replies, that the contracts are several, and cause in the former action and this are several and for several matters, absque hoc, that they are for the same matter. And the defendant demurs specially, viz. because the plaintiff ought to have concluded to to the country, and not taken a traverse; for by that means the defendant might have rejoined, and so an infinity might be in the pleading; and so seems 3 Cro. 755, Huish versus Philips.

Twisden Justice. The pleading is well, and so is the constant practice. And the case of Huish and Philips was adjudged upon another point, viz. for defect in the plea, because it is, et prædictus Bush (un stranger) dicit, pro le defendant. As appears in Yelverton 38, & 3 Cro. 13, where the same case is also reported. Et judgment fuit done pur le plaintiff quod def. respond' oust'.

Damages. 2 Danv. Abr. 460, p. 12. 1 Lev. 299. 2 Saund. 169. 2 Keb. 693, 697.

In a special action upon the case for inticing his apprentice out of his service. The plaintiff declares, that 16 Car. 2 he entertained A. his apprentice to serve him for nine years, and that the defendant inticed the said A. from his said service, per quod he hath lost his service for the whole term of nine years: upon non culp. pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff.

And Saunders for the defendant moved in arrest of judgment, because the plaintiff hath brought his action too soon, or at least hath laid his damnification too large, because he hath alledged his damage to be by the loss of the apprentice's service for the whole term, whereas it appears that some years of the nine are yet to come; and so the jury have given damage for what the plaintiff hath not sustained loss, and the apprentice may return, and yet the plaintiff recover for his absence; and of this opinion was Justice Twisden, and therefore the judgment was staid till farther motion to be made by the plaintiff; and afterwards judgment was arrested, because the jury was guided by the per quod.

GUILLIAMS versus MUNNINGTON. HEREFORD.

Replevin. 1 Lev. 308. 1 Vent. 180.

On replevin for taking his cattle; the defendant avows for that A. was seised in fee in the place where, &c. and being seised, by his deed hic in Curia prolat', granted to Anne Munnington a rent-charge out of the said lands with a clause of distress to Anne Munnington, who by indenture of bargain and sale duly inrolled in the sessions at Hereford, granted the said rent and arrears thereof to the defendant; and because Debt. 2 Danv. Abr. 501, p. 13. 2 Lev. 80. 1 Vent. 242. 3 Keb. 131, 137.

MOSEDEL versus MIDDLETON. COVENANT.

Covenant. 1 Vent. 237. 3 Keb. 133.

The plaintiff declares, that the defendant covenanted for the true imprisonment of J. S. who escaped, and that thereupon the plaintiff was sued, and was forced to pay the debt. The defendant pleaded the statute of 8 H. 6, and that the covenant was for ease and favour of J. S. The plaintiff replied, that the said covenant was entered into for better security, absq. hoc, that it was for ease and favour; and the defendant demurred, and judgment was given for the defendant, nisi, because there was a covenant to pay chamber-rent, &c. which in itself is for ease and favour.

[223] TERM. PASCH. 25 CAR. 2, B. R.

YOUNG versus CAGE.

Amendment. 1 Danv. Abr. 337, p. 46. 3 Keb. 138.

Debt upon a bond. Judgment was had by default by the plaintiff as executor; and the attorney had left out, et profert hic in Cur. literas testamentarias; but the plaintiff is called executor in the declaration; and the defendant having brought a writ of error, Simpson moved to have the record amended in this particular, and to have those words inserted. But it was denied, because whether the plaintiff was executor or not, is matter of fact, and 'tis no reason to allow that to be true, which may be otherwise, without any proof but the plaintiff's own suggestion.

[224] TERM. MICH. 25 CAR. 2, B. R.

SYMS versus SYM. TRIN. 25 CAR. 2, ROT. 672.

Executor. 2 Lev. 90. 3 Keb. 206.

Debt for rent. Upon special pleading the case was this; lessee for years dies intestate. In May 1669 administration was granted of his goods to A. who assigns this term to B. who assigns to C. who surrenders to the reversioner; afterwards a third person cites the administrator before the Ordinary to repeal the administration, who confirms the same; then the third person appeals from that sentence to the Dean of the Arches, where the sentence is avoided, and administration granted to the appellant; and whether this avoidance of the sentence shall void all acts done by the administrator before the action, was the question. And resolved by Hale Chief Justice, Rainsford and Wild, absente Twisden, that it shall not; but is the same in effect with Packman's case; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

DINSDALE versus ILES.

Estate. 3 Danv. Ab. 234, p. 9. 1 Vent. 247. 2 Lev. 88. 3 Keb. 166, 207.

Trespass for taking of goods. The defendant pleads that he let the land where the taking is supposed to be, to Iles at will, rendering rent at May-Day, and the Feast of St. Martin the Bishop, in winter; and for rent arrear at Martinmas 21 Car. 2, the defendant justifies the taking the goods as a distress. The plaintiff replies, and confesses the lease; but farther, that before the rent became due, viz. in August 21 Car. 2, the defendant let the same land to Iles for years, rendering rent, who entered and was possessed; and so the lease at will to Iles was determined. The defendant rejoins, that in the said lease it was agreed, that the lessee should not enter till after Martinmas, absque hoc, that he entered prout. The plaintiff surrejoins, that he leased prout, absque hoc, that it was so agreed. And the [225] defendant demurs; and adjudged for the plaintiff, because the lease for years was a determination of the estate at will; and though upon the whole matter, and by virtue of the agreement it was a lease by computation from August, and in point of interest but from Martinmas; yet as this case is pleaded, where the plaintiff acknowledges the lease to commence in interest in August, the estate at will was determined.

FOSSET versus FRANCKLIN. DEBT UPON 2 E. 6 FOR TITHES.

Tithes. 2 Danv. Ab. 620, p. 5. 3 Keb. 208, 217.

The lands were parcel of the possession of the Prior of St. John of Jerusalem, and came to the Crown by 32 H. 8, cap. 24, and parcel of St. John Wood in the parish of Marybone and Hampstead, and whether they are discharged from payment of tithes, by 32 H. 8, cap. 24, was the question upon a trial at Bar, and a special verdict found thereupon. But it seemed to Hale Chief Justice, that they shall not pay tithes, by reason of the word (privileges,) and in Whitty versus Weston, Bridgman 32. Latch. 89. Godbolt 392, pl. 478, the Court was divided. But 2 Cro. 57. Moor 913, pl. 1291, Cornwallis versus Spurling, in debt upon 2 E. 6, judgment was given that the lands are tithable; and so in a prohibition, 2 Brownl. 8, 20, Urrey versus Bowen. Adjournatur. But Dyer 277 b. pl. 60 is, that they are not tithable. And judgment was afterwards given for the defendant, and resolved the lands are not tithable.

THE BISHOP OF EXON' AND MASTER HIS VICAR GENERAL versus STAR.

Excommunication. 3 Danv. 279, p. 1. 1 Vent. 166. 2 Lev. 36. 2 Keb. 814, 836, 848, 873. 3 Keb. 219, 285.

Debt upon an obligation of 20l. The defendant demands oyer of the condition, which is, that whereas the defendant standeth excommunicated in the Ecclesiastical Court, and is to be assoiled, if therefore he do abide by and stand to omnibus mandatis ecclesiæ, that then, &c. The defendant pleads, that he gave this bond to be freed from excommunication, and that the same is void in law, and so he ought not to be impleaded thereupon. The plaintiff demurs generally. Master for the plaintiff, The single question is, whether a bond given for caution be good? [226] It is clear, that before an excommunicate person be assoiled, he must give caution, and to compel the Ordinary to take the same a writ lies at the common law, de cautione admittenda, F. N. B. 63 c. which must be idonea cautio & ad parend' mandatis ecclesiæ, Regist. Orig. 66 and 67. And an action upon the case lies against the bishop for not taking such caution, if the person excommunicated requires it, Co. 2 Inst. 623, or the bishop may be indicted, ibid. But what is idonea cautio is left to the Spiritual Court to determine; and our law is not judge thereof. And there are three sorts of cautions, 1. Juratoria, when the party is poor and can give no other security. 2. Fide-jussoria, by bond or other security. 3. Pignoratitia, by pledge, as plate, money or other goods; and this is mentioned, Regist. 66 a. 67 b. It is called security, Flet. lib. 6, cap. 45, page 438, & Canon Aug. 354. Caution upon marriage. 2. This caution must be the act of the party excommunicate, he must tender it, and the Judge is not bound to require it. 3. This caution by an obligation is more for the ease of the party than a pledge. 4. 'Tis the constant practice and use of the Ecclesiastical Court. 'Tis not void by the common law, because it is to do a lawful thing. It is not void by statute law, nor within 23 H. 6, cap. 10, and 5 Eliz. cap. 23 saves the right and jurisdiction of the bishops.

Object. 1 Bulst. 122.

Resp. 2 Inst. 615. If the cause be of ecclesiastical cognizance, the Temporal Court will not intermeddle therewith; and in homine replegiando, the party must put in pledges, and find sufficientem cautionem. F. N. B. 66.

Jones for the defendant. He made three points. 1. If any bond ought to be given to the bishop. 2. If this bond be good in law. 3. Admit it not to be good, then whether it may be avoided by plea.

1. There ought not any bond to be given to the bishop. True it is F. N. B. 63 speaks of caution, but not of security by bond; and Regist. 66 and 67 describes the caution to be pignoratitia; and the reason is, because the caution is controllable by the successor, and not by the executors of the bishop, as it will be in case of a bond.

2. This bond is not good, because the same ought to be given to the bishop, or to his surrogate; and here it is given to the bishop and his vicar general.

And as to the objection, that it is the usage and practice,

'Tis answered. Such usage never came judicially in question.

[227] This bond is void by the common law, Moor 864, pl. 1191, Slawny versus Elbridge, in case of distribution, Stile 456, Davies versus Mathews. And here it will be a vexation to the people to have bonds put in suit against them.

Hale Chief Justice. The case in Bulstr. is by the whole Court, that such bond is not good; and the case of distribution hath been variously ruled, till the late statute.

Wild Justice. Such bonds have been frequent, and have been allowed in C. B.

Hale Chief Justice. A bond conditioned to perform a by-law hath been ruled naught. Adjournatur.

KING versus WELBY.

Prohibition. 3 Keb. 221.

The plaintiff had a judgment at law against the defendant, who exhibited his bill in Chancery to be relieved against this judgment, and the plaintiff pleaded this judgment, and over-ruled. And the plaintiff by Sanders moved for a prohibition, grounding his suggestion upon the statute of 4 H. 4, cap. 23. Et adjournatur.

And afterwards Hale Chief Justice directed, that the plaintiff should move the Court of Chancery to have the plea set down again to be heard, and when it should be over-ruled again, then the Court would consider whether a prohibition should be granted.

WRIGHT versus WOODHOUSE.

Costs. 3 Keb. 141, 228.

Trespass for entering his house, and taking a cup of silver. The defendant justifies by virtue of a clause in the Act of 16 Car. 2, cap. 2, That if any person occupying any hearth or stove, chargeable to His Majesty, shall leave any house before any of the half-yearly feasts, whereon the same is appointed to be paid; the next occupier thereof shall be chargeable with the same for the said half-year, and that the plaintiff was next occupier to him who was in arrear. The plaintiff demurs; and adjudged for the defendant; and now Winnington moved for the defendant to have treble costs, according to the Act of 14 Car. 2, cap. 10, which gives treble costs against any plaintiff, who shall have judgment against him in any action brought for acting by that Act; and the Court doubted whether this Act [228] of 14 Car. 2 be a continuation of 16 Car. 2 as to this particular. Et adjournatur.

Trespass. 3 Keb. 228, 250.

Trespass quare clausum fregit pedibus ambulando & prosternere ses fences, continuando transgression. præd. from such a day to such a day, ad damnum, &c. And after verdict, upon non. culp. it was moved in arrest of judgment, because there can be no continuando in breaking of fences. As if I bring an action of trespass for taking my horse, and using him twenty days; I cannot lay it with a continuando. So for cutting of trees. Mich. 20 H. 7, 3, pl. 7. 2 Roll. 549, pl. 5. Et adjournatur.

PYBUS versus MITFORD. EJECTMENT IN NORTHUMBERLAND.

Estate. 2 Danv. Ab. 556, p. 2. 3 Danv. Ab. 158, p. 8. 2 Lev. 75. 1 Vent. 372. 1 Mod. 121, 159. 3 Keb. 129, 239, 316, 338.

Of the demise of Gray and his wife. Upon not guilty, the jury found a special verdict, that Michael Mitford was seised in fee, and had issue two sons, viz. Robert by his first wife, and Ralph by his second wife, whose name was Jane, and so being seised 23 Jan. 21 Jac. by indenture covenanted to stand seised of the lands in the declaration mentioned after the date of the indenture, to the use of the heirs males of his body begotten on the body of his said wife Jane, with remainders to his own right heirs, and dies. 16 Car. 1, Robert enters and levies a fine to the use of himself and Mary his wife, and the heirs of their bodies, and dies without issue. Mary marries the lessor of the plaintiff; the defendant Ralph enters, and the jury concluded, that if any use did arise to Ralph by the said indenture of 21 Jac. then they find for the defendant, otherwise for the plaintiff.

Jones Solicitor General for the plaintiff. That no use arises to the issue of the second wife. Here are two points. 1. If by this covenant an estate be raised by way of future use, to commence after the death of Michael the covenantor. 2. Admitting that no estate do arise, whether an estate by implication does arise to the heirs of the second wife. 1. No estate arises here as a future use, for these reasons. [229] 1. An use may arise in futuro to a person in esse; but it cannot be limited to one in being, to commence after the death of the covenantor, because a covenant shall not bind the heir, where the ancestor is not bound, and (ergo) a covenant that land shall remain to A. after my death, doth not raise an use. 21 H. 7, 18, pl. 30. Dyer 55 a. pl. 3. Hob. 313. 2. Whether this shall amount to a covenant to stand seised to the use of him and the heirs of his body; and I hold it doth not. 1. Here appeareth no intent to charge the estate in the life-time of the covenantor. Suppose I covenant, that after the death of J. S. I will stand seised to the use of J. D. that is by way of future use.

Object. 1 Co. 129 a. Covenant, that after his death his son shall have his land, raises a use to the son.

Resp. That case is only alledged by counsel, and not by the Judges. And Winch 61, Buckley and Simond's case is contrary, and so is Mitford's case. Coke on Litt. 22 b. And a man cannot make his right heirs purchasors.

Levinz for the defendant. 1. Here is a good use raised to Michael Mitford the father by implication, viz. to him for life, the remainder to the heirs of his body; and this appears by The Lord Paget's case, 1 Co. 154 a. where the estate to Farmer, and others, during the life of the Lord Paget being void, and the other estates not being to commence till after his death; the Lord Paget was resolved to have an estate for his life by implication. 1 Anderson, 263, pl. 270. Moor 284, pl. 437, Fenwick versus Mitford. 1 Anderson 288, pl. 297. 1 Leon. 182, pl. 256. 1 Leon. 101, pl. 133, Allen versus Palmer. Surrender to the use of the right heirs of the copy-holder; and it is frequent for uses to arise by implication, 2 Leon. 218, pl. 275, Humphreton's case, the mind of the party doth direct the estate. 1 Anderson 245, pl. 258.

2. Admit that there cannot be such an use by implication; yet this is a good use to commence after his death, as a new springing use.

Object. This covenant shall operate by way of contract.

Resp. It may do so in a subject proper for it; but here the land is bound by it. As to the case of Dyer 55 a. it is not a covenant to stand seised; for if it had been so, an use would have arisen. 2 Roll. 788, pl. 1, Buckler versus Simonds. And here the covenant would be void if it did not raise a use; and springing uses frequently happen upon a contingent. 1 Co. 155 b.

[230] Hale Chief Justice. If a man covenant to stand seised after his death, it will raise a use to commence after his death, as well as during his life; for though the heir is not bound where the ancestor is not bound, yet land may be charged in the hands of the heir by the ancestor, and a use doth charge the land; but there may be improper words to charge the land, as the case of H. 7 and Dyer 55 is.

If H. covenants to stand seised after his death to the use of J. D. he hath the fee till his death. Paget's case comes not home to this case, because there was only an estate for life drawn out, and no contingent use. Here are clauses in the deed, which shew that it was never intended that there should be an immediate estate upon the heir. Adjournatur.

Winnington for the plaintiff. Here are three points. 1. If here be a contingent use raised? And I hold there is not. 2. Whether any estate arises to the covenantor by implication? And I hold there doth not. 3. Whether the issue by the second venter shall not take by purchase? And I hold he shall.

1. A future use may be raised upon a contingent. Plowd. 301, Sherington versus Pledal, & in futuro. 2. Here is no estate-tail vested in the covenantor, because no intent of the parties so to have it; but by implication he hath an estate for his life. The covenantor is in of his ancient seisin till the use arise, and not as in case where a use arises by transmutation of possession; and here is a new use raised, and therefore Michael could not be in of an estate-tail executed. 3. Ralph shall not take as a purchasor, for here is a description of the person, rather than a limitation of the estate.

Saunders for the defendant. Ralph here shall take quasi by discent. Adjournatur. And judgment given for the defendant.

Bradley versus Hutchinson, Executor.

Amendment.

A scire facias upon a judgment in debt. The defendant pleads pleinment administre generally; and the plaintiff demurs specially for that cause.

And Jones Solicitor General moved to amend the plea, because the defendant ought to have pleaded specially.

[231] Hale Chief Justice. The judgment binds the goods, and therefore it shall be presumed that the same were rightfully administered.

Twisden Justice. It hath been adjudged a good plea; but let the plea be amended, if the defendant will.

Okeover versus Overbury. Error, Fine in C. B.

Error. 1 Vent. 252. 3 Keb. 259.

In a writ of error to reverse a fine, infancy is assigned for error, and a scire facias issues to Overbury, ter-tenant and conusee, who pleads in nullo est erratum.

Hale Chief Justice. When error in fact is well assigned for error, in nullo est erratum amounts to a confession of the fact; as if infancy be assigned, the plaintiff cannot plead in nullo est erratum, because by it he confesseth the infancy, but he ought to take issue; but if the party assign for error, that the Court did not sit, or that the defendant did not appear, which assignments are of matters of fact, but not well made, there in nullo est erratum amounts to a demurrer.

Captain Waters being a captain in the Foot Guards, and his serjeant rescued one of his soldiers of his company from the custody of the sheriffs of London, and for that offence an information was exhibited against them, and they came into Court and confessed the fact; and upon that confession judgment was given against them, and the captain was fined 100l. and the serjeant 50l. and imprisonment awarded against them until payment of the same.

SOUTHAM versus ALLEN, FOR WORDS.

Words.

The plaintiff is a keeper of livery stables and an inn at the Belsavage; and the defendant had other stables for the same purpose, in the same yard. A stranger comes with a waggon into the yard, and demands of the defendant, which is Belsavage-Inn? the defendant replied, This is Belsavage Inn, deal not with the plaintiff, for he is broke, and there is neither entertainment for man or horse; and after verdict for the plaintiff, and great damages, judgment was given for the plaintiff after much debate.

Condition. 2 Danv. 39, p. 33. 2 Lev. 95. 1 Vent. 255. 1 Mod. 104. 3 Keb. 273.

Debt upon an obligation, upon condition that the defendant shall well and sufficiently execute, to the satisfaction of the plaintiff's counsel, a release within seven days after a decree of a moiety of the money decreed. The defendant pleads, that the plaintiff did not tender any release. The plaintiff demurs.

Hale Chief Justice. If advice had been necessary, then the plaintiff must have done the first act, but now it is at the peril of the defendant, that the release be to the satisfaction of the plaintiff's counsel; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

PRIDEAUX versus WARNE. REPLEVIN.

Custom. 2 Danv. Ab. 428, p. 6. 2 Lev. 96. 1 Mod. 104. 3 Keb. 249, 275.

For taking of a sail of a ship; the defendant avows the taking, for that he is seised of the manor of Padstow, within which there is a common key, extending from such a place to such a place, for the unlading of salt, and that he and all those, &c. have used to repair the said key, and have kept a bushel for measuring of salt, and that they have had of every ship arriving there, laden with salt, one bushel of salt; and that the plaintiff had a ship arrived at the key laden with salt; and because a bushel of salt was not paid according to the prescription, he avows the taking of the said sail. The plaintiff pleads in bar of this avowry, that the river upon which this key is pretended, is a great river of ten miles breadth, and that the key extends but half a mile, and that the ship arrived seven miles distant, absq; hoc, that the said ship did arrive at the key within the said manor. The defendant demurred.

Pollexfen for the avowant. 1. Whether this be a good prescription without keeping a bushel, or repairing the key? and it seems it is. 21 H. 7, 16. Br. Prescription 92. 3 Cro. 710. Dyer 352 b. And the not coming up to the key makes nothing against the avowant, because he can come up if he please. Co. 2 Inst. 222. Murage. Roll. Prescription 265, for Dublin, Tronage, 1 Leon. 231.

Object. 'Tis out of the manor.

Resp. He may claim such a privilege in another manor.

[233] 2. The taking of the sail is lawful, because, 1. Though it is not the goods of him who ought to pay the duty; yet it is well enough, for that is not necessary. Pasch. 21 Car. 2, Welch versus Bell, 1 Roll. 666, Agard versus Lisle.

Courtney contra, for the plaintiff. It is no good prescription, because it hath no good foundation nor meritorious consideration. For 1. Reparation of the key extends only to ships lying at the same to lade and unlade; and the keeping of a bushel is no cause, no more than the case of aulnage, 1 H. 4, 14. Dyer 117. 2. This is a duty from the merchant, not from the ship. 3. The sail is an unreasonable distress, because it disables the whole ship.

Hale Chief Justice. This prescription is only for a wharf, not for a port, and here ought to be reasonable recompence for the prescription. For Magna Charta says, Omnes mercatores peregrinos, &c. without unreasonable toll; and he who hath a port ought to find and provide weights and measures, and other things. And in this case the avowant may as well prescribe to the confines of France, and therefore it is not a good prescription; as the case of The Belman of Litchfield, More; and it is not said what salt was in the ship, and there may not be above two bushels; and therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Assumpsit and trover in one declaration. DUNKIN versus FRANCES MUN WIDOW, ADMINISTRATRIX WITH THE WILL ANNEXED OF QUARLES BROWN DURING THE MINORITY OF MARGARET BROWN.

Devise.

The case was, that in 1663, Quarles Brown made his will in writing, and made Michael Dunkin, the plaintiff's father, and three others his executors, in trust for Margaret, and died 1667, administration, with the will annexed, was granted to the said Michael Dunkin the father. In October 1673, Michael Dunkin the father makes his will, and the plaintiff his executor, and dies; the defendant takes out administration of Quarles Brown's estate for the use of Margaret, and puts in a caveat against the now plaintiff's proving his father's will, and prays that the said will may not be proved till a commission of appraisement hath issued out, to appraise the goods of Michael Dunkin deceased, and a commission of inspection to view the books, papers and writings of the said deceased, and had them. The plaintiff appeals to the delegates, where Mun put in her allegations.

And the plaintiff moved by Sir Francis Winnington for a mandamus to be directed to the Judge of the Prerogative Court to command him to proceed in proving the will; and alledged F. N. B. 63, de cautione admittenda, and the case of The Chrisms, Ejectment for Newport house of the demise of George Porter. Upon non culp. a special verdict. The Earl of Newport was seised in fee, and had issue three sons yet living, and two daughters Anne and Isabel; Isabel married the Earl of Banbury, by whom she had issue Anne, now defendant; the other sister Anne was married to Thomas Porter, by whom she had issue George Porter, the lessor of the plaintiff. 8 Feb. 18 Car. 2, the Earl of Newport made his will in writing, and devised the house to his wife for her life, remainder to the defendant Anne and the heirs of her body, under this condition (on which the case depends) viz.

Provided always and upon condition, that if my said grandchild do marry without the consent of my said wife, Charles Earl of Warwick, and Edward Earl of Manchester, and the major part of them; and in case the said Lady Anne Knowles do or shall marry without the consent of the major part of my [237] said trustees, or shall happen to depart this life without issue of her body, then I will and bequeath the said premisses unto my grandchild George Porter, son of my said deceased daughter Lady Anne, late wife of Thomas Porter, and his heirs for ever.

18 Aug. 1667, Anne marries Christopher Fry without the consent of the Countess of Newport, Earl of Warwick, and Earl of Manchester, and the said Anne had not then notice of the will of the said Earl of Newport, and then she was but of the age of fourteen years.

Resolved 1. It is a limitation, and not a condition; tho' the words are the express words of a condition, yet they must always be conformable to the intention of the parties. Dyer 317, pl. 5. 3 Co. 21. 3 Cr. 833, 2, 591, 3, 376. 2 Leon. 31. Owen 8. Roll. Abr. 411. By which cases it appears that words of condition in a will shall enure as a limitation; and though in M. Portington's case 10 Co. it is said otherwise, yet that is but an accumulative reason, which was not necessary.

Resolv. 2. Notice of the condition was not necessary: 1. None is appointed by the devisor to give notice. 2. No body is concerned to give notice, the heirs and executors have nothing to do therewith. 3. All parties had equal means of coming to notice; and if notice be requisite it might be a means to avoid the will of the devisor. 2 Cr. 119, 1, 575. 4 Co. 82, 5, 110. 1 Co. 391. 4. It is a thing which concerns his own interest, which is the true reason of Sir Andrew Corbet's case. 5. It was not impossible for the defendant to have inquired and informed herself; and if she remains ignorant and not informed, it is her own folly. 1 Roll. Abr. 463. Hob. 68.

As to Francis's case, 8 Co. 92, there the party had other means to claim besides the will, and should not need to take notice of the will. But in our case the will is the only way to claim the estate, and therefore the defendant ought to take notice thereof. As to the case 2 Cr. 144. Molineux, It lies there properly in the conusance of the younger son, that the legacies be paid or not, &c. and differs from this principal case. And so judgment was given by the whole Court (absente Morton) for the plaintiff. Finch Attorney-General, Jones King's Counsel for the plaintiff. North solicitor, and Winnington for the defendant.

WIGSON versus GARRET. EJECTMENT.

Power. 2 Lev. 149. 1 Vent. 278. 3 Keb. 366, 489, 510, 536, 572.

The Earl of Leicester 21 Eliz. makes a settlement upon himself for life, the remainder to his issues, the remainder to others, with power of revocation, by indenture subscribed and sealed by himself, and to limit new uses. The 26th of Eliz. he covenants to levy a fine to other uses, and four years after levies a fine accordingly. And if this indenture and fine make a revocation of the uses in the first deed was the question. Resolved that it is a revocation, because that the deed and the fine are but one conveyance, and a case was cited in Mich. 26 Car. 1, C. B. Rot. 1442, Ingram versus Parker. Sir William Catesby makes a conveyance to the use of himself for life, the remainder to Robert his son in tail, with a proviso for him, or his son, by deed under hand and seal to revoke. Sir William dies, Robert, the son, by bargain and sale sells for 1000l. But the deed was not inrolled, and after a fine was received, and held by three justices that the fine was an extinguishment of the power:

But Hale Chief Justice doubted of the case to be law. And he cited Dame Hastings's case, which was tenant for life with a remainder over, with a power to make a jointure. And the tenant for life covenants to stand seised to the use of his wife, for her life, for her jointure. Resolved a good execution of the power. In covenant by indenture that when J. S. pays 10s. he shall have his land, is a revocation. Judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[240] RISLEY versus DAME BALTINGLASS. EJECTMENT IN THE EXCHEQUER.

Devise. 2 Danv. Ab. 528, p. 8.

The case was, Temple and two others were tenants in common of the manor of Burton Dasset in the county of Warwick in fee. Temple makes his will in writing of his third part, and after by indenture and fine partition is made betwixt the tenants in common; and if this partition be a revocation of this will was the question. And it seemed to all the Barons, viz. Montague, Littleton, Thurland and Bertie, that it is not any revocation: but judgment was not given, because the plaintiff obtained leave to discontinue his action.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL versus SIR EDWARD FARMER. BY ENGLISH BILL.

Grant. 2 Lev. 171.

The case was such, the King seised in fee of the manor of Halbeck in the county of Lincoln, grants it with the appurtenances, and also omnia fundum, solum, arenas, terras marescales & omnes alias terras, quæ modo inundat' existunt, & quæ fuerint imposterum recuperat de mari, with a non obstante the misrecital, &c. The lands in question were under the salt water at the time of making the patent, and were since recovered from the sea. And the sole question was, if these lands improved and recovered from the sea pass by the said grant?

Holt for the King. They do not pass; 1. Let us consider what shall pass if it were the grant of a common person.

2dly, How this differs being now in the case of the King.

3dly, The nature of the thing granted.

The words are, All the lands contiguous and adjoining to the sea; what signification these words shall have; for if all the lands pass, &c. it will extend to Denmark.

2. If this case be considered as the case of the King. Every grant of the King ought to comprehend certainty; and therefore his grant of demesnes doth not comprehend copyholds, although it be otherwise in case of a common person.

3dly, This grant is of part of the sea, which being parcel of the prerogative, ought to be expresly named; and the sea is the soil of the King, Selden's Mare Clausum 223, which refers to a proclamation of the King 7 Jac. mentioned in Lex Mercatoria 135.

Object. Here is a particular grant, and certain words, for they are quandocunque in posterum recuperat fuerint per derelictionem maris.

Resp. It is only a possibility, and therefore void; as if the King grants land when it shall escheat, it is a void grant. 2. If [242] it shall be a good grant, it shall be of a freehold to commence in futuro, which the law permits not.

Wallop for the defendant. It is inquirable, 1. If the thing here be grantable by the King. 2. If here be sufficient words to pass it.

As to the 1st, Here is a capacity in the King, because he is absolute lord of the British seas, as appears by Selden's Mare Clausum, he may grant part of his marine patrimony as well as his lands. 2. Here is a person capable to take; subjects are capable of a property in the sea. Selden's Mare Clausum, lib. 1, cap. 15, pag. 60. De Jure Belli.

As to the 2d, Here are words sufficient to pass these lands. True it is, that franchises or other things of prerogative do not pass without plain words; therefore a grant of bona felonum, &c. will not pass the goods of one that stands mute and will not plead. Mich. 8 H. 4, 2, pl. 2. So the grant of the amerciaments of his tenants doth not pass amerciaments of them by the King as commissioners of sewers. 2 Bulstr. 235, The King against The Earl of Exeter. But here the grant is not of a thing which is part of the prerogative; for the soil of the sea is in the King as part of his inheritance, and not as a thing of prerogative. 2 Leon. 158. The defendant pleads non assumpit infra sex annos. The plaintiff demurs; and adjudged for the defendant, that this debt for damage clere is within the statute of 21 Jac. because it rises out of the action, and not grounded on the record.

The plaintiff counts specially as attorney, for several fees and sums of money by him expended in several suits for the testator of the defendant, and that he demanded them, and neither the testator nor the defendant had paid them. The defendant pleads the statute of 3 Jac. cap. 7, and that the plaintiff had not given to the testator, nor to the defendant himself before the writ brought, any bill of charges according to the statute. Upon this the plaintiff demurs; and adjudged for the defendant, that it is a good plea.

LANGLEY versus CHUTE. PROHIBITION.

Prohibition.

The plaintiff suggests that there is a custom time whereof, &c. within the parish of Stretham in the county of Surrey, that the churchwardens with the major part of the parishioners may order the seats in the church, and the churchwardens are to see to the repairs of them; and that the defendant libelled in the Ecclesiastical Court for the sole usage of a pew in the same church, and set forth in his libel, that one Bodvile 1611, being seised of the land within the parish, built an house upon it, and after in the year 1637 at his own cost built the said pew in the church for himself and his family, and sold the house and pew to the defendant Chute and his heirs, and by sentence in the Ecclesiastical Court the Ordinary annexed the said pew to the said house, and that the defendant and his heirs enjoyed it. And that the churchwardens would have placed the plaintiff there, and the defendant libelled against the plaintiff in the Ecclesiastical Court. Now the plaintiff prays a prohibition, and alledges 2 Roll. 24, Brabin versus Tredinam, Poph. 140.

North Chief Justice. A prohibition shall not be granted, because the Ordinary hath jurisdiction, and the churchwardens cannot justle out his authority, when the privilege is claimed only for the defendant and his family; because as to him and his heirs a prohibition lies, and if the plaintiff be grieved by the sentence, he may appeal. And the office of churchwarden is a kind of ecclesiastical office. True it is, the parishioners are to take care of the repairs of the church, as it appears, Regist. 44 b. but the Ordinary hath of common right the ordering of pews in the church. If this suggestion should hold, the Ordinary's jurisdiction would be totally set aside.

Wyndham and Bertie Justices accordingly; but Atkins Justice contra, that a prohibition lies, because this case doth not differ from the case of Brabin.

[247] BAYNES versus EDWARD BELSON.

Intr. Windford Trin. 30 Car. 2, Rot. 1496. Oxon.

Power.

Ejectment of the demise of Sir Thomas Curson Baronet: upon not guilty pleaded, the jury find a special verdict.

That Sir John Curson being seised of the manor of Waterbury, of which the lands in question are parcel, by indenture, dat. 12 Sept. 1654, in consideration of a marriage between his son Thomas, lessor of the plaintiff, and Elizabeth the daughter of William Burrows, and 1000l. portion, and for the affection he bore to his relations, covenanted to stand seised of the said premisses, to the use of himself for life, remainder to Broom Whorewood, William Burrows and Elues and their heirs, during the life of the said Tho. Curson, his son and heir apparent, remainder to the first, and every other son of Thomas successively in tail male, remainder to John Belson in tail male, remainder to Augustine Belson in tail male, remainder to Edward Belson, now defendant, in tail male, with remainders over, with power for Sir John to make leases to any persons for one, two or three lives, or for one and twenty years, reserving the ancient rent. That the marriage took effect between the said Thomas Curson and Elizabeth Burrows. That Sir John 11 January 1655 demised the premisses to the said Edward Belson for one and twenty years, to commence after the deaths of Jacob and Meeks, who were tenants for lives, and who lived several years after. That the said Whorewood, Burrows and Elues were not at all of kin to Sir John Curson. That Sir John Curson died before the said Thomas Curson had any issue male born. That afterwards Thomas had issue John Curson. That John Belson and Augustine Belson are dead without issue. That there was no other execution of the deed but sealing and delivery.

Croke Serjeant for the plaintiff. The questions upon this verdict are:

1. Whether the power to make leases being general, be good in this case?

2. Whether Sir John hath pursued the power in making a lease in futuro?

[248] 3. Whether the uses limited (after the estates in tail male to the sons of Sir Thomas Curson) to John Belson, Augustine Belson and Edward Belson do arise, partly upon sealing the conveyance, or that the use continues in the covenantor till after the deaths of the sons without issue male?

To the two first points. The whole Court gave their opinions, viz. to the 1st, That the power to make leases being general, is void, it being upon a covenant to stand seised. Mildmay's case, 1 Co. 2 Roll. Abr. 260.

To the 2d, The power is not well executed, the lease being to commence in futuro. 2 Roll. Abr. 261. Yelverton 222. Stokham versus Hawkins, 6 Co. Fitzwilliam's case, and Lepar and Wroth's case, Hob. 151. Colt's case.

As to the 3d point, Croke proceeds. The case is thus: H. covenants to stand seised to the use of himself for life, remainder to the use of strangers and their heirs, during the life of Thomas Curson, remainder to the sons of Thomas Curson successively in tail male, remainder to Edward Belson in tail. The covenantor dies before any son of Thomas is born, and afterwards a son is born, whether Edward Belson next in remainder will have the lands presently, or shall stay till all the issues be dead without issue male? And I conceive Edward Belson shall take immediately after the death of the covenantor.

1. Nothing passes to these strangers without inrolment, 7 Co. Bedel's case, 11 Co. Harpur's case, 2 Roll. Abr. 783, H. pl. 4, and consequently nothing accrues to the sons of Thomas. And when a grant is made to two, and the one is capable to take, and the other not, the estate shall vest in the person capable only at the common law. Perk. 108 b. pl. 566. Dyer 300 b. pl. 39, and 309 a. pl. 67. Moor 494, pl. 687.

Object. This case differs, because it is in case of an use by covenant to stand seised.

Resp. There is no difference, 6 Co. Fitzwilliam's case, uses shall be expounded according to the rules of common law. And this way of limiting estates by covenant to stand seised begun in Englefield's case, and Bainton's case, and Sherington and Pledal's case, Plowd. 301. And the statute incorporates the use to the possession, in case of a covenant to stand seised, as well as in other cases. And here Sir John Curson covenanting to stand seised to the use of himself for his life, is in of a new estate, and not of his old estate.

[249] Object. Signior Pagit's case, 1 Co. 154 a. and Moor 193, pl. 343.

Resp. There is a great difference between this and that case; for there the Lord Pagit had no estate for his life, but here the covenantor hath, and therefore the use here ought to vest immediately, Hob. 74, Barnes's case. And here the intent of the covenantor was that all estates should be out of him; and if the case should be otherwise, where should the estate be after the death of the covenantor? For Thomas cannot have the particular estate, and the inheritance also simul & semel, which he must have in this case, if the estate shall continue in the covenantor 'till the son of Thomas be born.

North Chief Justice. It seemed that this remainder vests immediately after the death of Sir John Curson in Belson, as Lewis Bowle's case is, 11 Co. 80 a. Adjourned.

PONT versus PONT. PARTITION.

Mich. 30 Car. 2, Rot. 559. Winford.

Ancient demesne.

In a writ of partition betwixt tenants in common by the statute of 31 H. 8, cap. 1, the tenant pleads ancient demesne; and adjudged a good plea, according to the case betwixt Grace and Grace, 1 Roll. Abridg. 322, E. pl. 10. But here upon the record there were found several discontinuances, and therefore judgment was given for the demandant.

CARSEY versus WOOD.

Trin. 29 Car. 2, Rot. 1236. Winford.

Devise. 1 Cr. 525, Ascough's case.

Ejectment. A special verdict. A man seised in fee of lands held in capite, devised the whole to the Corporation of the City of Norwich upon a charitable use, and whether the devise be good for the whole, or only for two parts, was the question. And whether the statute of 43 Eliz. cap. 4, doth make a good devise contrary to the statutes of 32 & 34 H. 8. And resolved, it is good but for two parts only. And by Maynard Serjeant, where 'tis said, that if a copyholder devise without a surrender, or tenant in tail devise, that 'tis good against the issue, 'tis not intended good by the common law, but to be made good by the decree of the Chancery grounded upon the statute of 43 Eliz. cap. 4.

[250] LUCAS versus HOW.

Condition.

Ejectment. Special verdict. The case was thus, A man makes a lease for years upon condition that the lessee shall not assign over his term to any but his kindred, without licence from the lessor; the lessor assigns over the reversion, and the lessee assigns over his term and breaks the condition. And whether the grantee of the reversion shall take advantage of this condition is the question.

And by Atkins Justice, it is such a condition as is within the statute of 32 H. 8, cap. 34. But it seemed to others to be a collateral condition. And it was adjourned.

Replevin for taking of five oxen. The defendant makes cognisance as bailiff to the lord of the leet, because the plaintiff was amerced there for not scouring a ditch in an highway, and the plaintiff demurred, because the statute of 18 Eliz. cap. 9, gives the forfeitures for highways to the surveyors of the highways; but adjudged by all the justices for the defendant, because the party may be punished in the leet, and also by this statute for divers causes.

JOHNSON versus COLTSON.

Trin. 30 Car. 2, Rot. 1463. Winford.

Process.

Trespass and battery. Upon non culp. a special verdict. The plaintiff being complained of to a justice of peace, he makes a warrant to the defendant to take the plaintiff, and to find sureties for the good behaviour; the defendant, being constable executes the warrant upon a Sunday, and whether good within the late statute which says, that all process executed upon a Sunday other than for the peace shall be void. Resolved for the defendant, that a warrant for the good behaviour is a warrant for the peace and more; and this statute is to be favourably extended for the peace. This [251] judgment was affirmed in a writ of error in B. R. Trin. 32 Car. 2.

Memorandum, That on Monday the fifth day of May 1679, 31 Car. 2, I was sworn one of the Barons of the Exchequer, though I had laboured (and not without great reason) to prevent it. I was sworn at the same time with Sir William Ellys, who had been formerly one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, and put out, and now brought in again. He was allowed precedency to Sir Thomas Jones and Sir William Dolben, Justices of the King's Bench, because they were put in since his turning out; but this precedency was only by verbal signification from the King, and not expressed in his patent. With me was also sworn Sir Francis Pemberton, to be Judge in the King's Bench; all of us were sworn at my Lord Chancellor Finch's house.

[252] GERRIT JOHNSON versus JAMES GRANT.

Replevin. Middlesex.

Avowry.

The plaintiff declares of the taking of divers goods 5 November 29 Car. 2, in a certain messuage of the plaintiff's situate in Long Acre, in the parish of St. Martin's in the Fields, and detaining them against sureties and pledges, ad damnum 200*l.*

The defendant avows the taking, for that ante prædictum tempus quo, &c. one Sarah Grant, widow, being executrix of the testament of one Samuel Grant, the father of the said James Grant, gave to the said James security for payment of 600l. being a legacy given the same James by his said father, by his said will, which security the said James ante prædictum tempus quo, &c. surrendered to the said Sarah, and discharged her from the same, upon agreement that she should pay him yearly during his life 80l. per annum, and should give him sufficient security for the same; that the said Sarah was seised of ten messuages, of which the said messuage in quo, &c. was one, in her demesne as of fee; and so being seised after the agreement aforesaid, in prosecution of the said agreement, ante prædictum tempus quo, &c. by indenture dated the sixth of December 1658, between the said Sarah of the one part, and the said James of the other part, did demise the said ten messuages to the said James (and sets them forth by metes and bounds) habend. from Michaelmas last for ninety-nine years, if James should so long live. Reddend. a pepper-corn; by virtue whereof James entered and was possessed.

That he being possessed, by his indenture dated the seventh of December 1658, demised the same to the said Sarah for ninety-eight years, if James should so long live; reddend. the first year a pepper-corn, and the residue of the said term 80l. per annum quarterly, or within twenty days, by virtue whereof she entered and became possessed.

[253] And because 240l. for three years ending at Michaelmas 29 Car. 2, and for twenty days after was behind and unpaid, he avows the taking in the messuage in quo, &c. as parcel of the tenements demised to the said Sarah; et cum solutione reddit' prædict' onerat' & obligat', &c.

The plaintiff Gerrit Johnson, confesses, that ante prædictum tempus quo, &c. the said Sarah Grant being executrix of the said Samuel Grant, father of the said James, did give to the said James security for payment of 600l. given as a legacy as aforesaid. But protestando, that ante prædictum tempus quo, &c. he did not surrender the said security, and acquitted her therefrom upon the agreement alledged, nor that the said indentures aforesaid were in prosecution of the said agreement. And for plea saith, that as to 20s. per annum for the rent of two messuages in Long-Acre, parcel of the said rent of 80l. per annum for the three years, in the whole amounting to 3l. parcel of the said 240l. rien arrear.

And as to the residue of the 240l. viz. 237l. per annum for the said three years, he says, that before the said demises made, William Earl of Craven was seised of eight of the said ten messuages situate in the Strand, in his demesne as of fee, until the said Samuel Grant, father of the said James Grant, disseissed the said earl, and by reason thereof became seised thereof by disseisin, &c.

And so being seised 30 September 1655, made his will in writing, and thereby devised the said eight messuages to the said Sarah Grant and her heirs, and died 3 September 1658 so seised.

That by virtue of the said devise Sarah became seised in her demesne as of fee of the said eight messuages, and so being thereof seised, and of the said messuage in quo, &c. and also of one other messuage in Long-Acre, seised the residue of the said ten messuages by the said indenture first mentioned, demised the said premisses to the said James Grant for ninety-nine years, prout, and he by the second indenture redemised the same to the said Sarah for ninety-eight years prout.

That afterwards, & ante prædictum tempus quo, &c. and before any of the three years rent was behind, viz. 27 September 26 Car. 2, the said William Earl of Craven [254] entered upon the said eight messuages, claiming therein his former estate, and did expel the said Sarah therefrom, and hath ever since been seised thereof.

That all the said ten messuages October 1659, and ever since were worth 80l. per annum, and no more.

That the said eight messuages then, and ever since have been worth 79l. per annum, by reason whereof the said 237l. being residue of the said 240l. became insolvible to the said James Grant, and still remains insolvible. Et hoc, &c.

Upon this bar the avowant demurs, and the plaintiff hath joined in demurrer.

The sole point remains to be spoke to is, as it is objected by the other side, that the plaintiff in this replevin in his bar to the avowry, hath pleaded as to parcel of the rent, rien arrear, without making any title to himself.

And whether such his plea be good, is the question?

And I conceive 'tis a good plea.

1. I do agree, that at the common law a stranger could not, nor as yet can plead any thing to the lord's avowry for rent or services, but hors de son fee, or what doth tantamount.

He cannot plead tenure by less services, rien arere, or a release, 2 H. 6, 1 a. 22 H. 6, 2 and 3, and 9 Co. 6, 10 a. is against that opinion.

This was grounded upon these reasons and rules of law.

1. Res inter alios acta alteri nocere non debet. 'Tis not reason that he who is a stranger shall take upon himself to plead to the title of the tenure, with which he hath nothing to do, in prejudice of the very tenant; and there is a privity between the lord and tenant.

2. In pleading every man ought to plead that which is pertinent for him and his case; and therefore in an assise against a disseisor and tenant, the tenant shall plead a plea which concerns the tenancy, and not the disseisin.

[255] The incumbent at the common law could not plead to the right of the patronage, wherein he hath nothing, 7 Co. 26, Hall's case, 'till he was enabled by 25 E. 3, cap. 7.

2. But by the statute of 21 H. 8, cap. 19, this strictness is discharged, for as the avowant is not tied to avow upon any person in certain, but upon the land, as within his fee or seigniory; so the tenant of the land by the equity of that statute is allowed to plead any plea to save and discharge his goods from the distress, legem feras quam ipse tuleris. So that the law of avowries, and their bars, is much altered from what it was by the common law.

Hob. 108, Brown versus Goldsmith. In replevin, the defendant avows upon A. for services of suit of Court; the plaintiff pleads in bar, a lease for years from the avowant of the manor; and resolved a good plea, though a stranger.

Br. tit. Avowry 113. When the lord avows according to the statute, the plaintiff in the replevin may have every plea, that the very tenant might have had though he be a stranger to the lord; and so is Coke upon Lit. 268 b. and many books there cited.

3. Though the plaintiff make no title, yet he may plead by this statute, as well as if he did.

Trin. 15 Jac. Moor 883, pl. 1238, Kingswell versus Crawley. In replevin, the defendant avows for rent eo quod one Dering held certain lands of him by fealty, and certain rent; that the plaintiff hath the estate of Dering. The plaintiff replies, that Dering infeoffed one Wright, who made a lease for life to the plaintiff, absque hoc, that he had the estate of Dering; and ruled by the Court, that the traverse was void; for since the statute the party is to avow upon the land, and then 'tis not material what estate the tenant had, if he occupies the land; and so the statute hath changed the law in this point.

Hill. 17 Car. 1, C. B. March 166, Layton versus Grange. In a second deliverance, the defendant makes cognizance as bailiff to Thomas Marsh, and sets forth that Thomas Marsh, father of the said Thomas Marsh, was seised of the manor of Michael Hall, of which the land in question is parcel, and the said lands are held by fealty and certain rent, and derives the tenancy to Sir Anthony Cage, and the seigniory to the said Thomas Marsh the son; and as bailiff to him makes cognizance for fealty, ut infra feodum & dominicum sua. The plaintiff protestando quod non tenet, pro placito dicit, that the [256] defendant took the cattle as in the count, absque hoc, that Marsh the father was seised of the services infra tempus. The defendant demurs.

By Banks, Crawley and Foster, resolved that the plea was good, though no title were made by the plaintiff or his master. Reve Justice wavered in the point, but the others were positive in it; and Banks gave the reason, that as at the common law the tenant might plead any plea in bar to an avowry for a rent-charge, as 8 E. 4, 23 a. is; so now since this statute, the ter-tenant shall plead any plea to discharge the land from the distress. 2dly, That as this statute hath been always construed favourably for the benefit of the lord; so it ought to be for the benefit of the tenant. 3dly, That

'tis no reason that the tenant shall have his goods taken, and not use all ways to redeem them, when not party to the wrongs.

But 'tis objected, that our case is not within this statute; the words whereof are, Wheresoever any manors, lands, tenements or other hereditaments be holden by any manner of person or persons by rents, customs or services, if the lord of whom any such manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments be so holden, distrain upon the same manors, lands or tenements for any such rents, customs or services, and replevin thereof be sued, that the lord of whom the same lands, tenements or hereditaments be so holden may avow, or his bailiff or servant make conusance, or justify for the taking the said distresses upon the same lands, &c. so holden, as in lands or tenements within his fee or seigniory, alledging the said avowry, &c. the same manors, lands, &c. to be holden of him without naming any person certain to be tenant of the same. And whether the lessor be a lord within this statute is the question. And I conceive he is lord here within the words and meaning of this statute.

Lord is a relative word; and so a mesne is lord in reference to the tenant, and tenant in respect of the lord paramount.

He is lord within the Statute of Marlb' cap. 3. Non ideo puniatur dominus.

Hill. 5 H. 7, 10, pl. 2. Trespass quare vi & armis clausum suum fregit & averia sua cepit & abduxit. The defendant pleads his frank-tenement, and that he took the cattle damage-feasant. The plaintiff replies, that he had a lease for years from the [257] defendant, yet continuing, and the defendant demurred; and the question was, whether this action did lie between the lessor and lessee, notwithstanding the Statute of Marlbr. cap. 3.

Resp. It did not lie for so much as the lessor did as lord, as to distrain for his rent, and to demean himself accordingly: but as this case was, he broke his close, which he could not do as lord; and so not within the statute.

The objection was, that he could not be lord, because if the lessee should be distrained by the lord paramount, he could not have a writ of mesne. But answered, that he should have a writ of covenant in lieu thereof, Mich. 2 H. 6, 1 b. Thus are the books following, viz. Mich. 28 E. 3, 97 a. pl. 15. Mich. 38 E. 3, 33 b. Hill. 48 E. 3, 5 b. pl. 10. Co. 2. Inst. 106. 9 Co. 135 b. Ascough's case. At the common law there are 4 sorts of avowries. 1. By reason of a tenure, when the lord hath fee in the seigniory, and the tenant hath fee in the tenancy, ut supra verum tenentem suum. 2. Upon one as his very tenant by the manner, ut supra verum tenentem suum in forma prædicta, viz. when the tenant makes a lease for life, or a gift in tail, as upon his very tenant by the manner. 3. Upon one as his tenant by the manner, omitting this word (very) and that is, when the lord hath a particular estate in the seigniory, as an estate in tail, for life, or less interest, super tenentem suum in forma prædicta. So shall the donor upon the donee, the lessor upon the lessee for life or years. 4. Upon the matter in the land, as within his fee and seigniory; as where the tenant by chivalry makes a lease for life, rendering rent, and dies, his heir within age, the guardian shall so avow upon the lessee, super materiam prædictam in terris prædictis ut infra feodum suum. And by the third way, the lessor did always avow upon the lessee at the common law. Mich. 47 E. 3, fol. ult. pl. 77.

Nota; If the rent of tenant for years be arrear, the lessor cannot avow upon the termor upon the land, but upon the matter, Hill. 5 H. 7, 11, pl. 2, by Fairfax, and agreed by all the justices. Tenant for years shall do fealty, and the lessor is dominus pro tempore by reason of the reversion; and an avowry shall be made upon him as upon the matter. And the different way of pleading manifests this; for at the common law, the way is, bene advocat captionem averiorum prædictorum in prædicto loco in quo, &c. ut in parcell' præd' mess [258] eidem le plaintiff in forma prædicta dimiss. super tenementa virtute dimissionis prædict. But the avowry upon the statute is in prædicto loco in quo ut parcell' mess. præd. cum reddit' præd' onerat' & obligat', 2 Co. 27 b. Bettisworth's case, Int. 594, 595 and 597. And so is Dyer 257, pl. 11, where it is said, ut in terris districtioni ipsius l'avowant onerat' & obligat', is always intended for a rent-charge; but when he avows for a rent, which is due of common right, he ought to avow upon the tenant by the manner.

And so hath the avowant here done.

I will omit to speak of the distress here, by virtue of the contract, admitting it to be out of the statute, and is grounded upon the reservation, as Foster's case, 8 Co. 64. As a rent for owelty of partition. A rent confirmed by statute, as Bellingham's case.

Resolved. The plaintiff in a replevin may plead nothing in arrear, or any other plea, although he be a stranger and doth not make any title to the land.

[259] TERM. PASCH. 31 CAR. 2. IN THE EXCHEQUER.

HUNT versus WOTTON.

Case. It's a rule, that if a statute gives remedy for any thing, it shall be presumed that there was no remedy before at the common law, Stanf. pl. Cor. 2, and the stat. of 43 El. cap. 2 injoins the father to provide for his child, which he was not compellable to do by the common law. Palmer 559. Besfich versus Coggil.

Trespass vi & armis. The plaintiff declares, that the defendant the 14th of April 30 Car. 2 did thrust a woman, named Margaret Hunt, upon his son Henry Hunt, being an infant under the age of discretion, by means whereof his thigh-bone was broke, and the infant was so hurt that it was now despaired of his life, and the plaintiff, was inforced to expend great labour, and divers sums of money to cure him, ad damnum, &c. The defendant pleads non culp. and found for the plaintiff, and damages 5l.

Sympson Serjeant moved in arrest of judgment, because the plaintiff sustained no wrong, for that he was not compelled to expend any money, or to procure his son's cure.

But Montague, Lord Chief Baron, totis viribus contra.

But to me it seems that the action doth not lie, for that the father cannot have the action, it not being laid per quod servitium amisit, nor that the son was less capable of procuring a fortune with a wife, &c. but the child himself ought to have brought the action, and he would have recovered the damages. Authorities in point, 3 Cr. 55, Gray versus Jeffrys. In an action upon the case, the plaintiff counts, that he put his son and heir apparent to the defendant to be his apprentice in the art of a tailor for seven years, and that the plaintiff was seised of lands of the yearly value of 20l. which were to descend to his said son. That the defendant vi & armis did assault the said son, and struck him with a spade upon his back, by which he became lame and decrepit, by reason whereof he lost his marriage, and could not marry him as before, ad damnum 200l. The defendant demurred; and adjudged for the defendant, because trespass for beating or battery of the son lieth not for the father, but the son only shall have the action, and a father shall not have an action for the loss of the marriage of his son and heir, except when a stranger takes him by force and marries him; but if the son marries [260] himself, or a stranger procures him to marry one, the father hath no remedy, Mich. 1653, Intr. 1653, Rot. 935. Norton versus Jasen, B. R. Stiles 398. Action on the case. The plaintiff counts that the defendant broke his house and assaulted his daughter against his consent, and begot a bastard child on her, per quod servitium amisit. The defendant pleads the statute of 21 Jac. of Limitations of Actions. And upon this a special verdict, that the assault was above four years before, and within six years. And resolved, the father could not maintain an action for the assault of his daughter, but only by reason of the loss of her service. And then damages being given for both, it was not well, and therefore a venire fac. de novo was awarded; and by the common law the father is not bound to cure his child.

But Montague, Lord Chief Baron, and Atkins Baron, clearly for the plaintiff, and relied upon Church and Church's case in B. R. 1656. Where in assumpsit the plaintiff declared that whereas the plaintiff had at his own charges buried the defendant's child, the defendant promised to pay him his charges; and though there was no request laid, yet judgment was given for the plaintiff, and Cr. 63, 849 and 881, Rippon versus Norton; but judgment was afterwards given for the plaintiff.

In trespass and ejectment of the demise of William George Richard Earl of Derby made 2 May 29 Car. 2, of one messuage, three watergrist mills, ten acres of land, ten acres of meadow and fifteen acres of pasture in the parish of Hope alias Queenhope, for five years from the first day of the said month of May. Upon not guilty pleaded, the jury of the county of Salop being the next English county find a special verdict: viz.

That long before the trespass and ejectment King Richard the Third was seised of the manor of Hope in his demesne as of fee, in right of his Crown, of which the tenements in the declaration are, and time out of mind were parcel. That the said King R. 3 being so seised 17 Sept. 2 R. 3 by his [261] letters patents under his Great Seal of England then dated, for the consideration therein mentioned, did give and grant the manor and tenements aforesaid with the appurtenances (amongst other things) to Sir Thomas Stanley, Knight, Lord Stanley, and afterwards Earl of Derby, Sir George Stanley, Knt. By virtue whereof the said Thomas and George did enter into the said tenements, and were thereof seised to them and the heirs male of the body of the said Thomas Earl of Derby, and they being so thereof seised, the said George Lord L'Estrange had issue of his body one Thomas his eldest son, afterwards Earl of Derby: and that afterwards the said [264] George Lord L'Estrange died in the life-time of the said earl his father: and that the said earl, his father, afterwards, viz. 1 Jun. 19 H. 7, died seised of the said tenements in his demesne as of fee-tail, viz. to him and the heirs male of his body; by reason whereof the said tenements in the declaration did descend to the said nephew, the said Thomas Earl of Derby, who entered into the said tenements and became seised thereof in his demesne as of fee-tail according to the limitation in the said letters patent mentioned. And the said Thomas Earl of Derby, being so thereof seised, had issue of his body one Edward his eldest son, afterwards Earl of Derby. That the said Thomas Earl of Derby last mentioned, afterwards, viz. 1 Aug. 13 H. 8, died seised of the said tenements. By reason whereof the said tenements descended to the said Edward then Earl of Derby. That the said Edward entered and became seised thereof in tail to him and the heirs male of his body. That the said Edward had issue Henry afterwards Earl of Derby. That Edward died 24 Octob. 14 Eliz. seised as aforesaid, and that the premisses descended to Henry. That the said Henry had issue Ferdinand, afterwards Earl of Derby, and William Stanley, his second son, afterwards likewise Earl of Derby. Henry 25 Septemb. 35 Eliz. died seised, and the premisses descended to Ferdinand, who entered and had no issue male, but only three daughters, viz. Anne, Frances and Elizabeth. That Ferdinand 16 Apr. 37 Eliz. died in the life of his brother William seised, and so the premisses descended to the said William, who entered. That after the death of Ferdinand, for determination of suits and controversies between the said Earl William and Henry Earl of Huntington and Elizabeth his wife, one of the daughters of the said Ferdinand, Gray Bridges Lord Chandos, and the Lady Anne his wife, another of the daughters of the said Earl Ferdinand, and Sir John Egerton, Knight, then son and heir apparent of Thomas Lord Ellesmere, Lord Chancellor of England, and the Lady Frances his wife, another of the daughters of the said Earl Ferdinand, 18 Novemb. 4 Jac. an Act of Parliament was made of and concerning the said suits and controversies, and estate and title of the honours, castles, manors, lands and tenements of the aforesaid Earl Ferdinand; by which it was enacted as followeth, viz.

In most humble manner beseeching Your Royal Majesty Your Highness loyal, faithful and obedient subjects, William Earl of [265] Derby, of the most noble order of the garter knight, Henry Earl of Huntington and the Countess Elizabeth his wife, Gray Bridges, Lord Chandos and the Lady Anne his wife, eldest daughter of Ferdinando late Earl of Derby, Sir John Egerton Knight, son and heir male apparent of the Right Honourable Thomas Lord Ellesmere, Lord Chancellor of England, and the Lady Frances his wife; which said William Earl of Derby is brother and heir male, and the said Ladies Anne, Frances and Elizabeth are daughters and co-heirs of the said Ferdinando, late Earl of Derby, who died without issue male of his body: that whereas after the death of the Earl Ferdinando divers variances, suits and controversies did arise and grow between your said subjects William Earl of Derby, and the said ladies, as well touching the estate, right and title of, in and to the honours, castles, manors, lands, tenements and hereditaments of the said earl, as also touching the filial portions and advancements of and for your said subjects, the said Ladies Anne, Frances and Elizabeth; for appeasing, ending and determining of which said variances, suits and controversies, the said William Earl of Derby and other issues male of the said honourable house of Derby, as also the said ladies before any their intermarriages, by and with the advice and consent of the Right Honourable Alice, Countess Dowager of Derby, late wife of the said Ferdinando, and mother of the said ladies; and by and with the advice of other their honourable friends, and of their counsel learned, and officers, did submit themselves to the arbitrement, order and judgment of the Right Honourable Thomas Lord Buckhurst, Lord High Treasurer of England, and now Earl of Dorset, and of the Right Honourable Gilbert Earl of Shrewsbury, the Right Honourable George Earl of Cumberland, deceased, George Lord Hansden, deceased, and of the Right Honourable Sir Robert Cecil Knight, principal secretary to Your Highness, and now Earl of Salisbury, being the honourable and well affected friends, as well of the said William Earl of Derby, and other the issues male descended of that honourable house, as of the said ladies heirs general; which said honourable persons are elected to end the said controversies, having deliberately heard the said parties, and their learned counsel and officers, and such other their loving friends as were authorized to deal therein, and having advisedly heared and considered of their several rights, titles and claims, did by the consent and agreement of all the said parties and their counsel, officers and friends, for the appeasing, ending and extinguishment of all variances, claims, titles and [266] controversies then moved and grown, and which then after might arise and grow between the said parties or any of them touching the premisses, agree, order and determine (amongst other things) that such and so many of the said castles, manors, lands, tenements and hereditaments, late parcel of the possessions and hereditaments of the said Ferdinando, late Earl of Derby, in the towns, hamlets, villages and places hereafter mentioned, and in every or any of them, should be assigned, conveyed and enjoyed unto and by such person and persons, and of, for and during such estate and estates, and with and under such limitations, powers, liberties, declarations and savings, and in such manner and form as hereafter is mentioned, limited and expressed. With which said order and agreement so made by the honourable persons, as well the said William, Earl of Derby, and the Countess Elizabeth his wife, and the rest of the issues male descended from that honourable house of Derby, as also the said Honourable Lady Alice Countess Dowager of Derby, and the said Ladies Elizabeth, Anne and Frances, daughters to the said late Earl Ferdinando before, and until their several marriages, their said husbands and they did and yet do hold themselves well contented and satisfied.

May it therefore please Your Most Excellent Majesty, that it may be enacted, and be it enacted by Your Majesty the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that all and every the castles, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, rents, reversions, services and hereditaments with all and singular their appurtenances, late the possession and inheritance of the said Ferdinando, late Earl of Derby, in the towns, hamlets, villages and places hereafter mentioned, and in every or any of them, shall be from henceforth for ever assured and enjoyed unto and by the person and persons hereafter named, of and for such estates and limitations, and with and under such powers, liberties, provisoes, exceptions, declarations and savings, and in such manner and form, as hereafter in this present Act is mentioned, limited and declared; and that the actual and real possession of all and singular the said castles, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, rents, reversions, services and hereditaments shall be by authority of this present Act immediately from henceforth vested, adjudged, deemed and taken to be in the said person and persons hereafter named in possession, remainder and reversion respectively, of, for and during such estate and estates, and with and under such powers, liberties, provisoes, exceptions, declarations and savings, and [267] in such manner and form, as hereafter in this present Act is likewise mentioned, declared, limited and expressed.

And afterwards in the same Act of and concerning the manor of Hope it was enacted in these words: viz.

That the said Alice, Countess Dowager of Derby, during her life, and after her decease, the said William Earl of Derby, during his life, and after his decease James, son and heir apparent of the said William Earl of Derby, and the heirs males of his body, and in default of such issue the second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh sons of the said William Earl of Derby, lawfully begotten, and the heirs male of their and every of their several bodies lawfully begotten, successively and respectively according to the priority of their birth and age one after another; and in default of such issue, Sir Edward Stanley Knight, during his natural life, and after his decease the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, six and seventh sons of the said Sir Edward Stanley lawfully begotten, and the heirs male of their and every of their several bodies lawfully begotten successively and respectively according to the priority of their birth and age one after another; and in default of such issue, Edward Stanley of Bickerstaff Esquire, during his life, and after his decease the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh sons of the said Edward Stanley lawfully begotten, and the heirs male of their and of every of their several bodies lawfully begotten, successively and respectively according to the priority of their birth and age one after another: and in default of such issue James Stanley, brother of the last mentioned Edward, during his life, and after his decease the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh sons of the said James Stanley lawfully begotten, and the heirs male of their and every of their several bodies lawfully begotten, successively and respectively according to the priority of their birth one after another, shall and may have, hold and peaceably and quietly enjoy all and every the manors, messuages, lands, tenements, rents, reversions, services, hereditaments, liberties, franchises and jurisdictions whatsoever, at any time heretofore the inheritance of the said Ferdinando, late Earl of Derby, in Hope and Hopedale, and elsewhere within the parish of Hope in the said county of Flint, to the manor of Hope belonging or appertaining. And it was farther enacted, that the said William Earl of Derby, Sir Edward Stanley, Edward Stanley and James Stanley successively and respectively in possession to make leases of any of the premisses usually letten, (except the castle of Haward and Greenhalgh, the mansion-house, parks, demesnes of Latham, Knowsley, Newpark, Buscough, Childwal, Pilkington, [268] Hawarden, Greenhalgh, Broughton in Farnes, Bothome Armshead, Withersback, Ebensham alias Ensham and Bidston, the mansion-house, Channon Row in Westminster, the college-house in Manchester and the tower in Liverpool within the several counties of Lancaster, Chester, Flint, Westmorland, Oxon and Middlesex for one and twenty years or under, or for one, two or three lives, or for any number of years determinable upon one, two or three lives in possession, and not in reversion, reserving the old and accustomed rent; and power for them to make jointures not exceeding a third part.

That in the said Act there is a proviso in these words:

Provided always, and be it enacted and declared by the authority aforesaid, that Your Most Excellent Majesty, your heirs and successors, and all and every other person and persons, bodies politick and corporate, their heirs and successors, executors, administrators and assigns, and every of them, other than the persons to whom any estate or estates are before limited, or mentioned to be limited, by this present Act, and their heirs shall have, hold, and enjoy all and every such and the same estate and estates, lease and leases, rights, titles, interests, reversions, rents, annuities, pensions, services, tenures, primer seisins, liveries, actions, statutes, bonds, recognizances, debts, extents, executions, judgments, entries, conditions, covenants, warranties, uses, possessions, offices, commons, liberties, easements, profits, commodities, emoluments, claims and demands, as Your Highness, your heirs and successors, or any of them, or other person or persons, bodies politick and corporate, their heirs, successors, executors, administrators or assigns, other than the persons before excepted, to whom any estate or estates is before limited by this Act, now lawfully have or hereafter shall or may lawfully have, or claim of, into, out of, or for any the said castles, manors, lands, tenements, rents, reversions, services and hereditaments, or of, into, out of, or for any of them in such and the same manner and form to all intents, constructions and purposes, as if this present Act had never been had nor made. And your said suppliants, William Earl of Derby, Henry Earl of Huntington, and the Lady Elizabeth his wife, Gray Lord Chandos, and the Lady Anne his wife, and Sir John Egerton, and the Lady Frances his wife, shall and will according to their most bounden duties daily pray for Your Highness long, happy and prosperous reign over us.

That Alice, Countess of Derby, in the Act mentioned, was widow and relict of the said Ferdinand, Earl of Derby, and that the said Sir Edward Stanley Knight, at the making of [269] the said Act was a person, who the tenements aforesaid, next after the death of James the son of the said Earl of Derby, without issue male of his body, by the said letters patent ought to take and have according to the limitation in the same letters patent contained.

That the said Edward Stanley of Bickerstaff in the said Act likewise mentioned, until the making of the said Act, was the person who ought to take and enjoy the said tenements next after the death of the said Sir Edward Stanley, without issue male of his body, according to the limitation of the said letters patent; and that the said James Stanley, brother of the said Edward Stanley of Bickerstaff, was the next person who ought to take and have the said tenements next after the death of his said brother Edward, without issue male of his body, by the limitation of the said letters patent.

That 1 May 1636 the said Alice Countess Dowager of Derby died, that Earl William entered, and was seised prout lex postulat.

29 Sept. 1642 Earl William died seised, and James his son entered and became seised prout lex postulat.

The said Earl James had issue Charles, afterwards Earl of Derby.

15 Oct. 1651 Earl James died seised and Earl Charles entered.

14 February 1653 the said Earl Charles, and Dorothea Helena his wife, by indenture between them of the first part, Sir Charles Woolseley Knight, Richard Knightley Esquire, John Twisleton Esquire, John Hewley Esquire, Rowland Jenkes jun. Esquire, and Joshua Sprig of the second part, and Thomas Crachley Esquire, Nicholas Brereton gent. and Roger Griffith gent. of the third part, for 1700l. to the said earl, and 1898l. 10s. to the trustees for selling the said estate by the Parliament, paid by the said earl's appointment, grant, alien, bargain, sell, enfeoff and confirm to the said Charles Woolseley, Richard Knightley, John Twisleton, John Hewley, Rowland Jenkes and Joshua Sprig their heirs and assigns, the said manor of Hope, alias Queen Hope; and the said Earl Charles for him and his heirs, doth warrant the premisses to the said lessees and their heirs, against him and his heirs, and that they shall enjoy the same accordingly. And the said Charles Earl of Derby doth constitute the said Thomas Crachley, Nicholas Brereton, and Roger Griffith his attornies jointly and severally to make livery and seisin of the said premisses.

That livery and seisin was executed accordingly, and the tenants of the said manor did attorn thereto.

[270] 10 April 1654. That Charles Earl of Derby and his wife levied a fine of the said premisses at the Great Sessions for the county of Flint, with warranty against all men with proclamations.

The said fine was to the use of the said indenture mentioned.

That the grantees entered and continued in possession from the time of the making the said indenture.

That the defendants at the time when, &c. and still are tenants of the premisses to the said grantees.

21 December 1672, Earl Charles died, leaving issue the lessor of the plaintiff now Earl of Derby, and was at the death of his father at the age of sixteen years, nine months and four days, and no more.

2 February 29 Car. 2, the lessor of the plaintiff entered, and made the lease to the plaintiff prout in the declaration.

They find the statute of 34 H. 8, and conclude generally, if for the plaintiff, for the plaintiff, &c.

Levinz for the plaintiff. It is to be taken notice of, that this Act of 4 Jac. in the record doth alter the estate limited by the letters patent; for by the Act it is only limited to the seventh son; but by the letters patent to every other son, and then the remainder over to others.

1. 'Tis not doubted but that the reversion still remains in the Crown.

2. The possession of the feoffees is nothing to the purpose, for though there be fines levied and descents, yet the Statute of Limitations hath no operation but from the death of Earl Charles, which is but about three or four years since. Upon this record are two questions.

1. What effect the fine in 1654, and the feoffment with warranty have, taking the same abstractively from the consideration of the statute of 34 H. 8, cap. 20.

2. What operation the statute of 34 H. 8 hath in this case?

1. As to the feoffment, it is no discontinuance, because the reversion remains in the King. Lit. sect. 625, and Co. Lit. 335 a.

2. As to the warranty in the feoffment and fine, it is of no effect, because it is a lineal warranty, and so cannot bar without assets.

As to the fine, it is no bar by the statute of 32 H. 8, cap. 36, because the last proviso therein excludes all fines levied of lands intailed, where the reversion is in the King, or intailed by Act of Parliament.

[271] But it is objected, that the words at the end of the proviso are, That every such fine shall be of like force as they were or should have been, if the Act had not been made; and such estates-tail were barrable by fine by the statute of 4 H. 7.

Resp. The statute takes notice that there were diversities of opinion in that point. Pasch. 19 H. 8, 6, pl. 5. Dyer 2 b. pl. 1, and this statute of 32 H. 8 cures a doubt in case of ordinary persons, but leaves out the fines of lands, whose reversion is in the Crown. And the exception would not have been inserted, had they not barred before.

If we consider how this point stood before this statute, we shall find, Br. Fines de Terr. 121, that such fines did not bind the issue, because no discontinuance. Br. Assurances 6, accordingly; but Dyer 32 a. pl. 1, Englefield Justice said he knew it by experience, that a fine did bar the issue in tail, though the reversion were in the Crown. But Shelley Justice doubted; and so there was Judge against Judge. 8 Co. 74 a. Such fine did not bar the issue; and so is 6 Co. 55, in Chandos's case obiter; and Co. Lit. 372 b. A fine is a bar by 32 H. 8, but not by 34 H. 8, and so there are but opinions in this point, and no judgment. This doubt reached the Parliament, and therefore they thought that the fine was no bar before 34 H. 8. And the conclusion is, that if it was no bar by 4 H. 7, it was now by 32 H. 8, and then came the statute of 34 H. 8, which made an end of the question; for by the opinion of all it is now no bar.

Then we must consider, whether this Act of 4 Jac. alters the use, and here it will be objected,

1. Here is no gift of the King, but of the Parliament; for 1. Alice is let in before Count William. 2. Count William hath now but an estate for his life, and afterwards to seven of his sons successively; but all the other of his sons are excluded, and Sir Edward Stanley is let in in their place.

Resp. This is a gift of the King within the intent and meaning of the statute of 34 H. 8, for these reasons.

1. There is no more estate given by this Act of 4 Jac. than by the letters patent of 2 R. 3, but all the estates granted are within the compass of the heirs males of the body of Thomas first Earl of Derby.

2. The Parliament did not intend to give any thing, but to make firm an agreement between the parties.

[272] 3. The limitations to Earl William for life, with the remainder to James in tail male is not any bounty, or augmentation of the estate which was given by the letters patent. The Act hath taken away from Earl William, but not added any thing.

4. If Earl William had had twenty sons, this Act doth not exclude them, but others are let in; for the saving extends to them after the determination of the new particular estates, and the old estate-tail supplies the other sons; and the Act did not intend to make several donors, viz. the King as to some part, and the Act as to other part.

5. The proviso is, saving to the King, his heirs and successors, such, and the same estate, &c. as they now have; and how shall the tenure be saved, if the Act must be the donor?

6. This is a case concerning the exposition of an Act of Parliament, which ought to be as favourably construed as a will.

Now let us examine the objections.

Object. 1. The estate of Countess Alice is a new estate.

Resp. 1. 'Tis possible she hath but what she had in right of dower.

2. This agreement shall be construed to be pursuant to her dower.

3. But be it what it may be, she is dead, and so is no prejudice.

Object. 2. The estate of Count William is altered; for now he hath only an estate for life, the remainder to his issues in tail male.

Resp. That is no gift, but a deprivation of a gift. And if a man have three horses in his stable, and a man takes away two of them, he cannot be said to give the third, which he took not away.

Object. 3. Here is a gift to Count James, for he had nothing before during the life of Count William his father.

Resp. 1. This Act hath not one word of giving in it, but that they shall hold and enjoy.

2. Here the meaning was not to make a gift, but in pursuance of an agreement between the parties to settle the estate; and so it is a distribution of the lands amongst the family. And this Act confirms the agreement, as many Acts do confirm an agreement of inclosures.

There is no substantial alteration; for tenant in tail by a gift from the Crown is restrained from alienation to prejudice his issue.

[273] Object. But tenant in tail, where the reversion is in the Crown, may prejudice his issue; as Co. Litt. 373 a. Stratford versus Dover; as if he be disseised, and the disseisor levy a fine, and five years pass.

Resp. 3 Cro. 595, reports this case, and it is Judge against Judge; and 612, the judgment was given upon point of pleading, and not upon this point. Moor 467, pl. 665, reporting this case says, that the issue shall be bound.

Object. Count William hath but an estate for his life, for there is power for him to make leases for lives, which needeth not if it had been an estate tail.

Resp. Abundans cautela non nocet, as the saving of the reversion to the King, which was by this Act taken out of him.

Who is the donor here? for the donee by rules of law ought to hold of the donor by owelty of services, which cannot be here.

Object. Chudleigh's case, the Parliament may be the donor.

Resp. It may be so in case of a fee-simple, but not in case of an estate-tail.

The Parliament is no corporation, at least not fixt, and therefore cannot be donor.

The Earl of Derby could not be donor, because he cannot reserve an estate for life to himself, and not part with the reversion; and so I pray judgment for the plaintiff.

Holt for defendant. The only question is, whether the fine of 1659, bar the estate-tail? or whether the statute of 34 H. 8. restrains the same?

The meaning of the statute of 34 H. 8, appears by the recital in the preamble, viz. Whereas the King and his progenitors had granted lands to several persons in tail, to the intent that the recompence for their service should not only be a benefit to their own persons, but a continuing profit to the heirs of their bodies, whereby they should have in special memory the profit they receive by their service, and be thereby encouraged to the like service to their sovereign.

By which it appears that the lands in question since 4 Jac. are now in the same, but this fine bars the estate-tail.

1. This estate is created by 4 Jac. and is a new estate, and not such an estate as is within 34 H. 8. for that extends to lands settled, and to be settled by the gift of the Crown. And if such a donee of the gift of the Crown had before that statute levied a fine, it had barred the issue. This [274] is not an estate derived out of the Crown, nor grounded upon such considerations as are mentioned in the statute.

2. 'Tis not merely a reversion in the Crown which makes the estate-tail not to be barred; for if a man purchaseth an estate-tail from the Crown, it is not within this statute; but a fine will bar the issues notwithstanding this statute.

3. 'Tis out of the words of the statute in the manner of the creation of the estate; for it is not created by the King, but by the Parliament. This Act hath always received strict construction, and therefore an estate made by the King, when he was not King, is out of this statute, Co. Lit. 372. And an Act of Parliament is an extraordinary way to settle an estate.

4. From the consideration of this Act of 4 Jac. wherein there is a proviso, that tenant for life shall have power to make leases or jointures; but no provision for tenant in tail so to do; which shews that the Parliament intended, that tenant in tail could do it, as it is limited by this Act, which could not be done by 34 H. 8.

Object. This new estate in James is the same estate as by the letters patent.

Resp. It cannot be the same, for it would defeat the whole Act.

The Act hath made these alterations.

1. The estate for life to Alice, which cannot be dower because not mentioned, and hath a continuance only during the estate-tail.

2. Count William hath an estate for life only, whereas he had before an estate-tail.

3. All the issues of Count William would have had an estate by descent, by the letters patent, but now they take by purchase. In a formedon they cannot declare upon the letters patent, but upon this Act.

Object. There ought to be donor and donee in every estate-tail.

Resp. An Act of Parliament may create an estate without a donor.

Object. The saving is to all persons præter the person except, &c.

Resp. The eighth son, &c. may be saved within this proviso; but the seven sons are in of another estate.

[275] Object. Construction of an Act of Parliament ought to be according to equity.

Resp. This Act of 34 H. 8 ought not to be favourably construed, because contrary to equity and reason of the common law, and restrains alienation. Keilway 96 a. pl. 6. Lit. sect. 360. So the statute of Westm. 2, cap. 1, is to be taken strictly for the same reason, Co. 2 Inst. 335, and therefore it is said, that a fine ipso jure sit nullus, yet it is a discontinuance. And so he prayed judgment for the defendant. Post.

WILLIAM SCOT versus KNAPTON. DEBT. ERROR.

Error.

In debt upon the statutes of 1 Eliz. cap. 3, and 23 Eliz. cap. 1, for absenting from church for eleven months. Upon nil debet pleaded, judgment was given in B. R. And now the defendant there brought a writ of error. And it was objected by the counsel for the defendant in the writ of error, that such a writ of error did not lie within the statute of 27 Eliz. cap. 8, because it is an action tam quam; and the words of the statute are (other than where the Queen shall be party) and here the King is party. But resolved, the writ doth well lie, because the King is not properly party, though he is to have part of the penalty.

26 FEBR. 1678.

Felony.

London Ss. Jur', &c. quod Abrahamus Chissers nuper de London' labor' quinto die Februarii anno, &c. tricesimo primo vi & armis, &c. apud London' videlicet in parochia Sancti Sepulchri in ward' de Faringdon extra London' præd' duo collar' ornament' panicilium viril' cum temol' ornat', Anglice vocat' mens laced crevats, valor septem solidor' de bonis & catallis cujusdam Annæ Charteris spinster adtunc & ibidem invent' adtunc & ibidem felonice furat' fuit cepit & asportavit contra pacem dicti domini Regis nunc Coron' & dignitat' suas, &c.

Upon a special verdict the jury find, that on the day, and at the place in the indictment mentioned, Abraham Chisser came to the shop of Anne Charteris spinster in the said indictment likewise named, and asked for to see two crevats in the indictment mentioned, which she shewed to him, and delivered them into his hands, and thereupon he asked the price of them, to which [276] she answered 7s. whereupon the said Abraham Chissers offered her 3s. and immediately run out of the said shop, and took away the said goods openly in her sight; but whether this be felony, or not, is the question. And if it shall be adjudged felony, we find him guilty; and that the goods were of the value of 7s. and that he had no goods or chattels, &c. But if it be not adjudged felony, we find him not guilty, nor that he fled for the same.

And I am of opinion, that this act of Chisser is felony; for that, 1. He shall be said to have taken these goods felleo animo; for the act subsequent, viz. his running away with them, explains his intent precedent; as the suing a replevin to get the horse of another man's, to which he hath no title, is felony, because in fraudem legis, Co. 3 Inst. 108. So if an officer cometh to a man, and telleth him that he is outlawed, when the officer knoweth the contrary to be true, and by colour thereof, takes his goods, it is felony. Dalton's Office of Sheriffs, cap. 121, fol. 489. And the case of one Far, in which I myself was a counsel, was thus; Far knowing one Mrs. Steneer living in St. Martin's Lane in Middlesex to have considerable quantity of goods in her house, procured an affidavit to be filed in the Common Pleas, of the due delivery of a declaration, in an action of ejectione firmæ, in which he was lessor, though he had no title, and thereupon got judgment, and took out an habere facias possessionem for the house, directed to the Sheriff of Middlesex, and procured him to make a warrant to a bailiff to execute the writ, who with Far came to the house, turned Mrs. Steneer out of possession thereof, and seised upon the goods of a great value, and converted them to his own use, and upon complaint made by Mrs. Steneer to Sir Robert Hide, then Lord Chief Justice of B. R. Far was apprehended by his warrant, and indicted at Justice-Hall in the Old Baily, and found guilty, and hanged; for that he used the colour of an action of ejectment, and the process thereupon to execute his felonious 'ntent, in fraudem legis.

2. Although these goods were delivered to Chisser by the owner, yet they were not out of her possession by such delivery, till the property should be altered by the perfection of the contract, which was but inchoated and never perfected between the parties; and when Chisser run away with the goods, it was as if he had taken them up, lying in the shop, and run away with them. Vide Hill. 21 H. 7, 14, pl. 21, Bracton says, Furtum est tractatio rei alienæ frandulenta, [277] animo furandi, invito illo cujus res illa fuerit. Stanford's Pleas of the Crown, 25 a.

SAMUEL DODD, CLERK, versus RALPH INGLETON.

Tithes. 2 Danv. Ab. 596, p. 8.

The plaintiff being Vicar of Chigwel in Essex, exhibited his English bill in the Exchequer Chamber against the defendant for small tithes, and amongst the rest for tithe milk; and upon the hearing a question arose, whether the defendant shall pay the tenth part of the milk of his cows every meal, or only every tenth meal? And it was decreed that he should pay every tenth meal intire to the plaintiff; for otherwise the plaintiff must be forced to keep a servant for that service of collecting the milk only, and perhaps the tithe would not amount to a pint a day. The next question was, whether de jure (there being no custom one way or other) the parishioner ought to send the tithe milk to the vicar to his house, or that the vicar ought to fetch it from the parishioner? And now 22 May 1679, the vicar brought a civilian, one Doctor Raynes, to argue, whose argument was as follows. By the jus commune ecclesiasticum which is the canon law, all tithe ought to be brought home to the parson; and the law is grounded upon the Scripture. Malac. 3, 10. Bring ye all the tithes into the store-house; and St. Jerome gives the rule so; and Linwood l. 3, tit. 16, De Decimis cap. Quia Quidam, Verbo Colligendis, pag. 168. Colonus de jure tenetur non solum decimas hujusmodi colligere & coacervare, sed etiam in horreum sacerdotis afferre. And this is certain for predial tithes. And so says Speculator, it is for wines. And although there be no express mention of milk, and that milk is here in England reckoned amongst minute tithes; yet in other countries it is a predial tithe.

2. All tithes ought to be paid so soon as they may be fit for the parson to receive them; so calves at such an age, and other things, as the matter will bear. Now 'twill be very inconvenient if the milk which de jure is tithable every meal, shall be sent for by the parson twice a day, and every time may not be a pint.

3. In the manner of tithing, that which magis expedit ecclesiæ, is to be observed, then it is more decent for the parishioner to bring, than the parson to fetch his tithes. Where the law is silent, the custom of the places adjacent prevails. [278] Now here, all the neighbour vicars have their milk brought home to them.

Upon hearing this argument the Court thought fit for the plaintiff, if he saw cause, to insert all his parishioners, or as many of them as he pleased into his bill; and upon their answers the Court would deliver their opinion, because of ascertaining the way of paying tithe milk quite through the parish, to prevent multiplication of suits; but if the plaintiff shall not think fit so to do, the Court adjourned this cause till Michaelmas-term to give their opinions; and afterwards, viz. 10 November 1679, we all agreed that the tithe milk ought to be carried by the parishioners. My opinion was, that it should be delivered at the vicarage-house, because where there is no custom the common law prevails; but my Lord Chief Baron and the other two Barons agreed, that it should be delivered in the church-porch, because the neighbouring parishes did so; but that appeared not in the pleadings, but so it was decreed.

JOHN LISLE versus JOHN GREY ESQUIRE, THOMAS OGLE AND ROBERT MANNERS.
EJECTMENT. NORTHUMBERLAND.

Trin. 22 Car. 2, Rot. 141, B. R. In a writ of error in the Exchequer Chamber Uses. 2 Lev. 223. Pollexf. 582. 2 Jon. 114. 2 Show. 6. Postea 302, 315.

The plaintiff declares of the demise of William Lisle of four messuages, two hundred acres of land, two hundred acres of meadow, two hundred acres of pasture, and three hundred acres of moor in Acton in the parish of Felton. Upon not guilty pleaded, the jury gave a special verdict,

That before the trespass and ejectment, one John Lisle was seised in fee of the tenements in question; and so being thereof seised 15 August 15 Car. 1, an indenture was made between the said John Lisle of the one part, John Robson and Thomas Lorain of the other part, and inrolled duly within six months in the Court of Chancery, according to the form of the statute. The tenor whereof followeth in these words, viz.

[279] This indenture made the fifteenth day of August in the fifteenth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord Charles, by the grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, defender of the faith, &c. between John Lisle of Old Felton alias Little Felton in the county of Northumberland, gent. of the one part, and John Robson clerk, one of the prebendaries of the Cathedral Church of Durham, and Thomas Lorain of Kirkharle in the county of Northumberland gent. of the other part, witnesseth, that the said John Lisle for the settling and establishing of all the messuages, farms, lands, tenements, and all other the hereditaments hereafter mentioned to be, remain and continue in the blood of the said John Lisle in such manner and sort as hereafter is herein and hereby limited and expressed, so long as it shall please Almighty God to continue the same; and for and in consideration of the natural love and affection which he beareth unto those, unto whom the estates hereafter are limited; and for the advancement of Edward Lisle his son, and others of the blood hereafter-mentioned, he the said John Lisle doth hereby, for him and his heirs, covenant, grant and agree to and with the said John Robson and Thomas Lorain and their heirs, that he the said John Lisle and his heirs shall and will from henceforth stand and continue seised of and in all that whole messuage and tenements, called Felton alias Little Felton, within the parish of Felton in the said county of Northumberland, late parcel of the possessions of the monastery of Brentburn in the said county of Northumberland, together with all and singular the appurtenances and premisses to the same belonging, or being accounted, accepted, reputed or taken to be part, parcel or member thereof, or therewith, or heretofore used, occupied, possessed or enjoyed as part, parcel or member thereof; and all that the manor and lordship of Acton alias Ackton in the said county of Northumberland, commonly called and known by the name of the north and south parts of the town of Acton aforesaid, together with all and singular tofts, crofts, woods, underwoods, mines, quarries, lands, meadows, feedings, commons and common of pasture; and all and singular the appurtenances whatsoever to the said manor or lordship of Acton alias Ackton belonging or appertaining, or therewith used, occupied or enjoyed as part, parcel or member thereof, together with two closes called or known by the names of the Middle-Wood Closes; and also one messuage late in the tenure or occupation of one Robert Car, or his assigns, [280] with their and every of their appurtenances to the same belonging or in any wise appertaining, or therewith used, occupied or enjoyed as part, parcel or member thereof, with all other the said John Lisle his lands, tenements and hereditaments whatsoever, with the appurtenances in the county of Northumberland aforesaid, and to and for the uses, intents and purposes hereafter limited, and to and for no other use, intent or purpose whatsoever, that is to say, to and for the use and behoof of the said John Lisle, for and during the term of his natural life, without impeachment of and for any manner of waste, and after his decease, to and for the use and behoof of the said Edward Lisle, for and during the term of his natural life, and after his decease, to and for the use and behoof of the first son of the said Edward Lisle lawfully to be begotten, and to the use and behoof of the heirs males of the body of the first son lawfully to be begotten; and for default of such issue, to the use and behoof of the second son of the said Edward Lisle lawfully to be begotten, and the heirs males of the body of the said second son lawfully to be begotten; and for default of such issue, to the use and behoof of the third son of the body of the said Edward Lisle lawfully to be begotten, and the heirs males of the body of the said third son lawfully to be begotten; and for default of such issue, to the use and behoof of the fourth son of the body of the said Edward Lisle lawfully to be begotten, and the heirs males of the body of the said fourth son lawfully to be begotten; and so severally and respectively to every of the heirs male of the body of the said Edward

Lisle lawfully to be begotten, and the heirs males of the body of such heirs males lawfully to be begotten, according to their ages and seniorities; and for default of such issue, to the use and behoof of William Lisle of Warkeworth in the said county of Northumberland gent. for and during the term of his natural life, and after his decease, to the use and behoof of the first son of the body of the said William Lisle lawfully to be begotten, and the heirs male of the body of the said first son lawfully to be begotten; and for default of such issue, to the use and behoof of the second son of the body of the said William Lisle lawfully to be begotten, and the heirs male of the body of the said second son lawfully to be begotten; and for default of such issue, to the use and behoof of the third son of the said William Lisle lawfully to be begotten, and the heirs male of the body of the said third son lawfully to be begotten; and for default of such issue, to the use and behoof of the fourth son of the body of the said William Lisle lawfully to be begotten, [281] and the heirs male of the body of the said fourth son lawfully to be begotten; and so severally and respectively to every of the heirs male of the body of the said William Lisle lawfully to be begotten, and the heirs males of the bodies of such heirs males lawfully to be begotten, according to their ages and seniorities; and for default of such issue, to the use and behoof of the right heirs of the said Edward Lisle for ever. Provided always, and it is hereby declared by and between all the parties to these presents; and the said John Lisle party to these presents, for him and his heirs, doth covenant, grant and agree to and with the said John Robson and Thomas Lorain and their heirs; that if it shall happen the said Edward Lisle, son of the said John Lisle, party to these presents, do die without issue male of his body lawfully begotten, that then the said John Lisle, party to these presents, and his heirs shall and will stand seised of all and singular the manor, lands, tenements and hereditaments aforesaid, with their and every of their appurtenances, to the use, intent and purpose, that they shall and will raise and levy out of the rents, issues and profits thereof, the several sums of 100l. a-piece for each and every of the daughters of the said Edward Lisle, to be paid after the same be so levied, to the eldest first, and so in order, according to their several ages and seniorities. Provided always, that if the said John Lisle, party to these presents, shall and do at any time hereafter during his life-time, declare unto the said John Robson and Thomas Lorain, or either of them, that he is intended to alter and revoke any use, trust, clause or limitation in or to these presents, by his writing indented by him sealed and delivered in the presence of two or more sufficient witnesses, that then such addition, alteration or revocation by him so made, shall stand and be good and effectual in law to all intents and purposes; any thing herein contained to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

By virtue whereof, and of the statute for transferring uses into possession, the said John Lisle became seised of the tenements aforesaid in his demesne as of freehold, for term of his life, remainder as is before limited, and so being seised had issue Edward Lisle his eldest son.

That the said John Lisle 1 March 17 Car. 1, died so seised; after whose death the said Edward entered and became thereof seised in his demesne as of freehold, for his life, the remainder as aforesaid, and so being thereof seised, the said Edward had issue only a daughter still alive.

[282] That the said Edward Lisle 30 September 1694, made this indenture following in these words:

This indenture made the 30th day of September 1694, between Edward Lisle of Acton in the county of Northumberland gent. of the one part, and Thomas Forster of Etherston in the said county of Northumberland, John Forster, second son of Sir Mathew Forster of Etherston aforesaid in the aforesaid county, gent. of the other part, witnesseth, that the said Edward Lisle for divers especial and good causes and considerations him thereunto moving, hath given, granted, bargained, sold, aliened, infeoffed and confirmed, and by these presents doth freely and fully give, grant, bargain, sell, alien, infeoff and confirm unto the said Thomas Forster and John Forster, their heirs and assigns, all that messuage, tenement or farm called and known by the name of Old Felton, situate, lying and being in Little Felton in the parish of New Felton in the said county of Northumberland, within the tenure or occupation of the said Edward Lisle or his assigns, and all that the town, township or manor of Acton alias Ackton with the appurtenances, containing as well all that part of the said manor called the south part of the town, township or manor of Acton, as that part which is called by the north part of the town, township or manor of Ackton in the said county of Northumberland, and all and singular houses, edifices, buildings, barns, stables, byers, backsides, outhouses, gardens, orchards, meadows, feedings, pastures, leasows, commons and common of pasture, woods, underwoods, mines, quarries, easements, profits, commodities and emoluments whatsoever to the said messuage, tenement or farm, and to the said town, township or manor, or either of them belonging or appertaining, or with the same or any part thereof, now or at any time heretofore held, used, occupied and enjoyed as part, parcel or member of the said messuage, tenement or farm, or of the said town, township or manor, or either of them, or of any part of them, or either of them, together with all and singular the writings, charters, evidences, escripts, escrowls, deeds, transcripts of fines, exemplifications of records and muniments whatsoever, of or concerning the aforesaid premisses, or part thereof (amongst other things,) all which said writings, charters, evidences, escripts, escrowls, deeds, transcripts of fines, exemplifications of records and muniments, the said Edward Lisle doth for him, his heirs, executors and administrators, covenant, grant and agree to and with the said Thomas Forster and [283] John Forster, and their heirs, that he the said Edward Lisle, and his heirs, shall and will, at and upon the ensealing and delivery hereof, deliver, or cause to be delivered to the said Thomas Forster and John Forster, and their heirs, undefaced and uncancelled, to have and hold the said messuage, tenement or farm, &c. unto the said Thomas Forster and John Forster, their heirs and assigns for ever. And farther, he the said Edward Lisle and his heirs, the said messuage, &c. to the said Thomas Forster and John Forster their heirs and assigns, against all persons whatsoever will for ever warrant and defend by these presents.

That the said last mentioned indenture was executed by livery and seisin.

That in Hilary term 1649 a common recovery was suffered of the premisses, wherein Ralph Forster gent. was demandant, the said Thomas Forster and John Forster tenants, and the said Edward Lisle vouchee, and vouched the common vouchee.

That the said Edward Lisle died 1 May 1674, without any issue but his said daughter.

That by and at the death of the said Edward Lisle, son of the said John Lisle, all the estates and remainders in the indenture aforesaid, bearing date 15 August 15 Car. 1, limited, and which preceded the limitation to William Lisle, named in the said indenture and now lessor of the plaintiff, did end and determine.

That the said William Lisle was cousin of the whole blood of the said John Lisle.

That the said William Lisle after the death of the said Edward Lisle, 20 January 28 Car. 2, did enter upon the possession of the said John Grey, Thomas Ogle and Robert Manners, and became seised prout lex postulat, and made the lease to the plaintiff, who entered and was possessed until the defendants ejected him. And if for the plaintiff, for the plaintiff, &c.

Judgment was given in B. R. for the plaintiff; and now the defendant brings a writ of error.

Pollexfen for the plaintiff in the writ of error.

The questions are two, 1. Whether by the conveyance of 15 August 15 Car. 1 Edward Lisle have an estate-tail?

2. If he hath not, then whether the plaintiff hath any title considering the proviso?

[284] As to the first, The case is no more but this.

Lands are limited to the use of Edward Lisle for his life, the remainder to his first, second, third and fourth sons successively, and the heirs male of their respective bodies; and so severally and respectively to every of the heirs male of the body of the said Edward, and the heirs male of the body of such heirs male, according to their ages and seniorities, the remainder to William Lisle, &c. Edward suffers a recovery, and dies without issue male.

And I conceive that Edward had an estate-tail, and so the recovery well suffered to the use of the Forsters and their heirs.

It is agreed on all hands, that where an estate is limited to a man for life, and afterwards to the heirs of his body, the heirs are in by discent and not by purchase, Co. upon Lit. 22 b. 1 Co. 104 a. 11 Co. 79 b. Lewis Bowle's case, which is in effect the same with this in question.

Object. Here it is to the heirs male of the body of Edward, and the heirs male of the body of such heir male.

Resp. The addition of those words make no alteration, but are only words of abundance, and are comprehended within the first words, and are of the same nature; and so is Shellie's case.

'Tis not like to Archer's case, for there the limitation is to the heir in the singular number.

Object. The words are relative, and so severally and respectively to every of the heirs male of the body of Edward.

Resp. We are upon the construction of a deed, and not of a will, and therefore rules in limitation of estates ought to be here observed.

The word (heirs) is a term of art in the law, and hath an established sense; and Littleton says, it is the sole word which passeth an inheritance.

There are certain words which in the law are appropriate to some particular purpose, Coke upon Littleton 9 a. And this word (heirs) is so appropriate to an estate of inheritance, 1 Co. 103 b. Shellie's case. From which we may infer, that we cannot alter the legal signification of the word (heirs) and construe it to signify sons or issue.

Object. This is a conveyance by way of use, which may be construed with equal favour as a will.

Resp. Uses are now reduced to the rules of the common law. 1 Co. 87 b. Corbet's case. Winch. 60. 1 Rol. Abr. 837, R. pl. 1 and 2, tit. Estate. A feoffment to the use of A. and his issues male of his body, makes not an estate-tail, for want of the word heirs.

[285] And there is no case to be found in law, where the word (heirs) is taken for issue or son; and in this case should heir be taken for issue or son, here would be a very great alteration in point of limitation, for the fifth son must take by name of son.

1. The word (so) alters not the case; and if the interpretation of a deed should be as of a will, many suits would be upheld by reason of the incertainty of the law in such cases.

2. The operation of the proviso is out of doors, because it is found in the verdict, that all the estates precedent to the estate of William Lisle are determined.

Levinz for the defendant in the writ of error. Edward hath but an estate for life, because, 1. 'Tis a conveyance by way of use which was originally but a trust, and an equitable thing, and therefore ought to be favourably construed.

2. The intent of the father was plainly contrary; for why should he limit no farther than to his fourth son? and it was not intended that Edward should have any other estate but for life in possession, because power is provided for him to raise portions for his daughters, which need not have been if he have an estate-tail, for he could do it by a common recovery.

3. 'Tis not a limitation to the heirs male only, but to every of them, according to their seniority.

4. 'Tis to the heirs male of those heirs male. And so prays judgment for the defendant. Adjournatur. Post.

[286] TERM. TRIN. 31 CAR. 2, 1679.

MURREY versus EYTON. Antea 260.

Estate. 2 Jon. 237. Pollexf. 491. Skin. 95. 2 Show. 104. Postea 319, 338.

Pollexfen for the plaintiff. The estates limited by the Act of 4 Jac. are the same estates in substance with what were limited by the letters patent, and vary only in circumstances, and therefore Ferdinando was seised in tail under the patent, and Alice intitled to dower under him.

The first alteration objected is the limitation to Alice for her life.

Resp. That may consist with the estate in the patent, for it is but for her life, and it is but a third part, which is equivalent to the dower she should have by the estate in the patent.

The second alteration is, that Count William hath an estate-tail by the patent, but now by the Act he hath but an estate for life, with remainders to his sons in tail.

Resp. By the first estate he had no other advantage than he hath by the estate for life, and therefore there is no substantial alteration.

The third alteration is, that here are by the Act limitations to other persons, viz. Edward Stanley, &c.

Resp. Those other persons were to have succeeded by the patent.

Object. The proviso to make leases and jointures.

Resp. As to the power to make leases, tenant in tail could have made such leases before. And as to the power to make jointures, it is to be only of the third part of what he shall be in possession, and so is no more than dower.

Object. Coke on Litt. 372 b. A recovery suffered by tenant in tail, where the reversion was in the Crown, barred the estate-tail before the statute of 34 H. 8, cap. 20, and so it was agreed in 33 H. 8, as it is Br. tit. Tail 41. 40 Ass. pl. 36.

Resp. The Lord Brook, who was made Chief Justice 2 Mar. and was either a Judge, or very near it, and at the height of his practice in 38 H. 8, about which time the case is cited [287] by the Lord Coke, is of another opinion. Br. Assurances 6. Fines levie de Terres 121, and he lived nearer the making the statutes of 32 H. 8, and 34 H. 8. So is 1 Anders. 46, pl. 118. And by the penning of the statute of 34 H. 8 it appears that no notice is taken therein of any fine, but only of a recovery, which shews that a fine extends not to an estate-tail where the reversion is in the King.

Serjeant Weston for the defendant. The estate is totally altered by the Act of Parliament, for now the estate created by that Act is drawn out of the estate-tail which was created by the letters patent, and not out of the reversion in the Crown, and Count William had a reversion in him expectant upon this new estate. And an estate-tail is capable to have another estate drawn out of it, either by wrong or by right, which may out-last the old estate. Tenant in tail bargains and sells; it is a good estate to last till the issue enters. And whatsoever thing may be done where the reversion is in a common person, the same thing may be done by Act of Parliament in case of a King.

Object. If here be a new estate, who is the donor? Not the Act of Parliament, because a Parliament is no corporation, and so cannot be said to be donor.

Resp. An Act of Parliament may be donor by way of giving a penal judgment, as in case of forfeitures. 2. By way of execution of an agreement, and either the Act is donor, and tenant in tail is donor proportionably, as in the Statute of Uses; and here William is the donor.

Object. The old and new estate came both into one person, viz. Count Charles, and so he could not alien the one without the other.

Resp. It is all one as if the estates had been in divers persons, and Charles here had power over the new estate-tail by fine, feoffment, &c. but not over the old estate-tail.

Object. This is petitio principii, for whether he hath any power over either of the estates is the question.

Resp. The estate granted by Charles shall arise out of the estate which is most mediate to the gift, viz. the estate-tail, and not out of the reversion in the Crown which is the old reversion.

The statute of 34 H. 8 being discharged by the Act of 4 Jac. the lands became alienable at all times afterwards, as Dumport's case, where a condition which restrains alienation is once dispensed with, is for ever after destroyed.

[288] 14 Car. 2, Gardiner's case, upon a special verdict, King H. 8 gives to Michael Stanhope and his wife, and the heirs of their bodies, certain lands, Michael dies, the lands descend to Thomas Stanhope, his son and heir, who petitions the Queen to grant the reversion to some persons in fee, to the intent the said Thomas Stanhope may make a lease for 99 years by way of mortgage, and enters into a recognizance to the Queen, conditioned that nothing shall be done whilst the reversion is out of the Crown, prejudicial to the Queen; the Queen conveys the reversion to the Lord Burleigh and Sir Walter Mildmay in fee. Thomas Stanhope makes the lease, then suffers a common recovery; the said Lord Burleigh and Walter Mildmay reconvey to the Queen. The questions were 1. If the grant to the Lord Burleigh and Sir Walter Mildmay was void, for the Queen was deceived in her grant; and resolved the grant was good, and the Queen not deceived. 2. Whether the Queen being in by the re-grant, Sir Stanhope, the son of Thomas, was now restrained from aliening: and resolved he was not, because the force of the statute of 34 H. 8 was discharged. *Et adjournatur. The defendant being sued in London brings an habeas corpus directed to the mayor, aldermen and citizens of the said city, who make this return, viz.

The City of London is, and hath been time out of mind an ancient city, and that the mayor and commonalty and citizens of the said city are, and time out of mind have been a body politick and corporate, and time out of mind have been known by the name of the citizens of the City of London, barons of the, &c.

And that in the same city there is, and time out of mind hath been a custom used and approved of, viz.

That the Mayor and Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London by themselves and such other person or persons, as by the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London aforesaid for the time being, by the assent of the commons of the same city have been appointed, have and have had right to order and dispose of carrs, carts, carrooms, carters and carmen, and of all other person and persons whatsoever working any carrs or cart within the City of London and liberties thereof according to the custom there.

[289] And that there is, and hath been time out of mind a custom, that if any custom be defective, or that there shall be any thing in the city of new-emerging, where before there was no remedy, the mayor and aldermen with the assent of the commonalty may appoint, and have appointed and ordained fit and convenient remedy and agreeable to reason for the profit of the citizens of the same city and other the subjects of the King thither resorting, when and as often as they should think fit, so as such ordinance were profitable for the King and his people, & bonæ fidei conson' and reasonable.

That the said customs are confirmed by Parliament in the seventh year of King R. 2.

That in a common council held 2 April 1677. It was enacted, as followeth.

For the better and more regular ordering and disposing of all carrs, carts, carrooms, carters and carmen, and all other persons whatsoever that shall hereafter work any carr or carts within this city or the liberties thereof for hire, be it enacted and ordained by the right honourable the lord mayor, aldermen and commons in common council assembled, and by the authority of the same, that one Act of Common Council made in the mayoralty of Sir John Lawrence Knight, for the government of carrs, carts, carrooms, carters and carmen, and every clause, article and thing therein contained, be from henceforth repealed; and the same is hereby repealed and made void to all intents and purposes. And be it farther enacted and declared by the authority aforesaid, that the President and Governors of Christ's Hospital shall have the rule, oversight and government of all such carrs, carts, carters and carmen, and of all other persons whatsoever, that do or shall hereafter work or use any carrs or carts within the City of London, or the liberties thereof, for hire, according to the rules, directions and provisions in this present Act mentioned and comprised. And the present trade of this city being seriously considered, and to the end that all the streets and lanes of this city may not be pestered with carrs or carts, and His Majesty's liege people may have free passage by coach or otherwise through the said streets and lanes: Be it enacted, that no more than 420 carts shall be allowed or permitted to work for hire from one place to another within this city or the liberties thereof, and that each of them shall be made known by having the city arms upon the shaft of every such cart, in a peace of brass, with the number upon it, and that 17s. 4d. per annum [290] and no more shall be received and paid for a carroom, and 20s. and no more, or greater fine, upon any admittance or alienation of a carroom, which 17s. 4d. per annum, and 20s. aforesaid, is to be wholly applied towards the relief and maintenance of the poor orphans harboured and to be harboured in the said Christ's Hospital. And that if any person or persons shall presume to work any carrs or carts within the said city and liberties for hire by himself or servant, not being duly allowed as aforesaid, such person or persons for every time so offending shall forfeit and pay the sum of 13s 4d. to be recovered, received or obtained as is hereafter mentioned.

And be it farther enacted by the authority aforesaid, that there shall not be hereafter any car, cart or cars permitted or allowed, to any wharf, wharfingers, woodmongers or retailers in fuel, or kept or worked by any wharfinger or any retailer or retailers in fuel after the 24th day of June next. But such car, cart or cars as are part of the said number of 420 cars licensed by the said president and governors which are allowed the carriage of all wood, coals and other fuel within the same city and liberties thereof at such rates, and in all other respects, as other goods and commodities are used to be carried, and not otherwise. And if any wharfinger, woodmonger or other retailer in fuel, shall presume to keep and work any cart or car contrary to the true meaning hereof, such person and persons for every time so offending shall forfeit and pay for the first offence the sum of 13s. 4d. to be recovered and obtained as is hereafter mentioned, and for the second and every other offence afterwards, double the said sum of 13s. 4d. to be also levied as is hereafter expressed.

Provided nevertheless, that it shall and may be lawful for every person and persons with his and their own, or with any other car, cart or cars, to bring out of the country to the said city, or to fetch from the said city into the country any coals, fuel or other goods, wares and merchandizes. And that it shall be lawful for every retailer of fuel to bring home to his or their own houses or wharfs all manner of fuel by and with his and their own, or with any other car, carts or cars.

And be it farther enacted, that such as have any carroom or carrooms duly licensed and allowed as aforesaid, shall not directly nor indirectly let them out for hire to be worked by any others at any time hereafter without the approbation and allowance of the said Presidents and Governors of Christ's Hospital [291] for the time being first obtained, and attested in writing under the said president's hand; to the end that none may be admitted to work any car, but such as should be found of civil carriage and able, and meet for that employment, upon pain that every person so offending therein shall forfeit the sum of 10s. a day for every day he shall let to hire the said car, to be recovered as is hereafter mentioned; and that the prices of carriage may be made moderate as well for the people as the carmen, it is enacted, that forthwith this present year and hereafter always from time to time, as often as occasion shall require, reasonable rates and prices of carriages within this city and liberties shall be set and appointed by the Court of Aldermen, they calling to their assistance such of the commons as they shall think fit for their information therein. And the said prices to be printed and set upon posts in publick places, and a copy thereof to be always carried about by every respective carman for the satisfaction of all persons that shall desire to see the same. And if any carman shall demand and take more than according to such rates and prices so to be set down, such person and persons so offending shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of 10s. to be had and recovered as is hereafter mentioned. It is hereby farther enacted, that if any person or persons authorized to work any car or cars by himself or servant shall neglect or refuse duly to pay the said yearly rent of 17s. 4d. a year to the said president and governors, for the uses aforesaid for every the said car and cars, as is before mentioned, the carroom that is the licence of such person or persons to work such car or cars be suspended, and such person or persons be disabled to work any longer by virtue of the same licence, until he or they shall conform to the payment of the said duty of 17s. 4d. respectively. And if any person or persons, for the cause before mentioned being so disabled, shall presume before conformity after such disallowance to use or work any car or cars either by him or themselves, or by his or their servant or servants, agent or agents, then every such person and persons shall respectively forfeit and lose the sum of 13s. 4d. for every time they shall so work, to be recovered and applied as is hereafter mentioned.

And lastly it is enacted, that all penalties, pains and forfeitures in and by this Act before limited and appointed, shall and may be levied by distress of the goods of the person so offending in the said city to be found or recovered by action of debt, bill or information in the name of the Chamberlain of this city for the time being, in His Majesty's Court holden before [292] the lord mayor and aldermen of the said city in the chamber of the Guildhall of the City of London, and after recovery thereof, one moiety after charges deducted shall be to the informer, and the other moiety to the poor of Christ's Hospital in London, to be employed for and towards their relief. In all which suits to be brought by this Act, the Chamberlain shall, in case he do recover, be allowed his ordinary costs and charges to be expended in and for recovery of all such forfeitures against the offender and offenders. And in case upon a trial the verdict shall pass for the defendant, or in case the party shall be nonsuit or discontinue his suit, in every such case the defendant shall also recover his reasonable costs.

Provided always, and be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that no person or persons hereafter to be employed in taking care for the putting of this Act in execution, as a streetman or other officer, shall be allowed to have any carroom within the City of London or the liberties thereof; any thing in this Act, or any other law, usage or custom of this city, to the contrary in any wife notwithstanding.

They farther certify, that before the coming of the writ of habeas corpus, the defendant was taken in the said city, and imprisoned in the custody of the sheriffs thereof by virtue of an original bill of debt upon demand of 13s. 4d. against him 2 Novemb. 29 Car. 2, upon the said Act before the mayor and aldermen in the chamber of the Guildhall of the said city, according to the custom of the said city, which said original bill doth still there depend undetermined.

Thompson for the defendant. That here ought no procedendo to be granted, but that the defendant may be discharged from the action. This writ is a habeas corpus to remove a cause out of an Inferior Court, and if it appears that the plaintiff hath not cause of action, or that this Court hath jurisdiction of the cause, no procedendo ought to be granted.

I hold, 1. This by-law is unreasonable and void, and not warrantable by the custom.

2. The defendant is not within the penalty of it.

3. This Court is well possessed of the cause.

As to the first, By this custom alledged, the mayor and aldermen have no power to restrain the number of carts, or to impose fines.

All by-laws to restrain liberty or trade are void. 11 Co. 53.

The Taylors of Ipswich case, Moor 576, pl. 796. Davenant versus Hardies, 1 Roll. Abr. 364 a. pl. 6.

[293] M. 29 Eliz. B. R. A by-law in London, that none should sell sand which was not taken out of the Thames, resolved void. And there was a by-law 42 Eliz. to this very purpose adjudged void, save only that here men may carry their own goods. 1 Roll Abr. 364, pl. 5, Pain versus Haughton, and 24 Car. 2, B. R. Player versus Bradnox. This custom was returned upon a habeas corpus, and no procedendo allowed.

This by-law hinders the woodmonger from following their trades; for they must use one of the 420 cars; and by the same reason that they may appoint 420, they may appoint but 20, or more or less, and may impose what fine they please, and what rent, &c. They may as well restrain brewers, tallow-chandlers, hackney-coachmen.

Object. Respect ought to be had to the City of London.

Resp. 'Tis true, but they are not to make by-laws prejudicial to the people.

As to the 2d, Admitting this by-law to be good, yet this defendant is not within the penalty thereof, for that it binds none but freemen, citizens and inhabitants, and it doth not appear that he is a freeman, citizen or inhabitant. 1 Bulst. 11, Franklin versus Green. In the case of the butchers, the plaintiff hath not set forth the custom, but declares upon the by-law as upon an Act of Parliament.

As to the 3*d*, This Court is possessed of the cause. There is a difference where a habeas corpus is to remove a cause grounded upon a custom which cannot be taken notice of in this Court, as for calling a woman whore, &c. and where this Court hath cognizance, as in this case; for an action of debt will lie here upon a by-law made in any place.

Object. This action is for a duty under 40s. and so not suable here by the statute of Gloucester cap. 8.

Resp. That statute extends not to this Court, for the words of the writ upon the statute are, that pleas vi & armis cannot be sued in minori Curia quam coram nobis vel alibi coram justiciariis nostris ad mandatum nostrum, &c. Regist. Orig. 111 b. F. N. B. 46 & 47, and so the Court of Exchequer is excluded.

Sir George Geoffreys Recorder of London contra. He first answers the objections made to the return.

1. Object. That it is not alleged, that the defendant is a citizen, freeman or inhabitant.

Resp. This objection was made to the return of the by-law concerning the Eastland company, and ruled that 'twas well enough.

[294] 2. As to the setting forth of the custom in the declaration, it need not, because the citizens are bound to take notice thereof.

3. This Court is not possessed of the cause, because this duty is to be sued for in Guildhall, and not here or elsewhere.

Though the by-law may be nought for the fine, it may be good for the rent; for a by-law may be good for one part and bad for another. As to the number, if they cannot be restrained, the streets would be pestered. And by-laws of the like nature in London have been here or in the other Courts allowed, as, that none but freeman shall exercise a trade in any shop, and so is such a by-law good in any petty corporation, 8 Co. 121, Wagoner's case. And it shall not be presumed that the magistrates will do wrong. Regist. 105. The custom of Rippon, that none should exercise the trade of a dyer without the licence of the Archbishop of York, lord of the said town. 34 H. 6. Andrew Deveene was committed for exercising the trade of a common broker, not being licensed and sworn; he brought an habeas corpus, and was remanded to London: the Archbishop of Canterbury was then Chancellor, and adjudged it to be a good by-law.

Lib. Dunthorn fol. 237, in Guildhall, a book which is a repertory of the records in Guildhall. There is the by-law for the brokers, and they pay 40s. annually at this day, and ever since they have been licensed.

H. 14 & 15 Car. 2, C. B. debt by the Chamberlain against one Hutchins upon this by-law, and there were two justices against two, but afterwards a procedendo was granted, and the Lord Chief Justice took notice in that case of one Barker's case, 8 Car. 1, for licensing porters.

Object. 1 Roll. Abr. 364, Pain versus Haughton.

Resp. That case is not so strong as this, because it was in an action of trespass, and so more strict than upon a return, and there was a particular advantage to particular persons.

Mich. 1656, in C. B. Osburn's case, after many arguments difference was agreed between by-laws made by virtue of a custom, and where they are made by virtue of a charter; and here this by-law is founded upon custom, and a procedendo was there granted, and so is 2 Cro. 597, Broad's case, custom is stronger than a charter. Moor 403. A by-law to restrain the liberty of hawkers in London good for that reason.

An act of common council may be good in part, and void in part. Adjournatur. Post.

[295] JEREMY GUY versus WILLIAM DORMER.

Hill. 29 Car. 2. Warr.

Revocation.

Trespass and ejectment of a demise of Robert Dormer made 1 Septemb. 29 Car. 2, by indenture, of five messuages, 300 acres of land, 100 acres of meadow, and 400 acres of pasture with the appurtenances in Granborough, Woolescot, Walcot and Willowby, and of all tithes of grain and hay arising by the premisses from the last of August then last past seven years. Upon not guilty pleaded, the jury find a special verdict, viz.

That one William Dormer Esquire was seised of the lands and tenements in the declaration mentioned in his demesne as of fee: and so being seised, the said William 25 and 26 Septemb. 7 Car. 2, by his indentures of lease and release conveyed the same to William Moor and John Carter, and their heirs, to the uses in the same mentioned.

The tenor of which indenture of release followeth in these words:

This indenture made the 26th day of September in the year of our Lord 1655, between William Dormer of Templeton in the county of Berks esquire of the one part, and William Moor of the Middle-Temple London Esquire, and John Carter, second son of Ancel Carter, citizen and grocer of London, of the other part. Whereas the said William Dormer by his indenture bearing date the day before the date of these presents made between the said William Dormer of the one part, and the said William Moor and John Carter of the other part, hath for the consideration therein mentioned granted, bargained and sold unto the said William Moor and John Carter all those several and inclosed arable meadow and pasture grounds, lying and being in the parish, lordship, hamlets or precincts of Granburrough, Woolescot and Walcot in the county of Warwick, and hereafter particularly mentioned, that is to say, all that several and inclosed pasture or pasture ground called or known by the name of Braddimer's Close, abutting upon Willoughby field, and also all that several and inclosed pasture or pasture ground called or known by the name of Turnchil, which two closes are containing by estimation 165 acres, be they more or less, [296] whereof forty of the said acres are or were in the possession of John Frandon, and also all that one other several and inclosed pasture or pasture ground wherein the shepherd's house now standeth, adjoining to the said ground called Swinehill, being divided with an hedge called Course Hadens Hedge, containing by estimation 128 acres, be it more or less; also one other close adjoining to the said last mentioned pasture, and adjoining also to Dunchurch field, containing by estimation 26 acres and two rods, be it more or less; and also three other several and other inclosed closes or pasture grounds, lying betwixt Onely grounds, the Grange and London highway, containing by estimation 135 acres, be the same more or less; and also all hedges, ditches, fences, mounds, freeboards, ways, passages, privileges, profits, commodities, emoluments and hereditaments whatsoever to the said several and inclosed arable meadow and pasture grounds, and to other the before mentioned premisses, or to any of them belonging, or in any wise appertaining, or to or with them, or any of them, with their and every of their appurtenances, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders of all and singular the before mentioned bargained premisses, and of every part and parcel of them, and every of them, and all rents and services reserved upon any demise, lease or grant, demises, leases or grants heretofore made of the same bargained premisses, or of any of them, or of any part or parcel of them, or of any of them; and also all the estate, right, title, interest, claim and demand whatsoever of him the said William Dormer, of, in or to the before mentioned granted premisses, or of, in or to every or any part or parcel of them, or any of them; and all and all manner of profits and commodities whatsoever coming, growing, arising or renewing, or to be had in, of, upon or forth of the high meadow and Ashil in Woolescot, Walcot and Willowby in the said county of Warwick, Mickmeadow and the common greens and the lands leading to and from the said greens in Woolescot and Walcot aforesaid, and of, in, upon and forth of all and every the lands, tenements, meadows and hereditaments of him the said William Dormer, lying and being in the common fields of Willowby aforesaid, and of, in, upon or forth of all, every or any part or parcel thereof, the house or homestall now or lately in the occupation of John Frandon being in Woolescot aforesaid only excepted and foreprized; to have and to hold the same unto the said William Moor and John Carter, their executors or assigns, for the term of one year from the day before the said [297] recited indenture next ensuing, and fully to be compleat and ended, as by the said recited indenture it doth and may appear; by force whereof the said William Moor and John Carter are actually possessed of the premisses. Now this indenture witnesseth, that the said William Dormer, for conveying and assuring the several pasture grounds and meadows, lands, tenements, hereditaments and premisses hereafter mentioned and declared, and for the good love and affection he hath and beareth to Frances his wife, and for her better maintenance and sustentation, and for the natural love and affection, which he beareth unto Robert Dormer, nephew of the said William Dormer, and for divers other good causes and considerations him the said William Dormer in this behalf especially moving, hath granted, released and confirmed, and by these presents doth grant, release and confirm unto the said William Moor and John Carter, their heirs and assigns, all and singular the said several inclosed pastures and pasture grounds, meadows, lands, tenements, hereditaments and premisses bargained and sold, or mentioned, meant or intended to be bargained and sold, in and by the said recited indenture, and every part and parcel thereof, with their and every of their rights, members and appurtenances whatsoever, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders together with the rents and profits of all and singular the recited premisses, and all the estate, right, title, interest, claim and demand whatsoever of him the said William Dormer of, in or to the said several and inclosed pastures and pasture grounds, meadows, lands, tenements and premisses, and of, in and to every part and parcel of the same, except before excepted; to have and to hold all and singular the said several and inclosed pastures and pasture grounds, lands, tenements, hereditaments and premisses, and every part and parcel of them, and every of them, with their and every of their rights, members and appurtenances, unto the said William Moor and John Carter, their heirs and assigns for ever; upon trust and confidence nevertheless in them the said William Moor and John Carter, their heirs and assigns reposed, and to the uses, intents and purposes hereafter in these presents expressed, limited and declared, that is to say, to the intent and purpose, that they the said William Moor and John Carter, and the survivor of them, and the heirs of the survivor of them shall permit and suffer the said William Dormer for and during the term of his natural life, from time to time to receive and take all the rents, issues and profits of all the said several inclosed pastures, meadows, lands, tenements, [298] rents, hereditaments and premisses to the sole and proper use of him the said William Dormer and his assigns; and after the decease of the said William Dormer, then to permit and suffer the said Frances, now wife of the said William Dormer, and her heirs for and during the term of her natural life from time to time to receive, perceive and take all the rents, issues and profits of all the said several and inclosed pastures, meadows, lands, tenements, rents, hereditaments and premisses to the sole and proper use and behoof of her the said Frances and her assigns; upon this farther trust and confidence, that after the decease of the said Frances now wife of the said William Dormer, they the said William Moor and John Carter and their heirs, and the survivor of them, and his heirs, shall stand seised of all and singular the said several and inclosed pasture grounds, meadows, lands, tenements, hereditaments and premisses, to the use and behoof of the said Robert Dormer, and of his heirs and assigns for ever, and to and for no other use, intent or purpose whatsoever. And lastly it is covenanted and agreed, and it is the true intent and meaning of these presents, that if the said William Dormer shall at any time hereafter, by any writing subscribed and sealed by him in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, in express words, signify and declare his intention to revoke or make void these presents, or the estate and use herein or hereby limited and appointed unto the said William Moor and John Carter and their heirs, of or in the premisses or any part thereof, that then and from thenceforth touching such of the said lands and premisses, whereof such declarations shall be so made, the use and estate by these presents limited and granted shall cease, determine and be utterly void; any thing in these presents contained to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

In witness whereof, &c.

The jury farther find that it was indorsed upon the said indenture thus:

Memorandum, That it is covenanted, concluded and agreed between all the parties to these presents, before the ensealing hereof, that immediately after the deceases of the within named William Dormer and Frances Dormer, and before the limitations of the uses therein limited, shall be any whit profitable or beneficial, that the within named William Moor and John Carter shall be farther trusted, that they and the survivor of them, and the heir of the survivor of them, shall permit and suffer Jane Herbert, now wife of James Herbert, niece to the within named William Dormer, to receive and take all the [299] issues and profits of the within granted premisses, for and during the term of five years from the deceases of the within named William and Frances Dormer, upon this confidence and trust nevertheless, that the said Jane Herbert shall detain and keep the said issues and profits until Jane Herbert, god-daughter to the within named William Dormer, arrive to the age of fifteen years, and in case the said god-daughter dies before the said time, and the said Jane Herbert the mother survives, then the said sums of money so raised to be to her sole profit, use and benefit; and with this farther trust, that at the said age of fifteen years of the said god-daughter, she shall deliver and be accountable for all the issues and profits to the said Jane, the god-daughter, for her sole benefit and use.

The jury farther find, that 9 April 20 Car. 2, the said William Dormer made his last will and testament in writing signed and sealed in the presence of two credible witnesses, by which he did give and devise as followeth:

I do give all my lands in Wooscot alias Walcot or Granborough in the county of Warwick, with all their rents, rights and profits thereunto belonging, unto my nephew William Dormer and his heirs for ever, that is, in manner and form following, provided always, and my will and meaning is, that my well beloved wife Frances Dormer shall first enjoy it immediately after my decease for the full term of her natural life, and that immediately after the decease of my said wife, then my will and meaning is, that my god-daughter Mrs. Jane Herbert shall enjoy it with all the profits and commodities thereunto belonging, during the term of five years, beginning from the day of my aforesaid wife's decease; and in case she die, then to Dorothy Herbert, sister to the said Jane Herbert, shall enjoy the aforesaid five years of the aforesaid lands; and in case the said Dorothy die before she shall receive the aforesaid five years, then my will and meaning is, that my niece Jane Herbert, mother to the aforesaid Jane and Dorothy, shall enjoy all the rents and profits of the aforesaid lands in Wooscot alias Walcot or Granborough in the county of Warwick, for the term of five years, beginning from the day of my wife's decease, and after the expiration of the aforesaid five years, then my will and meaning is, that my nephew, William Dormer, second son to my brother Sir Robert Dormer, shall have the inheritance to himself and to his heirs for ever. Item, Whereas there is a suit at this time between my two nephews concerning 2000l. given by my brother Sir Robert Dormer, to his younger son William Dormer, by virtue of a [300] codicil made by his father, and signed by himself in his life-time, which codicil one Mr. Lane, a lawyer of the Inner Temple, and myself perused, as being trusted by the said Sir Robert Dormer for the aforesaid William, during his minority, by virtue of which codicil we found therein specified to be given to his son William Dormer 2000l. which sum, after the decease of my brother Sir Robert Dormer, was by myself demanded of my nephew Robert Dormer, when he would pay it us in? Who answered, that he hoped he might as well keep it as any other, paying use for it. Upon which answer Mr. Lane and myself were content he should, and so it rested for that time, but myself going presently into France and leaving the whole business to Mr. Lane, who dying before I came back into England, and not having registered the aforesaid codicil, which as appeareth is now lost, only a copy thereof appears taken by a scrivener, which it seemeth is not sufficient for the recovering the aforesaid sum of 2000l. so that my nephew William Dormer is likely to lose his right; therefore in consideration of this I think myself bound in conscience to see him satisfied out of my own estate for our omission and great oversight of not having registered the said original. This I have written to shew how that I justify to the whole world in this my last will and testament, that there was such a codicil, wherein my brother Sir Robert Dormer gave to his son, William Dormer, 2000l. and that his brother, Robert Dormer never denied payment thereof till now since his marriage, and my last coming out of England. Item, My will and meaning therefore is, that I do make my nephew William Dormer sole heir to my whole estate, provided he doth observe the conditions before mentioned in this my last will. In witness, &c.

That the said William Dormer, the uncle, in November 20 Car. 2, died.

That the said Robert Dormer, lessor of the plaintiff, is nephew and heir of the said William the uncle, and the same person named in the said will.

That William the defendant is nephew of the said William the uncle, and the same person named in his said will.

That the term of five years expired in May 29 Car. 2.

That the said William Dormer the defendant, afterwards entered into the said tenement, and became seised, prout lex postulat.

[301] That the said Robert Dormer, 1 Jun. 29 Car. 2, entered, and 1 Septemb. 29 Car. 2, made the lease to the plaintiff prout, who became possessed until ejected. And the jury say, that the tenements in the declaration and the tenements in the indentures of 25 and 26 Septemb. 7 Car. 2, and also in the said will dated 9 April 20 Car. 2, are the same. And that the said William Dormer, now defendant, and William Dormer, the nephew, named in the said will, are the same. And the said William Dormer, now defendant, nephew of the said William Dormer the testator, did observe and fulfil all the agreements in the said will mentioned, and that the said Frances Dormer died in Apr. 22 Car. 2. And if upon the whole matter the devise be a revocation of the uses in the indenture, they find for the defendant, otherwise for the plaintiff.

West for the plaintiff. That the will is no revocation of the uses, because the words (by express words) exclude all implicit revocations; for every revocation must pursue the power, for an estate at common law could not be undone without an entry, Coke upon Litt. 237 a. and 10 Co. 144, Scroop's case, and Hob. 312, Tibbot versus Lee, come not to this case, nor Frampton's case, Moor 736.

Serjeant Croke for the defendant. The interpretation of powers of revocation have been always favourable, because estates of inheritance depend thereupon. Here the will is a revocation, because when two acts cannot consist, the later is a revocation of the former. In some things the donor or feoffor shall bind a power to circumstances, as for a deed to be executed before three witnesses, &c. But where there is only a general expression, the later act shall satisfy those general words.

As for authorities, 1 Cr. 472. Jones 392, Snape versus Turton, Scroop's case, and Frampton's case, and Hob. Tibbot versus Lee, Latch 24, Harding versus Warner. In trespass upon the case. The plaintiffs declare, that whereas Sir Edward Pool Knight, father of the said Grizil was possessed and lawfully interessed of and in certain timber-trees growing in a certain park called Oaksey-Park in Wiltshire, 1 May 26 Car. 2, intended to cut down and sell the same to raise portions for his children, of which said intention the said defendant having notice, he the said defendant then at Sherborn in the county of Gloucester, in consideration that the said Sir Edward at the defendant's special instance and request would forbear cutting the said trees, did promise the said Sir Edward, that he the said defendant would well and faithfully pay to the said Grizil 1000l. And the plaintiffs in fact say, that the said Sir Edward after the making the said promise did not cut any of the said trees, and yet the defendant did not pay the said Grizil whilst she was sole, nor the said Sir Ralph and Grizil, or either of them after their marriage, the said 1000l. though thereunto requested, ad damnum 1000l. Upon non assumpsit pleaded, and verdict for the plaintiff, and damages 1000l. and judgment, the defendant brings a writ of error, and assigns the general error.

Covenant. 1 Vent. 329. 2 Jon. 109.

Error to reverse a judgment in B. R. in an action of covenant, wherein the plaintiff declares against the defendants as surviving executors of Michael Knight deceased; for that whereas one Peter Wood was seised of a toft, &c. in London, in fee, whereon a messuage stood, called the Tallowchandler, 4 March 22 Car. 2, demised by indenture the same to one William Ginger, from Lady-Day then following, for 51 years, who entered and became possessed; that the said William Ginger, 1 Sept. 22 Car. 2, built a new messuage upon the said toft, and 8 Sept. 22 Car. 2, by indenture demised the said messuage, &c. to John Web, from Michaelmas following, for twenty-one years, at 28l. rent sterling; and the said John Web, for himself, his executors, administrators and assigns did covenant to pay the rent, and to repair the premisses, and entered and became possessed; and 1 December 23 Car. 2, granted and assigned the said premisses to the said Michael Knight, and all his estate and term therein, who entered and became possessed; and 2 Dec. 24 Car. 2, made his will, and the defendants and one Thomas Read deceased, his executors, and died. That the defendants took upon them the execution of the said will, and entered, and became possessed. That the said William Ginger by indenture dated 20 June 25 Car. 2, granted all the premisses, [304] and all his estate therein to the said William Peachy the plaintiff, to which grant the defendants, &c. did attorn, by reason whereof the plaintiff became possessed of the reversion of the said messuage for the residue of the said twenty-one years. That the said Thomas Read died 1 March 1673, and 84l. for three years, ending at Michaelmas last, was behind, and some repairs wanting; and so the defendants have broken their covenant ad damnum 200l.

The defendants plead, that after the making the said indenture of demise and grant, and assignment by the said John Web to the said Michael Knight, and after the said grant and assignment to the plaintiff, and before any part of the rent of 48l. was behind, viz. 10 October 25 Car. 2, the defendants assigned the premisses to one Evan Powel, of which the plaintiff had notice. The plaintiff replies, that the said assignment was made by fraud and covin between the said defendants and the said Evan Powel, to defraud the said plaintiff of the rent aforesaid. To which replication the defendants demurred, and judgment was given in B. R. for the plaintiff; and the defendants brought a writ of error, and assigned the general error.

And Serjeant Weston for the plaintiff in the writ of error. That cannot be said to be by fraud, which the law allows to be done; and here the assignees are not restrained from assigning, and therefore the assignment cannot be said to be by fraud generally; but some particular fraud ought to have been alledged as perception of rents, continuance in possession, &c. For in all cases where the thing stands indifferent to be fraudulent or not, there fraud cannot be pleaded generally, but the same must be set forth in particular. Plowd. 46 b. Mich. 9 H. 6, 41, cited there.

Pollexfen and Holt for the defendant in the writ of error. If fraud cannot be generally assigned here, a landlord can never be sure of his rent, for he cannot tell upon what terms his lessee assigns the tenements.

In case of a recovery by default, fraud may be generally alledged, as in Wimbish and Talbois's case, Plowd. 47, but if after a verdict, there it must be specially alledged; and Tresham's case, 9 Co. 110 a. the resolution there is direct for this case, and afterwards the parties agreed.

[305] BAMBRIDGE versus BATES, CUSHEE AND DATE. MIDDLESEX.

Trespass. Postea 328, 337.

Trespass for breaking the plaintiff's house at the parish of St. Mary Matfellon, alias White-chappel, and taking away his goods, and names them, ad damnum 150l. The defendants plead not guilty, and the jury find a special verdict, viz.

That by an Act of Parliament 12 Car. 2, cap. 23, 'twas enacted, that from and after the 25th day of December 1660, there shall be throughout Your Majesty's kingdoms of England, dominion of Wales, and town of Berwick upon Tweed, raised, levied, collected and paid unto Your Majesty, during your life, for beer, ale, cider, and other liquors herein after mentioned, the several rates, impositions, duties and charges therein after expressed, and in manner and form in the said Act following, viz. that all common brewers of beer and ale shall once in every week, and all inn-keepers, alehouse-keepers, victuallers, and other retailers of beer, ale, cider, perry, metheglin, strong-water, brewing, making or retailing the same, shall once in every month make true and particular entries at the office of excise, within the limits of which the said commodities and manufactures are made, of all beer, ale, perry, cider, metheglin, strong-water, or other the liquors, aforesaid, which they or any of them shall brew, make or retail in that week or month respectively, as aforesaid; and that all such common brewers who do not once a week make due and particular entries, shall forfeit 5l. and that every such inn-keeper who doth not make true and particular entries once a month, 5l. And that every alehouse-keeper, victualler, and other retailer, who doth not once a month make due and particular entries, shall forfeit 20s. And that every common brewer who shall not pay, and clear off within a week after he made his entry, or ought to have made his entry, as aforesaid, shall pay double the value of the duty; and that every inn-keeper, alehouse-keeper, victualler, or other retailer who shall not pay and clear off within a month after he made his entry, or ought to have made his entry, as aforesaid, shall pay double the value of the duty; the said respective forfeitures to be levied upon their goods and chattels in such manner and form as hereafter in this Act is [306] ordained and directed; and that all forfeitures and offences made and committed against this Act, or any clause or article therein contained, shall be heard, adjudged and determined by such person and persons, and in such manner and form, as hereafter in and by this Act is directed and appointed, that is to say, all such forfeitures and offences made and committed within the immediate limits of the chief office in London shall be heard, adjudged and determined by the said chief commissioners and governors of excise appointed by His Majesty, or the major part of them, or by the commissioners for appeals and regulating of this duty, or the major part of them in case of appeal, and not otherwise; and all such forfeitures and offences made and committed within all or any of the counties, cities, towns or places within this kingdom, or dominion thereof, shall be heard and determined by any two or more of the justices of the peace residing near to the place where such forfeitures shall be made, or offence committed; and in case of neglect or refusal of such justices of the peace by the space of fourteen days next after complaint made and notice thereof given to the offender, then the sub-commissioners, or the major part of them, appointed for any such city, county, town or place, shall, and are hereby empowered to hear and determine the same: and if the party find himself aggrieved by the judgment given by the said sub-commissioners, he shall or may appeal to the justices of the peace at the next Quarter-Sessions, who are hereby empowered and authorized to hear and determine the same, whose judgment therein shall be final, which said commissioners for appeals, and regulating this duty, and the chief commissioners for excise and all justices of peace and sub-commissioners aforesaid, respectively, are hereby authorized and strictly enjoined and required, upon any complaint or information exhibited and brought of any such forfeiture made, or offence committed contrary to this Act, to summon the party accused, and upon his appearance, or contempt, to proceed to the examination of the matter of fact, and upon due proof made thereof, either by the voluntary confession of the party, or by the oath of one or more credible witnesses (which oath they or any two or more of them have hereby power to administer) to give judgment and sentence according as in and by this Act is before ordained and directed, and to award and issue out warrants under their hands for the levying of such forfeitures, penalties and fines, as by this Act are imposed for any such offence committed upon the goods and chattels of the [307] offender, and to cause sale to be made of the said goods and chattels, if they shall not be redeemed within fourteen days, rendering to the party the overplus if any be, and for want of sufficient distress to imprison the party offending till satisfaction be made, and that all parts of the Cities of London and Westminster, with the borough of Southwark, and the several suburbs thereof, and parishes within the weekly bills of mortality, shall be under the immediate care, inspection and management of the said office, and that if any person or persons shall at any time be sued or prosecuted for any thing by him or them done or executed in pursuance of this Act, he or they shall and may plead the general issue, and give this Act in evidence for his defence, and if upon a trial the verdict shall pass for the defendant or defendants, or the plaintiff or plaintiffs be non-suited, then such defendant or defendants shall have double costs to him or them awarded against such plaintiff or plaintiffs.

That this Act was confirmed 13 Car. 2, cap. 7.

That 22 & 23 Car. 2, cap. 5, it was enacted as followeth, viz.

That from and after the 24th day of June 1671 there shall be throughout Your Majesty's kingdom of England, dominion of Wales, and town of Berwick upon Tweed, raised, levied, collected and paid unto your Majesty, your heirs and successors, during the space and term of six years, from the 24th day of June aforesaid, and no longer, for beer, ale, cider, and other liquors herein after expressed by way of excise, over and above all other duties, charges and impositions by any former Act and Acts, set and imposed in manner and form following, that is to say, inter alia, for every gallon of low wines of the first extraction, made of any kind of imported wine or cider, or other materials imported, to be paid by the maker or seller. 2. And that every the common brewers and retailers of ale and beer, and all and every other person and persons liable to and chargeable with the pain of any excise, or new impost upon beer, ale, or other exciseable liquors, by virtue of any former law of excise now in force, shall also be liable to, and charged with the payment of the additional rates and duties hereby imposed, which said additional rates and duties shall be collected, levied and paid in the same manner; and the same persons liable to, and chargeable with the pain thereof, shall, in case of neglect or default of entry or payment, or in case of any other neglect or offence [308] tending to defraud His Majesty, or any of his officers, farmers or collectors of the duties or rates hereby imposed, be also subject to the like proceedings, judgments and executions, and shall likewise incur the same penalties, fines and forfeitures as he or they, his or their heirs and executors or administrators should or might have been subject to, or ought to have incurred for the non-payment of any former duty of excise, or for the like offence committed against any former law of excise now in force; and that all forfeitures and offences made and committed against this Act, or any clause, article or sentence herein contained, and all appeals, shall be heard, adjudged and determined by such person and persons and in such manner and form, as the like forfeitures and offences against the former laws of excise are thereby appointed to be heard and determined, and not otherwise; and moreover, that all commissioners, sub-commissioners of excise, all commissioners of appeals, justices of peace, constables, and other officers and ministers whatsoever, shall have, use, and exercise the same jurisdiction, power and authority, whether it be judicial or ministerial for the better ordering, collecting, levying and securing the duties, and the additional rates and duties hereby imposed, as he or they could have had, used or exercised for the better ordering, collecting, levying or securing any former rates or duties of excise whatsoever; and that all fines, penalties and forfeitures, which shall be incurred by reason of any offence committed against this Act, shall be employed, one moiety thereof to the use of the King's Majesty, his heirs and successors, another moiety thereof to him or them that shall or will inform or sue for the same; and also, that if any person or persons shall at any time be sued or prosecuted for any thing by him done in pursuance or execution of this Act, he and they shall and may plead the general issue, and give this Act in evidence for their defence; and if upon trial a verdict shall pass for the defendant or defendants, or the plaintiff or plaintiffs be nonsuited, then every such defendant or defendants shall recover his or their double costs.

That by another Act of Parliament 29 Car. 2, it is enacted, that from and after the 24th day of June 1677 there shall be throughout Your Majesty's kingdoms of England, dominion of Wales, and town of Berwick upon Tweed, raised, levied, collected and paid unto your Majesty, your heirs and successors, during the space and term of three years, from the 24th day of June aforesaid, and no longer, for beer, ale, [309] cider and other liquors herein after expressed by way of excise, over and above all other duties, charges and impositions by any former Act or Acts set or imposed in manner and form following, viz. (inter alia) for every gallon of low wines of the first extraction, made of any kind of imported wine or cider, or other materials imported, to be paid by the maker or seller. 2. And that the several rates and duties of excise upon beer, ale and other liquors, shall be raised, levied, collected and paid upon your Majesty, your heirs and successors, during the space and term of three years, as aforesaid, and no longer, in the same manner and form, and by such rules, means and ways, and under such penalties and forfeitures, as are contained, mentioned, expressed and directed in the before cited Act of Parliament of 22 and 23 Car. 2. That the plaintiff at the time of the trespass, and for 3 years before was, and continued a common distiller of strong-waters at Wapping in Middlesex, within the jurisdiction of the chief commissioners of excise, and during all the time aforesaid, did exercise the art and mystery of a distiller of strong-waters, and did extract a certain low wine of the first extraction. That one William Hall, gent. within the time aforesaid, viz. 2 Nov. 29 Car. 2, at the principal capital office of excise, in the parish of Saint Peter the Poor in London, did exhibit before the chief commissioners and governors of the excise, an information as well for the King as for himself, that the plaintiff being a distiller and maker of strong-waters, and of low wines within the jurisdiction of the said office, between 23 August 29 Car. 2, and 24 September following, being one month, made 5880 gallons of low wines of the first extraction of cider, or other materials imported, and did not pay the excise due for the same, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided. To which information the plaintiff appeared, and pleaded not guilty. And so far it proceeded, that 13 November 29 Car. 2, the commissioners proceeded to the examination of the matter aforesaid, and thereupon it did appear by the oath of credible witnesses, that the plaintiff had within the time aforesaid made 5880 gallons of low wines of the first extraction of materials imported, and had not paid the excise due for the same; and thereupon the said commissioners did adjudge that the plaintiff should forfeit 98l. being double the value of the said low wines, to be levied of his goods and chattels.

[310] That 18 December 29 Car. 2, the said commissioners, at the prosecution of the said William Hall, made their warrant to the defendants, being messengers belonging to the said office, reciting the judgment aforesaid, and by which the said commissioners did authorize and require the defendants, in His Majesty's name, immediately to enter into the plaintiff's house and distillatory, and to levy, by way of distress, the said sum of 98l. of the goods and chattels of the plaintiff, and the same goods to be disposed according to the said Act.

That the defendants pursuant to the said warrant, 10 Jan. mentioned in the declaration, did enter into the plaintiff's house, and did take the goods in the declaration mentioned, for the said 98l. and that the same are not sufficient to answer the said sum of 98l.

That there are dregs of sugar, called molasses, made beyond sea, which are brought into England.

That there are molasses which are made in England.

That the low wines, in the information and judgment specified, were extracted from the molasses, which were extracted and made in England from sugar imported from beyond the seas, and divers other English materials.

That the sugars, from which the molasses of which the said low wines were extracted, were ten times of more value than the rest of the materials which were used by separation of the aforesaid molasses from the sugar aforesaid.

That the molasses can never be made sugar again.

That the plaintiff in making the said low wines doth usually add seven hogsheads of wash, in which are put one quarter of malt, and twelve hogsheads of water to produce the extract of 200 gallons of low wines.

That the principal spirit of that extraction is produced from the molasses. But whether upon the whole matter the defendants be guilty or no, the jurors ignorant, & petunt advisamentum Curiæ.

Williams for the plaintiff. The question is, whether molasses be an imported material within the statute of 29 Car. 2.

1. This Act is intituled a free gift of the Commons in Parliament, without any recompence moving from the Crown, and therefore ought to be expounded beneficially for the people.

[311] 2. 'Tis a new charge and imposition upon the subject, and odious to the people by way of excise.

3. 'Tis found that molasses made in England is used in making of low wines, and 'tis found that this low wine is made of these molasses.

The Act distinguishes between low wines made of foreign molasses, and wine made of English materials.

No low wine is made of English material alone.

Materials here are intended immediate materials, viz. the molasses which are English.

Object. Materials shall be such as comprehend the principal part in value.

Resp. The bulky part is the materials, and not the value; and here the lump is the quarter of malt; as English cloths are so called if they be made of English cloth, though there be French lace upon them of double the value.

And the material cause is that which is immediate, as cloth is the material cause of a garment, not the wool.

And 'twill be a hard construction to put upon the trade of distillers, who are numerous; and yet the whole rent reserved upon the duty from them to the farmers is but 50l. per annum, which would be 5000l. if they should be said imported materials, and 'twould not be worth their labour, if so, and multitudes would be undone.

Ward for the defendant. There are two questions.

1. If an action of trespass will lie against the officers, because they acted by authority from the commissioners of excise, who have jurisdiction of the cause, and ought not to be questioned here?

2. Whether the duty be due here to the King.

1. It doth not lie, 8 Co. Dr. Bonham's case, 10 Co. the case of the Marshalsey. And when a man acts as Judge, he is not questionable. 1 Cr. 341, Pidgeon's case. And the plaintiff ought to have brought his appeal, and not an action of trespass.

Object. Mich. 19 Car. 2, Terry versus Huntington.

Resp. The question there was, whether the liquors were strong-waters perfectly made? And the jury found against the fact, and so the commissioners had not jurisdiction.

To the 2d. Here is a duty due for these low wines.

[312] 1. They are made of materials imported, viz. dregs of sugar and lees of wine, which are not English, and though English materials are added, that alters not the case, because 'tis found, that all the English ingredients together, without these materials, would not have made these low wines, & ubi major pars ibi totum. In the case of alnage, which is only for woollen cloth; yet resolved that linsey woolsey pays alnage, though but part wool.

Upon the statute of tillage, the major part gives the denomination, when prices of corn exceed such a value; the common price regulates that statute.

Croon's case, information upon the statute of 22 Car. 2, the last clause thereof, which says, that all wines remaining in store shall pay the duty. The defendant there imported wines in 1666, and so the wines were not remaining in store, because imported before the Act; and yet resolved that they shall pay; and so agreed in a writ of error by Hales and Vaughan. St. Hill's case, importation of wheat meal was within the Statute of Tillage.

As to the reservation of the rent to be but 50l. 'tis not found in the verdict. Adjournatur. Post.

Memorandum, In September 1679, Francis Barrel Serjeant at Law, who had been a reader of the Middle Temple, died in Kent.

Memorandum, October 22, Sir William Jones, Knight, Attorney General, surrendered up his patent, and I took the acknowledgment thereof; and so the place of Attorney General became void, by leave from His Majesty. And afterwards about October 25, Sir Creswel Levinz, Knight, was made Attorney General.

By the stat. of 26 H. 8, cap. 3, the revenue of the first-fruits and tenths of the clergy was granted to the Crown, and the several bishops were thereby appointed collectors thereof in their respective dioceses. The auditor was to make up their respective accounts, which were by him transmitted into the office of the pipe, according to the course of the Exchequer, where the bishop had his quietus est, and where all accountants accountable in the Exchequer have their [313] quietus est at this day. But the auditor was not thereby enjoined to give the bishop a duplicate of his account; and it was needless then, because he had his quietus est from the pipe, without fee or other reward for the same.

By the statute of 32 H. 8, cap. 45, that course was altered, and a Court of First Fruits and Tenths was erected, consisting of a chancellor, treasurer, attorney, and two auditors, who were to make up the accounts of that revenue, and being fairly ingrossed, were to remain in the same Court as the King's records, and not transmitted into the pipe: but no quietus est or duplicate of his account was thereby enjoined to be made and given to the bishops.

By the statute of 7 E. 6, cap. 1, the auditors were enjoined to make forth and give duplicates of their accounts at the reasonable request and cost of the accountant, wherein the bishops were included, and accordingly the practice has gone ever since the beginning of Queen Elizabeth; and I never heard it was disputed by any until the Archbishop of York, when Bishop of Carlisle, was pleased to call his duplicate of his account, a quietus est, and so would pay nothing for it.

Queen Mary by virtue of an Act of Parliament made in the second session in the first year of her reign, cap. 10, by her letters patent dissolves the said Court of First-fruits, and then creates a new office and officer, viz. the remembrancer of the first-fruits and tenths, who was to take all compositions, and to enter all accounts, and to make out all process against non-solvents, and all proceedings therein, to be under the survey of the Court of Exchequer.

In the second and third year of Philip and Mary, the clergy were exonerated from payment of first-fruits and tenths.

In the first year of Queen Elizabeth, cap. 4, the payment of first-fruits and tenths was restored to the Crown, and all things concerning the same that remained untaken away the eighth of August in the second and third year of the said Philip and Mary, were then restored and settled under the survey and government of the Exchequer, but the Court [314] of First-fruits was not revived, for that was dissolved before the said eighth of August, and the remembrancer being then established, continues to this day in every degree, sort or condition, as it was at or before the eighth of August in the said second and third year of Philip and Mary, at which time the clergy were exonerated from payment of first-fruits and tenths.

The archbishop requires Auditor Bridges to examine, state and pass his accounts for the year 1675, 1676, and 1677, according to the method I conceive he has sent up, which is not pursuant to the auditor's trust, and would be prejudicial to the King to the loss of all arrears owing by the incumbents; for in his state no arrears of the clergy are continued in charge. Not understanding the true nature of those accounts, in that they relate not barely and simply to the bishops receipts and payments, but to the whole revenue of the respective dioceses, each incumbent is thereby charged and discharged. And if no arrears be continued in charge upon the incumbents, they all, or any of them may plead the account made out in the bishop's name (when entered upon record) for their discharge.

[315] TERM. MICH. 31 CAR. 2. IN THE EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

JOHN LISLE versus JOHN GREY. ERROR OUT OF B. R.
EJECTMENT. NORTHUMBERLAND.

Uses. Pollexf. 582. 2 Jones 114. 2 Lev. 223. 2 Show. 6. Antea 278, 302.

The plaintiff declares of the demise of William Lisle of four messuages, twenty acres of land, two hundred acres of meadow, two hundred acres of pasture, and three hundred acres of moor in Acton, in the parish of Felton. Upon not guilty pleaded, the jury find a special verdict.

That one John Lisle was seised in fee of the tenements in question, and so seised 15 August 15 Car. 1, by indenture between himself of the one part, and John Robson, and others, of the other part, for settling the premisses in his blood; and in consideration of the natural love and affection to those to whom the estates afterwards are limited, and for the advancement of his son Edward Lisle, covenants to stand seised, to the use of himself for his life without impeachment of waste, the remainder to the use of the said Edward Lisle for his life, the remainder to the use of the first son of the said Edward, and the heirs male of his body, so to the second, third and fourth sons, and so severally and respectively to every of the heirs male of the body of the said Edward Lisle, lawfully to be begotten, and the heirs male of the body of such heirs male lawfully to be begotten, according to their ages and seniorities, and for default of such issue, to the use of William Lisle of Warkworth, gent. for his life, and after his decease, to the use of his first son in tail male, and so to his other sons, the remainder to the right heirs of the covenantor.

Provided, that if it shall happen the said Edward Lisle to die without issue male of his body lawfully begotten, then the said covenantor and his heirs shall stand seised, to the use, intent and purpose that they shall raise out of the profits the several sums of 100l. a-piece for each and every of the [316] daughters of the said Edward Lisle, to be paid to the eldest first, and so in order according to their several ages; and the said John Lisle had issue Edward his eldest son.

1 Mar. 17 Car. 1, John Lisle died so seised.

Edward had issue only a daughter still alive.

30 September 1649, Edward made a feoffment to the use of Thomas and John Forster, and their heirs, with warranty against all men.

Hill. 1649, a recovery was suffered wherein Ralph Forster was demandant, the said Thomas and John Forster tenants, and the said Lisle vouchee, and he vouched over the common vouchee.

1 May 1674 Edward Lisle died without any issue, but his daughter; that at his death all the estates limited by the indenture of 15 August 15 Car. 1, preceding the limitation to William Lisle named in the said indenture, and now lessor of the plaintiff, did end and determine.

The said William Lisle was cousin of the whole blood of the said John Lisle.

20 January 28 Car. 2, William Lisle entered upon the possession of the defendants, and made the lease to the plaintiff, who entered and was possessed until the defendants ejected him. And if for the plaintiff, for the plaintiff, &c.

And judgment was given in B. R. for the plaintiff, and now the defendants bring a writ of error.

And I conceive judgment ought to be reversed.

The single question in this case will be (for I do not think the proviso which appoints the daughters portions will make any doubt, because 'tis found in the verdict, that all estates precedent to William Lisle's estate determined upon the death of Edward) what estate Edward Lisle had by virtue of the indenture of 15 August 15 Car. 1, for if he had but an estate for life, then the judgment ought to be affirmed; but if he had an estate-tail, then the judgment ought to be reversed; and I hold that he had an estate-tail.

There are but three arguments that I can find, that can be urged why he should have but an estate for life, viz.

1. The intent of the covenantor.
2. That the word (heirs) here must be taken for sons or issues.
3. That heirs male here must take by way of a springing use.

[317] 1. As to the first. That it was the intent of the covenanter, that the heirs male of Edward should take by purchase, seems apparent.

1. From these words, so, viz. as the four sons, so every other heir male have it.
2. Severally and respectively as they become in being.
3. Why should but four sons be named, had not the covenantor intended that every other son should take by the subsequent words?
4. It's provided, that Edward shall have power to make provision for the daughters, which needed not have been, if the covenantor intended an estate-tail.
5. To the heirs male of such heirs male, had been needless.
6. To the heir male according to their seniority.

All which do shew that it was the intent of the covenantor to have Edward to be but tenant for life, and his sons to take as purchasers; notwithstanding which intent, yet if such intent cannot consist with the rules of law, the limitation will be void, and therefore a grant of lands by deed executed by livery and seisin to A. for ever is but an estate for life, though the feoffor intended otherwise. Doct. & Stud. lib. 1, cap. 24, fol. 39 b. So a gift by deed to a man and his heirs for twenty years shall go to the executors. Lit. sect. 740. Doct. & Stud. lib. 2, cap. 20, f. 93 b. So a feoffment to A. upon condition that if he pay not B. a certain sum, B. shall enter, yet B. cannot enter.

And this holds as well in case of a use, as at the common law; for before the statute 27 H. 8 after uses had gained the reputation of inheritances descendible, the common law directed the descent of them, and therefore there was possessio fratris of a use, as well as of land. 5 E. 4, 7. 4 Co. 22 a.

Uses are now reduced to the rules of the common law. 1 Co. 87 b. Corbet's case, 6 Co. 34, Fitzwilliams's case.

A feoffment to the use of A. and his issues male of his body makes not an estate-tail. Roll. Abr. tit. Estate 837, R. pl. 1 and 2.

And therefore in our case it being expressly against the rule of law, that where the ancestor takes an estate for life, and afterwards the land is limited to him and the heirs of his body (heirs) shall be a word of limitation. 1 Co. 104 a. Shellie's case. These words shall not be construed according to the intent of the party, but according to the rule of law, [318] and so Edward shall be in of an estate-tail executed by virtue of these words.

Heir not taken for issue.

2. As to the second argument. Where this limitation is to the heirs male, that is, to his (issues) male, and so as much as (sons).

True it is, in the Scripture phrase 'tis sometimes so taken, as, This is the heir, let us kill him; and St. Paul, The heir whilst he is a child is under tutors and governors, and differeth not from a servant.

But in our law 'tis never taken so, no not in a will.

In Foster and Ramsey's case, Mich. 1657, B. R. the case was to this purpose, thus: Sir Robert Ramsey had issue four sons, Robert, Nicholas, John and George; Robert being an alien had only daughters; Nicholas had issue Patrick; John by his will gives his land to the heir of his brother Nicholas in fee, Nicholas being then alive. Resolved, Patrick the son did not take; and yet in common parlance the eldest son is called heir. 2. It might amount to a description of the person, and to enure as an executory devise, viz. to the heir of my brother Nicholas. 1. To the person who shall be heir at the death of my brother Nicholas; and yet resolved ut supra: for the proper use of the word heir, is to make an inheritance. 1 Co. 103 b. Shelly's case. And should the word heir be otherwise taken, and only as a description of the person, it would make strange alteration, especially in wills.

Now if this word cannot be taken for son or issue in a will, much less in a deed, which is contrived by learned advice.

The third and last argument is, That this estate may enure to the heirs male by way of springing use; as thus, to the heirs male of Edward, that is, to such others as shall be his heirs male of his body, when they shall have a capacity so to take; and in the mean time the use to sleep in the covenantor; and so was Pibus and Mitford's case in B. R. 25 Car. 2, B. R. where the case was thus. Upon a special verdict in ejectment, Michael Mitford was seised in fee, and had issue two sons, viz. Robert by his first wife, and Ralph by his second wife, whose name was Jane, and so being seised by indenture covenants to stand seised, after the date of the said indenture, to the use of the heirs male of his body begotten on the body of his said wife Jane, with a [319] remainder to his own right heirs. And the question was, whether any estate did accrue to the son by the second wife? And adjudged that there did by way of a springing use.

But I think there is good reason for that case, and yet not for the case in question. For in that case, 'tis true the covenantor had all the estate in him at and after the time of the covenant, but it cannot be said that he had an estate for life, or any other particular estate, and so 'tis not within the rule of Shellie's case. But in our case Edward Lisle was seised for life (and so the verdict expresly finds it) and so within the rule of Shellie's case directly.

And if this construction should be made, I cannot see in what case the rule in Shellie's case will hold; for all may be interpreted as springing uses, and to lie in gremio legis till there be a son. And I take the rule in Shellie's case to be a positive law, of which there can no reason be given, but is a land-mark by which other cases are bounded; and such are many rules in our law, as why a fine should not be reversed for non-age of the conusor but by inspection during the non-age; and yet in a common recovery 'tis otherwise; so life and death are to be tried by jury, yet the life of the husband, in a writ of dower, is to be tried by witnesses.

But upon the whole matter, I take this case to be the same with Lewis Bowles's case, and that here Edward had an estate-tail; and so judgment ought to be reversed.

MURRAY versus EYTON. ANTEA 260, 286.

Estate. 2 Jon. 237. Pollexf. 491. Skin. 95. 2 Show. 104. Postea 338.

Saunders for the plaintiff. The sole question depends upon the fine and conveyance levied and made by Charles Earl of Derby; and in this case there are two points.

1. Whether the Private Act of Parliament of 4 Jac. hath altered the estate-tail granted by the letters patent of 2 R. 3, and hath made it another estate, or hath altered it in some accidents.

2. Admitting that the estate be altered, whether this new estate be restrained from alienation, by 32 H. 8, cap. 36.

It appears upon the verdict, that Earl Charles received 1700l. for the sale of the land. But the land is of the value of 2000l. per annum, and the purchasers have reimbursed themselves at least 40000l.

[320] Before I shall speak to the first point, I premise, 1. That the reversion of the Crown continues as it was at the time of the making of the letters patent. 2. If this Act of 4 Jac. had not been made, the first estate-tail could not have been barred. 3. If the estate-tail is not barred, then neither the feoffment nor fine have made any discontinuance, Co. Lit. 355 a.

And that the Act of 4 Jac. hath not altered the first estate-tail, I shall prove, by answering some objections already made, and then produce reasons.

1. Object. The first estate had no power to make jointures to the wives of them, or the wives of their eldest estates, which this estate hath.

Resp. It doth appear, that 'twas the intent that only a third part should be so disposed, which was no more than they should have for dower; and some of the lands are restrained from that privilege.

2. Object. By the letters patent every of the grantees was tenant in tail, and might commit waste; but so cannot tenant for life by this Act.

Resp. The omission of that privilege doth not alter the estate; for if the King gives land upon condition, that the grantee shall not commit waste, and afterwards an Act of Parliament is made which releases that condition, that doth not alter the estate. So e contra, if an Act of Parliament shall take away the privilege of committing waste, it doth not alter the estate.

3. Object. By the letters patent the lands are to be holden by service of chivalry, and now here will be no tenure.

Resp. The tenure doth not alter the estate, because 'tis but a collateral accident.

4. Object. By the letters patent there was an intire estate given; but here are several estates, for life, and estates-tail, which are not intire.

Resp. These estates are all the same in quantity, which they would have been without the Act, and it's the same estate as to duration; for whatsoever estates are here made, arise out of the estate tail, and the reversion is not touched, and that was the intent of the Act, as appears by the saving; for the enacting part is, that the several persons shall have the several estates under the savings following. And this Private Act hath cut that, which was but one intire estate, into several pieces; and Co. Lit. 372 b. The third observation there is, [321] that if the King keeps the reversion, none of the mesne estates can be barred; and so in Stafford's case.

Object. If the heir shall bring a formedon, he must count upon this Act of 4 Jac. and therefore the estate arises by that Act, which is the donor.

Resp. The heir need not here bring a formedon, but may enter: but if he will admit himself out of possession, he shall not count upon the Act only, but upon the letters patent and the Act also; for suppose the first intail be spent, the King must count upon the letters patent in a formedon in reverter. This Act is not the donor, but the Crown; for the Parliament cannot give, but by virtue of the legislative power estates may be settled or changed, as in this case.

There are some things to be observed, by which the intent of the Act appears, that the estate-tail should not be altered, wherein there are remainders to several persons, in order, that (whereas before there was some dispute who were first to take) all persons might be satisfied with the order in this Act prescribed concerning the same.

1. In the saving, there is livery and primer seisin reserved to the Crown, as if the Act had not been made, which could not be if the estates were new.

2. Power to make jointures for life, had an eye to the first estate-tail, for there is a power to bind the issue, but not the remainders; and so of leases; but the King should not be bound.

The intent of the Parliament was to make a settlement in the family, and not to give the parties power to alien, for they intended by the saving to preserve the lands from alienation, as if the Act had never been made.

As to the second point. That this estate is preserved by the statute of 32 H. 8, cap. 36. By the statute of 4 H. 7, cap. 24, and before 32 H. 8, cap. 36, a fine did not bar an ordinary estate-tail. True it is, that Co. Lit. 372 is contrary, and that it did bar; but it is but his opinion, and he cites no authority for it, and there are other authorities against his opinion. The statute of 32 H. 8 says, that there was diversity of interpretation and expounding of that statute, whether such fine should bar the issues in tail; and so it appears by the book of 19 H. 8, 6, which says, that the words of the Act of 4 H. 7, are satisfied by barring the issues of tenant in fee-simple; and the issues in tail, though in some measure privies, [322] yet they claim paramount the fine. And general words in an Act of Parliament do not comprehend an estate-tail, as in the case of premunire, Co. Lit. 130 a. 11 Co. 63, Dr. Foster's case.

Between 4 H. 7, and 26 H. 8, were between forty and fifty years, and yet all that time no estate-tail was forfeited for treason. Now what reason had the Judges to construe the general words of 4 H. 7, that a fine shall bind as well privies as strangers, that the issues shall be bound by a voluntary act of the tenant in tail, and yet that he shall not forfeit his estate for treason, which is the highest offence? The words of Westm. 2 are, that he shall not have potestatem alienandi, and that finis ipso jure sit nullus. That a fine was no bar to the issues in tail between 4 H. 7, and 32 H. 8, and Br. Assurances 6. 19 H. 8, 6. Amongst the Judges who were of another opinion was Brook himself, which shews that either the reporter was mistaken, or my Lord Brook had retracted his opinion, which was ten years after the writing his Abridgment, and 1 Anderson 46, pl. 118.

Observations out of the statute of 32 H. 8. itself.

1. There was diversity of opinions in this point.

2. The words are, Be it enacted (not declared) so it is a constitutive, not a declarative Act, it is introductivum novi juris, non declarativum veteris, that fines shall bar an estate-tail.

3. That the fines heretofore levied shall be a bar to the estate-tail, which shews that the statute of 4 H. 7 was too feeble to do it.

4. The third proviso, that the Act shall not extend to such fines as were then in suit, by which it appears that there were recoveries of lands in tail of which fines had been levied.

5. The words of the statute are, that this Act shall not extend to fines of lands, whereof the reversion is in the King, but that every such fine shall be of like force as it was or should be, if the Act had not been made. Observe the statute of 34 H. 8 recites, that there was a great mischief by this doubt for a recovery, but not by a fine, which shews that fines were not used in such cases.

Serjeant Maynard for the defendant. The estate-tail is not extinguished, but altered. The points are,

1. Whether here is any estate within 34 H. 8.

2. Before 34 H. 8, a recovery did bar the issue in tail, in case of an adversary writ; but the question was of writs by consent. Vide 10 Co. 43 b. That a common recovery barred in all cases.

[323] By this Act of 4 Jac. the first estate-tail is clearly barred, and consequently the clog upon it that it could not be barred, is gone; and Earl Charles or his son shall not claim under the old intail; so that the question now will be, whether the estates created by 4 Jac. shall be within the statute of 34 H. 8. And I hold that they are not, because those estates do not issue out of the reversion belonging to the Crown, but only out of the old intail. When a third estate is to be raised out of the other two, it shall be said to come out of each of them, according to their respective capacities to grant or pass the same. Treport's case. If the King and the Earl of Derby had joined in a fine to raise an estate-tail, the earl had been the donor. An Act of Parliament adds strength to an estate, but is directed by the law. 8 Co. Barrington's case.

Object. It is an estate created by Parliament, and that is the donor.

Resp. William tenant in tail is the donor. 2 Co. 15 and 16.

The reason why a common recovery did bar the issue, was not because it was a common assurance; but because at the common law every recovery was a bar. And though the Statute of Westm. 2, cap. 1, is, that tenant in tail shall not alien neq; per factum nec feoffamentum, and a recovery is not named; yet in the same Parliament cap. 4. If tenant in tail lose by default, he shall have a quod ei deforceat, which shews that recovery did bind before that statute; and at this day a common recovery bars a tenant in fee-simple, though there be no tenant of the freehold, and so was 12 E. 4, Taltarum's case. And when a recovery is had, it doth not appear to the Court but that it was grounded upon good right; and it is incident to an estate-tail to be barred by common recovery. Portington's case.

To the second point, Whether a fine would bar the issue before the statute of 32 H. 8. There is no resolution in the case of 19 H. 8, 6, but Dyer 32 seems to make it a bar, and had not the law been so, the statute of 32 H. 8 would not have respected fines that had been past, for it would have been unjust to alter estates past, contrary to what the law was taken to be at the time of the passing them.

Object. Notley's case cited in Stafford's case, 8 Co. 78 a.

Resp. There is no such case to be found; but there is a case, 3 Cro. 595 and 612, Stratfield versus Dover; where disseisor of tenant in tail, the reversion being in the Crown, levied a fine and barred the issue; but it is said there, [324] that the case went off upon point of pleading, (but seems contrary, 1 Cro. 430, by Jones Justice): but the Lord Hob. 332 and 333, taking notice of Notley's case says, that to comprehend fines within 34 H. 8, by the words, any other thing, was an oblique and indirect strain, and therefore all is granted upon Cro. 395. Adjournatur.

PLAYER versus VERE. ANTEA 288.

By-law. 1 Danv. Abr. 734, p. 5. 1 Sid. 284. 1 Vent. 21. 2 Keb. 27, 490, 501.

Sir Robert Sawyer contra. Object. This by-law restrains trade.

Resp. All customs and by-laws do restrain trade one way or other, as 5 Co. The Chamberlain of London's case, and 8 Co. Waggoner's case; but this is not a trade, but an employment; as porters and coal-meters, &c. which are within the disposition of the city.

Object. This power is to be exercised by deputy.

Resp. The exercise of power in all great bodies ought to be delegated; and it is impossible otherwise to have it executed.

Object. Taylors of Ipswich's case, and 1 Roll. Abr. 364. Moor 576.

Resp. Those were orders to restrain trade by virtue of letters patent; but here is general custom to make by-laws.

The case of Pain and Houghton was upon this particular custom.

As to the penalty, it is common to every by-law; for what may be prohibited, may be prohibited upon a penalty. 1 Roll. Abr. 365, pl. 9, Edward's case.

But if the by-law be naught for the fine, it may be good as to the other part of it. In every disposal of the places of corn-porters and coal-meters, a reasonable fine is reserved.

Consider the employment and the persons, and it will be thought reasonable that a strictness should be used more than ordinary.

Object. The defendant is not within the custom, because he is alledged to be a citizen. 1 Bulst. 11, Green's case.

Resp. There was a private company of butchers, and not like this case, which is of all the city, where by-laws will bind strangers, as the custom of foreign bought and foreign sold; sale of an horse by an inn-keeper for his meat, &c.

[325] Object. 23 and 24 Car. 2, in this Court, Player versus Dean; and in 24 Car. 2, R. Player v. Bradnex.

Resp. The objection was made in Dean's case by Hale Chief Justice, that that by-law was not for hire; and so it went off; and 22 Car. 2, in C. B. Player versus Hutchins. The Court was divided.

But admit that there is no such custom, or that it be doubtful, yet it is more agreeable to justice to grant a procedendo, because otherwise there would be a failure of justice, because there is no other remedy to restrain these cars, which will, when without number, annoy the streets; and if a procedendo be granted, then upon the trial, the custom may be controverted, and found specially.

Here Player cannot proceed in this Court, because the action here must be brought in the name of the mayor, commonalty and citizens; but this by-law orders the action to be brought in the mayor's Court by the Chamberlain, and for this cause a procedendo was granted in Wilford's case, Moor 403, pl. 538, so for calling a woman whore. 2 Roll. Abr. 69. 1 Cro. 486. Adjournatur ad proximam Cur.

Afterwards it was argued for the defendant, that this case differs from all cases of by-laws made by other corporations, in this, that we shall presume primo intuitu, that this by-law is good, until it shall be found upon examination defective, because it is not a by-law made by a private company for managing their particular affairs. Nor 2dly, by a corporation made up and consisting of a small number of men. Nor 3dly, by men obscurely educated and skilful only in trade and not in laws.

But a by-law made by the body of the great and most famous City of London; a city known, where England is not; a city which is well skilled not only in trade of all sorts, but in learning likewise.

And by-laws of this nature made by the whole city, are made not only by the lord mayor and aldermen, but also by the common council representing all other the citizens, attended and assisted with the recorder, counsel at law, and very many others learned and well read, not only in the laws of this kingdom, but in all other human learning.

So that he that will suddenly censure such a by-law without well weighing it, and strictly comparing it with the rules, whereby all by-laws are to be examined, will undertake a great task, and with much difficulty (if at all) obtain a justification from knowing men.

[326] And as Sir Francis Moor says in his argument of Davenant and Hardie's case 583, All by-laws are accommodated to the utility and advantage of the place. And so a by-law made in Newcastle may be good for that place, which may not serve for London or Norwich.

So I make no question but that this by-law hath been found in the main of it, so far as to order the carts and carmen, a most advantageous law for the city: for, considering the humour of such men, the populousness of the place, the quality of persons there inhabiting, and thither resorting, and the occasions of stopping the streets and lanes, which though much amended of late, yet narrow enough for the passengers, some such law is very fit to prevail in this city.

And the rather for that this is not a trade, but an employment; and therefore where it is objected, that the city may as well restrain brewers, taverns, tallow-chandlers, &c.

I answer, There is not the same reason, for they are trades to which men are bound apprentices, and to take away their trade is to take away their livelihood.

Nor 2dly, That the oversight is committed to another corporation, for I cannot see, why it may not be as well managed by them, nay better than by others.

Object. What if the president will not grant a licence?

Resp. 'Tis not to be presumed when we consider what great trust he is in already, that he should falsify it in so small a matter. 2dly, The same objection may be made to the clerk of the inrolments in Chancery, or any officer of any Court of Justice. And if an action of the case will not lie here, yet an equivalent remedy may be had, for upon an address to the mayor and aldermen there will be provision in such case. So that so far I shall not doubt of the validity of this by-law.

That which sticks with me is, that part of it from whence arises this very controversy, which is, that 17*s.* 4*d. per annum, and no more, shall be received and paid for a carroom, and* 20*s. and no more, or greater fine, upon any admittance or alienation of a carroom, which* 17*s.* 4*d. per annum, and* 20*s. aforesaid, is wholly to be applied towards the relief and maintenance of the poor orphans harboured and to be harboured in Christ's Hospital; and if he shall work without licence he shall forfeit* 13*s.* 4*d.*

In all privileges either by prescription or patent to make by-laws, there is this clause either expressed or implied, that they be ad utilitatem Regis & populi, bonæ fidei congrua, & rationi consona, & dummodo non sint in præjudicium populi, as [327] we may see in Waggoner's case, 8 Co. 121 b. and Davenant and Hardie's case, Moor 576, and many others.

Now it is said to be ad utilitatem of the people when there is quid pro quo.

8 Co. 125, Sir George Farmer prescribes to have a common bakehouse in Tocester, and that all the inhabitants should bake there: but then he lays in his prescription, that that bakehouse was sufficient to bake all the bread for the inhabitants and passengers. So 11 H. 4, 86 b.

Mich. 1657, in B. R. Intr. Hill. 1656, Rot. 1335, Allot versus Jackson. An action upon the case for not grinding at his mill, where he prescribes for mulcture, as Sir George Farmer did for his bakehouse; and resolved, he must aver that his mill was sufficient to grind all the corn, and that he was bound so to do; and a case was there cited to be adjudged Pasch. 43 Eliz. in B. R. Gooby versus Knight, the case of the town-chandler of Canterbury.

Mich. 5 Jac. in B. R. Pincocke versus Sanders. Upon evidence, a custom that the corporation of Gravesend have used to maintain a barge for transporting passengers from thence to London, and that till that barge be full, none can carry passengers without licence. Roll. Abr. 561, pl. 2. 2 Brownl. 177. And this is the reason of murage, pontage, toll travers and other tolls.

There are mutual advantages, and the duty is but equivalent to the profit. And so was Blackwell-Hall's case, 5 Co. 62 b. the penny for hallage was to pay for the labour of the searcher.

And the monies due upon measuring of cloth so far as to answer the charge and the profit of the people was agreed to be good, 11 H. 4, 86 b. though no judgment was therein given.

Now examine whether this be so or no.

1. Here is no compulsion for the carmen; so that my goods may be burnt, and I cannot force a carman to carry them away.

2. Here is 17s. per annum and 20s. fine; for what? for the use of the poor of Christ's-hospital.

This hath no respect to the overseeing of the carts, the streetmen and others are to be provided for otherwise, and so not like the case of Blackwell-Hall. So that I take this to be a pure imposition with regard to the thing in question. And there might have been as well 17l. per annum, and 20l. fine as this that is imposed; though perhaps the circumstances of persons be more considered in this. But that will not alter the case.

[328] And I do not find any by-law of this nature in any place. The case of Andrew Deveen of restriction of brokers hath been cited, but that was to restrain the office, but not to reserve a rent or fine. And though it be said that 40s. per annum is now paid, it may not be by that by-law.

I find this case (as hath been cited) 1 Roll. Abr. 364, Payn versus Haughton, there adjudged a monopoly; and yet there no rent or fine reserved. As to the case in C. B. Hutchin's case, the Court was divided.

And afterwards termino Hillar. 31 & 32 Car. 2, adjudged by the whole Court, nemine contradicente, that the by-law was not good by reason of the fine and rent, but in all things else very good; and so a procedendo was denied. Vid. 2 Roll. Rep. 413, Kete versus Michel.

BAMBRIDGE versus BATES AND OTHERS. ANTEA 305.

Trespass. Postea 337. Just. Inst. l. 2, tit. 1, § cum ex aliena. Minsing. 118.

Wallop for the plaintiff. This molasses is neither within the words of the Act. 2. Nor can it consist with the grounds of philosophy. 3. Nor grounds of law.

As to the first. If the molasses is not at all imported, the necessary consequence will be, that it is not a material imported; but if it was at all imported, it must be either when the sugar was imported, or before, or since; but it could not be when the sugar was imported, being not in esse, but was made of sugar here in England, and therefore it could not be made a material here imported.

Suppose there should be a prohibition that no molasses should be imported, and a man imports sugar of which molasses is afterwards made, this should not be within the prohibition.

As to the 2d, Molasses differs essentially from sugar; for what does not partake of the same specifick form differs essentially, but molasses doth not partake of the same specifick form with sugar; ergo, &c.

Now there is in this making of molasses a separation of parts, and consequently a new specifick form, as cheese, butter, &c. are produced by separation of parts, and do specifically differ from milk.

When it appears further by the verdict, that the English materials are contributory to this prohibition, and it cannot be said, that molasses is the fæces of sugar, since fæces [329] are only of liquid things, neither can they be compared to the lees of wine; for sugar after twenty years standing would never produce lees. And the verdict does not find that it is made of sugar, but a separation and extraction from it. For the sweetness may arise from the English materials. And suppose corn should be brought from beyond sea, the liquor arising therefrom by extraction would not be an imported material. So rose-water from roses imported.

As to the third, From the grounds of law, molasses cannot be said to be a material imported. 1. Not according to the rule of law, forma dat esse, and mutata forma mutatur substantia.

The ancient Roman lawyers before Justinian, as to the question of property, had two several sects, viz. one of Sabinus, and the other of Proculus; but afterwards, it was agreed amongst the civilians, that in all cases where this new form may be reduced to the former state, the property remains to him who hath the old substance, but otherwise not. Now here molasses cannot be reduced to sugar again. And with this agrees Hill. 16 H. 7, 16, pl. 6. Moor 19, pl. 67. Leather cut into shoes may be retaken, but not wool made into cloth, or milk made into cheese, res corruptæ & transformatæ abesse videntur. A thing arising from the parts is not any of the parts. Here all the materials are not foreign and imported.

As to the value, it is not material, but the quantity is as to the abstraction. Here is no proportion of the molasses found in the verdict in making the low wines.

2. It is not within the Act of Parliament. There is no such maxim, as not to recede from the letter of the Act, if consisting with the law.

The Acts of Excise discourage foreign trade, and encourage home made manufactures.

2. The Acts charge only foreign commodities, or things made beyond sea. The book of rates says, that molasses is a home manufacture.

These Acts are penal, and therefore ought to be taken in the plain and not strained sense; and therefore 39 Eliz. cap. 15, which takes away clergy from one who takes money, &c. out of an house in the day-time, extends not to an accessary. 1 Cr. 473, Evans and Finch's case. So the statute of 1 Jac. against stabbing doth not extend to a stabbing, upon a previous restraint of the offender by the party killed, Buckner's case, [330] Mich. 1655, B. R. So the statute of 13 Eliz. cap. 20. doth not extend to a covenant to enjoy.

Where a statute mentions particular matters, and afterwards concludes in general words, the general words shall be referred to things of the same nature, as The Archbishop of Canterbury's case, 2 Co. other means. So the Statute of Burglary: so here, other materials shall be intended materials of the same nature. These general words have a good effect, for new foreign molasses are included. But if this molasses should be included, why not low wines made of grapes or apples imported? Generalis clausula non porrigitur ad ea quæ generaliter sunt comprehensa, Bonham's case. Wine or cider made here of grapes or apples imported are not within this law, qui nimis emunyit, elicit sanguinem. And so I conclude for the plaintiff.

Sawyer contra. This Act is not penal, but only to enlarge the King's revenue, and so ought to be expounded liberally.

The verdict finds that molasses is fæces of sugar, and lees of wine cannot be made wine again, so wine made vinegar; but he said little more to the purpose. Et adjournatur. Vide post.

Ejectment in a writ of error. The plaintiff declares of the demise of George Durdant 10 Octob. 28 Car. 2 at Stanes, of 20 acres of land, 20 acres of meadow and 20 acres of pasture in Stanes for five years from Michaelmas before. Upon not guilty pleaded, the jury find a special verdict, viz.

Henry Wicks Esquire in his life-time 6 Junii 1657 was seised in his demesne as of fee of the premisses in the declaration; and so being seised the same day and year made his last will and testament in writing, and thereby did devise to one John Higden and Joan his wife, being niece of the said Henry, and to the heirs of the body of the said John upon the body of the said Joan begotten and to be begotten, all his messuages, stables, coach-houses, lands, tenements and hereditaments in Covent-Garden and Vinegar-Yard in the parish of St. Martin in the Fields, and St. Paul Covent-Garden in the county of Middlesex. And farther the said Henry Wicks by the same will devised the said premisses in the declaration as follows, viz. Item, I [331] give and bequeath unto my cousin John Higden and his heirs, during the life only of Robert Durdant, my kinsman, eldest son of my nephew Andrew Durdant deceased, all those my messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments in Stanes and Stanwel in the county of Middlesex, upon this trust and confidence, that he the said John Higden and his heirs shall permit and suffer him the said Robert Durdant from time to time, during the time of his life, to have, receive and take the rents and profits thereof, which shall yearly grow due and payable for the said last mentioned premisses, he the said Robert committing no waste upon the same, and so as he the said Robert Durdant after my decease, and within one month after request to be made to him, shall make and execute to the said John Higden and his wife, and the heirs between them, as aforesaid, such good and sufficient release, conveyance and assurance in law of the said messuages, lands and premisses by me to them devised, as aforesaid, in St. Martins in the Fields, and St. Paul Covent-Garden, as to them or any of them, their or any of their counsel learned in the law shall be reasonably devised or advised and required, to the end that he the said John Higden and his wife, and their children, may enjoy the same free from the claim of the said Robert Durdant; and from and after the decease of the said Robert Durdant, then I do give and devise the said last mentioned lands and premisses in Stanes and Stanwel unto the heirs males of the body of him the said Robert Durdant, now living, and to such other heirs male or female, as he shall hereafter happen to have of his body. And for want of such heirs, then to the use and behoof of my cousin Gideon Durdant, and the heirs of his body; and for want of such heirs, the same to be and remain to the right heirs of me the said Henry Wicks.

The said Henry Wicks died seised; George Durdant lessor of the plaintiff, at the time of the making of the said will, and at the death of the said Henry Wicks was the only son and heir male apparent of the said Robert Durdant of the body of the said Robert Durdant begotten. And the said Robert never had any son besides the said George. And that the said George was the godson and nephew of the said Henry Wicks the devisor.

After the death of the said Henry Wicks, the devisor, the said John Higden by virtue of the said devise entered into the said premisses contained in the said declaration, and became seised thereof in his demesne as of freehold, for the [332] life of the said Robert Durdant. He so being thereof seised 26 Martii 14 Car. 2, in consideration of 365l. paid to him and the said Robert Durdant by one Abraham Spore, he did infeoff the said Abraham Spore and his heirs, to the use of the said Abraham and his heirs, and in Easter term 14 Car. 2 levied a fine without proclamations with warranty against him and his heirs; and Robert Durdant joined in the said fine with like warranty. That the said fine was to the use of the said Abraham Spore and his heirs, by virtue of which said feoffment and fine the said Abraham Spore became seised in his demesne as of fee, prout lex postulat; and being so seised 9 Julii 14 Car. 2, by his indenture then dated and made between him of the one part, and the said William Richardson of the other part, the said Abraham Spore for 5s. demised the premisses for six months to the said William Richardson, and by an indenture dated the day following, released to him the said William Richardson and his heirs to the use of him and his heirs for a competent sum of money. By virtue whereof the said William Richardson became seised in fee, prout lex postulat. 1 Maii 20 Car. 2, Robert Durdant died, and that at the time of his death the said George Durdant was under age, viz. but 15 years old. That 1 Octob. 28 Car. 2, George Durdant, lessor of the plaintiff, entered upon the possession of the said William Richardson, and made the lease to the plaintffi.

And if for the plaintiff, for the plaintiff, &c.

Judgment was given in B. R. for the plaintiff, and now the defendant brings a writ of error.

Saunders for the plaintiff in the writ of error. The case upon the record, as to our purpose, is no more but this: Henry Wicks being seised in fee devises to John Higden and his heirs, during the life of Robert Durdant, the remainder to the heirs male of Robert Durdant now living. And the question is, whether George Durdant, the only son of the said Robert, shall take in remainder during the life of his father? And I hold that this remainder is a contingent remainder, and not vested during the life of his father. The words (now living) would have a description of the person, as the statute of 25 E. 3, cap. 2, of Treason, to kill the King, Queen, or their eldest son and heir.

Resp. It is not treason to conspire the death of their heir, but eldest son.

Object. Quare filiam & hæredem rapuit.

[333] Resp. If the writ were now to be framed, it would be otherwise; but there is a description of the person, but no person is described only by the name of the heir, but some addition is made to it, for non est hæres viventis.

Object. Heirs male now living.

Resp. Now living shall not be referred to heirs male, because there can be no such person during the life of Robert, but now living shall be referred to Robert as proximus antecedens.

But admit that heirs male now living should be a description of the person, yet here is no such person capable to take in the life of the father. If this were a remainder vested, it should be either by legal construction, or because wills are favoured in law.

Object. The words here shew the intent of the testator.

Resp. This construction cannot consist with the intention of the testator, for he did not intend that George should have an estate during the life of his father, or for life only. And the word heir may be intended the description of a person, but not when it is in the plural number. And if George shall take here by remainder vested, he shall take only for life, which was never intended. On the other side, the whole will is sensibly penned; for there is a devise to Higden during the life of Robert Durdant, remainder to the heirs of him, which shews his intent, that his heirs shall take as purchasers. And this construction agrees with Littleton, sect. 30, where an estate is limited to the heirs of the body of the father, it is an estate-tail, and the word heirs makes an inheritance, Co. Lit. 9, but heir makes but an estate for life. 1 Co. 63, Archer's case, 1 Roll. Abr. 832. Devise to a feme and her heir, 2 Cr. 313. Moor 593, Clark versus Day, 2 Roll. Abr. 253, Pause verfus Lowdal.

Object. What estate shall the heirs of Robert have?

Resp. Heir in the singular number doth not make an inheritance, and here is no limitation to the females.

George cannot take as heir in the life of his father, for what if his father were attainted of felony or treason, George could never take.

Now living shall be construed to such as shall be heir to Robert Durdant, and now living, vide Archer's case, and Hob. 29, Counden versus Clark, and 2 Leon. 70, Challoner versus Bowyer.

[334] And to construe this will otherwise is to remove an ancient land-mark of the law, which is, that when the ancestor takes an estate for life, the word heirs is a word of limitation, but otherwise, it is a word of purchase. Adjourned, and Hill. 31 & 32 Car. 2, judgment was reversed, nemine contradicente præter Atkins Justice del Common Bank.

THE COMMISSIONERS OF DELEGATES AT SERJEANTS-INN. DECEMB. 9, 1679.

Will.

George Stonywel 2 Septemb. 1679 makes his will in writing and makes Elizabeth, his wife, his executrix, and gives all the residuum of his estate, after some legacies paid, to her; Elizabeth dies in his life-time, viz. 5 Septemb. 1679, and George the testator, having notice of the death of his wife, makes a nuncupative codicil dated 6 Septemb. 1679, and gives to George Robinson all which he had given to his wife, and dies 13 Septemb. 1679, and the single question was, whether this nuncupative codicil be allowable notwithstanding the statute of Frauds and Perjuries, 29 Car. 2. The words whereof are, That no will in writing concerning any goods or chattels or personal estate shall be repealed, nor shall any clause, devise or bequest therein be altered or changed by any words, or will by word of mouth only, except the same be in life of the testator committed to writing, and after the writing thereof read unto the testator, and allowed by him, and proved to be so done by three witnesses at the least. And resolved by Sir Hugh Wyndham Justice, myself and several civilians joined with us in the commission, that as this case is, the nuncupative codicil is good; for by the death of Elizabeth before the testator, the devise of residuum became totally void, and so there was no will, quatenus as to that part. And so the nuncupative codicil was quasi a new will for so much, and was no alteration of the will as to so much, because there was no such will, its operation being determined.

And whereas it was objected, that by the same reason, if any part of a will in writing shall be made by force or fraud, the thing so given and specified in such part may be devised by a nuncupative codicil, and so the will altered contrary to the words of the statute. We answered, that if such part of a will were so obtained, it was no part of the will, and so [335] such codicil would be no alteration of what was not; but would be an original will for so much. So if A. be possessed of an estate of 1000l. and by will in writing gives 500l. of it to B. he may give the residue by a nuncupative will, so as he do not alter the executor.

PAWLET'S CASE.

Devise. 2 Danv. Ab. 528, p. 9. Evidence.

Amos Pawlet 2 Feb. 1649 makes his will in writing, and gives a legacy to his niece, in these words: I do ordain and give to my dear niece Florence Roll second daughter of my brother Denis Roll Esquire, the sum of 500l. which my sister, the Lady Cholmeley hath now in her hands of mine, as by her bond made to me and my heirs appears: and makes no executor, and dies in Octob. 1669. About ten years before his death the Lady Cholmeley paid to him the 500l and whether this legacy is due is the question; and we resolved, that the legacy was due, though the security was altered; because it is a pure legacy, neither legatum nominis nor legatum debiti; and the words are only to shew that he meant the legacy should be as certain to her as he could make it. And the councel for the legatee cited Digest. de Legatis quidam Testament. 96, and also Theobal and Wynn's case lately adjudged, where a devise was of a legacy out of debts due in several counties, and they were called in before the testator's death, and yet the legacy remained good. And Hill. 1671, Squib versus Chichely, where the Lady Verney gave legacies out of monies then out at interest, and called in before the testator's death. And a difference was taken between a legacy in numerat. and a specifick legacy; for in the first case the legacy will remain, though the debt ex quo be paid in; but the specifick legacy may be lost by being altered. Vide Godb. 91, Johnson's case.

Nota; At a commission of review in the case between Bray and Whitelage concerning the will of Mr. George Bray of Lincoln's Inn, who gave thereby all his estate to a woman he kept, and made her his sole executrix, and waived his only brother, Mr. Lodowick Bray. It was said by Justice Ellys, that it was resolved by the whole Court of B. R. in the case of Dutton upon a trial at Bar concerning his will forged by Mr. Colt, [336] that depositions taken in Chancery in perpetuam rei memoriam upon a bill for that purpose exhibited, cannot be given in evidence at a trial at law, unless there be an answer put in and produced; and so he said, he hath known it several times resolved both in B. R. and C. B.

BAMBRIDGE versus BATES & AL. ANTEA 305, 328.

Trespass.

Letchmere for the plaintiff. Here is not any special conclusion by the jury, viz. whether the low wines are made of foreign materials? But as this record is, 1. Here is no colour for the Court to give judgment for the defendant. 2. Here is colour to give judgment for the plaintiff. 1. For that they find that the jury find that the plaintiff was communis distillator aquarum fortium for a year before; but they do not find that he made low wines of foreign materials, and so that which they find is a thing immaterial. 2. They find that Hall did exhibit an information, and the plea and judgment, prout per recordum apparet, but do not find that the contents of that information were true. 3. They find that there is molasses made beyond sea, and also in England; but they do not find who made them. 4. They find that molasses is made ex fœcibus saccari, but they do not find that the plaintiff made the low wines ex fœcibus saccari.

And for this very cause in Terry and Huntington's case it was adjudged naught, in Hill. 1668, in this Court.

In the case of bankrupts, although the commissioners have sole authority to adjudge a man bankrupt, yet in an action the jury must find whether he was a bankrupt or no, and not barely by the adjucation of the commissioners.

'Tis so in case of a plea, 2 Roll. Rep. 40. In an avowry for an amerciament in a leet, it is not sufficient to say præsentatum fuit at the leet, that the plaintiff did such an act, but he must aver the thing, and not rely upon the presentment.

2. Here is ground to give judgment for the plaintiff, because it is expressly found that the defendant took away his goods.

[338] The first Act which gave liberty to a defendant to plead the general issue was 7 Jac. c. 5, for by the common law every man was bound to plead duly, and not to justify by virtue thereof after he had pleaded not guilty; but that is, that he may give such special matter in evidence, as being pleaded, had been a good and sufficient matter in law to have discharged the defendant of the trespass or other matter laid to his charge, and so he would have given every thing in evidence.

And the statute of 23 H. 8, cap. 5, concerning sewers, says, that in an avowry the avowant may justify the taking, &c. by virtue of the commission of sewers, without alledging the matter specially.

But in this case at Bar, upon the general issue pleaded, the special matter cannot be given in evidence; for though by the Act of 12 Car. 2, that Act may be given in evidence, and so 22 Car. 2, yet it is not said so in the Act of 29 Car. 2.

The plaintiff declares of the demise of William-George-Richard Earl of Derby made 2 May 29 Car. 2, of one messuage, three water-grist mills, ten acres of land, ten acres of meadow, and fifteen acres of pasture in the parish of Hope alias Queenhope for five years, from the first day of the said month of May. Upon not guilty pleaded, the jury find a special verdict, viz.

That long before the trespass and ejectment, King Richard the Third was seised of the manor of Hope in his demesne as of fee in right of his Crown, of which the tenements are parcel.

[339] That the said King being so seised 17 September 2 R. 3, by his letters patent under his Great Seal of England, granted the said manor and tenements (inter alia) to Sir Thomas Stanley Knight, Lord Stanley, and afterwards Earl of Derby, and Sir George Stanley Knight, Lord Lestrange son and heir apparent of the said Thomas Lord Stanley, and the heirs male of the body of the said Thomas Lord Stanley for ever, by knights service, and 50l per annum.

The words of which letters patent begin thus:

Cum non solum generis nobilitas, sed & justitiæ æquitas omnes provocent, & maxime reges & principes, homines de se bene meritos præmiis condignis afficere, sciatis igitur, quod ob singulare & fidele servitium quod dilecti nostri Thomas Stanley Miles Dominus Stanley & Georgius Stanley Miles Dominus Lestrange filius dicti Thomæ nobis præantea impender' non solum savendo juri & titulo nostro, cujus juris & tituli vigore jam nuper ad Coronam hujus regni nostri Angliæ Domino adjuvante pervenimus, verumetiam reprimendo proditiones & militias rebell. & proditorum nostrorum qui infra idem regnum nostrum perfidam jamdudum commotionem suscitaverant ac pro bono & fideli servitio nobis & hæredibus nostris Regibus Angliæ per eosdem Thomam & Georgium & hæred. suos pro defensione nostra & regni nostri præd. contra quoscunq; proditores inimicos & rebelles quoties futuris temporibus opus erit impendend. De gratia nostra speciali dedimus & concessimus, &c.

That by virtue thereof the said Thomas and George did enter, and were thereof seised to them and the heirs male of the body of Thomas.

That George had issue Thomas, afterwards Earl of Derby and died in the life of the said earl his father.

1 June 19 H. 7. Thomas the father died seised, by reason whereof Thomas the grandson became seised in tail.

The said Thomas had issue Edward, afterwards Earl of Derby.

1 August 13 H. 8. Thomas last mentioned died seised, and Edward became seised; Edward had issue Henry afterwards Earl of Derby.

24 October 14 Eliz. Edward died seised, and Henry became seised.

[340] Henry had issue Ferdinando, afterwards Earl of Derby and William Stanley his second son afterwards likewise Earl of Derby.

25 September 35 Eliz. Henry died seised.

Ferdinando entered, and had no issue male but only three daughters, viz. Anne, Frances and Elizabeth.

16 April 37 Eliz. Ferdinando died seised in the life of his brother William, and so the premisses descended to him, who entered.

That after the death of Ferdinando, an Act of Parliament 4 Jac. was made for determining differences as followeth, viz.

In most humble manner beseeching Your Royal Majesty, Your Highness loyal, faithful and obedient subjects, William Earl of Derby of the most noble order of the garter, knight Henry Earl of Huntingdon, and the Countess Elizabeth his wife, Gray

Bridges, Lord Chandos, and the Lady Anne his wife, eldest daughter of Ferdinando late Earl of Derby, Sir John Egerton Knight, son and heir male apparent of the Right Honourable Thomas Lord Ellesmere, Lord Chancellor of England, and the Lady Frances his wife, which said William Earl of Derby is brother and heir male, and the said Ladies Anne, Frances and Elizabeth are daughters and co-heirs of the said Ferdinando late Earl of Derby, who died without issue male of his body.

That whereas after the death of the said Earl Ferdinand divers variances, suits and controversies did arise and grow between your said subjects William Earl of Derby, and the said ladies, as well touching the estate, right and title of, in and to the honours, castles, manors, lands, tenements and hereditaments of the said earl, as also touching the filial portions and advancements of and for your said subjects, the said Ladies Anne, Frances and Elizabeth; for appeasing, ending and determining of which said variances, suits and controversies, the said William Earl of Derby, and other issues males of the said honourable house of Derby, as also the said ladies, before any their inter-marriages, by and with the advice and consent of the Right Honourable Alice Countess Dowager of Derby, late wife of the said Ferdinand, and mother of the said ladies, and by and with the advice of other their honourable friends, and of their counsel learned, and officers, did submit themselves to the arbitrement, order and judgment of the Right Honourable Thomas Lord Buckhurst, Lord High Treasurer of England, and now Earl of Dorset, [341] and of the Right Honourable Guibert Earl of Shrewsbury, the Right Honourable George Earl of Cumberland deceased, George Lord Hunsdon deceased, and of the Right Honourable Sir Robert Cecil Knight, principal secretary to Your Highness, and now Earl of Salisbury, being the honourable well affected friends, as well of the said William Earl of Derby, and other the issues male descended of that honourable house, as of the said ladies heirs general, which said honourable persons are elected to end the said controversies, having deliberately heard the said parties and their learned counsel and officers, and such other their loving friends as were authorized to deal therein, and having advisedly heard and considered of their several rights, titles and claims, did by the consent and agreement of all the said parties and their counsel, officers and friends, for the appeasing, ending and extinguishment of all variances, claims, titles and controversies then moved and grown, and which then after might arise and grow between the said parties, or any of them touching the premisses, agree, order and determine (amongst other things) that such and so many of the said castles, manors, lands, tenements and hereditaments late parcel of the possessions and hereditaments of the said Ferdinand, late Earl of Derby in the towns, hamlets, villages hereafter mentioned, and in every or any of them, should be assigned, conveyed and enjoyed unto, and by such person and persons, and of, for and during such estate and estates, and with and under such limitations, power, liberties, declarations and savings, and in such manner and form as hereafter is mentioned, limited and expressed; with which said order and agreement so made by the honourable persons, as well the said William Earl of Derby, and the Countess Elizabeth his wife, and the rest of the issues male descended from that honourable house of Derby, as also the said Honourable Lady Alice Countess Dowager of Derby, and the said Ladies Elizabeth, Anne and Frances daughters to the said late Earl Ferdinand, before and until their several marriages, their said husbands, and they did, and yet do hold themselves well contented and satisfied.

May it therefore please Your Most Excellent Majesty, that it may be enacted, and be it enacted by Your Majesty, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that all and every the castle, manors, lands, &c. late the possession and inheritance of the said Ferdinand late Earl of [342] Derby, in the towns, hamlets, villages and places hereaftermentioned, shall be from henceforth for ever assured and enjoyed unto, and by the persons hereafternamed of and for such estates and limitations, and with and under such powers, liberties, provisoes, exceptions, declarations and savings as afterwards expressed, and that the actual and real possession of all and singular the said castles, manors, lands, &c. shall be by authority of this present Act, immediately from henceforth vested, &c. in the persons hereafter named in possession, remainder and reversion respectively for such estates, and with and under such powers and savings as is hereafter expressed.

And afterwards in the same Act concerning the manor of Hope, it is enacted,

That the said Alice Countess Dowager of Derby during her life, and after her decease, the said William Earl of Derby during his life, and after his decease, James son and heir apparent of the said William Earl of Derby, and the heirs male of his body, and in default of such issue, the second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh sons of the said William Earl of Derby lawfully begotten, and the heirs male of their and every of their several bodies, lawfully begotten, successively and respectively, according to the priority of their birth and age, one after another; and in default of such issue, Sir Edward Stanley, Knight, during his natural life, and after his decease the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh sons of the said Sir Edward Stanley, and the heirs male of their several bodies successively; and in default of such issue, Edward Stanley of Bickerstaff Esq; during his life, and after his decease the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh sons of the said Edward Stanley and the heirs male of their bodies, severally and successively, and so James Stanley (brother of the said Edward) and his seven sons, shall and may have, hold and peaceably and quietly enjoy the said manor of Hope, and all hereditaments in the parish of Hope.

And that the said William Earl of Derby, Sir Edward Stanley, Edward and James Stanley successively in possession to make leases for twenty-one years or under, or for one, two or three lives, or for any number of years determinable upon one, two or three lives, in possession, and not in reversion, reserving the old and accustomed rent.

A power for them to make jointures not exceeding a third part.

[343] Provided always, and be it enacted and declared by the authority aforesaid, that Your Most Excellent Majesty, your heirs and successors, and all and every other person and persons, bodies politick and corporate, their heirs and successors, executors, administrators and assigns, and every of them, other than the persons to whom any estate or estates are before limited or mentioned to be limited by this present Act, and their heirs, shall have, hold and enjoy all and every such and the same estate and estates, lease and leases, rights, titles, interests, reversions, rents, annuities, pensions, services, tenures, primer-seisins, liveries, actions, statutes, bonds, recognizances, debts, executions, judgments, entries, conditions, covenants, warranties, uses, possessions, offices, commons, liberties, easements, profits, commodities, emoluments, claims and demands as Your Highness, your heirs and successors, or any of them, or any other person or persons, bodies politick or corporate, their heirs, successors, executors, administrators or assigns, other than the persons before excepted to whom any estate or estates is before limited by this Act, now lawfully have, or hereafter shall or may lawfully have or claim of, into, out of, or for any the said castles, manors, lands, &c. in such and the same manner and form, to all intents, constructions and purposes, as if this present Act had never been had or made.

That Alice Countess of Derby was widow and relict of the said Earl Ferdinand.

That the said Sir Edward Stanley Knight, at the making of the said Act, was a person who ought to have the said lands after the death of the said James, son of the said William Earl of Derby, without issue male of his body, by virtue of the said letters patent.

That the said Edward Stanley of Bickerstaff, was next to take after the issue male of the said Sir Edward.

That the said James was next after his brother Edward and his issue.

1 May 1636, Alice died.

Earl William entered and was seised prout lex.

29 September 1642, Earl William died seised, and James his son entered and became seised prout lex.

The said Earl James had issue Charles, afterwards Earl of Derby.

15 October 1651, Earl James died seised, and Earl Charles entered.

[344] 14 February 1653, the said Earl Charles and Dorothea Helena his wife, by indenture tripartite between them of the first part, Sir Charles Woolesly, Richard Knightley, John Twistleton, John Hewley, Rowland Jewkes and Joshua Sprig of the second part, and Thomas Crachley, Nicholas Brereton and Roger Griffith of the third part, for 1700l. to the said earl, and 1898l. 10s. to the trustees for selling the said estate by the Parliament, paid by the said earl's appointment, grant the said manor of Hope to the said Sir Charles Woolesly, Richard Knightley, John Twisleton, John Hewley, Rowland Jewkes and Joshua Sprig, and their heirs, with warranty against the said earl and his heirs, executed by livery.

10 April 1654, the said earl and his wife levied a fine at the Great Sessions, with a general warranty to the uses in the indenture.

That the grantees entered and continued in possession from the time of the making the said indenture, and that the defendants are still tenants to the grantees.

21 December 1672, Earl Charles died, leaving issue the lessor of the plaintiff, then of the age of sixteen years, nine months and four days, and no more.

2 February 29 Car. 2, Earl William-George Richard made the lease prout.

They find the statute of 34 H. 8, cap. 20, and conclude generally.

Before I come to the main points of the case, I shall only mention what hath been, or (at least) ought to be allowed on both sides, viz.

1. That the consideration paid for this land by the feoffees of Charles Earl of Derby is not material one way or other.

2. The reversion continues in the Crown, notwithstanding the fine, feoffment or Act of Parliament.

3. If this Act of 4 Jac. had not been made, the first estate-tail could not have been barred.

4. If the estate-tail is not barred, neither the feoffment nor fine made any discontinuance; for Littleton says, sect. 625, that none can discontinue an estate-tail, unless he discontinue the reversion; and therefore if the tenant in tail infeoff the donor, it is no discontinuance of the entail.

[345] 5. The warranty contained in the fine of 1654 doth no prejudice to the estate of the issue of Charles, because 'tis a lineal warranty, and there is no assets found.

These things being premised, there are but two points to be spoke unto.

1. What effect the fine in 1654 hath, taking it abstractively from the statute of 34 H. 8, cap. 20.

2. What influence the statute of 34 H. 8 hath in this case.

As to the first. The case is no more but this, tenant in tail, the reversion in the Crown, after the statute of 4 H. 7, cap. 24, and before 34 H. 8 levies a fine come ceo, &c. with proclamations, and hath issue and dies, whether his issue be by this fine barred?

And as to this point, I do conceive, that if the statute of 4 H. 7 will not enable the operation of the fine to bar the issues, the statute of 32 H. 8, cap. 36, will not, because there is a proviso in that statute, that the same shall not extend to fines levied of lands granted to the conusor or his ancestors in tail, by letters patent from the Crown, the reversion whereof at the time of the levying the said fine being in the Crown; but that every such fine shall be of like force as they were or should have been, if the said Act had never been had or made.

So that now I must consider what power tenant in tail had to bar his issues by the statute of 4 H. 7.

And I am of opinion, that the issues were not barred by such fine, by the statute of 4 H. 7.

To prove this, 1. It will not be denied, but that a fine levied before 4 H. 7 would not have barred the issues. It would have been a discontinuance, but not a bar. Ipso jure sit nullus, viz. it shall not bind the right, but prevent the entry. Co. 2 Inst. 336. For the Statute of Westm. 2, de Donis, reciting the form of fees-simple conditional, which are now estates-tail; and the mischiefs, that the feoffees after issue had power to alien, and to disinherit the issues, and to prevent the possibility of reverter to the donor, which was totally against the intent, and therefore durum videbatur, i.e. iniquum, says the Lord Hob. 336. That statute ordains, quod non habeant illi, quibus tenementum sic fuerit datum, potestatem alienandi; and that if any fine shall be levied, ipso jure sit nullus. The matter mentioned in this statute was so [346] plausible, that it wrought much upon the minds of men, insomuch as they were so far from finding out of ways to alien, that they thought themselves bound in conscience, as well as by the words of the statute, not to alien, as we may see in Doctor & Student in his first book. And Littleton says, 362, that a condition to restrain tenant in tail from aliening farther than for his own life, is good; for that such farther alienation amounting to a discontinuance is contrary to good right, sect. 363. And though the project of Justice Rickil in the time of R. 2, and of Thirning in the time of H. 5, took no effect, yet afterwards many conveyances to uses to make perpetuities were contrived, and never judicially examined till the time of Queen Elizabeth.

About five years after, viz. 18 E. 1, was the Stat. of Modus Levandi Fines made, which says, that a fine levied shall bar parties and privies, by which word, privies, is meant only privies in blood, and not privies in estate, says the Lord Coke 2 Inst. 516. And whereas the words of that Act are, And all other people of the world, yet do they not abrogate the Statute of Westm. 2, which provided for preservation of estates-tail, fol. 517. And the issue in tail claims not from his ancestor in privity of blood or estate, but per formam doni, and therefore not concerned in such fine, unless by estoppel, so as not to plead qd' partes finis nihil habuerunt. For before 26 H. 8, though tenant in tail were attainted of treason, his issue should inherit, for the legal blood was not corrupted. And Littleton says, that if tenant in tail infeoff his son within age and die, the issue in tail shall be remitted, being (as the Lord Hobart says, fol. 71) a kind of third person, by the intent of the Statute of Westm. 2, though Fitz. Remitter 13 be of a contrary opinion.

The statute of 27 E. 1, de Finibus Levatis doth take away the heir, either in fee or tail from pleading quod partes finis nihil habuer'. But that was not in respect of the estate-tail; but by reason of the natural blood between the heir and ancestor; and 'twas only in respect to fines, that they should be an estoppel to such pleas.

Then the statute of Non-Claim 34 E. 3, cap. 16, reaches not to issues in tail, because they were not concerned in claims.

Then comes the statute of 4 H. 7, which says, that after the ingrossing of every fine to be levied in C. B. of any lands, the same shall be openly and solemnly read and proclaimed; and the same to be a final end, and conclude privies and strangers.

[347] Now no reason appears why privies in 4 H. 7 shall include issues in tail, more than in 18 E. 1.

As to the objection, that if it had not been for the saving, all estates-tail, remainders, and all others had been barred; I answer, I cannot see any more reason for that, than why estates-tail should not be within the Statute of Præmunire; the words whereof are, that all the lands shall be forfeited to the King. And yet in Trudgin's case, Pasch. 21 Eliz. Co. 3 Inst. 126, it was resolved, that tenant in tail shall forfeit only during his life; for, by the word forfeit, shall be intended only such lands as he may lawfully forfeit; so here, a fine levied of lands, i.e. of such lands of which a fine might by law be levied; but of lands intailed, the fine ipso jure sit nullus, says, Westm. 2. And the Court ought not before the statute of 4 H. 7 to take a fine of tenant in tail, Mich. 22 E. 3, 18 b. pl. 84. And if there was tenant in tail, in reversion expectant upon an estate for life, tenant for life ought not in a quid juris clamat to attorn; for 'twas a good plea, that the conusor was tenant in tail. Trin. 2 E. 3, 23, pl. 8. Trin. 37 H. 6, 33 a. pl. 19. Mich. 2 E. 2, Fitz. Age, 77. 1 Roll Abr. 188 B. pl. 16. Mich. 48 E. 3, 23 a. pl. 7. Co. Lit. 318 a. and 3 Co. 86 a.

The Lord Hobart in his argument of Mackwilliam's case, says, that there was a great fight between intails and fines: how far fines had operation upon them, was very doubtful, Jones 39. And the very statute of 32 H. 8 says, that by diversity of interpretation and expounding of 4 H. 7 it had been and then was doubted, and called in question, whether fines levied according to 4 H. 7 by tenant in tail, should bind the issues, and by reason thereof divers debates, controversies, suits and troubles were begun and moved; and very certainly so it was; for Pasch. 19 H. 8, 6, pl. 5, Dyer 2 b. the very point came in question, and before all the justices at Serjeants-Inn, there were three one way, and five the other; and Brook was one of the five who held that the fine should bar. And yet he himself in his Abridgment, tit. Assurances 6, & Fines de Terres 121, seems to be of opinion, that such fine did not bar; for he says, that if tenant in tail, the reversion in the Crown, levies a fine with proclamations, the issues are barred by 32 H. 8. Now that statute left the validity of the fine to what it was before. But Br. Tail 41 is, that a recovery barred the issues before 34 H. 8, as the Lord Coke cites Brook, Co. Lit. 372 b. and says it was so adjudged 28 H. 8. But the book in Brook's Abridgment names [348] no time; by which it appears that the Lord Brook had retracted his opinion, or the reporter was mistaken. And as Dr. Pollexfen well observed, Brook was made Chief Justice of C. B. 2 Mar. and was either a Judge, or at the height of his practice in 38 H. 8, about which time he was of the opinion cited by the Lord Coke, and he lived near the making of the statute of 32 H. 8, and so might better know the construction of it. His Abridgment was published 16 Eliz. after his death, Co. Epist. ad 9 Rep. He likewise cites Dyer 52, but there is no such case; and he cites Plowd. 555, and 'tis very true that Manwood arguendo says as much.

My Lord Coke says likewise in the same place; and in 2 Inst. 516 and 517. that if tenant in tail after 4 H. 7 had levied a fine, by virtue of that statute, and 32 H. 8, it had barred his issues; and so doth the Lord Hobart in the argument of Mackwillium's case 332, but not 4 H. 7 alone; and fol. 346, he seems that alone could not do it; so that when I read their books I cannot but give very great reverence to them; but I must acknowledge myself unable to understand them, or how the law came to be so, and therefore I leave them to their own opinions with all due respect.

Object. The Lord Hobart 332 cites Pasch. 28 H. 8. That a fine by tenant in tail, the reversion in the Crown, bound the issues by 4 H. 7.

Resp. The very case intended by the Lord Hobart as is most probable, because of the same term and year as in Dyer 32 a. pl. 1. And there the question was demanded of the Justices of C. B. by Say a counsellor of Lincolns-Inn, upon what occasion it appears not. So it may be extrajudicially, and for his own satisfaction, without any cause depending; but here the justices seemed to hold that the issue were barred; and Inglefield said he knew it by experience, but Shelley doubted, and so there was Judge against Judge.

I will not mention The Lord Stafford's case, 8 Co. 74 a. and 6 Co. 55 a. Seignior Chandos's case, which have been cited at the Bar, that such fine will not bar, because those cases were after 34 H. 8.

But I think Dr. Denshal, who read upon 4 H. 7 a very great while ago, may be cited, who holds that tenant in tail is out of the statute of 4 H. 7, as you may see fol. 11 and 12.

The observation made by Dr. Saunders at the Bar is not to be omitted, viz. that between 4 H. 7 and 26 H. 8 there were almost fifty years, and yet in all that time no estate-[349]-tail was ever forfeited for treason. And what reason had the Judges to construe the general words of 4 H. 7 that a fine should bind as well privies or strangers, that the issues shall be bound by a voluntary act of tenant in tail, and yet that he shall not forfeit his estate for treason, which is the highest offence?

Add to this, that St. Germin in his book called Doctor & Stud. written 23 H. 8, and commended by the Lord Coke in his Epistle to his 9th Rep. when he examines the question how common recoveries of lands intailed might stand with conscience, lib. 1, cap. 26, fol. 41, never mentions fines, and certainly he would not have omitted them had they been used to have been then levied of intailed lands; for issues were as much prejudiced by them as by common recoveries. 1. From the penning of the Act of 32 H. 8 the words whereof are, be it enacted, not declared. 2. That fines heretofore levied, which shews that fines were levied of intailed lands, but wanted the support of an Act of Parliament. 3. That this Act shall not extend to lands, whereof the reversion is in the King, but that every such fine shall be of like force as it was or should be if this Act had not been made. Then cometh the statute of 34 H. 8, which says, that there was a greater mischief by this doubt for a recovery, but not by a fine, which shews that fines were not used in such cases.

True it is, that recoveries did bar the issues before 34 H. 8, as 'tis resolved in Wiseman's case, 2 Co. 16 a. and reason there was for it. 1. By reason of the pretended recompence as in Octavian Lumbard's case, 44 E. 3, 21, cited in 1 Co. 94 b. tenant in tail grants a rent for a release of one who hath right to the land, it shall bind the issues. 2. But 2ndly, for the reason given by brother Maynard, that recoveries in adversary writs did bar in all cases, till the quod ei deforceat was given by Westm. 2, 4, which was the same Parliament that the Statute de Donis was made. And so is 19 E. 3, F. Recovery in Value 20 Hill. 23 E. 3, F. Recovery in Value 13. 44 Ass. 35. Mich. 44 E. 3, 29 b. pl. 9. Pasch. 5 E. 4, 2 a. pl. 11. 10 Co. 43 b. But in case of fines it was otherwise.

And yet to prevent all doubts in that case the Judges have construed the statute of 34 H. 8. to extend to fines, as appears by Notley's case, cited in Stafford's case, which though objected against as not to be found elsewhere, yet it is no spurious case; for 'tis reported again by Baron Savil 105, pl. 173, where the case upon a replevin (upon which the [350] pleading is set out at large) was, that King H. 8 being seised in fee in right of his Crown, granted the lands to Philip Van Wilder in tail male, after whose death the same descended to his son Henry Van Wilder, to whom Weston and Gibs acknowledged a fine, and he granted and rendered the land to them for 4000 years, and then died. And whether this lease were good, being made by fine sur render to bind the issues in tail, was the question, and no judgment; but seemed that it did not bind.

So that upon the whole matter, as to this point I hold, that though this case be out of the statute of 34 H. 8, yet not alienable by the statutes of 4 H. 7, or 32 H. 8.

I come now to the second great point, viz. what influence the statute of 34 H. 8 hath upon this case.

In handling of which the great difficulty will appear to arise out of the construction of the Private Act of 4 Jac.

For the true intelligence whereof we are to consider,

1. The mischiefs which had befallen the family of Darby.
2. The remedy which this Act applies.
3. The consequences which do arise hereby.

As for the mischiefs, they appear in the preamble of the Act, that by the death of Earl Ferdinand, who died without issue male, and left three daughters married into three noble families, those daughters had no certainty of their portions; and lands they were as incertain of, though heirs at law to their father, the reason that the same were intailed upon the heir male of the family, either by the Crown, or by some precedent ancestor. 2. The Lady Alice their mother and dowager, and relict of Earl Ferdinand, though intitled to dower, as the widow of one dying seised of lands of inheritance, yet not able to bring a writ of dower with any certainty, because ignorant of the tenant of the freehold. 3. Some of the branches of the family, by reason of the antiquity either of the limitations of the estates found in offices, or ancient settlements, incertain which of them shall immediately succeed Earl William in case he shall die without issue male. And 4. All of them incertain what lands were settled one way, and what another; and hence arose diverse variances, suits and controversies.

The remedy was, that all the said parties referred themselves to five honourable persons who were well affected friends of all of them; and thereupon they award the lands to be settled as in the Act.

[351] The consequence of which will be either one way or other, as the true construction of the same Act shall happen to be made, viz.

Whether this Act thus settling the lands hath altered, and made the estate formerly settled in the family, another estate substantially or specifically (as the logicians say) different from what it was before; for if the estate do now become new, then 'twill be for the defendant; but if the old estate-tail did remain in Earl Charles when he made the conveyance, it will be for the plaintiff.

And I am of opinion, that the estate-tail granted by the letters patent is not altered by the Act of Parliament.

And my chief reason shall be taken from the intent and meaning of the Act, and of all the parties concerned, which being only a Private Act, is to be considered as a settlement made by the legislative power of the kingdom. 1 Co. 47 b.

Wherein the parties to be more especially taken notice of, are,

1. The Derby family.
2. The referees.
3. The King. Every of which we cannot but presume had notice of the letters patent.

1. For were it not for them, it doth not appear by the record how the daughters of Earl Ferdinand could be disturbed from enjoying the lands in question as heirs at law to their father; were it not for them, Earl William could have no pretence.

2. The referees must needs know of them; for one of the referees was then Lord Treasurer, and there is a rent of 50l. per annum reserved, and in charge in the Exchequer.

3. The King's Counsel could not but know them; for in all Acts of Parliament, 'tis their duty to examine how far the Crown's interest is concerned.

And this knowledge and notice of the letters patent produced the words so frequently in the Acts, viz. in the recital of the award, that all the said lands which were of the Earl Ferdinand should be assigned, conveyed and enjoyed, unto, and by such persons, for such estates, and with and under such limitations, powers, liberties, declarations and savings as is afterwards expressed. 3. And [352] that the same shall be vested, adjudged, deemed and taken to be in the said persons for such estates, and with and under such powers, liberties, provisoes, exceptions, declarations and savings, as afterwards is mentioned, declared, limited and expressed. 4. The proviso itself.

All which do shew that the Act was intended to pass sub modo, and that there should be somewhat preserved from being destroyed thereby; and in truth so there was.

For by the letters patent it appears, that the patentees (under whom the lessor doth derive) were persons well deserving of the Crown; and therefore ob singulare & fidele servitium qd' nobis præantea impenderunt, ac pro bono & fideli servitio nobis & hæridibus nostris Regibus Angliæ per eosdem Thomam & Georgium & hæredes suos pro defensione nostra & regni nostri contra quoscunq proditores inimicos & rebelles quoties futuris temporibus opus erit impendend. &c. the King grants; so that he did not only respect what was past, but also service to be done for the future; and not only by them, but their descendants and heirs, and to the King and his heirs.

Now whether this would make any condition or tie of any sort in law upon the estate, may be doubtful, though Hob. 41 says, that pro & in consideratione, do not regularly, and in the case of a common person, purport a condition.

But most certain it is, that the King and his counsel intended that those words should signify somewhat.

The Parliament in 11 H. 7 had so great regard to such gifts of offices or annuities, that they bound the grantees to attend the King and his heirs in person in his wars, upon pain of forfeiture, though there was no such consideration mentioned in the patent; as you may see 11 H. 7, cap. 18.

And the Act of 34 H. 8 takes notice; for the words are,

To the intent that recompence for such service of the donees should not only be a benefit for their own persons, but a continual profit for the heirs of their bodies, whereby such heirs should have in special memory, and daily remembrance, the profit that they have, and take by the service of their ancestors done to the Kings of this realm, and thereby be the better encouraged to do like service to their Sovereign Lord, as to their duties of allegiance appertaineth.

[353] And the advantage the Crown receives by such remembrance in public families is not final, and therefore the ground of that Act was very considerable both for the King's honour and his profit.

Now this advantage is utterly lost if the estate granted by R. 3. be altered by this Act of 4 Jac. which as the times then were, and as the family of the house of Derby was then affected, would never be allowed, either by the King or any of the parties concerned in the Act: for observe the time of the making the same; 'twas the next year after the attempt of the gun-powder treason, and not quite, or at least but two years after an attempt, or at least an apparent inclination of another contrary party against the Crown and established Government, as appears by the resolution in 2 Cr. 37. So that had any of the parties or the King been asked whether they intended to dissolve the tie (of honour at least) between the family and the Crown, in relation to the service they owed to the Crown specified in the first gift, they would have returned a negative answer without doubt.

Add to this, that the proviso itself is not a bare saving, which might have been excepted against, as opposing, or not well consisting with other parts of the Act, as in Porter's case it is objected; but it is an enacting clause, whereby it is enacted, that the King shall have, hold and enjoy all such and the same rights, titles, profits, commodities, emoluments, claims and demands, as if the Act had not been made.

By all which it most plainly appears, that 'twas the intent of the Act that the estate should not be altered.

Then, to construe this Act otherwise, if possible to prevent it, is to make it support a fraud to the King. Rex fallere non vult, falli non potest. 12 Co. 3.

This being so, it must be considered, whether this intention can consist with the rules of law. In examination whereof the objections are in order to be considered.

Object. 1. The Lady Alice hath an estate for life, which she cannot have out of the old estate-tail of Earl William.

Resp. 1. This consists with the former estate, because but of a third part, and so in lieu of dower; and to prevent her danger of suit, which could not be with ease, for want knowledge of a right tenant of the freehold.

[354] 2. But however, she is dead, and so no objection; for though that might have altered the intail, it would be but during the continuance of the estate for life, which is determined.

Object. 2. Earl William hath hereby only an estate for life.

Resp. The Act doth but pare away part of the intail, and leave an estate for life; for though an estate for life cannot be said to be the same estate with the intail, yet the original intail is not hereby altered in the issue of Earl William; as in the case of The Lord Delaware, 11 Co. 1, he had an estate-tail in his honour, and disabled for his life; and so part of the estate in the honour suspended by Act of Parliament; and this is here an execution of the agreement.

Object. 3. Earl James hath an estate in his father's lifetime, which he could not have by the first intail.

Resp. Here is no gift of an estate, but a distribution of the enjoyment of it, nevertheless consistent with the former estate; for all is within the compass of the first intail: and it is but a confirmation of an agreement, as Acts of Parliament for confirming inclosures, or establishing custom for common, or a partition between tenants in tail. And this Act of Parliament works in this case, not by way of gift, but by ordinance, as letters patent, whereby the King may erect a fair, market, warren, park, forest, piscary, or the like, by ordinance, without granting them to any, Hob. 15, the case of burgesses of Parliament.

Object. 4. Earl William hath power to make leases, which he could not do as tenant for life.

Resp. Such power alters not the estate, for it is but a collateral qualification, and such a thing as may adesse & abesse sine interitu subjecti.

Object. 5. Power in tenant for life, and in Earl William's sons, to make jointures.

Resp. Observe, that the power is but of a third part, and so to supply dower, that there may be a writ of dower brought, wherein difficulty may be of finding a right tenant of the freehold.

Object. 6. If the parties shall bring a formedon, they must declare upon this Act, and not upon the letters patent.

Resp. The heir need not bring any action, for he may enter. But 2. If he will bring his action, he must declare upon both letters patent and Act; for suppose the intail be spent, [355] the King in a formedon in reverter must declare upon the letters patent only.

Object. 7. In all estates-tail there must be donor and donee, and here the King cannot be the donor.

Resp. An Act of Parliament can create an estate-tail without a donor; and where we see estates limited for a particular purpose, we are not to measure the validity of such limitations by the strict rules of the common law; for the Parliament can control the rules of the common law, 13 Co. 64. It can make an estate of freehold to cease as if the party were dead; as the estate of a parson who accepts a second benefice contrary to the statute of 21 H. 8 of Pluralities, 6 Co. 40 b. and for this cause the Lord Hobart says, p. 346. That Judges have authority to mould statute laws according to reason and best convenience, to the truest and best use, especially considering that the Parliament precedes many crimes according to natural equity secundum æquum & bonum, which is lex legum, without respect to legal ceremonies. Hob. 224. So that where the drift and sole intent of an Act of Parliament is most plainly discerned, as in this case, and yet that intention cannot be observed, were the same in a deed, by construction according to the rules of law, we ought rather to presume the Parliament (in whose power it was so to do) resolved to leap over and waive the rules of law, and to make a particular law for that occasion. As for the purpose in The Prince's case, 8 Co. 16. The honour of the Duke of Cornwal is limited to Prince Edward, & ipsius & hæred. suorum regum Angliæ filiis primogenitis & dicti loci ducibus & regni Angliæ hæreditarie successuris. By which, he that ought to inherit by virtue of that grant, ought to be the eldest son and heir apparent of the King of England, and of such a King as is heir to Prince Edward, and that such an eldest son and heir apparent to the Crown shall inherit the said dukedom in the life of the King his father; and the lands there mentioned are accordingly annexed to the dukedom for the same estate.

Now by what rules of law could this grant be construed in this manner? certainly by none, but the Judges were forced to bend and conform their legal reason to the words of the Act of Parliament, and rather to construe the words literally, and that the Parliament intended to create a new limitation as well as a new title, rather than to strain the sense of the words and the construction thereof farther than ever the Parliament intended. They did not stretch their invention to [356] find out legal reasons for that limitation, as men that would shew themselves more witty than serious, might have done. But qui rationem in omnibus quærit, rationem confundit. And they gave the same reason for their resolution, which appears in this case, viz. that otherwise it would be impossible to make good that limitation; and if they should not make such construction, the whole design of the Act of Parliament would be frustrated. So here the design was, that the agreement and award should be performed, and yet the King not prejudiced, which cannot be if not construed as the plaintiff would have it.

True it is, should the letters patent be left out of the verdict, and the differences, and the award and the agreement and proviso struck out of the Act of Parliament, I should not doubt but to account the estates therein mentioned to be all new, and that all the estate in the letters patent, except the King's reversion, to be totally altered; but all those things considered together, I think it must necessarily be otherwise.

Object. 8. The Act of 34 H. 8 ought to be strictly construed, because it restrains alienation.

Resp. If it were to restrain such alienations as are favoured in law, viz. of tenant in fee-simple, or tenant in tail of the gift of a subject, whereby trade and commerce might be prevented, debts unpaid, and children unprovided for, which is the reason that the law disallows of perpetuities and conditions which restrain alienation, doubtless the Act were to be construed strictly.

But this Act carries a reason in its preamble answerable to those inconveniencies, that the grantees should not alien, for that the lands were given to the intent that recompence should not only be to the donees for their service, but a perpetual profit to their heirs of their bodies, whereby such heirs should have in special memory, and daily remembrance, the profit that they have and take by the service of their ancestors done to the Kings of this realm, and thereby be the better incouraged to do like service to their Sovereign Lord, as to their duties of allegiance appertaineth.

Now the said inconveniencies will not fail in such cases.

1. Because the lands thus disposed are not many, et ad ea quæ frequentius accidunt jura adaptantur.

2. They are to persons generally of noble families, of whom the Crown hath always a care.

[357] 3. This law is for support of the Crown and Government, which ought to be secured before all private interests.

Object. 9. The tenure is altered by this Act of Parliament.

Resp. Tenure is not an essential quality to an estate, for there are estates whose tenures may be gone, and yet the estate remains; as suppose the King had released the tenure of knights service, and that the patentees should hold in socage, yet the estate-tail had continued the same. 4 Co. 9 a. If a mesnalty become a rent-seck by surplusage, the ancient seisin is sufficient. 1 H. 4, 4. If H. recovers in an assise, a rent-service, and afterwards that rent becomes a rent-seck and he is disseised of it, he shall have a redisseisin, because the substance of the rent remains, though the quality be altered. Co. Lit. 154 b.

Object. 10. The estate-tail was without impeachment of waste, so is not the estate for life here.

Resp. The quality of being without impeachment of waste makes no alteration. 3 Cro. 40, Clare versus Pepys.

Object. 11. By the letters patent there was one intire estate given, but here are several estates for life, and estates-tail, which are not intire.

Resp. These estates are all the same in quantity, which they would have been without the Act; and it is the same estate as to duration, for all the estates here do arise out of the original estate-tail, and the reversion is not touched.

Object. 12. Lastly, these estates do arise out of the estate-tail, and are to continue no longer, and are distinct from it; as if tenant in tail bargain and sell to one and his heirs, the bargainee hath fee, and the estate granted continues till the issue enters.

Resp. True it is, that such construction may be made in a conveyance, and so might it have been in this Act, had not the intent appeared otherwise; but therefore it shall not be so construed here, because it would prejudice the King's interest contrary to the proviso.

And in the exposition of an Act of Parliament we need not labour in maintaining its conformity to the rules of law, when its design is for another purpose.

Tenant in tail makes a lease for three lives, by 32 H. 8 this cannot be made good by the rules of the common law.

[358] As for authorities in this case, Gardiner's case 14 Car. 2, cited by my brother Weston, is nothing to this purpose, which was, that H. 8 gave to Michael Stanhope and his wife, and the heirs of their bodies certain lands, Michael dies, the lands descend to Thomas Stanhope his son and heir, who petitions the Queen to grant the reversion to some persons in fee, to the intent that he may make a lease for ninety-nine years by way of mortgage, and enters into a recognizance to the Queen, conditioned, that nothing shall be done whilst the reversion is out of the Crown, prejudicial to the Crown.

The Queen conveys the reversion to the Lord Burleigh and Sir Walter Mildmay in fee, Thomas Stanhope makes a lease and then suffers a recovery, the trustees reconvey to the Queen.

Resolv. 1. 'Twas a good grant.

2. Thomas Stanhope was not restrained from aliening.

But I may resemble this to the case of Falkner and Bellingham, Mich. 3 Car. 1, in C. B. reported by 1 Cr. 80, and Jones 233. The case was this, Ultimus presbyter celebrando divina in the church of East Grinsted was seised in fee of a messuage and lands in jure presbyteratus sui, and held them of the lord of the manor of Brambleton, by the rent of 18s. and other services, who became seised of the rent. By the statute of 1 E. 6, cap. 14, this messuage and lands became forfeited to the Crown; but in that statute there is a saving of all rents and services to all other persons. The King granted the lands over, and no seisin was had of the rent for above forty years after the statute of 1 E. 6. And whether seisin within forty years was necessary, or no, was the question; for if it were the same rent, then seisin was necessary; but if a new rent created by the statute, then seisin was not necessary. And resolved by three justices contra two in C. B. that it was a new rent; and there held by the three justices, that this rent being originally a rent-service, was now turned into rent seck by the Act of Parliament, and became a rent coming out of the womb of the Parliament, as Justice Hutton called it; and though it were the same rent in estate, as if there were tenant for life, the remainder in fee, or if descendible on the part of the mother; so now; yet altered in quality.

But the other two justices, and the whole Court of B. R. wherein the first judgment was reversed, resolved, that it is the same rent to all purposes, and 'tis parcel of the [359] manor as before. And it is not a rent given by the statute, because a saving never amounts to a gift of any new thing, but is quasi an exception out of the statute, where otherwise it would be extinguished and lost.

And they resolved, that though the tenure was destroyed, it remained the same rent in substance, and in all other things; as if an arrow loses one or two feathers, yet it is an arrow still, or if H. loses some members, he continues a man still.

As to the objection, that if the Act shall be thus construed, this will be very mischievous, because there are many purchasors for valuable consideration, and it will blow up their estates;

Resp. 1. There can be no case adjudged, but must be mischievous to some body; as 1 Co. 53 a. b. But

2. The mischief appears not in the record.

3. Better suffer a mischief than an inconvenience; for should this Act be construed against the intention, the King must lose the advantage before mentioned; and to expound an Act so, would be generally inconvenient; and so I conceive judgment ought to be given for the plaintiff.

In this case the Court of Exchequer was divided, viz. Mountague Chief Baron, and myself for the plaintiff, and Atkins and Gregory for the defendant; and thereupon the cause was adjourned into the Exchequer Chamber, where it was argued again by counsel three several times, and also by eleven of the Judges; for that North Chief Justice of C. B. was made Lord Keeper last vacation; and all the Judges, except Gregory, Atkins and Dolben, gave their opinions for the plaintiff.

As to the first point, all but Jones, Charlton and myself, were of opinion, that the issue of tenant in tail was barred by a fine levied by his ancestor, by virtue of the statute of 4 H. 7, before the statute of 32 H. 8. And all who argued for the plaintiff agreed, that the Act of 4 Jac. did not destroy the estate created by R. 3, but was only an instrument to perfect the agreement made by the arbitrators in the Derby family. The Lord Keeper's opinion was delivered by the Chief Justice Pemberton, by the Lord Keeper's direction, accordingly.

[360] TERM. PASCH. 32 CAR. 2, B. R.

Memorandum, This term were made Serjeants, of the Inner Temple, Sir G. Jeoffries Recorder of London, Sir J. Kelyng, one of the King's Counsel, Edmund West, R. Hanson, Sir Fr. Manley and W. Bugby, of Gray's Inn, Edw. Bigland and W. Richardson of Lincoln's Inn; Rob. Wright of the Middle Temple.

KIRTON versus GUILDER.

Prohibition.

Guilder sues the plaintiff in the Ecclesiastical Court at York, for procurations belonging to him as archdeacon, and libels, that for ten, twenty, thirty and forty years last past there hath been due and paid 6s. annually for the said procurations, by the said Kirton and his predecessors, Parsons of D. And Kirton by Hoyle prays a prohibition, and suggests, that the said duty hath not been payable, and denies the prescription, and so the Ecclesiastical Court cannot have conusance of a prescription, which is properly triable by the common law. Rastal's Ent. 483. 2 Roll. Abr. 283, pl. 16. 2 Roll. Rep. 293.

But Holt e contra, that procurations are payable of common right, Linwood 67, as tithes are, and no action will lie for the same at common law; and a prescription in the ecclesiastical law may have a different commencement from what it hath by the common law, and a pension is suable in the ecclesiastical law. F. N. B. 151 b.

Per Cur. A consultation is granted quoad procurations demanded generally; but if the plaintiff denied the quantum, then a prohibition.

WILLIAM COLE ESQ; vers. WILLIAM IRELAND GENT. LEICEST.

Hundred. 2 Jones 194. Pollexf. 606. Skin. 41.

The plaintiff declares, that whereas 12 November 27 Car. 2, the King by his letters patent then dated had made him Sheriff of the county of Leicester, custodiendum quamdiu dicto domino Regi placeret, which office is an ancient office, to which the right and title of naming and constituting a bailiff of the bailiwick of the hundred of Gartree in the said county time out of mind hath belonged, and still is incident, annexed and inseparable from the same; [361] and that every sheriff of the said county for the time being, hath from time to time named, constituted and ought to name and constitute a bailiff of the bailiwick of the hundred aforesaid, and hath held, and of right ought to hold a view of frankpledge of the hundred aforesaid, and a Court of the said county; and by occasion thereof divers fees, commodities, profits and emoluments had and received, and of right ought to have and receive as incident thereunto. 29 March 28 Car. 2. The defendant at Turlangton and elsewhere in and through the said hundred took upon him, and exercised the said office for the space of six months against the will of the plaintiff, and without any right or lawful authority, and without the plaintiff's consent or nomination, the plaintiff being all the while sheriff of the said county: and also the same 29th of March 28 Car. 2, at Shankton in the hundred aforesaid, the defendant did of his own wrong, and without right or lawful authority hold a view of frankpledge of the said hundred, and also a court baron, and several courts baron from three weeks to three weeks there did hold, and on that occasion received several profits to the value of 5l. ad dammum 40l.

The defendant pleads not guilty, and the jury find a special verdict, viz.

That the plaintiff was made sheriff, as he declares.

That 12 E. 2 the King committed to one John de Sadington his hundred of Gartree, in these words. Leic. Rex ad requisitionem Isabellæ Reginæ Angliæ Consortis suæ charissimæ commisit dilecto sibi Johanni de Sadington valecto ipsius Reginæ hundred' Regis de Gartree cum pertin' in com' Leic' custodiend' quamdiu Regi placuerit reddend' inde Regi per annum ad Scaccarium suum 16l. prout ad idem Scaccarium jam redditur pro eodem, dum tamen hundred' ill' custodiat juxta formam statuti nuper apud Lincoln' inde edit' & provis. in cujus, &c. 19 November 15 Jac. The King granted the said hundred to William Ireland father of the defendant, habend' from Michaelmas last for twenty-one years, reddend' 17l. 15d. and ob. viz. for the hundred of Goodlaxton mentioned in the letters patent 17l. 19s. 3d. and for the hundred of Gartree, 9l. 2s. ob. and 20s. of increase.

The jury also find the statutes of 2 E. 3, cap. 12, and 14 E. cap. 9. That the defendant did keep the courts and receive the profits of the hundred, as the plaintiff hath declared; and if the plaintiff be guilty they assess 5l. damage.

Lovel for the plaintiff. The single question is, whether the grant of this hundred, and other things therein specified be good? and I hold that the same is not good in law.

Hundreds and bailiwicks granted before Edward the Second's time are good, but not those which have been granted afterwards. As to the original of hundreds before King Alfred's time, which was anno 872, the counties remained intire, but then divided into hundreds; for before that the earls who were consanguinei of the King and of the Royal blood had the custody thereof. This office continued in the earls till by reason of the great trouble, they were weary of it, and then were appointed vicecomites, which continue to this day. This office was assisted with inferior [364] jurisdictions, as view of frankpledge and turn, to take inrolment of the freeholders. The hundred court, &c. and these courts continued until Edward the Second's time, and then the King granted out of the turn the leet, and out of the hundred court a court baron. Fitz. Leet 11. Br. Leet 26. Dyer 13 b. 64. But notwithstanding these courts were thus chipped out of the county, yet the jurisdiction of the county remained intire to the sheriff, until afterwards the King granted some hundreds away in fee, and also franchises to several other persons. And thereupon several statutes were made to restrain the mischiefs of such grants, whereby insufficient persons were become owners of them, and managed them to the prejudice of the people, viz. 9 E. 2, the Statute of Lincoln, which injoins, that the sheriffs have sufficient in the county to answer the King; and so of farmers of hundreds, and that executions shall be made by bailiffs of hundreds: so 2 E. 3, cap. 4 and 5. But those statutes did not remedy the inconvenience, for the Crown did grant bailiwicks in fee, and thereupon were the Acts of 2 E. 3, cap. 12, and 14 E. 3, cap. 9, made, both which statutes do forbid the granting more bailiwicks than were then granted.

As to the things granted they are five, and none of them grantable.

1. Courts. They are not grantable by the King, because the turn is called the sheriff's turn, 31 E. 3, cap. 15, and so Pasch. 6 H. 7, 2, pl. 4. And the County Court is the sheriff's. 4 Co. 33 a. Mitton's case.

2. Offices. The officers of these courts belong to the sheriff. Mitton's case, Scrog's case, Dyer 175.

3. Fines and profits. They are the sheriff, 1 E. 3, they shall be delivered to the use of the sheriff.

4. Bailiwicks. That is incident to the office of the sheriff, and he ought to answer for him. Dyer 241 a. pl. 47.

5. Hundred. If the sheriff shall not have it, he cannot answer for escapes there.

This very case resolved, 2 Car. Fortescue's case, Co. 4, Inst. 367.

Bigland contra. As to the case of Mitton, and other cases, wherein certain offices incident to sheriffs are alledged, they stand upon different reasons from our case.

The King may except any part of the county from the power of the sheriff. 1 Roll. Rep. 118, Villa de Derby versus Foxley.

Of common right a hundred belongs to the King. 2 Roll. Abr. 73 b.

[365] As to the statutes, that of 2 E. 3, cap. 12, extends only to such hundreds as were let to farm by the then King, and the statute of 14 E. 3, cap. 9, is relative to the other Act, and ancient statutes are construed according to the subsequent usage. Et adjournatur. And afterwards, viz. Pasch. 34 Car. 2, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

AMBROSIUS MANATON'S CASE.

Mandamus Trem. 450.

Ambrosius Manaton had a mandamus directed to Charles Luxon Mayor of the borough of Trevena Beseny in the county of Cornwal, to be sworn mayor there, according to an election made of him by the said borough, to which writ the said Charles Luxon returns, that before the coming of the writ, and before the issuing out thereof, viz. 25 Octob. 31 Car. 2, he the said Charles was removed from the place of mayor, and one William Amy then chose, admitted and sworn, and from that time hucusque fuit & adhuc est major burgi prædicti, and by reason of his said office hath the custody of the common seal, and thereupon he the said Charles could not restore him, as the writ requires; and whether this was a good return was the question? And the objection is, because it is not returned, that the new mayor Amy was debito modo electus, and it may be that he was chose out of time, and not according to charter. 2. Returns must be certain, and not by implication, because the party outed hath not liberty to reply to them; and of this opinion were my brother Dolben and myself; but Scrogs Chief Justice, and Jones Justice contra, that when Amy is returned, he shall be intended debito modo electus; and if an action upon the case shall be brought for this false return, and the issue be elected or not; if he was not duly elected, it will go for the plaintiff in the action; as Co. Lit. 381. Fines levied, is intended lawfully levied, Westm. 2, cap. 5. ita quod episcopus ecclesiam conferat, i.e. legitime conferat. Non præstat impedimentum quod de jure non sortitur effectum. But I do conceive, and was then of opinion, that the return is not good, because only by implication. As the case of the Recorder of Barnstable, Pasch. 18 Car. 2, B. R. the return was, non constat nobis, that he was ever elected; and adjudged insufficient. Vide antea. And these places do concern the publick government, and we ought not to favour false returns; and if we suspect a return to be false, this Court can make a corporation [366] swear the return; but by reason the Court was divided no writ went.

CONSTANCE HARVEY WIDOW OF HENRY HARVEY, DEMANDANT, versus FRANCIS HARVEY. IN DOWER. IN C. B.

Error. 2 Jon. 121. 2 Show. 61.

The tenant pleads, that after marriage the husband had settled other lands upon the demandant for her life, for her jointure, and that she after his death agreed thereto, and entered accordingly. The demandant replies, that it was a voluntary settlement of her husband, and traverses, that it was not for her jointure, and issue thereupon;

and at the Nisi Prius the tenant made default, and a petty cape awarded and returned, and judgment, that the demandant have seisin; and the demandant suggests, that her husband died seised, and prays a writ to enquire of the damages, returnable crastin Pur. The sheriff returned, that he hath delivered seisin of the lands particularly; and also an inquisition, which finds that the lands are worth 114l. 11s. per annum, and that her husband had been dead six years and three quarters, and that she had sustained damages occasione detentionis dotis ultra valorem præd' & ultra misas & custag' sua 195l. & pro mis. & custag. 20s. And upon this Constance, gratis releases the 195l. and demands judgment only for the 20s. And judgment is given, that the demandant recover tam valorem tertiæ partis præd. from the death of her husband, which comes to 257l. and the 20s. and 11l. de incremento, in all 269l. and the tenant brings a writ of error, and assigns several things for error, which are made good upon diminution alledged, and there being a variance between the inquisition and the writ of seisin, the writ of seisin and execution was erroneous, and thereupon a writ of enquiry, and the value of the land found; and now alledged, that here ought to be no writ of enquiry, because the damages were released by the demandant. But upon consideration had of the record, the whole Court resolved, that the release was only of the damages sustained occasione detentionis dotis, and not of the mesne profits of the land, for they are two distinct things, as appears by the precedents. Co Lit. 32 b. Belfield versus Rous. The writ is to enquire not only of the value of the lands, but also of the damages ratione detentionis dotis, and judgment accordingly. So is Rast. Entr. 237, tit. Dower en [367] Judgment 13, and so are all the judgments; and a fi. fa. lies for the damages, Formulæ Bene Placitandi 223. And judgment was affirmed.

Sir Miles Stapleton's Case.

Court.

Sir Miles Stapleton having been arraigned at the King's Bench Bar this last term for high treason, and a day appointed next term for his trial; the prosecutor, one Boldron, suggested to the Lords of the Privy Council, that his wife, who he said was a material witness, was in expectation of being brought to bed every day, and so she could not be at the trial, and therefore desired the prisoner might be tried in the country; and thereupon the Lords of the Council ordered, that the Judges of the King's Bench should be attended, and to consider whether the indictment may be sent down into Yorkshire to be tried there next Assizes by Nisi Prius, and whether a tales is grantable in case of high treason; whereupon Mr. Attorney General attended at my brother Jone's chamber, where my brother Dolben and I discoursed together concerning this matter, my Lord Chief Justice being out of town, and we did resolve, 1. That an indictment of high treason may be tried by Nisi Prius, for so is Co. 4 Inst. 73, and the statute of 14 H. 6, cap. 1, gives power to the Judges of Nisi Prius to give judgment, and award execution in cases of felony and treason, which cannot be but where such offences are tried by Nisi Prius, for quatenus Judges of Nisi Prius they cannot give judgment in cases not legally coming before them. As for felony and murder, indictments removed into the King's Bench concerning these offences, may be sent down to be determined by virtue of 6 H. 8, cap. 6, but that statute extends not to treason. 2. We resolved, that a tales de circumstantibus may be awarded in case of treason, by the statute of 4 and 5 Ph. and Mar. cap. 7, where the King is party. And so we left it to Mr. Attorney to do as he shall see cause, with the prisoner.

[368] William Muschamp and Others, Plaintiffs, versus Henry Aston, Defendant. Error. Ireland.

Duties.

The plaintiff below declares that he was possessed of two hundred twenty-six hundred and an half of lambskins, and intended to transport them from the port of the City of Dublin to England, and for the exportation of the same skins had paid tonnage and poundage, according to an Act of Parliament made at Dublin 4 March 14 Car. 2, viz. for every hundred 10*d.* The defendant vi & armis did assault the plaintiff, and hindered him from exporting the said skins till he had paid 84l. 8s. 11d. over and above the said duty of 10d. per cent. ad damnum 200l. The defendants plead not guilty to all, but the hinderance of the exportation till payment of the 84l. 8s. 11d. and as to that they say, that by the same Act it is enacted, That every one exporting Irish wool out of the kingdom of Ireland shall pay to the King upon the exportation thereof, for every stone containing 18lb. 1s. 8d. That 8 April 1676, the King by indenture granted the duty to the defendant, habend. from Christmas 1675, till Christmas 1682. That there was upon the said skins 1351 stone, and 7-eighths of a stone of wool of six months growth, and that 84l. 8s. 11d. was due for the same; and for not payment a seizure prout. The plaintiff demurred. This action was originally brought in the Common Pleas in Ireland, and judgment there given for the plaintiff; and upon a writ of error in B. R. in Ireland, that judgment affirmed; and now the defendants have brought this writ; and upon debate, whether the duty should be paid both for the skins and the wool separately and distinctly, we all resolved, that there shall be but only one duty paid, viz. for the skins; for it cannot be presumed, that men will kill the lambs barely to deprive the King of his customs; and by the Act of Parliament,

Sheep-skins tawed with the wool on, an hundred . . .	1	10	0
Pelts drest or undrest, without the wool, an hundred . .	1	0	0
Sheep-skins with the wool, the hundred	1	0	0
Lamb-skins drest or undrest, the hundred . . .	0	16	8

By which it appears that lamb-skins are to contain the wool on them; and it is not usual in many places to shear lambs, and therefore judgment was affirmed. Per tot Cur'.

[369] TERM. TRIN. 32 CAR. 2, 1680, B. R.

Witness.

The first day of this term Elizabeth Celier, the wife of Peter Celier, was tried at the Bar upon an indictment, for that she, with others unknown 1 November 31 Car. 2, did compass and intend the death of the King, to change the Government, and extirpate the Protestant religion, and to that purpose did meet and advise together, and did contribute, pay and disburse great sums of money; and for better concealing of the treasons aforesaid, did disburse great sums of money to divers persons to lay and charge the treasons upon other persons. Upon not guilty pleaded, she was found not guilty. There was one person who came against her as a witness, who was the then prosecutor, Thomas Dangerfield, against whose evidence the prisoner excepted, for that he had been several times convicted of cheating, and had been set upon the pillory, and had been whipped, and was of very little credit, and then would have produced a pardon of these offences; but she produced a copy of a conviction of a felony, for which he was burnt in the hand, which was out of that pardon; and also an outlawry for another felony, which was likewise out of that pardon; and so his testimony was set aside. And it was debated, that admit a witness be convicted of felony, and afterwards pardoned, whether he shall thereby be restored to be a good witness? and my Lord Chief Justice Scrogs and myself were of opinion, that he could not, because the pardon doth take away the punishment due to the offence, but cannot restore the person to his reputation; and of that opinion was Justice Nichols in Cuddington and Wilkin's case, Moor 872, pl. 1213. But my brother Jones and Dolben contra; and so afterwards did I conceive; for in the case of Cuddington and Wilkins, as 'tis reported in Hobart, 'tis said, that the pardon takes away not only pœnam, but reatum. Another question was started, viz. whether a man convicted and burned in the hand be stigmatique as to his testimony? And Jones held that he was not, because the burning of the hand [370] is no part of his judgment, and is by 4 H. 7, cap. 13, only to notify to the Judge that he hath had his clergy before, 5 Co. 50 a. Biggins's case. But I have examined that case, and do find that no judgment was given therein, but compounded, as 'tis reported both by 3 Cro. 682, and by Moor 571, pl. 782. And Cro. says, there were two Judges against two; and Moor says, 'twas agreed, the King could not pardon the burning of the hand in an appeal. And in truth it seems to me to be part of the judgment; for the entry is, Ideo consideratum est, quod le offender cauterizetur in manu sua læva. Rast. Entr. 1 b. and 56 a. But upon the whole matter it appears by Heston's case, cited in Foxley's case, 5 Co. 110 a. That the burning in the hand is (by virtue of 18 Eliz. cap. 6, which says he shall be forthwith enlarged) in nature of a pardon, and the prisoner is thereby cleared from the offence, and consequently he is a good witness, and not stigmatique. Hob. 292, Searl versus Williams.

THOMAS HUNT versus WILLIAM DANVERS. ASSUMPSIT. ERROR IN C. B.

Assumpsit.

The plaintiff in C. B. declares, that there was a discourse between him and the defendant concerning a portion of tithes in the parish of Banbury, and of the Rectory of Banbury, and concerning divers controversies concerning the same, and concerning a verdict for 18l. against one Henry Tasker for the tithe of Berrymore-Mead obtained by the plaintiff; and thereupon the defendant, in consideration that the plaintiff at the request of the defendant would acquit the said Henry Tasker from the said 18l. & acquietaret omnes alios occupatores of the lands called Crench, Berrymore-Mead, Burdens, Gaberesses, Little Fullarke, Great Fullarke, Castlemead, &c. from all arrears of tithes then unpaid to the plaintiff, and permit the defendant then to receive of the then occupiers of the aforesaid lands, the tithe of hay growing upon the said lands, which then had not been received by the plaintiff, did promise,

1. To allow the tithe of hay of the said closes to be the right of the plaintiff, and clearly to belong to the said portion of tithes.

[371] 2. That the plaintiff from thence-forward should quietly receive all tithes of the said closes without any interruption or molestation.

3. That he would seal a writing purporting a disclaimer of the defendant and his trustees of the tithes of the said closes.

The plaintiff in fact says, that he hath done all on his part, and assigns for breath, that the defendant did not permit the plaintiff to receive the tithes of the said closes without interruption and molestation; but term. Mich. 26 Car. 2 did prosecute two suits in the Exchequer Chamber, ad damnum 300*l.* Upon non assumpsit pleaded, and verdict and judgment for the plaintiff, the defendant brings a writ of error, and assigns the general error. The sole question proposed by Holt of counsel with Hunt, the plaintiff in the writ of error, was, whether a suit in equity be a breach of the agreement, such as the common law can take notice of? and relied upon 3 Leon. 72.

And I have considered that book, and others, and do conceive such suit is a disturbance; for, 1. Ex vi termini, when a man is in possession, to be subpœnaed to appear in Chancery is a disturbance. And this suit arises by reason of these tithes, 1 And. 137, pl. 188, Burr versus Higgs. Debt upon an obligation, conditioned to permit the plaintiff quietly to take, reap and carry away corn. The defendant pleads quod permisit. The plaintiff replies that he came and forbid him to reap; and adjudged a breach of the condition. Mich. 47 E. 3, 22 a. pl. 51. In an assise between two tenants in common, a forbidding by word of mouth to the tenant to pay his rent was adjudged a disseisin.

True it is, that Selby and Chute's case is, that a suit in Chancery is no disturbance, as 'tis reported by Moor 859, pl. 1179. 1 Roll. Abr. 430, pl. 15. 1 Brownl. 23. But by the record itself, Winch Intr. 116, it appears that judgment was given for the plaintiff, and Winch was one of the Judges that gave the judgment; for this was 11 Jac. and he was made Judge 9 Jac. and so he should know better than any of those who report the case, none of which then attended the Court of C. B. but Brownlow; and this judgment is entered not in his, but in Waller's office.

As to the case cited at the Bar, 3 Leon. 71. The suit was there against the lessor by a stranger; and so the lessee could not be disturbed thereby. And I take such a suit not to be a breach of covenant against incumbrances, because a [372] decree is no incumbrance upon the land, but 'tis a molestation to the person. And the law doth take notice of suits in Chancery; for a forbearance to sue in Chancery is a good consideration to ground an assumpsit, 3 Cro. 768, Dowdenay versus Oland, by the Courts of C. B. and B. R. and so is 3 Cro. 847, Coulston versus Carr. And of this opinion were the other three Judges; but my brother Dolben found a flaw in the assignment of the breach of the promise; and so it was adjourned.

VISCOUNT CLARE versus LINCH. ERROR. IRELAND.

Trial.

An ejectment for lands in the county of Clare, of the demise of Peter Cransborough for ten years. Upon not guilty pleaded, issue was joined, and then there is an entry upon the roll thus:

Et super hoc pro indifferenti triatione exit' præd' inter partes præd' superius junct' habend' eædem partes ex eorum unanimi consensu & assensu, & ex assensu & consensu eorum consilii & attorn' in Cur' domini Regis coram ipso Rege hic scilicet apud the King's Court prædict' petunt breve domini Regis Vic' com' Corke dirigend' de venire faciend' coram dicto domino Rege hic &c. duodecim, &c. de corpore com' sui ad triand' exit' præd'. Et quia videtur Cur' hic quod petitio ill' est rationi consona, ideo præcept' est Vic' com' Corke præd' quod venire fac' coram domino Rege hic scilicet apud the King's Court die Martis proximo post octab' Pur' Beatæ Mariæ Virginis duodecim, &c. de corpore com' sui per quos &c. qui nec, &c.

Then there is a Nisi Prius granted to the said county of Corke, and the cause there tried, and a bill of exceptions put in, and upon debate in B. R. in Ireland, judgment was given for Linch; and now the Lord Viscount Clare brings a writ of error, assigns the general error; and the question now debated was, whether consent make this trial, had in a foreign county, good, contrary to Crow and Edward's case, Hob. 5.

And we all resolved that the trial was well had; for the case in Pasch. 44 E. 3, 6 b. pl. 2, is as strong a case, where villenage was tried where the lands lay, and not where the action was brought, as it ought to be by law, but consent made it good, vide Dormer's case, 5 Co. where consent shall make good what otherwise would not be so. And Crow and [373] Edwards's case, the consent was entered on record, as 'tis in this case. And so judgment was affirmed, in the point resolved 2 Roll. Rep. 166. Macduncoh versus Stafford, Palmer 100. 2 Roll. Rep. 363, Lloyd versus Williams.

TOPHAM versus PANNEL.

Condition.

Debt for 20l. upon condition that Anne Mason alias Fawne, shall pay 7l. 9s. 4d. such a day to the plaintiff, or personally appear 23 Jan. instant, in the house of William Barnsley, Esq. precisely at ten o'clock in the morning. The defendant pleads, that the said Anne Mason upon the said 23d day of January, and diverse days as well before as after, ex visitatione Dei ægrota fuit, & sub quodam morbo ex visitatione præd' tant' laboravit, quod eadem Anna totaliter inhabilis ad comparend' super eundem vicesimum tertiam diem Januarii in præd' domo præfat' Willielmi Barnesley devenit, scilicet apud, &c. Et hoc, &c. The plaintiff demurs.

And first, the Court seemed to agree that the plea as to the sickness was good, notwithstanding Co. Lit. 259 b. 1 Anders. 32, pl. 79, and Bro. Saver Default 45, and 48 Abridgment de Assise 55 a. and which is allowed an excuse in outlawry for felony, Fitz. Challenge 153. For 'tis not barely she was sick, &c. but ex visitatione Dei ægrota fuit, & totaliter inhabilis ad comparend, &c.

But 2dly. They resolved, that though the condition be in the disjunctive, and one part is impossible, yet that the other ought to be performed, as the case is, because to be done by a stranger; and my brother Dolben urged, that the reason given by the Lord Coke, was not needful in that case; and by that reason there given, if I sell my land, and desire the purchaser to pay the money down, and I will either make him an assurance, or pay the money; if I die, the money would be lost. And judgment was given for the plaintiff; for this reason chiefly, that the appearance was to be by a stranger, and not by the obligor himself.

[374] DOMINUS REX versus HONORA MUNSON & ALIOS. ERROR. ASSISES AT HEREFORD.

Oath.

The defendants were indicted for refusing the oath of obedience injoined by 3 Jac. cap. 4, and the indictment was, that at the Assises and general gaol-delivery held before Sir Robert Atkins, &c. and Zachary Babington, gent. eidem Roberto Atkins and Timotheo Littleton, &c. hac vice associat. per sacramentum suum, &c. præsentat. existit modo sequen. viz. jur. pro domino Rege præsentant quod, at the general Quarter-Sessions for the county of Hereford, 14 January 30, the justices of peace did tender the said oath to the defendants, and they refused, and that afterwards ad Assisas tent. pro com. Hereford præd. 31 Martii 31 Car. 2, coram Roberto Atkins Milite Balnei un. Justic. dicti domini Regis de Banco & Zacharia Babington gen. eidem Roberto Atkins & Timotheo Littleton Mil. un. Baron. Scaccarii dicti domini Regis ad Assisas in com. Hereford præd. capiend. assign. per formam statut. the said Justices Atkins and Zachary Babington again tendered the said oath, and they refused to take the same; and upon not guilty pleaded, the defendants afterwards, relicta verificatione, confess the indictment; and judgment is given, that the defendants ponantur & quilibet eorum ponatur extra protection. dicti domini Regis, & quod forisfaciant & quilibet eorum forisfaciat dicto domino Regi omnia bona & catalla terras & tenementa sua, and that they committantur & quilibet eorum committatur gaolæ dicti domini Regis in com. Hereford præd. ibidem remansur. duran. beneplacito dicti domini Regis, &c. Upon the writ of error, the error assigned was, that the second tender of the oath was by the Justices of Assise only. Whereas the statute of 3 Jac. says, it must be by the Justices of Assise and Gaol-delivery, and this error seemed not to be allowed by my brother Dolben, but by the other two it was not spoke to. But I conceive 'tis error, and that the Justices of Assise cannot, by virtue of that commission barely, tender the said oath; for the statute says, that in case they shall refuse to take the said oath tendered them by the justices of peace, then the said justices shall and may commit the same persons to the common gaol, there to remain without bail [375] or mainprise, until the next Assises, where the said oath shall be again in the said open Assises required of them by the said Justices of Assise and Gaol-delivery in their open Assises, every person so refusing shall incur the danger and penalty of præmunire; by which it appears, that they being committed to gaol by judgment of the justices of peace, none can deliver them but they who have power to deliver the gaol. And though the Statute de Finibus, 27 E. 1, gives Justices of Assise power to deliver the gaol, that is intended only of felons, as appears by Stamf. Pla. Cor. 57 and 58. But the judgment was reversed for another error incurable, for misreciting the oath contained in the Act; for whereas the oath in the Act is, and him and them will defend to the uttermost of my power against all conspiracy and attempts whatsoever, the indictment is, against all conspiracies and contempts whatsoever.

DOMINUS REX versus PEMLINGTON. ERROR. CHESTER.

Error.

The indictment was for entering into the close of one Crew, and he was found guilty, and judgment, and fined 12d. and the error assigned is, because the first process is a capias; whereas in all indictments for trespass and under felony, a venire facias is the first process. And judgment was for this cause reversed.

DODDESWORTH, &c. versus ANDERSON.

Bankrupt. 1 Danv. Abr. 686, p. 1. 2 Jones 141.

The case was upon a special promise. The question between the plaintiffs and defendant was, whether William Grice was a bankrupt before a conveyance by him made to the defendant and Mary his wife, dated 23 Septem. 23 Car. 2. And the jury find a special verdict.

That the said William Grice was a subject born of the King of England, and lived at Dublin in Ireland.

That before the making of the said conveyance he traded as a merchant at Dublin, and got his living by buying and selling.

That he frequently came into England and bought goods there, and sold them in Ireland, and became indebted to divers persons in divers sums of money as yet unpaid, exceeding 100l.

[376] That he once did sell in England a parcel of neats tongues, and at another time in Ireland did sell a parcel of tallow to be delivered at Chester in England, which was done accordingly.

That he left his house and trade in Dublin, and there absconded from his creditors.

That he afterwards sojourned with a friend in England, and gave order to be denied, and absconded from his creditors in England before the making of the said conveyance.

That the said conveyance was made bona fide, and for valuable consideration, 23 Octob. 23 Car. 2, but dated 23 Sept. 25 Car. 2.

And upon this verdict we resolved, that Grice was a bankrupt before the conveyance; for though he is found to buy and sell but once in England, it is not necessary that he do so, for many merchants do only buy beyond sea and sell here, and others do only buy here and sell beyond sea; for 'tis trading that makes a person capable of being a bankrupt, and 'tis plain that Grice did trade in England. And judgment was given accordingly.

Memorandum, June 18, 1680, Mr. Nathaniel Redding having been convicted (before justices of oyer and terminer by virtue of a special commission for that purpose granted) for endeavouring to persuade Bedlow, who was a witness against the noblemen imprisoned in the Tower of London, to forbear his prosecution of them; and he the said Mr. Redding having had judgment executed upon him by being set in the pillory, and fined 1000l. and imprisoned for the same, but his fine since pardoned by the King, came this day into Court, and demanded that an information which he there brought in his hand might be received by Mr. Astrey against the commissioners who condemned him, of which my brother Jones and brother Dolben were two, and that the information may be filed. But the Court did declare that he was in a wrong way to exhibit any information in this manner, and did cause his words, whereby he did accuse the two Judges of oppression, to be recorded; and for those words, and for that he was infamous by having been on the pillory, the gentlemen at the Bar did pray that his gown might be pulled over his ears (he having been formerly a practiser at the Bar) which was ordered and executed in Court, and he was also condemned in Court to pay the King 500l. and to lie in prison till he paid it. He seemed to complain much for not being allowed a writ of error to reverse [377] his judgment before the commissioners; and afterwards the last day of this term he petitioned to be spared his fine, and therefore the Court did remit his fine and imprisonment, and only took a recognizance of him for his good behaviour; for that during the term such power remains in the Judges. Co. Lit. 260 a.(1)

(1) In this case one Marshal's case was cited, who was fined 1500l. & afterwards in the same term reduced to 500l. And though it be said, 1 Cr. 251, in Sir James Wingfield's case, that fines assessed in Court by judgment upon an information cannot be afterwards qualified or mitigated, it is meant in another term, and not in the same term.

DOMINUS REX versus OCULLEAN. MIDDLESEX.

Priest.

An indictment, that the defendant born within the King's dominions, being a priest, and ordained by authority from the See of Rome, 28 Febr. 31 Car. 2, infra hoc regnum Angliæ, scilicet at the parish of St. Margaret's Westminster, proditorie & ut falsus proditor dicti domini Regis nunc fuit & remansit contra formam statut. in hujusmodi casu edit. & provis. Et contra pacem, &c. upon not guilty, the jury find a special verdict.

That the said defendant was born in Ireland, within the King's dominions.

That he is sacerdos factus & ordinat. per authoritat. derived from the See of Rome before 28 Febr. 31 Car. 2.

That on the said 28 Febr. 31 Car. 2 the defendant in a certain ship sailing from Bourdeaux, in the dominion of the King of France, towards Corke in Ireland by tempest coactus fuit, Angliæ was driven into Minehead in Somersetshire, and there immediately pro alta proditione præd. capt. & apprehensus fuit. Sed utrum super tota materia the defendant be guilty or no, petunt advisamentum Cur. And I conceive upon this verdict, the defendant is not guilty, for these reasons.

1. From the preamble of the Act of 27 Eliz. cap. 2, which says, that whereas divers persons called Jesuits, seminary priests, and other priests, have of late years come and been sent, and daily do come and are sent into England to withdraw the subjects from their obedience, &c. Now this man neither came nor was sent, properly speaking, but coactus fuit into Minehead.

2. The clause which prohibits priests to come into or remain, reaches not here, because it is said that he was, [378] immediately after his being driven a-shore, taken, and so cannot be said to remain.

3. There is the act of God in the case, which is summa necessitas, of which all laws, both human and divine, allow. And in this Act it is said in the clause, which injoins priests to depart, if the wind, weather and passage shall serve for the same; and so the clause which preserves liberty, who cannot go for infirmity.

4. Actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea.

As to that clause in the indictment, that he was going into the King's dominions, viz. Ireland.

Resp. Nil efficit conatus, nisi sortitur effectu. And with my opinion agreed the whole Court. And judgment was given for the defendant.

DOMINUS REX versus ALSOP. DERB. ERROR.

Game. 3 Keb. 516.

The defendant was indicted at the Quarter Sessions, that he non habens terras tenementa feod. annuitat. reddit. vel officia in jure suo proprio vel in jure uxor. ejus ad usum suum propr. nec aliqua alia persona sive aliquæ aliæ personæ ad usum ipsius Thomæ vel uxor. ejus vel ad usum eorum alterius annui valor. 100*l.* 9 die Novemb. 31 Car. 2, apud Boylstin Sagittavit in quodam tormento, Anglice vocat. a handgun, contra formam statut. in hujusmodi casu edit. & provis. ac contra pacem dicti d'ni Regis nunc Coron. & dignitat suas. The defendant pleads not guilty, and found guilty; and judgment is entered thus: Ideo consideratum est per Cur. dicti d'ni Regis nunc hic quod præd. Thomas Alsop solvet dicto d'no Regi secund. formam statut. in hujusmodi casu edit. & provis. decem librar. pro fine suo super ipsum occasione præd. imposit. Et quod præd. Thomas Alsop capiatur ad satisfaciend. d'no Regi de fine præd', &c. The defendant assigns the general error. But the errors insisted upon were these. 1. Non habens terr. refers to the time of the indictment, and not the shooting; and so he may have 100*l.* per annum when he did shoot, and may have parted with it at the time of the indictment, as 3 Cro. 754, Stansbie's case. An indictment of forcible entry into lands existen. liberum tenementum of the party, is not good, for not saying adtunc existen. 2. The judgment is solvet for solvat. 3. Decem librarum for decem libras; and for these reasons judgment was reversed.

[379] SIR JOHN SPARROW versus DRAPER. LONDON.

Repleader.

Debt for rent. The defendant pleads in abatement, quod præd. Johannes Sparrow in billa præd. nominat. est & die exhibitionis billæ præd. fuit miles prout per billam præd. superius supponitur et hoc &c. unde petit judicium de billa &c. The plaintiff replies, that the plaintiff is, and at the time of exhibiting the bill was, a knight, and tenders issue to be tried per patriam. The defendant demurs, because this issue ought to be tried by the king at arms. But resolved, that the issue ought to be tried per patriam; for Co. Lit. 74 a. says there are but six kinds of certificates, and this by the king at arms is none of them; and this issue is triable either by certificate or per patriam. And this very issue was tried per patriam Mich. 7 H. 16, 15 a. pl. 101, in qu. imp. The defendant pleads, that the plaintiff apres le darreine continuance was knighted: and the plaintiff denies it, and issue thereupon, and tried per patriam. And judgment was in the principal case, that the defendant respondeat ouster.

DOMINUS REX versus COUNT DE CASTLEMAIN.

Witness.

The Earl of Castlemain was indicted by the name of Roger Palmer Esq.; Earl of Castlemain in the kingdom of Ireland, for that he traiterously intending to kill the King, to introduce the Romish religion, and to subvert the Government, 20 June 30 Car. 2, at the parish of St. Giles in the Fields, together with other false traitors, did unite and gather themselves together, and did consult to put the King to death, to depose him from his Crown and Government, and to introduce the Romish religion, and to that purpose did promise great rewards; and pay divers sums of money to divers persons unknown; and that he did write divers notes in writing to incite divers other persons to compleat the treasons aforesaid, contra pacem & contra formam statuti. Upon not guilty pleaded, the defendant having been a prisoner in the Tower for some time, was the twenty-third of June 1680 tried at the Bar. There were only two witnesses who offered materially to depose against him, and they [380] did depose very positively against him as to his attempting to procure some to kill the King, the witnesses were Doctor Titus Oates, and one Thomas Dangerfield. Upon the evidence of Dangerfield, who had been found guilty upon several indictments, one of felony, for which he had his clergy, and was burnt in the hand; upon other indictments he had been upon the pillory for cheating but had obtained his pardon under the Great Seal for all the said offences; a question did arise whether he might be a witness, and thereupon the prisoner did desire to have counsel assigned him, and it was granted; and Mr. Daniel, one of his counsel, urged, that Dangerfield ought not to be a witness, for that he was blemished, and the pardon had not restored him to his testimony; and cited 2 Brownlow 47, where it is said that the King pardoned a man attaint, for giving a false verdict, yet he shall not be at another time impanelled upon any jury; for though the punishment were pardoned, yet the guilt remains. 2 Bulstr. 154, Brown versus Crashaw. In a prohibition, the suggestion was proved only by two persons attainted of felony. And Coke Chief Justice cited Hill. 11 H. 4, 41 b. pl. 7, That if a man be attainted of felony and pardoned, he shall not afterwards be sworn upon a jury, because he is not probus & legalis homo. But the Court willing to be thoroughly satisfied, sent me to the Court of Common Pleas to know their opinions in this point. And the Judges there resolved, that the burning of the hand was quasi a statute pardon, as to the felony; and as to that he was a good witness, and the pardon made him a good witness as to the other offences. But they said, that had he not been burnt in the hand, the pardon would not have restored him to his credit again, because in his testimony the people are concerned, and consequently the pardon will not deprive them of their interest, and thereupon we allowed him to be a good witness; and with the opinion of the Judges of the Common Pleas, as to the burning of the hand, agree the books of 5 Co. 110 a. Heston's case; and Hob. 292 and 67, Cuddington and Wilkin's case; but Moor 872 says, that Justice Nichols was of opinion, that if the plaintiff had been convicted, the judgment would have been otherwise. And upon the whole evidence, the defendant was found not guilty.

Bail.

[381] Memorandum, The Lord Viscount Stafford, upon a habeas corpus from the Tower, desired to be bailed, being impeached in Parliament by the House of Commons, and by reason thereof had lain in prison in the Tower almost two years; but we did resolve, that a person accused of high treason, and not within the Act for habeas corpus's, is not de jure to be bailed by this Court, and we did not think fit in discretion to bail him; and we alledged likewise the orders of the House of Lords, though we did not rely thereon, which are as followeth, viz.

Die Martis 11 Martii $167\frac{8}{9}$.

It being moved, that this House would declare whether petitions of appeal which were presented to this House in the last Parliament be still in force to be proceeded on, it is ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, that it be, and is hereby referred to the Lords Committees for privileges to consider thereof, and report their opinion thereupon unto this House, and that the said Lords Committees do meet on Thursday next at three of the clock in the afternoon for that purpose.

Die Mercurii 12 Martii $167\frac{8}{9}$.

The Earl of Shaftsbury reported, that the committee appointed yesterday to consider in what state the impeachments in the last Parliament now stand, have perused the journal of this House, and find that the fifth day of December 1678, the impeachments against the five lords now prisoners in the Tower were brought from the House of Commons, which consisted of a general charge of treason, and other high crimes. The House of Commons declaring they would in convenient time exhibit the articles of their charge then. The next day this House appointed to go upon the consideration of these impeachments, and all the Judges were appointed to be then present, but nothing was done thereon.

The Lords Committees do also find that an impeachment of high treason, and other high crimes against Thomas Earl of Danby Lord Treasurer, was brought from the House of Commons the twenty-third day of December 1678, and the particular articles then exhibited, and the Commons desired that he might be sequestered from his place in Parliament, and committed to safe custody.

[382] That the Lord Treasurer desired copies of all papers and proceedings concerning this business, and that it was then resolved upon the question, that the Lord Treasurer should not then withdraw.

It farther appears, that on the twenty-sixth of December 1678, the Lord Treasurer moved the House for a copy of his charge, and that he might not lie long under it; whereupon it was moved that the House would consider of the desire of the House of Commons concerning his confinement.

The debate was adjourned.

It appears that this House on the twenty-seventh of December, resolved, that the Lord Treasurer should not now be confined; and ordered, that he should have a copy of the articles, to which he was appointed to bring in his answer before the third day of January, and that he might have counsel to assist him.

Upon report made by the Earl of Shaftsbury from the Lords Committees for examination of the late horrid conspiracy concerning the impeachments brought up from the House of Commons in the last Parliament, how they stand entered in the journal of this House.

It is ordered, that it be, and is hereby referred to the Lords Committees for Privileges, to consider of the state of the said impeachments, and all the incidents relating thereunto, and report their opinion thereupon unto this House.

Die Lunæ 17 Martii $167\frac{8}{9}$.

Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, that it be, and is hereby referred to the Lords Committees for Privileges, to consider whether petitions of appeal which were presented to this House in the last Parliament be still in force to be proceeded on, as also to consider of the state of the impeachments brought up from the House of Commons last Parliament, and all the incidents relating thereunto, and make report thereof unto the house.

Die Martis 18 Martii $167\frac{8}{9}$.

The Earl of Essex reported, that the Lords Committees for Privileges, in obedience to the order of this House dated the seventeenth of this instant March, have considered of the matters referred to them, whether petitions of appeals which [383] were presented to this House in the last Parliament be still in force to be proceeded in; as also to consider of the state of the impeachment brought up from the House of Commons last Parliament, and all the incidents relating thereunto, and make report thereof unto the House; and their Lordships upon perusal of the judgment of this House, of the twenty-ninth of March 1673, are of opinion, that in all cases of appeals and writs of error they continue, and are to be proceeded on in statu quo as they stood at the dissolution of the last Parliament, without beginning de novo.

The judgment and proceedings being large, are omitted to be reported, the journal of this House being ready, wherein that judgment is entered.

And upon consideration had of the matter referred to their Lordships concerning the state of the impeachments brought up from the House of Commons the last Parliament, and all the incidents relating thereunto, their Lordships find, that the five lords who are in the Tower are upon general impeachments, and the other lord is impeached with special matter assigned, they refer the House to the report made the 12th of March instant, which states what is entered in the journal of the last Parliament concerning this matter; and their Lordships are of opinion, that the dissolution of the last Parliament doth not alter the state of the impeachments brought up by the Commons in that Parliament.

Die Mercurii 19 Martii $167\frac{8}{9}$.

Next the House entered into consideration of the report from the Lords Committees for Privileges, whether petitions of appeal which were presented the last Parliament be still in force to be proceeded in; and concerning the state of impeachments brought from the House of Commons the last Parliament, and all the incidents relating thereunto; and in the midst of the debate the Earl of Lincoln came into the House, and took the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and made and subscribed the declaration in pursuance of the Act for the more effectual preserving the King's person and Government by disabling Papists from sitting in either House of Parliament.

After this the House proceeded in the debate aforesaid, and after some time spent therein, it was desired that this question might be put, whether to agree with the Committee in this [384] report? Then this present question was put, whether this question shall be now put? And it was resolved in the affirmative.

Then the main question was put, whether to agree with the Committee in this report? And it was resolved in the affirmative.

The House this day taking into consideration the report made from the Lords Committees for Privileges, that in pursuance of the order of the seventeenth instant to them directed for considering whether petitions of appeal which were presented to this House in the last Parliament be still in force to be proceeded on, and for considering of the state of the impeachments brought up from the House of Commons the last Parliament, and all the incidents relating thereunto, upon which the Lords Committees were of opinion, that in all cases of appeals and writs of error they continue and are to be proceeded on in statu quo, as they stood at the dissolution of the last Parliament without being de novo, and that the dissolution of the last Parliament doth not alter the state of the impeachments brought up by the Commons in that Parliament. After some time spent in consideration thereof,

It is resolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, that this House agrees with the Lords Committees in the said report.

DOMINUS REX versus THE INHABITANTS OF THE COUNTY OF ESSEX.

Ways. Trem. 205.

An information for not repairing a certain common stone-bridge commonly called Daggenham Bridge, alias Daggenham Beam, situate lying and being in separalibus parochiis de Hornechurch & Daggenham in the same county in communi alta Regia via ducen' a paroch. de Raynham in com. præd. usq; paroch. de Daggenham præd. in com. præd. & sic vers. Civitat. London. The defendants plead, that they ought to be charged with the repairing of the said bridge, for that by an inquisition taken at Chelmesford 3 Aug. 26 Car. 2, before Sir Matthew Hale Knight, Chief Justice of B. R. and Justice Twisden and others, justices of oyer and terminer, it was presented, that a certain common bridge commonly called Daggenham Beam, jacen. & existen. in parochia de Daggenham in com. Essex præd. in communi alta Regia via ibidem ducen. a Daggenham præd. in com. præd. ad vill de Raynham in eodem [385] com. was then in decay and out of repair, and that Sir Norton Knatchbull, Bart. and Sir Thomas Fanshaw, Knt. by reason of the tenure of lands in the parish of Barking, and elsewhere in the said county, late the lands of the Abbess of the Abbey of Barking, ought to repair the same, and thereupon a venire fac' issued against the said Sir Norton and Sir Thomas; and 10 July 28 Car. 2, before Justice Jones and other commissioners of oyer and terminer, and the said Sir Thomas came and pleaded that he ought not to repair the said bridge by reason of the said tenure, but that the inhabitants of Daggenham ought to repair the same, and thereupon a trial was had 12 March 29 Car. 2, and found that the said Sir Thomas ought to repair the said bridge modo & forma prout, &c. and judgment against him to the King for 20l. and then avers that this and that are the same bridge, and that the said judgment continues still in force, and not reversed; and upon this plea the King's Attorney demurred, because the bridge contained in the information is in two parishes, and the bridge in the plea lies but in one, and so cannot be the same; and so was the opinion of the Court, for Sir Thomas Fanshaw may be tied to repair so much of the bridge as is in Daggenham, and the country the other part. And judgment was given for the King.

DOMINUS REX versus JOHN BISHOP. CIVITAS OXON.

Trade.

The defendant is indicted before the justices of peace of the City of Oxon by the name of John Bishop de Civitate Oxon præd. Millener 5 October 29 Car. 2, & multis aliis diebus & vicibus continue post præd. quintum diem Octobris for three months and more, viz. to the taking of the inquisition, did use, exercise and occupy unlawfully, & pro lucro suo propr. artem mysterium sive manualem occupation. venditoris, Anglice of a salesman, existen. artem mysterium sive manual. occupation. usitat. infra hoc regnum Angliæ 12 die Januarii 5 El. eodem Johanne Bishop nunquam existen. in dicta arte mysterio sive manuali occupation. educat. as an apprentice for the space of seven years. Upon a demurrer to the indictment, the sole question was, whether a salesman was within the statute of 5 Eliz. because it seemed to be a new trade. But resolved it was a trade then used, and so within the statute.

[386] DOMINUS REX versus WILLIAM TEMPEST & AUTERS. DUNELM.

Error.

Tempest, Scot, and others were convicted of a riot in the county of Durham, upon the view of John Morland and William Blackston, Esq; two justices of peace, and Nicholas Conyers, Esq; sheriff of the said county, of a riot, contra formam statuti de 13 H. 4, cap. 7, and they were fined by the justices, viz. Tempest 20l. and the rest

5l. a-piece, but the sheriffs did not join in setting the fine; and the defendants bring a writ of error, and assign for errors, 1. It doth not appear that the defendants were convicted by the view of the justices. 2. The sheriff did not join in the fining them; and the statute says, that the sheriff is to be joined with the justices in the whole proceeding; and for these errors the judgment was reversed.

WOODROFFE versus MARGARET WILGRESS.

Ley gager.

Debt for 4l. recovered in a court-baron for damages and costs recovered in a court-baron, in an action brought there for words. The defendant offered to wage her law, and came to the Bar, and brought her compurgators with her, and she was ready to swear, and she laid her hand on the book, and began to swear; but upon the Court's demanding what the cause of action was, and finding it to be aforesaid, we asked her if she had paid the monies recovered, and she answered, that she owed the plaintiff nothing; but she not affirming that she had paid it, and it being an apparent debt by the recovery, we asked some of the compurgators whether they believed she would swear true in this case? And they believing she could not, we deferred taking her oath till next day, and then she offered to pay the money, so as she might be abated the costs. And it seemed clear, that though wager of law doth lie of a debt recovered in a court-baron, yet that shall be intended of a debt originally sued for there; tamen quære, for I am in doubt how that will differ from the case at Bar, only in the case at Bar wager of law would not have been upon the original action, because there is an injury supposed in the [387] defendant, in which case wager of law lies not, Co. 295 a. and therefore though it be in a recovery in a court baron, yet because the original cause of the action will not permit ley gage, I think we did well in refusing her waging of law. Vide March 15, pl. 35. Moor 276, pl. 430.

PHILIP BROGAN versus JOHN AUNGER, CLERK. ERROR IN IRELAND. ATTACHMENT UPON A PROHIBITION.

Intr. Hill. 30 & 31 Car. 2.

Damages. 2 Jones 128. 1 Vent. 348, 350. 2 Show. 56, 88.

The plaintiff declares, that one Cornelius Duffe, late Prior of the Hospital of St. John's by Kells in the county of Meath, 1 January 33 H. 8, being seised of the said hospital and priory, and of the rectory impropriate of the parochial church of Durvagh, alias Darvy, in the counties of Meath and Cavan, and of the tithes of the eleven pole lands of Bally-Bruise lying in the parish of Darvy, and of all tithes in the said parish in fee, that he and all his predecessors, &c. had and received time out of mind, for the use of the said hospital, tithes of the said lands called Bally-Bruise, within the said parish of Darvy, that all the said hospital and rectory came to King Henry the Eighth, by a statute made in Ireland, 15 Febr. 33 H. 8, cap. 5, and from King Henry the Eighth they descended to Edward the Sixth, from him to Queen Mary, from her to Elizabeth, from her to King James, who granted them to Medhop, who sold them to Crow and others, who sold them to James Bishop of Meath, and Sir William Usher, who granted them to Sir Robert Forth and his heirs, and from him they descended to John Forth his son and heir, who sold the same to Thomas Taylor and his heirs for 725l. and that the plaintiff as his bailiff gathered the tithes of four pole, part of the eleven pole lands of Bally-Bruise; and the defendant as rector of the parish of Lurgan in the diocese of Kilmore, sues the plaintiff in the Ecclesiastical Court for the tithes of those four pole lands, pretending that they lie within the parish of Lurgan, whereas they lie within the parish of Darvy; and the right and limits of parishes i to be determined at common law, ad damnum 100*l.*

Judgment was entered by default; and upon a writ of enquiry of damages, the jury found 100l. damages and [388] 6d. costs; and judgment was given for the 100l.

and 28l. 5s. de incremento, for damages and costs. The errors assigned upon the record, was only the general error. But the counsel insisted upon these;

1. The writ of enquiry finds 100l. damage, and 6d. costs, and there is no notice taken in the judgment of the 6d. costs; sed non allocatur.

2. There is no visne laid where the suit in the Ecclesiastical Court was; so that if the defendant had pleaded non prosecutus fuit after the writ of prohibition delivered, and issue had been taken thereon, there could have been no trial. To this exception was answered, that all or most of the precedents are so; and the visne is never alledged in such case. But upon examination I find these precedents to the contrary, viz. where there is a visne alledged in such case, viz.

Hob. 306, Wright versus Gerard, the record whereof is Winch. Intr. 642.

And I find this difference, viz. Where damages are given for the plaintiff, there generally he lays a visne where the suit in the Ecclesiastical Court was; but otherwise the want of a visne hurts not. And judgment was reversed for this reason by the opinion of the whole Court.

[389] THOMAS RYDER versus RICHARD HILL. LONDON.

Discontinuance.

Debt for rent upon a lease parol. The defendant pleads, that the plaintiff nihil habuit in tenementis tempore dimissionis. The plaintiff replies, that 19 Febr. 1656, John Lord St. John of Basing, Marquess of Winchester, was seised in fee, and so being seised, by indenture then dated, for money bargained and sold, and William Owen, Luke Cropley and Thomas Henslow confirmed to one Richard Norton, Esq; for ninety-nine years, 1 March 29 Car. 2. The estate of the said Richard Norton by several mesne conveyances came to the plaintiff, by virtue whereof he became possessed, and demised to the defendant as is aforesaid. The defendant demurs, because the plaintiff doth not shew how he comes to the term. And it was adjudged for the plaintiff, that upon the trial the plaintiff may set forth all at large, and he shall not be compelled to lengthen the record by setting forth every deed. Mich. 18 Car. 2, B. R. Cotes versus Wade, ante fol. 74 b. True it is, that 3 Cro. 22, pl. 5, seems contrary; but ante 55 b. agrees with this judgment. Mich. 1653, B. R. Elston versus Drake. In debt for rent, the case was, the plaintiff as administrator declares, quod cum le intestate demise al defendant certain terre, rendering rent to him, his executors and assigns, the defendant had not paid to the plaintiff, unde actio accrevit, &c. The defendant pleads non detinet, and found for the plaintiff; and it was moved in arrest of judgment, because the plaintiff doth not shew of what estate the intestate was seised or possessed; for if of an estate in fee, then the rent ceases by his death, and the words per quod actio accrevit will not help, though after a verdict, for the conclusion is not put to a jury, and action may accrue to administrator, though the intestate was seised in fee, for if the rent was in arrear in his life-time, the administrator may sue for it. On the other side for the plaintiff it was urged, that it being after a verdict, and being an equal doubt, the best shall be taken for support of the verdict; and the jury have found, quod detinet, and 'tis impossible that the defendant should detinere, if the plaintiff had not cause of action. There was no judgment in this case of Elston and Drake, because the parties agreed to go to a new trial. But the whole Court were of opinion for [390] the defendant, but gave the plaintiff leave to discontinue, paying costs.

MUSTARD versus HARNDEN. ERROR C. B. CASE. ESSEX.

Error.

The plaintiff, James Mustard, declares that he was possessed of a hoy called the Mary, loaded with divers goods and chattels, and floating at anchor in the river of Thames, within the parish of West Thurrock, in a convenient place of the same river; and that the defendant Thomas Harnden satis sciens, the said 17 May 30 Car. 2, being master of the ship called The Hound, and then sailing in the said ship, in the said river towards the City of London, did govern the said ship so negligently and improvidently, that she sailing in the said river in prædictam naviculam ipsius the plaintiff so floating at anchor, as aforesaid, voilenter ruebat, & naviculam illam ut præfertur onerat' fregit & submersit, ad damnum 200*l.* The defendant pleads not guilty. The jury said, that quoad negligent. & improvidam gubernation. navis infra nominant' vocat' le Hound navigan. in rivo Thamesis infrascript. per quod eadem navis in rivo præd. ut præfertur navigans in naviculam præfat. le plaintiff in rivo præd. ad anchoram stactuan. violent. ruebat & naviculam ill. fregit & submersit, the defendant is guilty, and assess damages to 50*l.* Et quoad resid. de præmissis, not guilty, and judgment accordingly; and the error assigned was, that there was no residuum to find the defendant not guilty; for the first part of the verdict comprehends all the injury complained of in the declaration, and then the judgment, that the plaintiff shall be in misericordia pro falso clamore, as to the residuum is not good; and of this opinion was the whole Court, though the objection was, that it might be that the residuum might be intended the satis sciens; but that was not allowed of, nor the goods with which the hoy was loaded; and so judgment was reversed.

[391] OBEDEN versus KEYNEL. DORSET.

Recusancy. 2 Jon. 187. 2 Show. 179. Postea 465.

Debt upon 23 Eliz. cap. 1 for not coming to church. At the trial, after the jury sworn, and before verdict given, the defendant came into the Court, and did there submit, recognize, confess and acknowledge, that he had offended and done ill in not going to church, and not conforming himself to the law therein, and did then prove that he had conformed himself since the suit brought by going to church, receiving the sacrament, and behaving himself orderly and soberly during all the time of divine service, according to the law; and did then and there promise and engage to conform, and go to church, and there to behave himself soberly and orderly, according to the law; and that the said defendant was never indicted or prosecuted for any offence of this nature before.

This is an action for 20*l.* a month for not coming to church, tried the last Assizes in Dorset, and a verdict for the plaintiff for 40*l.* At the trial the defendant comes into Court and conforms, and makes the above written recognition; whether hat doth discharge the action and verdict, or no, is the question?

It was objected, that in the action tam quam the plaintiff hath an interest which shall not be divested within the intent of the clause in 23 Eliz. cap. 1, the words whereof are, Every person guilty of any offence against the statute (other than treason and misprision of treason) which shall before he be thereof indicted, or at his arraignment or trial before judgment, submit and conform himself before the bishop of the diocese, where he shall be resident, or before the justices where he shall be indicted, arraigned or tried (having not before made like submission at any his trial, being indicted for his first like offence) shall, upon his recognition of such submission in open Assizes or sessions of the county, where such person shall be resident, be discharged of all and every the said offences against this Act (except treason and misprision of treason) and of all pains and forfeitures for the same; for that this clause refers only to such cases where the party is arraigned or indicted, and not to actions.

But it seems that the words shall be taken distributively at his arraignment, or trial before judgment, i.e. arraignment in case of indictment, and trial in all cases. But no [392] resolution was given, but adjourned to farther consideration. Vide

THOMAS HORTON, ESQ; versus NANFAN & AL'. LONDON. ERROR IN C. B.

Error.

An action in nature of a ravishment of ward by guardian in socage. The plaintiff declares, that William Finch was seised of lands in Kent, Cambridgeshire and Hertfordshire, in fee, held in socage, and died without issue, by reason whereof the said lands descended to his five sisters and co-heirs, all under the age of fourteen, and that he is next of kin to them, viz. brother to their mother. The defendant pleads, that the said William Finch was tenant in tail, the reversion in fee in the defendants; absque hoc, that he was seised of the said lands modo & forma prout the plaintiff hath declared; and issue thereupon, and tried in London where the action is laid, and found for the plaintiff, and damages 400l. and judgment thereupon; and the error insisted was, that the seisin of lands in Kent, and other counties, is tried in London. But the Court seemed to incline that it is well enough after a verdict, by the statute of 16 & 17 Car. 2, cap. 8, which is continued 22 & 23 Car. 2, cap. 4. Sed adjournatur.

CARTLEDGE versus MAWDLIN. COVENANT. SOUTHAMPTON. INTR. MICH. 31 CAR. 2.

Common.

The plaintiff declares upon articles intended, dat. 10 Nov. 22 Car. 2, between all the tenants, as well copyholders and inhabitants, and others, within the tithing of Ramsdean and Langrish, within the manor of Meon in the said county of Southampton, for the better regulating, ordering, governing, ascertaining and stinting all such cattle as afterwards should be kept in and upon the common and waste-ground called the Strood and Sheet Commons within the [393] said manor, from time to time, thenceforth for ever; whereby it was agreed between them (amongst whom the plaintiff and defendant were two) mutually, that no tenant or any other person claiming in, from or under him or them from thenceforth should keep or put out into the said commons, or either of them, after the 15th of May then next following, any number of beasts, but only such as by the same articles were expressed, limited and appointed, viz. the defendant three, &c. The plaintiff in fait says, that the defendant kept and put in 15 March 31 Car. 2, and so to 1 May 32 Car. 2, four beasts, contra formam articulorum prædict. by reason whereof the plaintiff could not have so large common as he ought to have by virtue of the said articles. The defendant pleads actio non, because before the exhibiting the said bill, and after the said articles, viz. 9 April 28 Car. 2, the plaintiff and one William Baker by their writing then dated, remised, released, and for ever quit-claimed to the defendant, his heirs, executors and administrators, all and all manner of actions and causes of action, sect', billas, obligation', scripta, obligatoria, debts, dues, duties, accounts, sum and sums of money, judgments, executions, quarrels, controversies, trespasses, damages and demands whatsoever, as well in law as in equity, or any other way or means whatsoever, which they the said plaintiff, and William Baker, or either of them ever had, or then had or might have for or by reason or means of any matter, cause or thing from the beginning of the world to the day of the said release. To this the plaintiff demurs, and the question is, whether any of the words in the release will discharge these articles? And the most material for this purpose is, the word scripta obligatoria, which ex vi termini, is any writing under seal; but according to the usual acceptation is bonds: but here it should signify something more, because the word obligations is also in the releases. But my brother Jones said, that writings made by scriveners very often, and for the most part, do contain divers words, which signify the same thing, to fill up the instrument, and to inlarge the reckoning; and so in this place; and of the same opinion seemed my Lord Chief Justice and Dolben to be. And I added, that I conceive it was never the intent of the parties, that the plaintiff should release this agreement; for why should he join another in the same deed of release, who was not party (for aught appears by the record) to the said agreement? And 2dly, there would [394] have been some notice taken of the common, had it been intended that the same should have been included in the release, and therefore the whole Court inclined, that judgment should be given for the plaintiff.

PHEASANT versus FINCH. ESSEX.

Intr. Hill. 31 & 32 Car. 2.

Qui tam.

Debt for 200l. The plaintiff declares, that the defendant for eleven months together next before the 20th of October 31 Car. 2, being above the age of sixteen, and inhabiting at Halstead, did not go to church, contrary to the form of the statute. The defendant demurs generally, and the sole question is, whether this suit may be commenced in this Court, notwithstanding the statute of 21 Jac. cap. 4. The Lord Coke 3 Inst. 194 says, that the informer cannot inform for this offence, or any other offence therein excepted, in any of the Courts at Westminster, but before the justices appointed by the Act, because the clause of excepting them out of the Act, extends only for the laying or alledging any of those offences in any county that he will. But to me it seems, 1. That the words of the Act are, that all offences hereafter to be committed against any penal statute, for which any common informer may lawfully ground any popular action, bill, plaint, suit, &c. before Justices of Assise, Nisi Prius, gaol-delivery, oyer and terminer, or justices of peace, shall be commenced, sued, prosecuted, tried, recovered and determined by way of action, plaint, bill, information or indictment before the said Justices of Assise, &c. having power to inquire of, hear and determine the same, &c. and not elsewhere; by which it seems that if they cannot determine the same, or that such actions will not lie before them, then they are to be determined, where such jurisdiction is given by the law. Now the statute of 23 Eliz. cap. 1 gives remedy by action of debt, bill, information or plaint, &c. And an action of debt cannot be commenced before the Justices of Assise, &c. either by writ or bill, and consequently it will not be within this statute of 21 Jac. et adjourn. And Mich. 32 Car. 2 adjudged for the plaintiff; and many precedents were produced of informations in C. B. and this Court, for the penalty.

[395] DURNFORD versus IRISH. ERROR IN MARLEBOROUGH.

Error.

Indebitatus assumpsit; the error insisted on was, that the Court is said to be held coram majore & burgensibus burgi præd. secundum consuetudinem ejusdem burgi, a tempore quo, &c. And the name of the mayor is not mentioned, which ought to be, 2 Cro. 184, Jerrat versus Caldewel, there was a writ of error of a judgment in Burton upon Trent, and said, coram senescallo & ballivo Domini Paget, and shewed not their names, and held to be an incurable error, and seems a good exception. But it was adjourned; and after judgment was reversed.

CUTFORTHAY versus TAYLOR. NOTT.

Error. 3 Danv. Ab. 78, p. 11.

Trespass vi & armis for taking the mare ipsius queren. necnon bona & catalla sequen. viz. and sums them up, but doth not say they were the goods ipsius quer. And thereupon the defendant demurs; and resolved the plaintiff may have judgment for the mare, and release the action for the residue; and it was said, there are precedents of such judgment, but I can find none. Vide 2 Cro. 104, Woodhouse's case upon the statute of 37 H. 8, cap. 9, upon an usurious contract. 1 Cro. 512, Mulcany versus Eyres. Ejectment for one hundred acres of bog, and other things; the plaintiff released his demand to that, and took judgment for the residue.

WALSAL versus MARY ALLEN.

Words. A plea in bar held good though it ought to have been in abatement.

Action on the case for words. The plaintiff declares, that he being a clergyman, the defendant said of him these words, viz. Francis Walsal is a thief, and he stole plate from Maudlin College in Oxford; and I bought plate of one in Oxford, and gave it to the college for that plate, and thereby saved him from being hanged, ad damnum 500*l.* The defendant pleads in bar by attorney, that ante diem, scilicet 1 Julii 12 Car. 2, the plaintiff married the defendant, and thereupon the plaintiff demurred; and adjudged for the defendant, though pleaded in bar.

[396] NAPPIER & AL. versus CURTIS & AL. IN TRESPASS. HILL. 31 & 32 CAR. 2, ROT. 20.

The plaintiff declares, that the defendants 8 August 30 Car. 2, vi & armis did break the plaintiff's close called Worgret Common within the parish of St. Michael in Wareham, and spoiled the grass ad valentiam 40*l. pedibus ambulando*, and other grass of the plaintiff's cum quibusdam averiis, viz. equis, &c. necnon cum carucis plaustris & aliis carriagiis suis aliam herbam & solum clausi præd. depresser. subverter. & spoliaver. and in the said close did dig tobacco-pipe clay, and carried away two thousand loads thereof to the value of 400*l. transgressionem prædictam quoad depasturationem conculcationem & consumptionem herbæ præd. cum averiis, et quoad depressionem subversion & spoliation, al. herbæ & soli clausi præd. cum carucis plaustris & al. cariagiis præd. necnon quoad effossion. in clauso præd. a præd.* 8 die Augusti 30 Car. 2 usq. 23 diem Octobris 31 Car. 2, diversis diebus & vicibus continuando et alia enormia, &c. ad damnum 500*l.* The defendants demur, because the several continuances of the trespasses, are several trespasses by themselves, and ought not to be declared upon with a continuando. Mich. 20 H. 7, 3, pl. 7, trespass quare domum suam fregit 1 Maii continuando till 1 Junii. Per Yaxley it is good, *quia chescun entry est un fraction. Abr. 549, pl. 5. 9 Car. 1, Hoskins versus Jennings, for cutting of trees. But it seems the words diversis diebus & vicibus do make the action good, as Pasch. 5 Jac. B. R. 2 Roll. Abr. 549, pl. 6, King's case. Trespass for spoiling corn in the blade, may be with a continuando diversis diebus & temporibus per two years, though there cannot be a continuance of such a trespass for so long together. Et adjournatur.

[397] JAMAICA, OCTOBER 20, 1660.

In the year 1661, Sir Charles Littleton as Deputy Governor to the Lord Windsor called the first assembly, which was held in Jamaica, and thereby made laws for raising a publick revenue by a tax on strong liquors towards the upholding of the Government there, which laws are indefinite and perpetual. Afterwards, viz. 15 February 1663, the King grants power to Sir Thomas Modyford to choose his own counsel, and with the consent of the major part of them to frame general assemblies of freeholders, according to the usage of other plantations, and with their consent to make laws suitable to those of England, which should remain in force for the space of two years, and no longer, unless approved by His Majesty. After Sir Thomas Modyford, Sir Thomas Linch succeeded, and after him the Lord Vaughan, who had the like power with Sir Thomas Modyford; during the government of the Lord Vaughan, the assembly granted the like revenue out of strong liquors, but to continue but two years.

The question hence arose, and which was referred by the Privy Council to the Lord Chief Justice North to consider and certify his opinion, and to take the opinion of such other Judges therein as he should think fit, whether the law made by the assembly in the Lord Vaughan's time had totally laid aside the law made in Sir Charles Littleton's time by implication? And upon debate of the matter by the Lord Chief Justice North, Ellys, myself and Charleton Justices, and Baron Gregory, it was resolved, that the last council having power to make laws to continue but two years, did not repeal the perpetual law made before, but did suspend its power during the two years, and no longer, according to the case of prices of wine, Hob. 215, where by 37 H. 8, cap. 23, a perpetual law was made for setting prices of wine; then by the statute of 5 E. 6, the said Perpetual Act (through the inadvertency of the Parliament) was continued amongst other Acts till the end of the Parliament, which continuance was resolved to be idle as to that Act; for an affirmative continuance of a perpetual statute cannot work an abrogation thereof; and when the two years expire, it is as if no such Act had been made; for by 12 Co. 7, and 2 Inst. 684, when an Act of repeal is repealed, the first Act repealed is revived.

[398] JOHN NORRIS versus BAYFIELD. ERROR C. B. LONDON.

Variance.

In ejectment of a messuage, with the appurtenances in the parish of Saint Christopher, of the demise of Francis Norris gentleman. Upon not guilty pleaded, verdict was given for the plaintiff, quoad il. parcell. messuagii prædict. jacen. proximam ad messuagium modo infra nominat. Francisci Neve & contin. ex Boreali parte inde in fronte juxta Thredneedle-Street ab occiden. ad orien. octo pedes, & in profunditatea Borea ad Austrum quindecim pedes, & contin. ex Australi parte inde in fronte juxta Cornhil ab occiden. ad orien. tres pedes & dimidium unius pedis, & in profunditate ab Austro ad Boream quadraginta pedes, et quoad residuum for the defendant, and judgment is given quod quer. recuperet terminum suum prædictum de & in prædict. parcell. prædict. messuagii jacen. proximum ad prædict. messuagium ut præfertur in occupatione prædict. Francisci Neve & continen. &c.

Error general assigned, and the defendant pleads in nullo est erratum. But the chief error is, the variance between the verdict and the judgment. The verdict is, jacen. proximum ad messuagium modo Francisci Neve. The judgment is, jacen. proximum ad messuagium in occupatione prædict. Francisci Neve. Now if this variance be not amendable by the common law, it is not within any of the Statutes of Jeofails, unless the words of 16 and 17 Car. 2, cap. 8, will help it, which are, but that all such omissions, variances, defects, and all other matters of like nature, not being against the right of the matter of the suit, shall be amended, &c. But I think, of and in the occupation are the same. Et adjournatur.

[399] PARSONS versus EDWARD COTTREL. DEBT UPON AN OBLIGATION OF 100L. DAT. 25 FEBR. 31 CAR. 2.

Intr. Trin. 31 Car. 2.

Debt.

The defendant pleads, that before the exhibiting the bill, and after the date of the said obligation, viz. 17 March 31 Car. 2. By indenture between John Ely and the plaintiff of the one part, and one William Cotterel, and one John Cotterel, son of the said William, and the defendant, of the other part, hic in Cur. prolat. the plaintiff released to the defendant all claims and demands; et hoc, &c.

The plaintiff demands oyer of the indenture, the words (as to this purpose) are, The said John Ely and Thomas Parsons, for and in consideration of the sum of 50l. to them or one of them paid, or secured by bond lately entered into by the said Edward Cotterel, the receipt whereof they the said Thomas Parsons and John Ely do, and either of them doth release and acquit the said John Cotterel and Edward Cotterel, and either of them, and their and either of their heirs, &c. and for other good causes, &c. have granted and released to the said John Cotterel, his heirs and assigns, all that messuage, &c. Quibus lectis & auditis, the plaintiff replies, that the bond in the declaration, and the bond mentioned in the indenture are the same; et hoc, &c. The plaintiff demurs. And I am of opinion for the plaintiff. 1. The intent is clear that this security should not be discharged. 2. Claims and demands shall be intended for the money, and not concerning the bond. Pasch. 3 Car. 1, Abree versus Page. Debt upon an obligation, the defendant pleads a release of all errors, and all actions, suits and writs of error whatsoever. Adjudged, the release extended only to writs of error. But the case of Rotheram and Crawley, 3 Cro. 370, [400] and Owen, 71, pl. 142, seems otherwise: and therefore quære. Et adjournatur.

AGLIONBY versus ISABELLA TOWERSON WIDOW. ERROR IN CARLISLE.

Assumpsit. 1 Danv. Ab. 73, p. 15.

The plaintiff declares, that 11 November 29 Car. 2, there was a discourse between the plaintiff and defendant of and concerning a marriage to be had between one Christopher Richmond, Esq; his sister's son, and one Isabel Reynoldson niece of the defendant. Upon which the said defendant then and there, in consideration that the plaintiff at the special instance and request of the defendant would endeavour and labour to persuade the said Christopher Richmond to marry the said Isabel Reynoldson, did promise that she would pay the plaintiff 40l. if the said marriage should take effect. The plaintiff in fait says, that he 31 Dec. 29 Car. 2, and divers other days and times at the instance and request of the defendant, omnibus modis quibus poterat conatus fuit & elaboravit suadere præd. Christophorum to marry the said Isabel Reynoldson, and that afterwards, viz. 1 July 30 Car. 2, the said marriage took effect, and yet the defendant hath not paid him the 40l. though ult. Sept. last past she was thereunto required.

The defendant pleaded non assumpsit, and verdict and judgment for the plaintiff, and 40l. damages; and the general error assigned; but the error insisted on was, that the plaintiff doth not shew how he did endeavour to persuade, and so uncertain, for he says only, omnibus modis quibus poterat. But I conceive it is good enough; for 1. We shall not presume he did prevaricate, iniquum non est præsumendum. 2. If he should set forth his speeches he made either in commendation of the young woman, or advantages of a married life, &c. the record would be too long, and perhaps we could not be competent judges of it, Mich. 1651, in B. R. Barber versus Clerk, assumpsit, in consideration the plaintiff would renounce an executorship, the defendant would pay, &c. The plaintiff avers, quod renunciavit, and good; and yet the person before whom the renunciation was, might not be competent. Mich. 1661, B. R. Baker versus Smith, assumpsit, the plaintiff being a virgin, had been prevailed with to make a contract with the defendant, and afterwards the defendant was desirous to be free; and thereupon the defendant [401] in consideration that the plaintiff would disonerare, Anglice would disengage, him of his promise, he promised to pay her 1000l. and she alledges, that she did disengage him; and adjudged good, without shewing how she did disengage him; and the whole Court seemed to agree, that the declaration in principal is good; but they persuaded the plaintiff to go to a new trial, and he was prevailed with, because the damages were great for so small a matter.

MASON versus JENNINGS.

Case.

In a special action upon the case. The plaintiff declares, that he is a hackney-coachman, and that the defendant with an intent to disgrace him did ride Skimmington, and describes how, thereby surmising that the plaintiff's wife had beat the plaintiff, and by reason thereof persons who formerly used him, refused to come into his coach and to be carried by him, ad damnum. Upon not guilty pleaded, a verdict for the plaintiff; and upon motion in arrest of judgment, judgment was given quod quer. nil capiat per billam; and a judgment in the like case in C. B. was cited Trin. 14 Car. 2, C. B. Rot. 1461, in the case of Lumley and Baddenley.

JANE ZINZAN AND FRANCES ZINZAN versus TALMAGE. ERROR IN C. B. BERKS.

Copyhold. 2 Danv. Abr. 183, p. 3. Pollexf. 561. 2 Jon. 142. 2 Show. 130.

In ejectment of the demise of Henry Zinzan, jun. of three messuages, two hundred acres of land, forty acres of meadow, one hundred acres of pasture, and eight acres of wood in Tylehurst. The jury find a special verdict, that Sir Peter Vanlore, jun. was seised in fee of the manor of Tylehurst, of which the lands in question are parcel, and held by copy of court-roll for one, two or three lives successively, one after the other, as they are named in the copy, according to the custom of the manor: Sir Peter Vanlore had issue three daughters, viz. Jacoba, wife of Henry Zinzan, sen. Esq; Susanna, wife of Sir Robert Croke, Knt. Mary, wife of Henry Alexander late Earl of Sterling in Scotland. The said Sir Peter Vanlore, jun. at a court held 8 March 1638, granted by copy the lands in question to Henry Zinzan, sen. habend. to him and to the said Henry Zinzan, jun. lessor of the plaintiff, and Peter Zinzan sons of the said Henry Zinzan, sen. for their lives, successively, as they are named in the grant, at the will of the lord, according to the custom of the said manor. Henry Zinzan, sen. was admitted tenant, and entered and became seised for life, the remainder to Henry Zinzan, jun. and Peter Zinzan successively. Sir Peter Vanlore died without any issue male, and the said manor descended to his said three daughters. Within the said manor there is a custom, that if any customary lands are granted by one copy to two or more persons named in the same copy, for their lives, and the life of the longer liver of them successively, then the first person in such copy first named, may surrender all the lands, and thereby determine and destroy all the right, estate and title in the same tenements of all the other persons therein named.

[403] By indenture quadripartite, 10 May 28 Car. 2, between the now Earl of Sterling, son and heir of Mary late Countess of Sterling, deceased, one of the daughters and co-heirs of the said Sir Peter Vanlore, jun. deceased, and one of the grand-children and co-heirs of Sir Peter Vanlore, sen. deceased, of the first part, the said Sir Robert Croke and Susanna his wife, of the second part, the said Henry Zinzan alias Alexander, sen. first named in the said copy, and Jacoba his wife, of the third part, and Daniel Blagrave and Joseph Baker, of the fourth part, it was mutually agreed to levy a fine come ceo, &c. to the said Blagrave and Baker, of the manor of Tylehurst, and of the lands in question by name, to the use of the said Henry Zinzan, sen. and Jacoba his wife for their lives without impeachment of waste, the remainder to the use of such person or persons, and for such estate and estates, limitations, uses, trusts, intents and purposes as the said Jacoba Zinzan in her life-time, married or unmarried, by any writing or writings by her sealed and subscribed in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, or by her last will and testament by her sealed and subscribed in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, should declare, nominate or appoint; and in default of such declaration, nomination or appointment, to the only use of the right heirs and assigns of the said Jacoba for ever. In Trin. term next a fine was levied accordingly. 20 November 1676 the said Henry Zinzan, sen. died, and the said Jacoba him survived. 22 & 23 February 1676 the said Jacoba by her indentures of lease and release conveyed the premisses to the said Jane and Frances Zinzan and their heirs, to the use of them and their heirs. 25 June 1677 Jacoba died, and the said Jane and Frances entered. Henry Zinzan, jun. being the second person in the said copy named, entered upon the possession of the said Jane and Frances, and demised to the plaintiff, upon whose possession the defendant re-entered. Et sic, &c. and judgment was given in C. B. for the plaintiff. And after argument in this Court at the Bar, judgment was affirmed by the whole Court. The sole question was, whether the conveyance of 10 May 28 Car. 2, and the fine pursuant thereto be a surrender within the custom to bar the estate of Henry Zinzan; and resolved it is not, because, 1. The custom extends only to the copyhold estate, and that cannot pass by the fine. 2. It being against common right shall be taken strictly. 'Tis against common right, because it gives power to tenant for life to destroy a third person's estate without any recompence. 'Tis taken strictly. [404] Yelverton 1, Baspole versus Long. A custom, that if a surrenderee comes not in upon the third proclamation, he shall forfeit the estate. A surrender is made to the use of A. for life, the remainder to B. A. comes not in, B. shall not forfeit.

Intr. Pasch. 32 Car. 2. Error out of Ireland. Ejectment.

Error. 3 Danv. Abr. 111, p. 3. 2 Jon. 146.

The plaintiff Philips in the action, brought the action first in C. B. in Ireland, and declared of the demise of Roger Masterson, Esq; for eleven years. Upon not guilty pleaded, and a trial at the Bar in C. B. there was a bill of exceptions put in by the defendant, which was as follows:

Com. Wexford, ss. Memorandum qd. 11 Nov. 1678, existen. die præfix per Justic. domini Regis de C. B. hic in crast. Animarum hoc termino Sancti Michaelis 1678, supradict. ad triand. exit. inter Mich. That the defendant gave in evidence to prove that she was not guilty, that the said Roger Masterson long before the said demise to the plaintiff, viz. 4 January 1672, by indenture for money bargained and sold the premisses to one Edward Chichester for 500 years, that the said Edward Chichester afterwards, viz. 14 February 1673, did make his last will in writing, and thereof made his brother John Chichester his executor, and William Hancock overseer. And to prove that he made the said will, she produced an instrument [405] under the seal of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, reciting the said will, and that the said John Chichester was beyond the seas, and a grant of the administration to the said William Hancock for so long time as the said executor shall be beyond sea, dat. 3 Sept. 1674. And also one other writing in parchment under the seal of the consistory of the Bishop of Ferns, purporting a probate of the said will by the executor himself, dat. 7 November 1678, that Edward Chichester named in the will, and in the probate, are the same persons. That the said Edward died in England 28 May 1673, and that the said John Chichester the executor is alive. That the plaintiff gave in evidence another writing in parchment, under the seal of the Prerogative Court of Ireland, dat. 15 December 1677, whereby reciting that the said Edward Chichester died intestate, the Archbishop of Armagh granted administration to the plaintiff as principal creditor; whereupon the said Elizabeth without any farther proof of the said will, desired the said justices that they would direct the jury that the said writings produced by her were conclusive evidence to prove that the said Edward Chichester made the said will, and so she was not guilty of the said trespass and ejectment.

Nevertheless the said justices did only direct the jury that the said writings were evidence, upon which they might find that the said Edward made the said will, but not that the same was conclusive evidence in that behalf, and so left it indifferently to the jury, whether the said Edward made the said will or no, though the plaintiff offered nothing against the said will, but the said letters of administration granted by the said Archbishop of Armagh; whereupon the jury found that the said Edward made no such will; thereupon judgment was given in B. B. for the plaintiff, and the defendant brought a writ of error in B. R. in Ireland, and there the judgment was affirmed; and now she hath brought a writ of error here, and assigns for error, the not allowing of the evidence to be conclusive, as in the bill of exceptions is alledged. And here also judgment was affirmed by the whole Court, because though the evidence be conclusive, yet the jury may hazard an attaint if they please; and the proper way for the defendant had been to have demurred upon the plaintiff's evidence. This question, whether the probate is conclusive, hath been variously allowed; but of later days it hath been adjudged, that nothing can be given in evidence against it, but forgery of it, or its being obtained by surprise.

[406] Authorities, that the evidence is not conclusive.

Trin. 44 E. 3, 16 a. pl. 1. Debt against an administrator. The defendant pleads, that the party made a will, and the defendant and another his executors, and judgment of the writ, and produces the will in Court under the seal of the Ordinary. The plaintiff replies that he died intestate, and the defendant rejoins, that the plaintiff ought not to be admitted to aver that against the seal of the Ordinary; but non allocatur.

Testament 4. Mich. 34 H. 6, 14 b. pl. 26. By Prisot, a testament may be disproved by the law of the Church; as if H. makes two testaments and dies, the first testament is proved, and afterwards the second testament, which is the last will, is found, and another named executor, in this case this last testament now shall be proved, and the other shall be void. If the first executor bring an action as executor, the defendant may well avoid it by special matter. Mich. 21 E. 4, 50 a. pl. 9, by Choke and Catesby, where executors are plaintiffs, the defendant may say that the testator did not make them his executors, but such an one, and the issue shall be taken upon the matter in fact, and upon the probate of the testament, for they might forge a testament; so in administration the issue shall not be taken on the letters of the bishop, but on the matter in fait, viz. that the Ordinary did not commit to them the administration by his letters. Bro. Record 28. A testament is not matter of record at the common law, notwithstanding the probate, for H. may deny the making of the parties executors, and try it per patriam. Rast. Ent. 325. Several pleas that the testator did not make the plaintiffs executors, and issue upon them. Plow. 282 a. The seal of the Ordinary put to the administration is but matter in fait, which is not any estoppel for the time, nor shall enforce the executor to sue in the Spiritual Court to repeal it; but he shall avoid this by plea, or by taking the goods of the administrator, or by any matter in fait, as occasion ministers. Dyer 294 b. pl. 7. Issue was joined, if the Bishop of London hath committed administration, it shall be tried by the country. On the contrary, that the probate is not [407] traversable; and so is the law at this day, Roll. 1 Rep. 226, Trin. 13 Jac. B. R. debt by an executor, he shews the will to the Court proved by sentence. The testator pleads the defendant died intestate, and that the administration was committed to him, and shews an appeal of the said sentence of the probate of the will. And by Coke, Dodderidge and Houghton it is not a good plea, because if it should, no executor should have an action during such appeal, which would be a grand prejudice.

Memorandum, 3 December 1680. At one o'clock in the morning died Sir William Ellys, Knt. one of the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas, at his chamber in Serjeants-Inn in Fleet-street, grandævus senectute, viz. ætat. 71.

Upon the trial of the Lord Viscount Stafford, who was impeached by the House of Commons of high treason, the case fell out to be, that his charge was, that he hired persons to kill the King. And upon the evidence it appeared, that Stephen Dugdale swore, that the prisoner proffered him 500l. to do it; and Oates another witness swore, that the prisoner received a commission to be pay-master to an army to be raised by the Roman Catholicks; and Turbervile swore, that another five or six years before time, the prisoner at Paris proffered him a good reward to kill the King. And upon this evidence, the question was put to all the Judges then attending (who were all there, but Scrogs Chief Justice, and Ellys, who was lately dead) whether this was sufficient evidence for convicting the offender by the statute of 1 E. 6, cap 12, and 5 E. 6, cap. 11, which requires two witnesses for convicting of a traitor, and for finding an indictment; and here is but one witness to each fact. And after conference between themselves, all the Judges delivered their opinions seriatim, beginning with the Lord Chief Justice North; that when the prisoner is charged with the offence of killing the King, and the evidence is, that he at several times laboured it, and by several ways, and to each particular time and fact there is but one witness, and yet every of the said facts conduces directly to the effecting and perpetration of the fact and treason charged upon the prisoner, such evidence is sufficient within the statute. But otherwise it had been if the facts had been tending to another several treason; and the reason given why such evidence was good, was because otherwise it would be a most difficult thing, and almost [408] impossible to convict any one of high treason for compassing the death of the King, for such compassings are seldom acted in the presence of two witnesses at one time present. And upon this occasion my Lord Chancellor in the Lords House was pleased to communicate a notion concerning the reason of two witnesses in treason, which he said was not very familiar he believed; and it was this, anciently all or most of the Judges were churchmen and ecclesiastical persons, and by the canon law now, and then in use all over the Christian world, none can be condemned of heresy but by two lawful and credible witnesses; and bare words may make a heretick, but not a traitor, and antiently heresy was treason; and from thence the Parliament thought fit to appoint, that two witnesses ought to be for proof of high treason.

In the same trial of the said viscount, after the Lords had seriatim voted (whereof thirty-two acquitted, and fifty-four condemned him) he moved in arrest of judgment, that every person arraigned ought by the law to hold up his hand at the Bar, which he did not, nor ever was demanded so to do; and thereupon the opinion of all the Judges was asked, who unanimously answered, that that ceremony was only for the making known the person of the offender to the Court, and if he answers that he is the same person, 'tis all one; and so it falls out sometimes in the circuits, that some will not hold up their hand, and yet have been condemned; and judgment of high treason was given against the prisoner on Tuesday the 7th of December 1680, by the Lord Chancellor Finch, who was high steward pro tempore.

JOHN STEAD versus ELIZABETH BERRIER, WIDOW. ERROR OUT OF C. B.

Devise. 2 Danv. Abr. 534, p. 10. 1 Vent. 341. 2 Lev. 243. 2 Jones 135. Pollexf. 546. 1 Mod. 267. 2 Mod. 313. 3 Keb. 845. 2 Show. 63.

Ejectment of the demise of Thomas Stead and Judith his wife, and Richard Stockdale and Mary his wife for five years. Upon not guilty pleaded, the jury find a special verdict,

That Robert Berrier of Kingston upon Hull was seised of the lands in question in fee, and had issue William his eldest son, and Robert his younger, and 29 October 1669 made his will in writing, and thereby devised in these words, [409] I devise and give to my son Robert Berrier and his heirs for ever, all that my farm &c. being the lands in question, &c. inter alia. Item, I give and bequeath unto my grandchild Robert Berrier 100*l.*

26 December 1669. Robert Berrier the son of the testator died (the testator living) leaving issue Robert Berrier his son and heir.

Robert Berrier the grandfather 26 March 1671 made a codicil to be annexed to his said will in these words,

And also I the aforesaid Robert Berrier do give and bequeath unto my grandchild Judith Berrier, and her heirs for ever, more than I have formerly given by this my last will and testament, a little close, &c. This I will shall be added as a codicil, and taken as part of my last will and testament.

The tenements by the said codicil devised are ten acres of meadow, and ten acres in Fithing, part of the tenements devised by the said Robert the grandfather to Robert the father.

The tenements in the declaration are the tenements devised by the will to Robert the father.

16 May 1671. Robert the grandfather did republish his last will, and by parol, and without any writing, animo testandi did declare, that the said Robert Berrier the grandson by the same will should take and have as the said Robert Berrier his father might take and have.

1 March 1672. Robert the grandfather died, and Robert the grandson him survived, and entered into the said premisses, and became seised prout lex postulat.

William Berrier eldest son of the said Robert the grandfather, 25 September 1646, died, leaving issue Judith and Mary the lessors of the plaintiff, whose husbands in their right entered on the possession of the said Robert the grandson, and made the lease to the plaintiff. Et si, &c.

Judgment was given in C. B. for the defendant, and the plaintiff brings his writ of error, and assigns the general error. And by Scrogs Chief Justice, Jones and myself, judgment was reversed, but Dolben Justice contra. We had all prepared to deliver our opinions openly in Court, but in regard my Lord Chief Justice had business of his own in the Lords House, he desired that he might deliver the sense of the Court without any argument; I was prepared with this to say for my opinion, viz.

[410] 1. I do not find at the Bar any objection to the want of finding a good title for the plaintiff in this verdict, as was objected in C. B. viz. that it is not found that Judith and Mary wives of the lessors of the plaintiff are granddaughters and heirs to the testator; neither do I find any ground for the objection; for it is found that Robert Berrier the testator had issue William, primogenitum filium suum, and also Robert father of the defendant his younger, and that William died in the lifetime of the testator, leaving issue the said women, whereby in a special verdict it must be necessarily intended, that they are heirs at law to the testator.

In this case there have been two points in question, both tending to the making good a title to the defendant.

1. Whether the new publication of 16 May 1671, whereby the testator did declare that Robert Berrier the grandson by the same will should take and have, as the said Robert Berrier his father might take and have, did pass any estate to Robert the grandson?

2. If that point fail for the defendant, then, whether by the words of the will, I devise and give to my son Robert Berrier and his heirs for ever, Robert the grandson can take?

I hold in both points for the plaintiff in the action, and that the judgment (with all due reverence and respect to the persons and Court that gave it) ought to be reversed.

As to the first point, I cannot distinguish it from the third point in Bret and Rigden's case, Plowden 345 b. The words there were, That Thomas Bret the son should be heir to Giles (the devisor) and that he should have all the lands which his father by the will should have, if he had lived; and here the words are, That Robert Berrier the grandson shall take and have as his father might take and have. It not being in writing cannot pass any thing, by reason of the statutes which appoint land to pass by will in writing. And so were Gawdy and Clench's opinions in Fuller and Fuller's case, 3 Cro. 423. But this point seems to be agreed with me at the Bar, and therefore I shall not insist upon it farther.

As to the second point. Constructions of wills ought to be collected out of the words, and not dehors, or by averment, as 5 Co. 68, Chenye's case; and therefore 39 Eliz. Challoner versus Bowyer, 2 Leon. 70, pl. 94, William Bowyer had two sons, and devised his land to his younger son in tail, [411] the remainder to the heirs of the body of his eldest son, the remainder to his daughters in tail; William Bowyer dies, the younger son dies without issue, living the eldest son; and in an assise, the tenant produced witnesses to swear that the devisor declared, that as long as his eldest son had issue of his body, the daughters should not have the land; but the Court utterly rejected the evidence; and indeed were it otherwise, no man could advise his client, or know the certainty of any will; for if contrary to, or otherwise than what appears written might be averred, one will would appear in writing, and quite another upon evidence.

Which being so, it necessarily follows, that the parol declaration is out of doors in this will, and it is not at all to be taken notice of.

Then the words on which the defendant must rely for his title are,

I give to my son Robert and his heirs, by which the defendant must take either as heir to his father, or as son to his grandfather.

The first he cannot, by Bret and Rigden's case, in the second point there, because the words (heirs) is but to shew the quantity of the estate given, and to make them persons to take immediately by the will.

He cannot take as son, for these reasons.

1. The word son is never taken for grandson, no more than child is taken for grandchild. 3 Cro. 357, Brown versus Pease. Warner seised in fee of two manors, Warners and Churchall, devises Warners to the eldest son of his cousin Richard Foster in fee, and he devised the manor of Churchall to Margaret Waters for life, the remainder to such of his cousin Foster's children as shall be then alive and owner of Warners. Resolved, if such son be dead, when Waters dies, the grandchild of Richard Foster shall not take; the reason is given, because out of the words child and grandchild are different persons.

2. The words (son) and (grandson) are discriminating words in all instruments, and in this very will, for he gives the land to his son, and 100l. legacy to his grandson.

3. By the same reason, the son of the grandson may take; and it appears not whether this Robert had a son named Robert.

4. It was not the intent of the devisor (as expressed in the will) that the grandson should take, for he makes him a distinct legatee.

[412] 5. The inconvenience which would ensue, should the word (son) be so taken; no certain construction could be made, for so godson, great-grandson, son-in-law, &c. may take, and no body can guess whom the testator meant. The same mischief would happen, as by an averment beforementioned.

Had the defendant been called frequently by the testator in his life-time, his son, he had been capable to take by that name; as an illegitimate son may take by the name of the reputed father, after he hath acquired a certain name by reputation.

But it is not found in the whole record, that the testator knew of the death of his son Robert. True it is, that the parol declaration disposes to the defendant what was given to his father, but that may be as well for other reasons as for death.

Object. The new publication is as if the will were new writ over again.

Resp. I grant it. But then if the words are the same, there will no more pass than by the first writing.

If he had devised to Robert Berrier (without addition) or to my heir Robert (if the truth were, that his heir at his death proved to be Robert) this new publication would have made the will have passed the lands, because the words would have agreed with the person of the devisee, as in Beckford and Parncot's case, 3 Cro. 493. Parsons seised of lands in Aldworth devised all his lands there to his daughters Barbara and Joan, and then purchases more, and then new publishes his will. Resolved, the new purchased lands passed, because sufficient words; so is Bret and Rigden's case in the second point there.

Object. By the record it appears, that the devisor intended to pass the land to his grandson the defendant.

Resp. The intent appears not by the will. 2. That intent was not according to law, and the intent must be subservient to the rules of law, and not e contra, as Counden and Clark's case is, and many cases might be cited on that head. And 3dly, wills must have an apparent intent, when they disinherit an heir. 1 Cro. 369, Sprit versus Bence.

As to the lease made by two copartners and their husbands, vide Moor 682, pl. 929. Millener versus Robinson, Noy 13. 2 Cro. 83, Jurdain versus Steer 166. Mantle versus Wollington. It seems good enough after a verdict; and judgment was reversed.

[413] HARRISON versus BELSEY. KANC. EJECTMENT.

Remainder. 1 Vent. 345. 2 Jon. 136. 2 Show. 91. Pollexf. 573.

John Pepper seised in fee, by lease and release for 100l. conveys the lands in question, to the use of Paul Barret sen. and Sarah Barret his daughter, for their lives, the remainder to the use of the first, and every other sons of Sarah in tail male, the remainder to the use of her daughters equally to be divided in tail male, the remainder to the use of the right heirs of Paul. Sarah by deed gives, grants, remises and releases all her right and estate to the said Paul and his heirs, to the use of him and his heirs. Sarah marries Samuel Hall, and hath issue Samuel Hall lessor of the plaintiff. Paul Barret by indenture 22 May 28 Car. 2, covenants to stand seised to the use of himself for life, the remainder to Sarah Norwood his grandchild for her life, the remainder to Paul and Thomas Norwood his grandchilden, and their heirs. Paul dies.

The sole question of this case is, whether the remainder limited to Samuel Hall lessor of the plaintiff, as first son of Sarah, be destroyed by Sarah's release?

And I conceive it is not, and that judgment ought to be given for the plaintiff.

1. It cannot be denied by the other side, but that Paul Barret and Sarah were joint-tenants for their lives, and that the estate in fee-simple is not executed in Paul Barret. Coke upon Littleton 182 a.

For though a discent or any other subsequent conveyance will destroy the jointure, as Westcot's case is, 2 Co. 60, yet till then they remain joint-tenants.

Coke upon Littleton 273. Two coparceners of a rent, and one marries the tertenant, the other may release to her that was married.

'Tis requisite for the execution of all contingent remainders, that the particular estate do continue the same it was at the time of the creation thereof, when the use comes in esse; for it must vest either during the particular estate, or at least eo instante that the particular estate determines. 1 Co. 66, Archer's case.

3. This release doth not alter the estate. 1 Coke upon Littleton 273. Such a release is no alienation, Winch 63, Wase versus Pretty. By Winch Justice, and Hobart, if land be given to two upon condition, that they shall not alien, and [414] one releases to the other, it is no breach of the condition. 2. It makes no degree, for the relessee is in by the lessor. Coke upon Littleton 184.

And though the remainder did before depend upon an estate for two lives, and now but on one, that one is the same estate in quality, though not in quantity.

Fitz. Aid 77. Tenants in special tail recover in assize, and afterwards one dies without issue, and the other being tenant in tail after possibility, is redisseised, he shall have a redisseisin, because it is the same freehold which he had before, and is part of the estate-tail.

I conceive the case of a condition of accruer is a stronger case; there the estate on which the condition is to grow must continue the same. And yet 8 Co. 75 b. If a man grant land to another and his heirs on the body of his wife, with such a condition, and the wife dies without issue, yet he may perform the condition.

4. The intent of the parties (which is observable in all acts, and especially in the disposition of estates) was only to transfer Sarah's estate to Paul, and not to deprive her children, she being but tenant for life.

Her acts shall be construed with as much strictness as the rules of law will permit. Judgment was given for the plaintiff by Scrogs Chief Justice, Jones and myself: but my brother Dolben was for the defendant, but had not opportunity to shew his reasons, because my Lord Chief Justice desired that he might deliver all our opinions shortly.

OSBORN versus WANDEL.

Trespass.

Trespass upon the statute of 1 R. 3, cap. 3, for taking the plaintiff's goods (being arrested for suspicion of felony) before conviction, and declares of seizing a certain parcel of money; and after verdict for the plaintiff, Stanhope moved in arrest of judgment, because the words of the statute are, that none shall seize the (goods) of any person, &c. and money is not goods, Fitz. Brief 512. But adjudged for the plaintiff, and that money is goods; and that case is only the opinion of Finchden.

[415] VALENTINE JOYNER versus SIR ROBERT VYNER.
ERROR IN C. B. LONDON.

Intr. Pasch. 32 Car. 2.

Award.

Debt upon a bond against the defendant as son and heir of Christopher Joyner. The defendant demands oyer of the condition, which is, whereas the above-bound Christopher Joyner did 4 December 1665 leave with Henry Lewys, then servant to the above-named Sir Robert Vyner, a bill of exchange of the sum of 61*l.* 14*s.* 4*d. payable by Richard Fuller late of London merchant, deceased, and upon leaving the said bill the said Christopher Joyner had credit in his account with the said Sir Robert Vyner for the said sum of* 61*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.* And whereas the said Henry Lewys doth aver that the said sum of 61l. 14s. 4d. was not paid to the said Sir Robert Vyner, or any other person for his use, the condition therefore of this obligation is such, that if the said Christopher Joyner shall not, before the 10*th of November next the date above-written, legally and sufficiently prove, that the said sum of* 61*l.* 14*s.* 4*d. was paid to the said Sir Robert Vyner, or to his use, then if the said Christopher Joyner, his heirs, executors, administrators or assigns do well and truly pay or cause to be paid to the said Sir Robert Vyner, his executors or assigns upon the said* 10*th of November the said sum of* 61*l.* 14*s.* 4*d. and all interest at* 6*l. per* 100*l. per annum accrewing for the said money, from the said* 4*th day of December* 1665, until the payment thereof, that then this obligation to be void. Quibus lectis & auditis, the defendant pleads, that the said Christopher Joyner his father, after the making of the said bond, and before the said 10th of November viz. 20 May 24 Car. 2, died. The plaintiff demurs; and adjudged by the whole Court for the plaintiff; for there is a difference where the condition contains a duty vested in the obligee, and where it is only a collateral act; for in the first case the executors are bound to perform it; and so the obligor forfeits his obligation if it be not performed. 3 Cro. 10. Kingwell versus Knapman, 2 Leon. 155. Debt upon an obligation, conditioned, that whereas there were divers controversies between the plaintiff and the brother of the defendant, and they submitted themselves to the [416] arbitrement of one Coxin. Now if the said brother perform the award, then, &c. The defendant pleads that the arbitrator made an award that the brother should pay 30l. viz. 20l. at Easter, and 10l. at Michaelmas, and that he paid the 20l. but before Michaelmas he died; and adjudged for the plaintiff, because the sum awarded was become a duty; but otherwise where no duty, as to make a feoffment, or to prove an allegation in a bill of equity. Dyer 262 a. pl. 30, Arundel versus Comb.

DOROTHY LEE, ADMINISTRATRIX OF WILLIAM LEE HER HUSBAND, against CHARLES GARRET AND MARY HIS WIFE, EXECUTRIX OF FRANCES AMBLER. MIDD.

Debt. 2 Show. 143.

Debt upon an obligation of 600l. dat. 11 Aug. 1657, the condition whereof (upon oyer demanded) is, that whereas a marriage hath been lately had between the above-named William Lee and Mary daughter of the above-bound Frances Ambler; if now the heirs, executors, administrators or assigns of the said Frances Ambler do and shall well and truly pay or cause to be paid unto the said William Lee, his executors, administrators or assigns the full and whole sum of 300*l. within two months next after the death of the said Frances Ambler, if the said Mary, or any issue of her body by William shall be living at the death of the said Frances. Then, &c.* The defendant pleads, that 1 January 29 Car. 2, the said William Lee died intestate, and the said Frances Ambler him survived; and 15 Febr. 31 Car. 2, died, and that the said Mary the wife of William Lee died before the said Frances, leaving the said Mary wife of the defendant.

That at the death of the said Frances, nor any time within two months next after the death of the said Frances, there was no executor or administrator of the said William Lee, nor any person appointed on the behalf of the said William Lee, to have or to receive the said 300l. in the said condition mentioned, nor to whom the same could be paid according to the form of the said condition; and that administration of his goods and chattels was not granted within one year next after the death of the said Frances. The plaintiff demurs generally; and adjudged for the plaintiff, because the money being a duty, the defendant ought to have pleaded, uncore prist, &c.

[417] ATTORNEY GENERAL versus BLOOD, CHRISTIAN & AL. MIDD.

Conspiracy. 2 Show. 114.

An information for conspiring to indict the Duke of Buckingham of buggery of a boy called Nemar. Upon not guilty pleaded, they were tried at the Bar in Trinity-term last, and found guilty. And Saunders moved in arrest of judgment.

1. That the writ of venire facias was probos & legales homines, whereas it ought to have been liberos & legales homines, for there is a difference between probus, liber & legalis, for legalis is he who is not outlawed, and against whom no exception can be taken in this behalf. Probus is not taken notice of in law. Liber homo is not only one that hath freehold land, but that hath freedom of mind, and stands indifferent, no more inclining to the one than to the other, Coke upon Littleton 155 b. but probus extends not so far.

2. The writ is quorum quilibet may expend 20l. in lands; and yet the statute of 16 & 17 Car. 2, cap. 3, is expired; and the defendant may be kept in durance and imprisonment for default of jurors of that value; and the statutes of 35 H. 8, cap. 6, and 27 Eliz. cap. 6, prescribe a certain form for the writ; and though those statutes of themselves extend not to pleas of the Crown, yet the statute of 4 & 5 Ph. & Mar. cap. 7 directs the statute of 35 H. 8 to extend to such cases; and the form being prescribed, ought not to be varied from, 1 Roll. Abr. 803 n. pl. 4, Ludlow versus Edgworth. Scire for sciri, resolved not good; and pl. 5, quorum quilibet had 4l. in an Inferior Court; judgment was reversed for that cause. And here no Statute of Jeofails helps, because an information for the King.

Pollexfen for the Attorney-General. 1. Probos & liberos are of one sense; and the statute doth not tie the writ to the very words; and there are multitudes of precedents, which are thus.

2. 'Tis for the advantage of the defendant to have a substantial jury, 2 Cro. 672, Philpot versus Feeler, 3 Cro. 257, Morris versus Thomas. And before the statutes it was, and now is in the power of the Court to award a ven. fac. of what larger sum they please.

[418] And the Chief Justice, and the other two justices were clear, that the writ was good for the reasons alledged by Pollexfen; and so was I as to the first exception; but I was not, nor yet am satisfied as to the second exception; for if it shall be in the power of the Court to put what sum they please in the venire fac. the defendant being in prison may be there detained for want of jurors of that value; but judgment was given against the defendant Christian, (for Blood was dead) and one more, viz. that Christian should stand in the pillory an hour at Charing-Cross, between ten and twelve, and pay one hundred marks, and lie in prison till he paid it. The other was fined twenty marks, and awarded to the pillory.

GRAY versus DAY.

Case. 1 Danv. Ab. 211, p. 18. 2 Jon. 132. 2 Show. 144.

An action upon the case. The plaintiff declares, that he being church-warden of such a parish, and having given an account at the end of his year to his successor, and the parishioners; the defendant falsly and maliciously cited him into the Ecclesiastical Court to render an account, and there at the defendant's request the Judge excommunicated the plaintiff for not rendering an account. Upon not guilty pleaded, and verdict for the plaintiff, Saunders moved in arrest of judgment, because the sentence was given by the Judge, and so he and the Court were to blame, and not the defendant. But resolved the action lies; and judgment was given for the plaintiff; and in this case for the plaintiff were cited 1 Cro. 291. Carlion versus Mill, 2 Cro. 667. Steer versus Scoble, 355. Weald versus Pease, 3 Cro. 574. Willis versus Stroud, Jones 312. 1 Roll. ANNE CROUCHE versus FASTOLFE. LONDON.

[See Haldane v. Johnson, 1853, 8 Ex. 694.]

Rent.

Debt for rent upon a lease for years, by indenture, of a messuage in Redrith in Surrey. The defendant pleads, that upon Christmas-Day (being the quarter-day for which the rent is demanded in the declaration) he was at the said messuage by the space of an hour before sun-rising until sun-setting, of the same day, ready to pay the said rent, and that neither the plaintiff nor any other on her be-[419]-half came or was ready there to receive it; and that he always since the said day hath been, and yet is ready to pay the same, & denar. ill. idem Johannes hic in Cur. profert parat. fore solvend. præfat. Annæ, si eadem Anna illos de eodem Johanne recipere velit. Et hoc, &c. And upon this the plaintiff demurs, because the defendant hath not alledged a tender on the day, but only that he was there ready to pay the rent. But resolved it is well enough; and adjudged for the defendant. 14 E. 4, 4. 22 H. 6, 57. 21 E. 4, 6. 7 Co. Maund's case. Hob. 207, Crawley versus Kingswell. Winch Intr. 1032. 1 Cro. 76. 3 Cro. 828. 1 Leon. 71, pl. 95, Bret versus Audar. And tender needs not; but otherwise where there is a condition, the breach whereof is to be saved.

[420] TERM. HILL. 32 & 33 CAR. 2, B. R.

LEESON versus DOVER. LONDON. TRIN. 32 CAR. 2.

Condition.

Debt upon a bond of 600l. dat. 19 Junii 27 Car. 2. The defendant demands oyer of the condition, which is, whereas there hath been a marriage lately solemnized between the above-named John Leeson and Anne Dover, daughter of the above-bound John Dover, and that the said John Dover did promise to pay the sum of 500l. as the marriage portion of the said Anne to the said John Leeson, 200l. of which said sum hath been paid accordingly by the above-bound John Dover. Now if the above-bound John Dover shall and do well and truly pay or cause to be paid the due interest of 300l. yearly, and every year, being 18l. unto the above-named John Leeson at two times or feasts in the year by equal portions, that is to say, 9l. upon the Feast of St. Thomas the Apostle next ensuing, and the other 9l. upon the Feast of St. John the Baptist, which shall be in the year of our Lord 1676. And it is farther the condition of this obligation, that the above-bound John Dover shall retain the principal money, being 300l. as aforesaid, in his hand, for the use of the said Anne, until such time as the said John Leeson shall settle, or cause to be settled, upon the said Anne, a jointure equal in value to the said sum of 300l. and then, that the above-bound John Dover shall upon half a year's notice thereof pay the said sum to the said John Leeson, to be to his own proper use for ever; all which the above-bound John Dover shall well and truly perform and keep; then this obligation to be void. Quibus lectis & auditis, the defendant pleads, actio non, for that he paid the said John Leeson 9l. on St. Thomas's Day next following the date of the said obligation, and the other 9l. on St. John Baptist's Day 1676, according to the form of the condition. That he retained the said sum of 300l. for the use of the said Anne Leeson till the [421] plaintiff should settle a jointure, which he hath not yet done. The plaintiff demurs, because the defendant doth not plead payment of interest for the said 300l. after the first year; and it was adjudged for the plaintiff by the whole Court, (except Scrogs Chief Justice who was absent) for that upon the whole condition it appears, that the intent of both parties was, that interest should be paid for the 300l. for these reasons.

1. By the preamble of the condition it appears, that 500l. was to be the marriage portion of Anne, and that the plaintiff was to have it without respect to the making of a jointure.

2. The words are, that the defendant shall pay due interest for the 3000l. yearly, and every year, which must necessarily extend beyond one year.

3. The principal was to be retained till settlement, which implies that he was to pay interest: for principal and interest are relatives.

LAMBERT & OLLIOT versus BESSEY. ERROR. C. B. PASCH. 31 CAR. 2, ROT. 382. NORFF.

Imprisonment. 2 Jon. 214. Skin. 49. Postea 467.

Trespass and false imprisonment. The plaintiff declares, that the defendants Lambert and Olliot simul cum Bowles Ringall, Barloe and Woodcroft, 1 April 29 Car. 2, vi & armis did take and imprison the plaintiff Bessey, and him did evil intreat at Worstead, and so in prison did him from thence to Aylesham lead, and there for the space of three weeks did detain, till he paid them 7s. 4d. Et alia enormia, &c. ad damnum 100*l.* The defendant Lambert pleads not guilty, and after issue joined, the plaintiff enters a nolle prosequi as to Lambert. The defendant Olliot, as to all but the imprisonment pleads not guilty; and as to the imprisonment at Aylesham for three weeks, he says, that 12 Febr. in Hillary-term 28 & 22 Car. 2, there issued out a writ of non omittas out of the Court of C. B. against one Stephen Green, and against the plaintiff, and one Thomas Palmer, at the suit of Sir John Hobart Baronet, directed to the Sheriff of Norfolk, by which said writ the King commanded the said sheriff that he should take the said parties, and have their bodies at Westminster before the Justices of C. B. mense Pasch. then next following, to answer the said [422] Sir John Hobart in a plea of trespass quare clausum fregit, and a debt of 200l. which said writ the said Sir John Hobart, 21 March 29 Car. 2, delivered to the then Sheriff of Norfolk to be executed, by virtue whereof, and to the intent the said writ might be executed, the said sheriff made a warrant to the bailiff of the liberty of the Duke of Norfolk in the said county, who then had, and yet hath execution of all writs within the said liberty, and return thereof, infra quam executio istius brevis totaliter restabat faciend. pro eo quod nulla alia executio inde alibi extra libertat. præd. infra ballivam suam fieri potuit, which said warrant the said Sir John Hobart delivered to Arthur Onslow, Esq; then bailiff of the said liberty 28 March 29 Car. 2, to be executed; by virtue whereof the said Arthur Onslow made a warrant the same day to the said William Woodcroft and Samuel Bowles his deputy bailiffs, to take the said Bessey, &c. by virtue whereof the said Woodcroft and Bowles, 1 April 29 Car. 2, took the said Bessey and carried him to Aylesham, and delivered him over to the said Simon Olliot then keeper of the prison of the bailiff of the liberty aforesaid, at Aylesham aforesaid; by virtue whereof the said defendant took him the said Bessey and detained him by the space aforesaid, prout ei bene licuit, quæ fuit eadem imprisonamenta, &c. Et hoc, &c. unde, &c. The plaintiff replies, that the defendant

Olliot imprisoned him de injuria sua propria, absque hoc, that the said Woodcroft and Bowles did take the plaintiff within the said liberty of the said Duke of Norfolk. The defendant demurs, and shews for cause, that the plaintiff traverses a matter not traversable; and judgment was given in the Common Pleas for the plaintiff, and damages 100l. and the defendant brought a writ of error; and I conceive judgment ought to be affirmed.

1. In all civil acts the law doth not so much regard the intent of the actor, as the loss and damage of the party suffering; and therefore Mich. 6 E. 4, 7 a. pl. 18, trespass quare vi & armis clausum fregit, & herbam suam pedibus conculcando consumpsit in six acres. The defendant pleads, that he hath an acre lying next the said six acres, and upon it a hedge of thorns, and he cut the thorns, and they ipso invito fell upon the plaintiff's land, and the defendant took them off as soon as he could, which is the same trespass; and the plaintiff demurred; and adjudged for the plaintiff; for though a man doth a lawful thing, yet if any damage do hereby befal another, he shall answer it, if he could have avoided it. As if [423] a man lop a tree, and the boughs fall upon another ipso invito, yet an action lies. If a man shoot at buts, and hurt another unawares, an action lies. I have land through which a river runs to your mill, and I lop the sallows growing upon the river side, which accidentally stop the water, so as your mill is hindered, an action lies. If I am building my own house, and a piece of timber falls on my neighbour's house and breaks part of it, an action lies. If a man assault me, and I lift up my staff to defend myself, and in lifting it up hit another, an action lies by that person, and yet I did a lawful thing. And the reason of all these cases is, because he that is damaged ought to be recompensed. But otherwise it is in criminal cases, for there, actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea.

Mich. 23 Car. 1, B. R. Stile. 72, Guilbert versus Stone. Trespass for entering his close, and taking away his horse. The defendant pleads, that he for fear of his life by threats of twelve men, went into the plaintiff's house and took the horse. The plaintiff demurred; and adjudged for the plaintiff, because threats could not excuse the defendant, and makes satisfaction to the plaintiff.

Hob. 134, Weaver versus Ward. Trespass of assault and battery. The defendant pleads, that he was a trained soldier in London, and he and the plaintiff were skirmishing with their company, and the defendant with his musket casualiter, & per infortunium & contra voluntatem suam in discharging of his gun hurt the plaintiff; and resolved no good plea. So here, though the defendant knew not of the wrongful taking of the plaintiff, yet that will not make any recompense for the wrong the plaintiff hath sustained.

2. The defendant here suffers no wrong but by his own act and will, for he was not compellable to be gaoler. And when a man takes an office, it is presumed he knows of all the conveniencies and inconveniencies which attend it. And in this, as in all other contracts, he must take the bad with the good.

3. As the gaols of the counties are incident to the office of the sheriff, 4 Co. 34 a. so the gaols of liberties are incident to the lord of the liberty. And the gaoler is but servant to him, as the gaoler of the county gaol is to the sheriff, and consequently they understand one another, and are privy to each other's acts relating to the prisoners, in presumption of law.

[424] Object. By this way a subsequent sheriff may be answerable for the tort of his predecessor.

Resp. So he must, as it hath been resolved, for the reason before alledged.

2 Cro. 379, Wythers versus Henly. Trespass and false imprisonment, and detaining him for a month. The defendant justifies by virtue of a process out of the Exchequer, directed to the defendant's predecessor, who took him by it, and also by virtue of a latitat; and so the plaintiff was delivered over to the defendant. The plaintiff replies as to the Exchequer process, there was a supersedeas, and that the predecessor detained him after the supersedeas delivered; and as to the latitat, that the plaintiff in that action ordered the defendant's predecessor to discharge the now plaintiff. And upon this plea the defendant demurred; and adjudged for the plaintiff, because this detaining by the now defendant is quasi a new taking. And the subsequent sheriff is bound to take conusance of the acts of his predecessor. And it is usual in other cases for one man to answer for the acts of another.

5 Co. 100 b. Penruddock's case. Quod permittat against a feoffee for a nusance erected by his feoffor.

2 Cro. 373. Rippon versus Bowles, 1 Roll. Rep. 222. If I have a way over the land of J. S. who stopt it, and then let it to J. D. for years, I may have an action against the lessee, and notice is not material. 3 Cro. 918, Prince versus Allington.

4. The inconvenience which would otherwise fall out; for the defendant should be thus imprisoned, and have no remedy for the wrong, for the bailiff may be dead, or the arrest might be by a deputy, or person insolvent; and no inconvenience on the other side, for he may take security that he shall be charged with no prisoners, but what shall be legally committed.

[425] HINCHCLIFFE AND A GREAT MANY OTHERS against THE LADY BEAUMONT. EBOR.

Prohibition.

The Lady Beaumont libels in the Ecclesiastical Court of the Archbishop of York against Hinchcliffe, and a very great many others named in a schedule affixed to the said libel, and derives her title to the tithes of Criglinton, a vill within the parish of Sandal, under a grant from the Crown of the appropriation of Sandal Magna. The inhabitants pray a prohibition, and join in a suggestion of a modus, to pay for all tithe hay 16s. 6d. and so much for a cow, and so much for a calf, to the Vicar of Sandal Magna; and it appearing plainly that the plaintiff in the Ecclesiastical Court ought to be prohibited, the great question was, whether they may have one writ of prohibition, or whether they ought to sever, and have several writs? And upon examination of the cases of Yelverton 128, Burges and Dixon versus Ashton. Noy 131. 1 Leon. 286, pl. 388, Sir Guilbert Gerard versus Shering. Owen 13, Bartue's case, and 106, Worseley versus Charnocke, and 3 Cro. 472, the case of an audita querela. We resolved the parties should bring several writs; for so had been the course of this Court formerly, and therefore we would not alter it, though some of the Judges of the Common Pleas (with whom my brother Dolben had discoursed, as he said) said, we might grant one writ for all.

JOHN WILSON versus DYSON, KIPPING AND DAVENANT. MIDDLESEX.

Devise.

Ejectment of the demise of Francis Kipping. Upon not guilty pleaded, a special verdict finds that Francis Kipping father of Kipping, lessor of the plaintiff, had issue the said Francis Kipping, Thomas one of the defendants, Gerard, Anne, Susan and Elizabeth, and made his will in these words.

I give my wife all that messuage called the White Hart, together without four acres of land called Aplands, in the parish of Tottenham, &c. She out of the rents and profits thereof breeding and educating all my children. Item, I give to my third son, Gerard Kipping, after my wife's decease, all the [426] said premisses, to him and his heirs for ever. Provided always, and upon condition, that my said son Gerard shall pay unto my daughter Elizabeth 100l. within six months after my wife's death, and his age of twenty-one years; and for default of payment thereof accordingly, I give the said premisses to my said daughter Elizabeth and her heirs. And farther, my will and meaning is, that if my said son Gerard happen to die without issue, my daughter Elizabeth's 100l. being first paid, then the remainder of his estate to be divided amongst my sons and daughters, and the survivors of them. And lastly, I make my said wife executrix, to whom I give all the residue of my estate, my debts and legacies being first paid, desiring her to be careful in bringing up my children.

Susan the wife immediately after the death of the devisor entered, and enjoyed the premisses during her life, and educated and maintained the children according to the said will.

Afterwards the said Susan, and Anne one of the daughters, died without issue.

Gerard after the death of his mother entered, and had issue Francis Kipping his only son, and no other issue, and died seised before his age of twenty-one years.

Francis the son of Gerard died before the said Gerard could have attained to the age of twenty-one years without issue.

Charles Dyson, one of the defendants, in the life of the said Gerard married Susan one of the daughters of the said Francis and Susan; and William Davenant married Elizabeth aforesaid.

The 100l. bequeathed to the said Elizabeth was not paid to the said William and Elizabeth, or either of them, by the said Gerard in his life-time, or by the said Francis his only son.

The said Francis Kipping lessor of the plaintiff, and Charles Dyson in the right of his wife, and Thomas Kipping after the death as well of the said Gerard as of the Francis, only son of the said Gerard, and before the said Gerard could have attained to his age of twenty-one years, if he had lived, did equally pay the said 100l. to the said William and Elizabeth, viz. each of them in equal proportion, and that thereupon the said Charles Dyson entered in right of his said wife.

Thomas Kipping and William Davenant in right of his said wife entered into the said three parts.

[427] Francis Kipping lessor of the plaintiff is heir of the said Gerard, and of his said only son Francis, and that after payment and entry last mentioned, he in and upon the possession of the said Charles Dyson, Thomas Kipping and William Davenant did enter, and demised to the plaintiff, upon whose possession the defendants entered; and after several arguments at the Bar, it was adjudged for the defendant; for that Gerard had but an estate-tail, and by the words, If my said son Gerard happen to die without issue, my daughter Elizabeth's 100l. being first paid, then the remainder of his estate to be divided amongst my sons and daughters, and the survivors of them, the testator intended that all his estate in the lands should be divided amongst his sons and daughters, taking out thereof only 100l. for his daughter Elizabeth, which she should have over and above her proportion of the said lands.

BROWN versus CUTTER. EJECTMENT. SPECIAL VERDICT. SURRY.

[See S. C. sub nom. Luxford v. Cheeke, 3 Lev. 125; 2 Show. 152.]

Devise. 2 Show. 152.

John Cheek had issue four sons, Humphry, Robert, Anthony and John, and 6 March 1589, 32 Eliz. made his will in writing thus:

First, I will that my wife shall have and enjoy all my houses, &c. in Thames Ditton during her natural life, if she do not marry; but if she do marry, then I will that my son Humphry shall presently after his mother's marriage enter and enjoy the said premisses, to him and the heirs male of his body, and for default of such issue, to my son Robert and the heirs male of his body, with remainders to his other sons, and so over to strangers.

21 October 1590, John Cheek the testator dies, his wife Isabel enters, and 20 August 1597, dies. Humphry Cheek enters, and hath issue two sons, viz. William his eldest, and Robert his second, lessor of the plaintiff.

14 June 1632, Humphry died seised, and William entered, and became seised prout lex, and had issue John, and Mary wife of Benjamin Cutter the defendant.

14 September 1661, John died without issue before his father.

18 June 1677, William Cheek died seised, Mary entered.

July 1677, Robert Cheek lessor of the plaintiff entered.

[428] And judgment was given for the plaintiff; and our opinions were delivered by my brother Jones. The reasons of my opinion were as follow.

1. The intention of the devisor being the pole-star that ought to guide the Judges in the exposition of all wills, 'tis necessary to consider, what estate the testator intended for his wife by his will. And I am of opinion, that he intended her an estate only durante viduitate, which the Lord Coke says, Co. Lit. 42 a. is in judgment of law an estate for life determinable, and in pleading the grantee shall say that by virtue thereof he was seised for life; which being premised, the question will be, whether by the will she hath an estate durante viduitate? The words whereof are, I will that my wife shall have and enjoy all my houses, lands, &c. during her natural life, if she do not marry; and I do conceive they are so much and no more; for what is an estate during widowhood, but an estate to continue till she doth marry? And such an estate is not tied up to the words, durante viduitate, as exchange, warranty, frankmarriage, frankalmoign, &c. but any description thereof will satisfy; which being so, then the words, But if she do marry after my death, is no more than, in case the estate shall determine, then I will that my son Humphry shall presently enter, &c. by which it is most plain, that here is no contingent remainder, but an estate vested in Humphry to take effect in possession upon the marriage or death of the wife.

2. That the intent of the devisor was such, appears by the limitation; for he intended that the lands should go to his sons, and their issues male, and not to the females, which would not be, if this should be a contingent remainder; and such intention hath been in all ages regarded, in esteeming of issue male. 1 Reg. 21. 21 Interficiam de Achab mingentem ad parietes, Plowd. 305. Now this intention would not be attained without much improbability. 1. Because of the age of the wife, for she had four sons at the time of making this will, and her great-grandson was born within less than forty years afterwards, as appears by the record, and so she could not be very young, and consequently not inclinable to marry. 2. By her marriage she would lose this estate, which for aught appears by the record, was all her subsistence, both which were sufficient restraints of her marrying again without which the testator's intent would not be completed.

Object. It hath been objected, that the meaning of the testator could not have been expressed more plainly for a contingent [429] remainder, that Humphry should have a fee-simple if his wife did not marry.

Resp. It might have been much more plainly expressed, to have said, If she do not marry, living Humphry, then, &c. as Pell and Brown's case was, or by a more large description of all the circumstances of his intention.

Object. By this construction the eldest son would have less power of his estate than the younger, if his mother had survived him, because he could not have made an estate in fee by a recovery.

Resp. That disability arises not from the estate given, but from the collateral accident of the mother's surviving, and so it is in all vested remainders where is a tenant for life in being; and here the mother might have survived all the remainders.

As for authorities, though they cannot be expected in case of a will to be very direct, yet to me these seem pretty apposite, viz.

Moor 486, pl. 686, Holcroft's case, Sir John Holcroft seised in fee, covenants to levy a fine to the use of himself for life, the remainder to his son Sir John for life, until he attempt to alien, and then to Hamlet Holcroft, during the life of Sir John, jun. the remainder to Sir John the younger's first, second, third and fourth sons successively, and the heirs male of their respective bodies, the remainder to the said Hamlet in tail male. Sir John, sen. dies, Sir John, jun. had only one son, who dies, and then Sir John the younger dies. Resolved. 1. That Hamlet had an estate in remainder presently. 2. Though Sir John the younger had but one son, yet the remainder in tail vested in possession in Hamlet after the death of the said Sir John the younger without issue.

2 Cro. 696, Jones 56, Foy versus Hinde. Martin Keilway seised in fee, gives his lands, after his death without issue male, to Henry Keilway in tail male, until he or they make any acts to alter or discontinue this estate-tail, and then to Thomas Keilway and the heirs male of his body, with several remainders over. The devisor dies without issue, Henry enters, Thomas dies leaving issue Richard, Henry levies a fine, Richard enters. It was objected, that Richard could not enter, because the remainder devised to his father was contingent, viz. to arise upon Henry's alteration of the estate, and not before, and then Thomas dying before the contingent happened, the remainder could not vest. But resolved, the remainder to Thomas was not contingent, but an immediate [430] devise, because, should it be contingent, the devisor's intent would be destroyed, which was that every one in remainder, successively, should enjoy the land; and so in the case at Bar; and judgment was given by the whole Court, except Scrogs, Chief Justice, who was absent, and sate not at any time this whole term.

Memorand. 12 February, being the last day of this term, Sir Creswel Levinz, Attorney General, was made serjeant, and gave rings, cujus inscriptio fuit, Regi servire, jura servare. He kept his feast in the hall of Serjeants Inn in Chancery-Lane, where was no nobleman but the Lord Privy Seal, Earl of Anglesey. His coif was put on, and he counted in the Treasury of the Common Pleas, so soon as he was sworn at the Chancery Bar; and the Lord Chief Justice North sent to the Judges of B. R. to be present; but our business would not permit us.

Memorand. 23 March, Sir Richard Weston Knt. Puisne Baron of the Exchequer, died at his house in Chancery-Lane.

Debt upon an obligation, conditioned to pay money upon the plaintiff's delivering over to the defendant some receipts which would effect infallible cures of the pox, and other diseases. The defendant pleads, that the plaintiff did not deliver over the said receipts; which plea upon demurrer was ruled naught, and judgment seemed to be for the plaintiff; and then an exception was started, that the action is brought in Middlesex, and the bond itself, as appears upon the record, is dated in London. And Coke upon Littleton 6 a. The putting of a place for the date of the deed is disadvantageous to the feoffee; for being in general, he may alledge the deed to be made where he will; by which is to be collected, that if the place be added, he cannot alledge it to be made in any other place than where it is alledged. *Et adjournatur. Error.

Error in Boston to reverse a judgment given there upon a scire facias grounded upon a recognizance entered into by the defendant, as bail for one Townsend at the suit of the plaintiff. The Court of Boston do certify not only the judgment upon the scire facias, but also the principal judgment, and all proceedings therein; and resolved good enough, because, if they should certify only the judgment in the scire facias, it could not well be understood by this Court, because in inferior jurisdictions there are not several rolls to enter the judgment for the principal, and another for the scire facias, and another for bails; but all proceedings as well against defendants as against the bail are entered (for the most part) in a book, and never entered at large unless when a writ of error is brought, and then they make up an entire record, and not otherwise; and judgment was affirmed.

Mandamus. Trem. 454.

A mandamus was directed to William Stephens, gent. Mayor of the borough of Saltash in the county of Cornwal to swear Mathew Veal into the place and office of mayor of the said borough being duly elected. ret. die Sabbati prox. post mensem Michaelis. The said Stephens returns thus, viz. quod ante adventum hujus brevis mihi direct.

necnon ante emanationem ejusdem brevis, scilicet, 29 September 32 Car. 2. Ego præd. Williemus Stephens a loco & officio Majoris burgi de Saltash in com. Cornub. præd. amotus fui. Et quidam Andreas [432] Willoughby gen. existen. un. aldermannor' & liberorum burgens. burgi præd. eodem 29 die Septemb. anno supradicto in loco & officio Majoris burgi de Saltash in com. præd. elect. constitutus admiss. & jurat. fuit. Ac deinceps hucusq; fuit & adhuc est major burgi præd. & ratione officii sui a tempore constitutionis & admissionis suæ præd. ad officium illud hucusq; habuisset & modo habet in custodia sua commune sigillum burgi de Saltash præd. ratione cujus ego præd. Willielmus Stephens ipsum præd. Matheum Veal secundum exigentiam brevis præd. jurare seu admittere non potui. And resolved by the whole Court, that this return is insufficient, because it doth not answer the gist of the writ; for by such a return any officer may be kept out, for the party may procure another to be chosen before the party elected can procure a writ; and therefore the defendant ought to have returned, that Veal was never elected, and so Veal might have had an action for his false return; and so the Court awarded a new writ to Stephens to swear and admit the said Veal.

By the Act of 13 & 14 Car. 2, cap. 2, concerning the repairing the highways about London and Westminster, which is now expired, it was enacted, sect. 11. In case any person shall propose to carry away the ashes, dirt, and other filth, for all or any of the places aforesaid, at less rates than the yearly raker or undertaker can or will perform the same, the said commissioners shall have power, and are hereby authorised to contract with such person, and for such term as they shall think fit; the said commissioners by deed poll under their hands and seals did dispose to Windsor Sandys, Esq; the employment of raker, or general undertaker, for cleansing of the streets, lanes and other open passages of each ward and division within the parish of St. Giles in the Fields, and St. Martin in the Fields in Middlesex, for the term of 21 years, of which term eleven years being expired, Windsor Sandys died, and his interest vested in his wife, who not being able to manage the said employment, invited Thomas Row, Esq; to take it from her, and to buy out her interest, which he refused to do, without the consent of the said parishes; and thereupon he addressed himself to them, and acquainted the inhabitants of the said parish of St. Giles in the Fields with it at a general vestry, (whereof Whitcomb was one) who unanimously assented to Row's perfecting an agreement with the widow Sandys, and made an order of vestry for continuance of such their agreement with the said [433] Row, as they had before done with the said Windsor Sandys, and thereupon Row bought the widow Sandys's stock of horses and carts, to the value of 1000l. and entered upon the employment, and afterwards Whitcomb procured another vestry in the said parish, and there obtained an order contrary to the former, viz. that Whitcomb should have the employment, and caused the money raised by virtue of the scavengers rate to be stopped in the scavengers hands; and thereupon Row made application to the justices of the peace at the Quarter-Sessions, who ordered a reference to seven of them, who reported to them as is before-mentioned, and the Court ordered that the money should be brought to the clerk of the peace, and Row to proceed in the said employment, and that the money be paid over to Row. Upon this Whitcomb obtained a certiorari, and removed the order into this Court, and upon opening of it, we were all of opinion, that the order was not good in law, because the justices of peace have nothing to do with contracts; but it seems probable, that the contract and lease made by the commissioners at Scotland-yard was good to Sandys, and went to the widow, and by her might be transferred to Row; but we determined not that point, but referred the business to Sir Robert Sawyer Knight, Attorney General, to end it, if he can, because the way of managing the cleansing the streets by such undertaking hath been very convenient; and we understood that Whitcomb was a man of small ability to carry on an employment of so great charge; and in the mean time the order to remain unquashed.

PHORBES'S CASE.

Error. 3 Danv. Ab. 3, p. 5. 2 Show. 160.

James Phorbes of the City of Gloucester gent. was indicted before the justices of peace in this manner, Civit' Glouc'. ss. memorand' quod ad generalem session' pacis

Upon this conviction, Phorbes brought a writ of error; and although the conviction was very vitious and erroneous, yet it being no judgment a writ of error doth not lie thereof; for the statute of 3 Jac. cap. 4 says, that after proclamation made, and upon every default recorded, the same shall be as sufficient a conviction in law of the said offence, as if upon the same indictment a trial by verdict thereupon had proceeded and been found against him or her and recorded; so that this is no judgment, but the statute gives process upon it for the forfeiture; and the party's remedy is in the Exchequer to quash it there. The faults in the record are, 1. The session is held 13 January 30 Car. 2, and the party is indicted at that sessions for not coming to church from 1 January 30 Car. 2, for six months, which is all but thirteen days after the sessions held, and so impossible. 2. The indictment is per sacramentum bonorum & legalium hominum, but not com' præd', both which were held faults to have quashed the indictment, but not without first conforming, as that statute of 3 Jac. requires; and Phorbes was left to have his remedy in the Exchequer.

[435] HADDOCK'S CASE.

Corporation. 1 Vent. 355. Trem. 523.

Timothy Haddock brought a mandamus directed to the Mayor, Aldermen, Bailiffs and Citizens of the City of Carlisle, to restore him to the place and office of one of the aldermen of the said city, who returns as follows, viz.

That the City of Carlisle is, and time out of mind hath been an ancient city, and that the citizens of the city aforesaid for the time being, time out of mind until 21 July 13 Car. 1, were incorporated in the name of Mayor and Citizens of the City of Carlisle, and that always to that time there were within the said city twelve of the most sufficient citizens of the said city for the time being, who were named consiliarii, alias aldermanni, civitatis præd', and out of which one yearly was duly chosen, and sworn in the office of mayor of the said city for one whole year next following such election, and farther till one other of the twelve counsellors, otherwise aldermen aforesaid, should be chosen and made, and sworn mayor; and that every one of the said counsellors, alias aldermen, after that he should be chosen and sworn into the said office of counsellor, alias alderman, should continue therein during his life, if he should so long well behave himself.

That from time out of mind, till the said first day of July 13 Car. 1, there were, and used to be other thirty-two good and sufficient citizens of the said city e Gilda Mercatoria there chosen, which together with the said other eleven counsellors, alias aldermen, not being mayor, were and used to be the common council of the mayor and citizens of the said city.

That King Charles the First by his letters patent under the Great Seal of England, dated at Canterbury 21 July 13 Car. 1, did will, ordain, constitute and grant, that the said city from thenceforth should be a city of itself, and that the same should be from thenceforth incorporated by the name of Mayor, Aldermen, Bailiffs and Citizens of the said City of Carlisle.

That from thenceforward for ever there should be within the said city, one of the aldermen for the time being, who should be named mayor of the said city, and eleven besides the said mayor, who should be called aldermen, and two others of the said city, which should be called bailiffs, two other discreet men to be chosen, who should be called coroners of the said city, and four and twenty other men which should be called capitales cives of the said city, and should be of the common council, [436] and should be aiding the said mayor, aldermen and bailiffs for the time being.

That the said mayor, aldermen, bailiffs, and 24 capitales cives, or the greater part of them, whereof the mayor to be one, upon publick summons by the said mayor to be made, should in the Guildhall have power to make orders and by-laws for the good government of the city, and to have all amerciaments and forfeitures thereby arising for their own use; and the King appoints Richard Barewise Esq; to be the first mayor, to continue so till Monday next after Michaelmas Day following, and from thence till another out of the said eleven aldermen should be chosen, if he should so long live; and the King likewise appoints eleven others by name to be aldermen, to continue in the said office during their natural lives, unless in the mean time for ill government, or for any reasonable cause by the mayor, aldermen, bailiffs and capitales cives for the time being, or the greater part of them, whereof the mayor to be one, he should be amoved. He also appointed two bailiffs by name to continue till Monday next after Michaelmas, and from thence till others should be chosen, if they should so long live, unless in the mean time they should be amoved for ill government, or any other reasonable cause. In like manner he appointed two coroners by name, and also twenty-four common-council men to continue so during their natural lives, unless amoved for ill government, or for any other reasonable cause by the mayor, aldermen and chief citizens, or the greater part of them.

That the mayor, aldermen, and twenty-four capitales cives, or the greater part of them, without the assistance or help of other citizens might every year on Monday next after Michaelmas Day in the Guildhall, chuse one of the said aldermen to be mayor of the said city; and if the number of the choosers shall be equal, then the mayor to have a double voice.

That the mayor so chosen shall be sworn before his predecessor, if living, and if dead, before the aldermen, or greater part of them in the presence of the aldermen, bailiffs, and twenty-four, or so many of them as shall be present.

That after he shall be so sworn, he shall continue a year, or until another shall be chosen and sworn in his place.

That the said mayor, aldermen, bailiffs, and twenty-four shall on Monday next after Michaelmas Day choose two bailiffs yearly out of the citizens, who shall be sworn before the mayor, and other aldermen, and 24, and shall hold their places a year, and until others shall be chosen and sworn into their places.

[437] That if the mayor shall die within the year, then the aldermen, bailiffs, and twenty-four, or the greater part of them, shall choose one of the aldermen to be mayor, and shall continue so for the residue of the year, and till another shall be chosen, to be sworn before two aldermen; and if any of the said aldermen for the time being shall die, then the mayor and surviving aldermen, or the greater part of them, shall choose others in their places to be sworn before the mayor to continue so during his life.

That if the bailiffs, or either of them shall die, or be amoved within the year, then the mayor, bailiffs, and twenty-four, or the greater part of them, shall choose another out of the citizens of the said city, to continue during the residue of the said year; and if any of the twenty-four shall die, or be amoved, then the mayor and aldermen, or the greater part of them, shall choose others de magis probis & discretis civibus into his place. The King also granted that the said mayor, aldermen, bailiffs and citizens should have a recorder, and named one to continue during the pleasure of the mayor, aldermen, &c. prout per literas patentes (inter alia) apparet.

That from time out of mind, to the time of making the said letters patent quilibet consiliarius, alias aldermannus, civitat. præd. pro tempore existen. pro justa & rationabili causa fuit amobilis & amot. a loco & officio suo consiliarii, alias aldermanni, dictæ civitat. per majorem consiliarios, alias aldermannos, civitat. prædictæ pro tempore existen. vel majorem partem eorum quorum major pro tempore existens fuit unus. Et post confection. literarum patent. præd. quilibet aldermannus ejusdem civitat. pro tempore existen. by the mayor and aldermen of the said city for the time being, or the greater part of them, of which the mayor was one, ob justam & rationabilem causam ab officio suo aldermanni civitat. præd. amobil. & amot. fuit & esse consuevit.

That the said Timothy Haddock 2 October 1673 was chose alderman, and took his oath well and faithfully to execute the said office to the effect following, viz.

Quod advisament. adjument. & consensus ipsius Timothei forent per ipsum dat. & loquut. ad omnia tempora extunc ad & cum majori parte majoris & consiliariorum civit. præd. pro bona gubernatione & incremento boni publici ejusdem non respicien. aliquod propr. lucrum vel questum pro seipso vel aliqua alia persona in præjudicium opum, Anglice of the wealth, libertatis vel libertatum bonorum ordinum constitutionum vel consuetudinum ejusdem civitat. quodq; non detegeret seu patefaceret [438] Anglice disclose or discover, alicui personæ vel personis ad aliquod tempus aliqua verba locutionis, Anglice talks, communicationes vel sermones mot. dict. vel audit. per ipsum vel aliquos socios consiliarios suos assemblat. insimul in aliquo loco ad consulend. pro opibus, Anglice the wealth, vel bona gubernatione civitat. præd. & condescenderet & agrearet ad omnes tales causas & materias quales major & major pars socior. Consiliar. dicti Timothei ad inde agrearent, ac etiam ad ulterius potestatem supprimeret omnes tales personas quales conarentur facere aliquas factiones, Anglice factions, conspirationes vel aliquam confusionem, Anglice disorder, contra bonam gubernationem & constitutionem dictæ civitat'.

That one Thomas Jackson being mayor, 6 October 31 Car. 1, a common council was held in the Guildhall of the city for the election of a mayor for the year ensuing, at which the said Haddock was present, who being then about to depart, the said mayor spoke to him, and requested him not to depart from the said council before the election made, but should attend the election according to his duty, and that the said Haddock instantly, contemptuously, and without any reasonable cause departed from the said council, and afterwards the same day before the said election made came back again leading thither with him divers persons to the number of sixty of the inferior citizens of the said city, not having voices in the said election, to disturb the said election, and there did tumultuose, riotose & minaciter require the said mayor, aldermen, bailiffs, and capital citizens then assembled, that he and the persons he brought with him might together with the said mayor, aldermen, bailiffs and capital citizens so assembled as aforesaid, choose a mayor, contrary to the form and effect of the said letters patent, saying, and with a great noise clamouring and alledging the said letters patent concerning the election aforesaid to be void, to the great terror of the said mayor, aldermen, bailiffs and capital citizens so assembled as aforesaid; and the said Timothy Haddock, and all other the persons aforesaid, and by him brought with him at and by the instigation and procurement of the said Timothy, then and there in the presence of the said mayor, bailiffs and capital citizens for the cause aforesaid assembled, did so disturb the said mayor, aldermen, bailiffs and capital citizens with threats, complaints and clamours, that they durst not, nor could not, proceed in the said election for the space of two hours; and therefore afterwards, viz. 25 October then next following [439] in a council held in the Guildhall aforesaid before the said Thomas Jackson then mayor of the said city, and the greater part of the aldermen of the city aforesaid, it was ordered by the same mayor and aldermen then and there present, that the said Timothy should be summoned to be at a common council of the said mayor and aldermen in the Guildhall aforesaid, 8 November then next following to be held, to answer concerning his misbehaviour aforesaid, and to shew cause why he for the said misdemeanor should not be amoved from the place and office of alderman of the said city, at which said council the said Timothy appeared, and being spoke to by the mayor if he had any thing to say in excuse of the premisses, or could shew any cause why he ought not to be amoved from the office of alderman of the said city, said nothing in excuse of his said misbehaviour, nor shewed any cause why for his said offence he should not be amoved from his said office; and thereupon the said Thomas Jackson then mayor, and the said greater part of the said aldermen then present, did amove the said Timothy Haddock from his said office of one of the aldermen of the said city, and did declare him to be so amoved; and for that cause they cannot restore him. And we all held this return good; for though by the charter of 13 Car. 1, there is no power given for the corporation to remove an alderman, yet when the consiliarii, alias aldermanni, were before the said charter removeable for reasonable cause, the same power still remains, for that the charter doth not merge or extinguish any of the ancient privileges; but the corporation may use them as before; and if it should be otherwise it would be very mischievous for most of the corporations in England, who have taken new charters, but were ancient corporations before.

CARPENTER'S CASE.

Churchwarden.

A mandamus issued out of this Court to Sir Thomas Exton Knight, Commissary to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's London, to swear Edward Carpenter one of the churchwardens of the parish of Stoke-Newington in Surrey, he being thereto duly elected. But the doctor finding that there is a question between the parson and the parishioners concerning the election of the churchwardens, the parson claiming to appoint one by virtue of the canon, and the parishioners claiming a custom to choose both, makes [440] this special return to save himself from contempt, and also harmless from being liable to an action for a false return, viz.

They find the Act of Parliament 1 Eliz. intitled, an Act to restore to the Crown the ancient jurisdiction over the estate ecclesiastical and spiritual, and abolishing all foreign powers repugnant to the same; and the clause therein, who are compellable to take the oath, and the oath itself; and that all and every person and persons that at any time hereafter shall be preferred, promoted or collated to any archbishoprick or bishoprick, or to any other spiritual or ecclesiastical benefice, promotion, dignity or office, or ministry, or that shall be by Your Highness, your heirs or successors, preferred or promoted to any temporal or lay office, ministry or service within this realm, or in any Your Highness dominions, before he or they shall take upon him or them to receive, use, exercise, supply or occupy any such archbishoprick or bishoprick, promotion, dignity, office, ministry or service, shall likewise make, take and receive the said corporal oath before mentioned upon the Evangelists, before such persons, as have or shall have authority to admit any such person to any such office, ministry or service, or else before such person or persons, as by Your Highness, your heirs or successors, by commission under the Great Seal of England, shall be named, assigned or appointed to [444] minister the said oath; and that it may likewise be farther enacted by the authority aforesaid, that if any such person or persons, as at any time hereafter shall be promoted, preferred or collated to any such promotion spiritual or ecclesiastical benefice, office or ministry, or that by Your Highness, your heirs or successors shall be promoted or preferred to any temporal or lay office, ministry or service, shall and do peremptorily and obstinately refuse to take the same oath so to him to be offered, that then he or they so refusing shall only be judged disabled in the law to receive, take or have the same promotion spiritual or ecclesiastical, or the same temporal office, ministry or service within this realm, or any other Your Highness dominions, to all intents, constructions and purpose.

That by another Act 5 Eliz. intitled, an Act for assurance of the Queen's Royal power over all estates and subjects within her dominions, the clauses containing who shall take the said oath.

And be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the Lord Chancellor or Keeper of the Great Seal of England for the time being, shall and may at all times hereafter by virtue of this Act, without any farther warrant, make and direct commission or commissions under the Great Seal of England to any person or persons, giving them or some of them thereby authority to tender and minister the oath aforesaid to such person or persons, as by the aforesaid commission or commissions the said commissioners shall be authorised to tender the same unto.

They find also the next clause expressing the penalty for the first refusal of the said oath, and the clause of certificate of refusal into the King's Bench, and concerning the indictment of the offender.

That the defendants 23 November 30 Car. 2, and 8 Febr. 31 Car. 2, were not any officers or ministers mentioned in the said statute of 1 or 5 Eliz.

That there was no other commission made to the said Harrison and Croome to tender the said oath to the said defendants; and the jury conclude, et si the defendants are guilty or not petunt advisamentum Curiæ.

And the points intended in this special verdict were three, viz. 1. The words of the Act of 5 Eliz. cap. 1. being, that the Lord Chancellor, &c. shall, &c. make, &c. commission, &c. to any person or persons, giving them or some of them thereby authority to tender and minister the oath aforesaid to such person or persons, as by the aforesaid commission or commissions the said commissioners shall be authorized to tender [445] the same oath unto, whether the commission specified in the record be pursuant to the said Act, for it is not directed to any persons particularly, nor to tender the said oath to any persons by name; and if it shall be in the commissioners discretion to tender it as they shall think fit, they shall take upon them to judge who are Romanæ superstitionis sectatores, or so reputed; and though several commissions were made out about the same time of the same term with this, yet the Lord Chancellor did cause new commissions to be made out, expressing the names of the persons to whom the oath should be tendered; and this objection was raised by the Lord Chief Justice Scrogs before whom the verdict was found; but it was resolved by the other three Judges (myself doubting) that this commission was very good, because the power is left to the commissioners to choose whom they will tender the oath unto by the clause of the Act; and in this manner were the ancient commissions shortly after the statute made.

The exception was, that the indictment sets forth a certificate from the commissioners under their hands, but not under their seals, as the statute requires; but to this the Court answered, that in regard the certificate is found in hæc verba in the verdict to be under their seals, it shall be amended, and so good enough; and it was amended accordingly.

The third exception was, the certificate is directed only to the Judges by name, and not to the King in his Court of King's Bench, as the Act requires; but resolved by the said three justices, that that is good enough, because it shall be intended that the said Judges made the Court, and were therein sitting at the time of the certificate: but I also doubted of this answer; but the judgment was given against the defendants. And as to the finding that the defendants were none of the officers or ministers mentioned in the several statutes of 1 and 5 Eliz. the whole Court were of opinion, it was not material, because by the clause of 5 Eliz. impowering the Lord Chancellor to make out commissions, all persons, though not officers, may be offered the said oath if the commissioners think fit.

[446] TAVERNER'S CASE.

Mandamus.

Jeremiah Taverner, having been chosen into the livery of the Company of Vintners in London, had a mandamus directed to the master, wardens and assistants of the said company to admit him to be a livery-man according to his said election, to which they return,

That London is an ancient city, and that the citizens and freemen thereof time out of mind were, and still are incorporated, as well by the name of Mayor and Commonalty of the City of London, as by the name of Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London, and that of the said citizens there were several societies, guilds and fraternities, of which the Company of Vintners is and always hath been one.

That in the said society there have been time out of mind certain men being citizens and freemen of the said city and company, called livery-men, who were used to be chosen for the said company.

That the said Company of Vintners (as other companies) for the preservation and maintenance as well of the honour, as state and government of the said city, as well at times of publick meeting and attendances of the mayor and aldermen, and other publick occasions, and for the preservation of the honour and reputation, and government of the said company, and for the relief of the poor members thereof, have been forced to expend great sums of money.

That the said Company of Vintners have been anciently incorporated, and called by divers names; and that the 2 Feb. 9 Jac. the King by his letters patent incorporated them by the name of Master, Wardens, and Freemen and Commonalty of the Mystery of Vintners of the said City of London, and that they may make by-laws.

That time out of mind the place and office of the livery hath been a place and degree of pre-eminence in the said company; and that as well before and since the said letters patent every fellow of the said company, who was elected into the place and office of one of the livery was used, and ought to be idoneus homo, ac de bono statu & substantia qui bene potuit & ad vel ante admissionem suam per totum tempus præd. usus fuit & consuevit & debuit solvere pro & erga meliorem & necessariam supportationem & sustentationem societatis præd. & necessaria onera & expensa inde certam competen. denariorum summam.

[447] That without the assistance and relief which the said company by such payments hath had and received, it could not maintain its government and reputation.

That for many years before the 24 April 1656 the sum of money which every livery-man upon his admission paid, exceeded 31l. 13s. 4d. and then a by-law was made, that the payment should be so much only; and from that time the said sum hath been always paid by every one admitted into the livery.

That 18 June 1680, ante adventum brevis præd. he was chose to be a livery-man, and was then required to take the said office upon him, and that the master, wardens and company were ready to admit him to the place of a livery-man upon payment of the said sum of 31l. 13s. 4d. which he ought to pay according to the by-law aforementioned; but he hath refused so to do, and thereupon the company refuse to admit him until he shall pay the same.

Upon this return the counsel for Taverner argued, that the by-law therein mentioned for imposing 31l. 13s. 4d. upon every livery-man was unreasonable and against law, and a grievance to the subject: but the Court resolved, were the sum more or less, it could not make the by-law void, for it is to bind only the members of the corporation; and when a man will agree to be of a company, he doth thereby submit himself to the laws thereof, and we are not to take notice of the extravagancy of charges they lay upon themselves. And 'tis convenient that the company have such power to keep up their reputation, and the honour of the City of London; and so allowed the return to be good.

THE CASE OF THE TOWN OF WINCHELSEA.

Certiorari. 2 Lev. 86. Trem. 556. 3 Keb. 154, 324.

A certiorari was granted to the Mayor, Jurats and Commonalty of the ancient town of Winchelsea in Sussex, to remove an order or decree made by them; who made this return: viz.

That there have been time out of mind in Kent and Sussex five ancient towns, viz. Hastings, Sandwich, Dover, New Rumney and Hith, which have been always called the Cinque Ports of the kingdom; and that in Sussex there are, and always have been two other ancient towns called Rye and Winchelsea, which are members of the said Cinque Ports.

That the said town of Winchelsea hath been time out of mind incorporated by the name of Mayor, Jurats and Commonalty of Winchelsea.

That all the said Cinque Ports with their members have been time out of mind places for ordering provision, and preservation of shipping of the Kings and Queens of this kingdom of England for the time being; and that by reason of their situation upon or near the sea-shores, the inhabitants and residents thereof, as well for safe keeping the said towns, as of the said kingdoms of England against foreign invasion of enemies, have always and ought to keep beacons, watch-houses and guards night and day, as well by sea as land; and for better maintenance thereof, the said town of Winchelsea in their common hall used to make taxes and rates upon every inhabitant or occupier of house or land, lying or being within the said town or liberties thereof, which said privileges were confirmed by Magna Charta.

That 1 May 32 Car. 2 they made a tax of 6d. per pound for the maintaining of the said beacons and warehouses according to a schedule annexed to the said tax, and that there was no other order or decree. And set out the schedule.

And to this schedule was objected, that 'tis not set forth that the beacons or watch-houses were in decay or out of repair, and so the rate unnecessary.

[449] But resolved, it is well enough; for 1st, 'Twould be dangerous to expect till they became in decay, for then there must be no beacon till repaired, nor no watch-houses in the mean time, which would be dangerous for the place. 2. 'Tis to be presumed that the inhabitants will not tax themselves unnecessarily, and they do all concur in the taxation: and so the order was confirmed.

RICHARD SHELDON versus MICHAEL CLIPSHAM. ASSUMPSIT.

Pleading. 2 Jon. 158.

The plaintiff declares in an indebitat' assumpsit for 100l. received to the plaintiff's use; and also upon an insimul computasset for another 100l. the same day. The defendant pleads, that the said several sums of 100l. in the declaration respectively specified, are for one and the same cause of action for one sum of 100l. only, and not for several sums of 100l. and that after the time of the said several promises respectively specified, viz. such a day, the defendant paid to one Bellamy by the plaintiff's order 30l. in part of payment and satisfaction of the monies in the declaration specified; and that the defendant in full payment and satisfaction of the said monies demanded by the plaintiff in his declaration did then become bound to the plaintiff in a bond of 120l. conditioned for payment of 65l. to the plaintiff at a certain day in the said condition specified as yet not incurred; which 30l. and bond the plaintiff accepted; et hoc parat', &c.

Upon this plea the plaintiff demurred, and the whole Court were of opinion that the plea is good; for though 'tis frequent to lay a declaration for a debt several ways in an assumpsit, and 'tis not a good plea to say that the several sums are but only for the sum first mentioned, and so go no farther; yet when the defendant pleads over, that the very sum demanded is satisfied, 'tis a good plea; and if that the two several hundred pounds were two distinct sums, the plaintiff might have replied so, and taken issue thereupon. But he admits that there was but 100l. due, and that satisfied, the plea is good. But at the importunity of the plaintiff's counsel we gave him leave to waive the demurrer, and take issue upon the satisfaction, upon paying to the defendant his costs.

[450] ELIZABETH CASE versus JAMES BARBER.

Accord. 1 Danv. Abr. 77, p. 4, 241, p. 19. 2 Jon. 158.

The plaintiff declares in an indebitatus assumpsit for 20l. for meat, drink, washing and lodging for the defendant's wife, provided for her at the request of the defendant, and lays it two other ways. The defendant pleads that after the making the said promise, &c. and before the exhibiting the said bill, viz. such a day, it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant and one Jacob Barber, his son, that the plaintiff should deliver to the defendant divers clothes of the defendant's wife then in her custody, and that the plaintiff should accept the said Jacob, the son, for her debtor for 9l. to be paid as soon as the said Jacob should receive his pay due from His Majesty, as lieutenant of the ship called The Happy Return, in full satisfaction and discharge of the premisses in the declaration mentioned; and avers that the plaintiff the same time did deliver to the defendant the said clothes, and that she accepted the said Jacob the son, her debtor for the said 9l. and that the said son agreed to pay the same to the plaintiff accordingly; and that the said Jacob afterwards, and as soon as he received his pay as aforesaid, viz. 27 April 32 Car. 2, was ready and offered to pay the said 9l. and the plaintiff refused to receive it; and that the said Jacob hath always since been, and still is ready to pay the same, if the said plaintiff will receive it. Et hoc paratus, &c. The plaintiff demurs. And it was alledged by the defendant's counsel that the plea is good; for though in Peyto's case, and formerly it hath been held, that an accord cannot be pleaded unless it appears to be executed, 9 Co. 79 b. 3 Cro. 46, pl. 2, yet of late it hath been held that upon mutual promises an action lies, and consequently there being equal remedy on both sides an accord may be pleaded without execution as well as an arbitrement, and by the same reason that an arbitrement is a good plea without performance; to which the Court agreed; for the reason of the law being changed, the law is thereby changed; and anciently remedy was not given for mutual promises, which now is given; and for this reason, Mich. 18 Car. B. R. Palmer versus Lawson, ante. In indebitatus assumpsit against an executor upon a contract made by the testator; the defendant pleads judgment in debt upon simple contract against him for the debt of the testator, and after argument [451] resolved a good plea; because though in debt against an executor upon a simple contract the defendant may demur, yet when he admits the demand, and executors are now liable to pay such debts in action upon the case, the judgment so obtained was pleadable; so Vaughan Rep. Dee versus Edgcomb.

But in this case at Bar judgment was given for the plaintiff for two reasons.

1. Because it doth not appear that there is any consideration that the son should pay the 9l. but only an agreement without any consideration.

2. Admit the agreement would bind, yet now by the Statute of Frauds and Perjuries, 29 Car. 2, this agreement ought to be in writing, or else the plaintiff could have no remedy thereon; and though upon such an agreement the plaintiff need not set forth the agreement to be in writing, yet when the defendant pleads such an agreement in bar, he must plead it so as it may appear to the Court, that an action will lie upon it, for he shall not take away the plaintiff's present action, and not give him another upon the agreement pleaded.

[452] TERM. MICH. 33 CAR. 2, B. R.

CHARLES HOLMES versus ELIZABETH MEYNEL. EJECTMENT. DERBY.

[See Taafe v. Conmee, 1862, 10 H. L. C. 80.]

Estate. 3 Danv. Ab. 238, p. 2. 2 Jon. 172. 2 Show. 136. Pollexf. 425. Skin. 17.

Of the demise of Francis Meynel of the moiety of the manors of Meynel-Langley and Kirk-Langley 300 messuages, 500 acres of land, 200 acres of meadow, and 500 acres of pasture in Meynel-Langly and Kirk-Langly. Upon not guilty pleaded the jury find a special verdict, viz.

That one Isaac Meynel was seised in fee entirely as well of the manor of Meynel and Kirk Langly, as of all the tenements in the declaration, 2 Novemb. 1675, made his will in writing thus: I give and devise all my lands in Meynel and Kirk-Langly in the county of Derby unto my two daughters Elizabeth and Anne Meynel, and their heirs, equally to be divided betwixt them: and in case they happen to die without issue, then I give and devise all the said lands to my nephew Francis Meynel, eldest son of my brother William Meynel deceased, and to the heirs male of his body; and for want of such issue, to William Meynel, brother of the said Francis, and the heirs male of his body, the remainder to Godfrey Meynel, brother of the said Francis and William in tail male, the remainder to John brother of the said Francis, William and Godfrey in tail male; and for want of such issue I give and devise the said lands to the next heir male of the name and family of the Meynels, and died without issue male, having issue Elizabeth, now defendant, and Anne, his two only daughters, who entered and became seised prout lex, &c. Anne died without issue, Francis the lessor of the plaintiff entered.

And if for the plaintiff, for the plaintiff, &c.

After several arguments at the Bar, the Court by the mouth of the Chief Justice gave judgment for the defendant. I had prepared my argument, as the rest of the Judges had done; but in regard we were all unanimous, it was thought needless for us all to argue. My argument follows.

In this case two points have been raised.

[453] 1. What estate Elizabeth and Anne have by this will.

2. Whether upon the death of Anne without issue Francis in remainder takes any thing?

As to the 1*st*, I conclude that Elizabeth and Anne have several estates-tail by moieties; for though the devise be to them and their heirs in the beginning, yet when the will afterwards says, And if they die without issue, it shews that (heirs) was intended heirs of their bodies: so it hath been construed in grants.

5 H. 5, 6 a. Lands granted to man and his wife, & aliis hæredibus of the husband, if the heirs of the husband and wife shall die sine hæredibus de se, the husband and wife had an intail: a fortiori in a will, 2 Cro. 448, King versus Rumbal, where many books are cited; and Bridgman 1, Pell versus Brown; so that as to this point, 'tis not much denied on either side.

As to the 2d point. I conceive Francis takes nothing upon the death of Anne, but that her part remains to her sister by way of a cross remainder.

1. I take notice that the main design and intent of the testator was, that in the first place he would take care of his own children, and then look after the continuation of his own name and family; for first he gives to his daughters, and afterwards the remainders to his nephews, then to the next heir male of the name and family of the Meynels, following herein the law of nature, and the ordinary course of the world.

That this was the intent appears by the words of the will: 1. In case (they) die without issue, i.e. both of them, 'tis not they or either of them. 2. All the said lands, which intends both parts, and not a moiety; and all cannot pass till both are dead without issue. And if the testator had been asked, what he meant by the lands going to his nephew after the death of his daughters without issue, he would have answered, that he should have the lands when both of his daughters should be dead without issue, and not before.

2. This intent consists with the rules of law, for 'tis a general rule, that a will shall never be construed by implication to disinherit the heir at law, unless such implication be necessary, and not only constructive and possible, 13 H. 7, 17. Br. Devise 52. A man devised his goods to his wife and after the decease of his wife, his son and heir shall have the house wherein his goods are; the son shall not have the house during the wife's life; for though it be not [454] expressly devised to the wife, yet by his intent it appears, that the son shall not have it during her life, and therefore it is a good devise to the wife by implication, and the devisor's intent: but if it were a devise to a stranger after the death of the wife, the heir shall have it during the wife's life, because it is not a devise to the wife by a necessary implication.

Hill. 20 & 21 Car. 2, C. B. Gardiner versus Sheldon, Vaughan 295. William Rose made his will thus, My will and meaning is, that if it happen that my son George, Mary and Katharine my daughters, do die without issue of their bodies, then all my freeholds shall come, remain and be to my nephew William Rose and his heirs for ever. Resolved the son and daughters had no estate by the will, and so are the books of Moor. 7, pl. 24 and 123, pl. 269. 2 Cro. 74 & 75, Horton versus Horton.

In our case here is no necessary implication that Francis must take immediately after the death of Anne without issue, for Elizabeth is still alive, and he is not to have the land till the devisor's daughters shall die without issue.

2. Had the testator set forth at length the cross remainders, this question had been out of doubt. Now he being inops consilii we ought by construction to make his words answer his intent, appearing in other parts of the will, as near as may be.

As for authorities we must not expect many in case of a will, for the old books cannot have any unless of a devise by custom, which is rare; and every case upon a will stands upon its own legs, according to the penning thereof; yet Mich. 32 Eliz. C. B. 4 Leon. 14, pl. 51 is direct in the point. The case was, A. seised of lands had issue two sons, and devised part to his eldest in tail, and the other part to his younger in tail, with this clause in the will, that if any of his sons died without issue, that then the whole land should remain to a stranger in fee, and died; the sons entered into the lands devised to them respectively, and the younger died without issue, and he to whom the fee was devised entered; and adjudged that his entry was not lawful, and that the eldest son should have the land by the implicative devise.

As to the cases objected, which are, 2 Cro. 655, Guilbert versus Witty. A devise of three several messuages to three several children, provided if all my said children shall die without issue of their bodies, then all the said messuages shall [455] remain to my wife and her heirs, and two died. Resolved the wife shall have the two parts.

Resp. That differs much from this case, because there are three devises, in which case cross remainders will be more difficultly settled; for whether the survivors shall be jointenants for life with several inheritances, or tenants in common in tail, would be perhaps some question, as appears by the report of the same case, 2 Roll. Rep. 281. But in our case no such difficulty can arise.

Object. Pasch. 12 Jac. C. B. Johnson versus Smart, 2 Roll. Abr. 416, F. pl. 3. A devise to two for their lives, remainder to their two sons, equally to be divided and to their heirs, and each of them to be the other's heir; and if they both shall die without issue, the remainder to another; one dies, his share shall go to the remainder man.

Resp. This case cannot be law, because 'tis apparent that each of them was to be the other's heir, which is as plain a cross remainder as can be. 2. This case was received by Roll from some other hand, and it is reported in a private report to be quite another case; for 'twas upon evidence in a trial at Bar in a case of a surrender of a copyhold, and not a devise; and Roll could not be a reporter at that time, for 'twas before he came to study the law. And each to be the other's heir makes a cross remainder. Br. Devise 38. Done 44. Pet. Br. 94 b. pl. 431.

Object. Dyer 326 a. Huntley's case, which was, that he being seised of two houses, one in St. Michael Queenhith, and the other in St. Michael Flesh-Shambles, which last parish was laid to the parish of Christ-Church in London, and devises that house in St. Michael Flesh-Shambles to his wife for life, the remainder to a woman and her brother, and the heirs of their bodies, and for default of such issue, to the right heirs of the devisor: the brother dies without issue: the sister hath issue, and dies; and whether the intire house shall go to the issue, or only the moiety, and the other moiety to the heir of the devisor, was the question.

Resp. Though this question is put in the book, yet I find no argument of it; and that case will differ from this, in regard there the particular estates were not limited to the children, but to strangers, and so intrenches not upon the rule in 13 H. 7, whereby an heir is disinherited. And Dyer seems to intimate, that the pleading of the case was more insisted upon than this point; for he puts the stress of the case to lie upon the pleading, that the house lay in the [456] parish of Christ-Church, whereas the will says in St. Michael Flesh Shambles, without averment of the union of those parishes. And 1 And. 21 says, the stress of the case was upon the apportionment of rent.

As to Justice Wyndham's case, 'tis not to our purpose, because that is the case of a deed, which must be taken strongest against the grantor: here it is the case of a will, the construction whereof is to be made according to the intent of the devisor.

And so upon the whole matter, in regard the words make against the plaintiff, and the intent makes for the defendant, I conceive judgment ought to be given for the defendant.

MORGAN versus VAUGHAN. ERROR IN DOWER AT BRECNOCK.

Estoppel. 3 Danv. Abr. 259, p. 2. 2 Jon. 170. 2 Show. 168. Skin. 10.

The case was, 20 Car. 2, Vaughan brought a writ of dower unde nihil habet in the Great Sessions at Brecnock against Morgan, and had judgment. And Morgan the tenant brings a writ of error, and assigns for error, that he was an infant at the time of the judgment given, viz. of the age of fourteen and no more, and that he appeared by attorney, whereas he ought to have appeared by guardian. And upon this infancy issue was taken, and laid to be at Abergavenney in com. Monmouth, and tried at Monmouth, and found for the plaintiff in the writ of error.

And now Pollexfen moved in arrest of judgment two exceptions.

1. The writ of error was brought 26 Car. 2, and the tenant had alledged in 20 Car. 2 that he was infra ætatem, viz. fourteen and no more: and this writ of error is brought 26 Car. 2, and error assigned by attorney, and then of his own shewing he was also under age when he brought the writ of error, and assigned the error, and he is now estopped to say the contrary.

2. This infancy ought to have been tried where the land lies, which is in Brecnockshire, and the visne is from Abergavenny in Monmouthshire, and there is no suggestion that 'tis the next county to Brecnockshire.

But notwithstanding these objections judgment was reversed by the whole Court.

[457] As to the first, Here is no estoppel, because the alledging the precise age in the viz. is idle and not traversable, and he might have alledged any other age, and the defendant in the writ of error could not have taken issue upon it.

Pasch. 12 Eliz. Dyer 289 b. pl. 59. The lord distrains for rent the cattle of the tenant, lessee for sixty years, who pleads that the tenant made him a lease for ten years, and prays in aid, and granted. Afterwards the bargainee of the tenant after the ten years were expired, enters, the lessee pleads his lease of sixty years: resolved he was not estopped by pleading his lease to be but ten years in his aid prier, because the lease, not the number of years, was material.

Mich. 7 E. 4, 18. Fitzh. Estoppel 69. Rescous. The plaintiff declares that B. held of him an house and an acre of land by ten marks, and that the plaintiff distrained, and the defendant made rescous. The defendant pleads that the plaintiff at another time brought an assize against the said B. of the said ten marks, who pleaded hors de son fee, and the plaintiff made title that the defendant held the house, and five acres of land and a mill by the services of ten marks, and so within his fee, and that the plaintiff was nonsuit, and after B. leased to the defendant for years, and demands judgment if the plaintiff shall be received to say, that the ten marks are issuing out of the house and acre only; and resolved that the plea is not good, because the quantity of the services is not material in an action of rescous, but the tenure only.

Fitz. Estoppell 247. Assise by Jane late wife of Richard Griffith; the defendant pleads feoffment by deed of the plaintiff's father with warranty; the plaintiff replies riens passa per le fait; the defendant rejoins, that the defendant before that time had brought an assise against the plaintiff and her late husband, who to it pleaded that the lands were given to one W. and M. his wife, and the heirs of their bodies, the remainder to Jane, the now plaintiff and her heirs, that M. died without issue by W. and that W. after the death of M. aliened in fee to the now defendant, for which Jane entered and demanded judgment si, &c. the plaintiff there, and now the defendant replied, that the feoffment was during the life of M. by the deed, and the jury found accordingly; judgment if the plaintiff shall now be admitted to plead, that nothing passed by that deed: and resolved the plaintiff here was not estopped, because in the first action the deed was not in question, but the time of the feoffment, viz. whether before or after the death of M.

[458] Fitz. Brief. 180, H. One shall not be estopped but of that which he may have a traverse.

As to second point, Nonage was well tried where the party was commorant, and not where the writ was brought, because collateral to the action. 1 Bulstr. 129. 1 Brownl. 150, Ord versus Moreton. Fitz. Visne 63.

Sir George Fletcher's Case.

Deer-stealing. Trem. 322.

In replevin. The defendant avows upon the statute of 13 Car. 2, cap. 10, for killing of deer, and that the plaintiff was aiding to the killing of deer in the avowant's park; the plaintiff pleads in bar, that she was not aiding, and issue thereupon, and verdict for the plaintiff.

And it was moved for the avowant, that the issue is a jeofail, because it is an immaterial issue; for the aiding was found before a justice of peace, and shall not be tried over again. I was not at the resolution of the Court but it seems plain that the statute of 32 H. 8, cap. 30 helps misjoining of issues. 3 Cro. 778, Dighton versus Bartholomew, Goldsb. 39, pl. 15.

Pasch. 1657, B. B. Spathurst versus Overind, error in C. B. debt upon a bond against Gr. Spat. as executor of J. Spat. The defendant pleads it is not his deed; the jury find it is the deed of Spat, as the plaintiff declared. And in error judgment affirmed, because here was an affirmative and a negative, and by the jury's finding the plaintiff had cause of action.

If the bar be good, and the replication naught, and issue be taken upon it, they shall replead to the replication, and the bar remains; and so if the bar is good, and the replication good, and the rejoinder naught, and issue taken upon it, they shall replead to the rejoinder, and the bar and replication remain: but if the bar is naught, and the replication good, and issue taken upon it, they shall replead for the whole anew, because the bar was naught. [459] JANE KINGDON ADMINISTRATRIX OF RICHARD KINGDON ESQUIRE, PLAINTIFF; RICHARD JONES LORD VISCOUNT RANELAGH, SIR JAMES HAYS & AL', DEFENDANTS. ERROR IN C. B. COVENANT.

Error. Skin. 6, 26. 2 Jon. 150.

The plaintiff brought an action of covenant, and judgment was given against her in C. B. upon demurrer; and now she brought a writ of error in B. R. and the case upon the record in short is,

The plaintiff declares upon articles indented of nine parts, dated 5 Aug. 23 Car. 2, made between the said Lord Viscount Ranelagh of the first part, Sir Alexander Bence of the second part, Sir James Hayes of the third part, John Bence of the fourth part, Joseph Dean of the sixth part, Robert Huntington of the seventh part, John Stepney of the eighth part, and the said Richard Kingdon of the ninth part, wherein after a recital of an indenture under the Great Seal of England dated 4 Aug. 23 Car. 2, whereby the King granted a lease of the great branches of his revenue in Ireland to the said Lord Viscount Ranelagh, Sir Alexander Bence and the rest, for five years, to end 25 Decemb. 1675. The parties did all agree amongst themselves severally, that the said profits of what should accrue after all the payments to be made pursuant to the King's grant, should be divided into twelve parts, viz. four parts to the Lord Viscount Ranelagh, and the other eight to each of the others. And that no money should be paid out of the office (which was to be kept for issuing out of cash) but according to the indenture made by His Majesty; and 150l. quarterly to each share; and that the 150l. should not be taken out of the cash, but should be continued there, and a note given by the receiver general of the said parties declaring the same to be advanced for the carrying on of the undertaking, at interest of 10l. per cent. until all the said articles should be performed, and that the said interest should be paid quarterly. And if there should not be sufficient cash to answer the ends of the agreement, then the quarterly payment should be made use of to that purpose.

Et convent' fuit & agreat' inter omnes & singulas dictas personas articulis prædictis, & quibuslibet eorum per & pro seipso separatim & respective & non conjunctim vel unus eorum pro altero eorum & pro separalibus & respectivis hæredibus [460] executoribus & administratoribus suis convenit promisit concessit & agreavit ad & cum quolibet altero eorum separatim & respective & non conjunctim & ad & cum executoribus & administratoribus suis quod quilibet prædict. partium articulis prædictis respective hæredes executores & administratores sui & quilibet eorum secundum illorum & cujuslibet illorum dict' proportionabiles partes vel sortes de tempore in tempus & ad omnia tempora extunc imposterum bene & sufficienter salvarent servarent indemp' & indemnificat. quemlibet & unumquenque al' & ejus & eorum hæred. execut. administrator. & assign. contra Regiam Majestatem hæredes & successores suos & omnes personas quascunque de & ab omnibus & quibuslibet conventionibus in prærecitat. indentura content. ex partibus dictarum partium articulis prædict' agend. & performand. & de & ab omnibus actionibus sectis & molestiis quæ in lege vel æquitate vel aliter venirent crescerent vel acciderent vel surgerent pro vel ratione cujuslibet materiæ vel rei quæ agerentur vel fierent in vel per rationem vel super computum dictæ susceptionis in prædict' recitat' indentura mentionat. & de & ab omnibus custag. misis & demand. quibuscunque tangen. vel concernen. eadem.

Et si accideret quod aliquis vel plur. dictarum partium articulis prædict' should happen to die before 25 Decemb. 1675, that then the share and interest of the persons so dying should devolve and be vested in the survivors according to their respective shares: and that then likewise the said surviving parties within two months after such death should well and truly pay to the executors and administrators of the party dying all and every such sum and sums of money as had been advanced by the party deceased out of the said quarterly payments of 150l. per annum, together with the interest thereof which should be then due and unpaid.

That the intestate Richard Kingdon died before 25 Decemb. 1675, viz. 1 Decemb. 1675, and that the sum of 2850l. before the said 1 Decemb. 1675 was advanced by the intestate out of the said quarterly payment of 150l. and that 712l. at his death was due for the interest thereof, which the defendants have not paid, but do deny to pay to the plaintiff.

The defendants plead, that by the said articles it was provided between the parties aforesaid, that it should not be lawful for the said parties, or any of them, at any time or times during the continuation of the said undertaking directly or indirectly to give, grant, sell or assign his or their right, title or interest of, in or to the aforesaid indenture or any [461] covenant, clause or agreement in the same contained, to any person or persons whatsoever, nisi cum licentia & consensu of any four at the least or more of the rest of the parties to the said articles, as by one part of the said articles under the seal of the said Richard Kingdon hic in Cur' prolat' appears; and that the said Richard Kingdon in his life-time after the making the said articles, viz. 27 Novemb. 27 Car. 2, apud, &c. with the licence and consent of the said Lord Viscount Ranelagh, Sir James Hayes, John Bence, Joseph Dean and Robert Huntingdon, five of the said parties, by a writing under his seal dated the same day and year, did assign and transfer to Lemuel Kingdon and William Dawson all his right and interest which he had by virtue of the said grant of the King; by virtue whereof all the estate and interest of the said Richard Kingdon in the indenture and articles aforesaid were invested in the said Lemuel Kingdon and William Dawson, so as the part, proportion and interest of the said Richard Kingdon to the said indenture and articles per jus accrescendi did not come to the defendants. Et hoc parati sunt verificare, unde &c. To this plea the plaintiff demurred; and judgment was given in C. B. for the defendant.

GRACE COCKMAN versus WILLIAM FARRER.

Error. 3 Danv. Ab. 33, p. 6, 86, p. 8. 2 Jon. 181. 2 Show. 162. Skin. 13.

A writ of error to reverse a fine levied in C. B. the writ of error was special, viz. Hugh Haworth was seised of a messuage, 10 acres of land, and 9 acres of pasture pertin' in Hallifax in com. Ebor in his demesne as of fee, and held them of Sir Arthur Ingram Knight, as of his manor of Hallifax in free socage, viz. by fealty only; so being seised 23 Novemb. 17 Jac. made his last will and testament in writing, and by the same did give the said tenements to Michael Fawcett for his life, the remainder to Hugh Fawcet and the heirs of his body, the remainder to the heirs of the body of the said Michael Fawcet, the remainder to Michael Ward and his heirs for ever. That the said Hugh Haworth died.

That the said Michael Fawcet entred and died, and that Hugh entered and became seised in tail, with the remainder over.

That the said Hugh levied a fine Pasch. 17 Car. 1, to William Bradshaw and Thompson, in which there was error ad grave damnum Gracie Cockman vidue, sister and heir of [462] Michael Ward deceased, eo quod the said Michael Fawcet and Hugh Fawcet died both without issue.

The plaintiff assigns for error, that the said Hugh Fawcet after the acknowledgment before commissioners, and before the return of the writ of covenant upon which the said fine was levied, viz. 6 April 17 Car. 1, died. It was thus:

17 Febr. 16 Car. 1, date of the writ of covenant.

18 Febr. 16 Car. 1, date of the dedimus potestatem.

22 Marcii 16 Car. 1, the caption.

6 April 17 Car. 1, Hugh Fawcet died ante ret' brevis.

Pasch. 17 Car. 1, the King's silver entered; so there was no question but that it is error. Whereupon the plaintiff prayed a writ of scire facias to the conusees, and to their heirs, and to the tertenants of the land, who returned scire feci upon Thomas Thompson one of the said cognizees, and one William Bradshaw, cousin and heir of the said William Bradshaw, who was dead, and also William Farrer, Esq; the defendant and others tertenants.

The defendant Farrer pleads the very fine (now endeavoured to be reversed) and five years in bar of the writ of error, to which the plaintiff demurred; and adjudged by the whole Court for the plaintiff, and the fine was reversed, and the reason was, non potest adduci exceptio ejusdem rei cujus petitur dissolutio.

Co. Lit. 384. Tenant in tail makes a lease for life, or a gift in tail, rendering rent, and dies, the issue brings a formedon in discender, the reversion and rent is no bar to the action. Pasch. 7 H. 4, 40 a. pl. 4. In a writ of error to reverse an outlawry, the same outlawry is no good plea. And whereas it is said, Co. 2 Inst. 518, that a fine of lands in C. B. in ancient demesne is a bar after five years, it is intended another fine, and not the same which was first levied; and the case is in terminis 1 Anders. 172 & 74, and so the fine was reversed.

[463] TERM. PASCH. 34 CAR. 2, B. R.

WEDGEWOOD AND OTHERS versus BAILY AND OTHERS. TROVER, STAFF. ERROR IN B. R.

Error. 3 Danv. Ab. 32, p. 5. Skin. 39. 2 Show. 177. 3 Mod. 249.

Trover by five, and before verdict one of them dies, and they proceed to trial, and verdict for the plaintiffs, and then the plaintiffs suggest, that one of them is dead, and pray judgment for the rest, and had it; and the defendants bring a writ of error, and assign for error, that the party died before verdict, and so a verdict was given for a dead person. And after argument at the Bar judgment was reversed, because every man shall recover according to the right which he hath at the time of the bringing the action; and therefore if the heir brings an ejectment and his ancestor dies subsequent to his action, he shall not recover. And in this case, although the plaintiffs were joint-tenants, and had a capacity of having the whole survive, yet in truth every one had but a moiety, and so were not at the time of the action intitled to so much as they are after the death of one of the plaintiffs. And as to the case of 2 Bulst. 262, Spring's case, he reports the reason of the judgment to be, because by the death of one the action survives to the other: but he mistakes the reason, as appears by Read and Readman's case. As to the cases where trespass is brought against many, and one dies, they differ much from this case, because there the trespass is joint or several at the pleasure of the plaintiff. As to the case of a replevin, 3 Cro. 574, though an avowant is to some purposes a plaintiff, yet he doth not bring the action, and so not within the rule, that the same right must continue which was at the bringing the action; and so judgment was agreed to be reversed by the opinion of three against Dolben, who desired time to consider.

[464] GRIFFITH versus GOODHAND. COVENANT. MIDD.

Condition. 2 Danv. Ab. 44, p. 12. 2 Jon. 191. Skin. 39.

The defendant covenants that the plaintiff, his executors, administrators and assigns valeant & possint habere for seven years from 29 Sept. then next following the date which was 10 Julii 28 Car. 2, seven parts of all the grains made in the defendant's brew-house, and assigns one breach (inter alia) that the defendant with intention to deceive the plaintiff did put divers quantities of hops into the malt, of which the grains were made; by reason whereof the grains were spoiled, and became unprofitable to the plaintiff. Verdict for the plaintiff, and damages 100l.

And it was moved in arrest of judgment, that this breach is out of the articles, viz. the putting the hops into the grains, and damages being entire, the plaintiff ought not to have judgment. But judgment was given for the plaintiff, because the intention of the parties is to be considered in all contracts; and it was the intent of the parties here, that the plaintiff should have the grains for the use of his cattle, and they will not eat them when hops are put into them. So if I covenant that I will leave all the timber which is growing on the land I hire, upon the land at the end of the term, if I cut it down, though I leave it on the land, it is a breach of my covenant. So if I covenant to deliver so many yards of cloth, and I cut it in pieces and then deliver it, it is a breach of my covenant; for the law regards the real and faithful performance of all contracts, and doth discountenance all such acts as are in fraudem legis.

I grant to you an annuity till you have purchased 5s. per annum rent, and you purchase 5s. per annum jointly with another, that is no performance of the condition, because my intent was that you should purchase the rent for your own profit and advancement. Dyer 15 a. pl.

WATKINSON versus MERGATRON.

Prohibition. Skin. 37. 2 Jon. 191.

The plaintiff sued the defendant in the Ecclesiastical Court at York, for marrying his sister's daughter, and the defendant prayed a prohibition, because out of the Levitical degrees; but denied by the whole Court, because it is a cause of ecclesiastical cognizance, and divines better [465] know how to expound the law of marriages than the common lawyers; and though sometimes prohibitions have been granted in causes matrimonial, yet if it were now res integra, they would not be granted.

OKEDEN versus KEYNEL. ANTE 391.

Recusancy. 2 Jon. 187. 2 Show. 179.

Debt upon 23 Eliz. cap. 1, for not coming to church. At the trial, after the jury sworn, and before verdict given, the defendant came into the Court, and did there submit, recognize, confess and acknowledge, that he had offended and done ill in not going to church, and not conforming himself to the law therein, and did then prove that he had conformed himself since the suit brought, by going to church, receiving the sacrament, and behaving himself orderly and soberly during all the time of divine service, according to the law; and did then and there promise and engage to conform, and go to church, and there to behave himself soberly and orderly, according to the law; and that the said defendant was never indicted or prosecuted for any offence of this nature before.

This is an action for 20l. a month for not coming to church, tried at the Assizes in Dorset, and a verdict for the plaintiff for 40l. At the trial the defendant comes into Court and conforms, and makes the above written recognition, Whether that doth discharge the action and verdict, or no, is the question?

And the whole Court did resolve that the action and verdict were discharged; we did not argue the case publickly, but briefly gave our opinions. I had prepared my argument, but since we all agreed in opinion we did not argue.

The clauses in the several Acts of Parliament to be taken notice of are these, 23 Eliz. cap. 1, provided always, that every person guilty of any offence against the statute (other than treason and misprision of treason) which shall before he be thereof indicted, or at his arraignment or trial before judgment submit and conform himself before the bishop of the diocese, where he shall be resident, or before the justices where he shall be indicted, arraigned or tried (having not before made like submission at any his trial, being indicted for his first like offence) shall upon his recognition of such submission in open Assises or sessions of the county, where such person shall be resident, be discharged of all and every [466] the said offences against this Act (except treason and misprision of treason) and of all pains and forfeitures for the same.

1 Jac. cap. 4. Provided nevertheless, and be it enacted by the authority of this present Parliament, that if any that is or shall be a recusant shall submit or reform him or herself and become obedient to the laws and ordinances of the Church of England, and repair to the church, and continue there during the time of divine service and sermon according to the true meaning of the statute in that behalf in the said late Queen's time made and provided, that then every such person for and during such time, as he or she shall so continue in such conformity and obedience, shall from thenceforth be freed and discharged of and from any the penalties and losses which the same person might otherwise sustain and bear in respect, or by reason of such person's recusancy.

I conceive the proviso in 1 Jac. cap. 4 doth discharge the penalty notwithstanding the interest which the informer hath in the same.

1. Because the conforming was before trial.

2. Because by verdict the plaintiff acquires no debt or duty till judgment.

Mich. 37 & 38 Eliz. By all the Justices of England, 1 Roll. Rep. 94. If H. be convicted of recusancy by proclamation, and afterwards he conforms himself, he shall save the penalty incurred before, because such conviction is by the words of 39 Eliz. cap. 6, and 3 Jac. cap. 4, as sufficient as if he had been tried by verdict recorded. 11 Co. 60, Foster's case.

Mich. 39 & 40 Eliz. 1 Roll. Rep. 94. Tenant in tail is convicted by proclamation, and dies, his heir shall not be subject to the penalty by 33 H. 8, cap. 39, because no debt arises thereby, because 'tis not a judgment; but if he had been convicted by verdict and judgment given thereon, he should have been charged.

Object. This will discourage prosecutors.

Resp. 'Tis no more loss to him than if the recusant had died, and the prosecutor did undertake this suit subject to the same hazard. 2. As prosecutors are not to be used hardly, so converts are to be encouraged, which made the Lord Chief Justice Coke (in Dr. Foster's case) intercede for Foster to the King after judgment, 2 Bulst 325, and did prevail, 1 Roll. Rep. 95.

[467] TERM. TRIN. 34 CAR. 2, B. R.

BESSEY versus OLLIOT & LAMBERT. ERROR C. B. NORFF.

False imprisonment. 2 Jon. 214. Skin. 49. Antea 421.

The plaintiff declares of a trespass and false imprisonment, and detaining in prison quousq; finem fecit ad damnum 100*l.* The defendants justify by virtue of a writ of non omittas directed to the Sheriff of Norfolk, and a warrant to the bailiff of the Duke of Norfolk, to whom execution of the said warrant did appertain, who committed him to the defendant as keeper of the prison of the liberty. The plaintiff replies, de injuria sua propria, absq; hoc, that the bailiffs took him within the liberty. The defendant demurs, because the plaintiff traverses a thing not traversable, and answers not the defendant's bar; and judgment was given in C. B. for the plaintiff.

The question was this. A gaoler takes from the bailiff a prisoner arrested by him out of the bailiff's jurisdiction, Whether the gaoler be liable to an action of false imprisonment? and the Judges of the Common Pleas did all hold that he was; and of that opinion I am for these reasons.

1. In all civil acts the law doth not so much regard the intent of the actor, as the loss and damage of the party suffering; and therefore Mich. 6 E. 4, 7 a. pl. 18. Trespass quare vi & armis clausum fregit, & herbam suam pedibus conculcando consumpsit in six acres. The defendant pleads, that he hath an acre lying next the said six acres, and upon it a hedge of thorns, and he cut the thorns, and they ipso invito fell upon the plaintiff's land, and the defendant took them off as soon as he could, which is the same trespass; and the plaintiff demurred; and adjudged for the plaintiff; for though a man doth a lawful thing, yet if any damage do thereby befal another, he shall answer for it, if he could have avoided it. As if a man lop a tree, and the boughs fall upon another ipso invito, yet an action lies. If a man shoot at buts, and hurt another unawares, an action lies. I have land through which a river runs to your mill, and I lop the fallows [468] growing upon the river side, which accidentally stop the water, so as your mill is hindered, an action lies. If I am building my own house, and a piece of timber falls on my neighbour's house and breaks part of it, an action lies. If a man assault me, and I lift up my staff to defend myself, and in lifting it up hit another, an action lies by that person, and yet I did a lawful thing. And the reason of all these cases is, because he that is damaged ought to be recompensed. But otherwise it is in criminal cases, for there actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea.

Mich. 23 Car. 1, B. R. Stile 72, Guilbert versus Stone. Trespass for entering his close, and taking away his horse. The defendant pleads, that he for fear of his life by threats of twelve men, went into the plaintiff's house and took the horse. The plaintiff demurred; and adjudged for the plaintiff, because threats could not excuse the defendant, and make satisfaction to the plaintiff.

Hob. 134, Weaver versus Ward. Trespass of assault and battery. The defendant pleads, that he was a trained soldier in London, and he and the plaintiff were skirmishing with their company, and the defendant with his musket casualiter, & per infortunium & contra voluntatem suam in discharging of his gun hurt the plaintiff; and resolved no good plea. So here, though the defendant knew not of the wrongful taking of the plaintiff, yet that will not make any recompence for the wrong the plaintiff hath sustained.

2. The defendant here suffers no wrong but by his own act and will, for he was not compellable to be gaoler. And when a man takes an office, 'tis presumed he knows of all the conveniences and inconveniences which attend it. And in this, as in all other contracts, he must take the bad with the good. Vide Moor 457, pl. 629, Coot versus Lightworth, a stronger case.

3. As the gaols of the counties are incident to the office of the sheriff, 4 Co. 34 a. so the gaols of liberties are incident to the lord of the liberty. And the gaoler is but servant to him, as the gaoler of the county gaol is to the sheriff, and consequently they understand one another, and are privy to each other's acts relating to the prisoners, in presumption of law.

Object. By this way a subsequent sheriff may be answerable for the tort of his predecessor.

Resp. So it hath been resolved for the reason before alledged.

[469] 2 Cro. 379, Wythers versus Henley. Trespass and false imprisonment, and detaining him for a month. The defendant justifies by virtue of a process out of the Exchequer, directed to the defendant's predecessor, who took him by it, and also by virtue of a latitat; and so the plaintiff was delivered over to the defendant. The plaintiff replies as to the Exchequer process, there was a supersedeas, and that the predecessor detained him after the supersedeas delivered; and as to the latitat, that the plaintiff in that action ordered the defendant's predecessor to discharge the now plaintiff. And upon this plea the defendant demurred; and adjudged for the plaintiff, because this detaining by the now defendant is quasi a new taking. And the subsequent sheriff is bound to take conusance of the acts of his predecessor. And 'tis usual in other cases for one man to answer for the acts of another.

5 Co. 100 b. Penruddock's case. Quod permittat against a feoffee for a nusance erected by his feoffor.

2 Cro. 373, Rippon versus Bowles, 1 Roll. Rep. 222. If I have a way over the land of J. S. who stopt it, and then let it to J. D. for years, I may have an action against the lessee, and notice is not material. 3 Cro. 918, Prince versus Allington.

4. The inconvenience which would otherwise fall out; for the defendant should be thus imprisoned, and have no remedy for his wrong, for the bailiff may be dead, or the arrest might be by a deputy, or person insolvent; and no inconvenience on the other side, for he may take security that he shall be charged with no prisoners, but what shall be legally committed; or perhaps he may have a special action upon the case for committing the prisoner to his custody, not having been duly arrested.

But the other three Judges resolved, that the defendant the gaoler could not be charged, because he could not have notice whether the prisoner were legally arrested or not, and yet he is not compellable to take the prisoner into his custody, and if he let him go he is liable to the plaintiff in the action's suit for the escape.

Afterwards Maynard Serjeant moved farther, that the defendant is charged by the declaration for imprisonment quousq; finem fecit pro deliberatione habend. which is not answered, for the imprisonment only is justified, and not the finem fecit; and this exception was taken Mich. 19 H. 6, 35 a. pl. 73. 1 Roll Rep. 264, Slowley versus Eveley. But we all [470] thought the plea good notwithstanding that exception, because he pleads not guilty to all præter the imprisonment.

JULY 18, 1682. UPON A COMMISSION OF REVIEW TO THE COURT OF DELEGATES.

Devise.

The case was thus. Thomas Boone a merchant of Excester made his will, and died possessed of a personal estate of 100,000l. which lay in several places, and upon several securities, left three sons and five daughters, and gave his five daughters 3000l. a-piece; he gave his second son Christopher Boone 2000l. to be paid him at three several payments, and he gave him no more because he found him improvident. He makes John his eldest son his sole executor, who proves the will, and swears to bring in an inventory. A time to do it is assigned him by the Judge of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, and he not doing it, Christopher, June 1680, takes out process and cites him before the Judge of the Prerogative Court, who is satisfied that there needs no inventory. The will is proved per testes, and 22 May 1680, sentenced to be a good will. The cause why the Judge thought an inventory not necessary was, because the two first payments were made, and releases given, and then for the last by the will but 4l. per centum was due, and John allowed 6l. and also offered Christopher the last payment. Christopher not being satisfied with this, appeals to the delegates, who hear the whole cause, and sentence that there was no need of an inventory at the plaintiff's instance. And now Christopher, upon a commission ad revidend. the sentence of the delegates, prays that the sentence may be reversed, and that John may at his instance be compelled to bring in an inventory. His reasons alledged by his counsel were. 1. There may be found another will wherein Christopher may be executor, and then he will be to seek for the estate. 2. There may be specialties taken by the testator in the name of Christopher, and there being no trust declared, the same will be construed an advancement for Christopher. 3. John the present executor may die intestate, and then the administration de bonis non will belong to Christopher. 4. The statute of 21 H. 8, cap. 5 says, that the executor shall make a true and perfect inventory. 5. John hath sworn so to do, and no Judge can dispense with his oath. But notwithstanding these arguments [471] the sentence was confirmed by North Lord Chief Justice of C. B. Wyndham Justice, and myself, and Dr. Newton, and Dr. Oxinden; and as to the three first arguments there shall not be presumed another will, specialties or dying intestate; and as to the fourth, the intention of the statute was for the advantage of legatees and creditors; and here the legacy is tendered, and no creditor complains; and 'tis found that John hath acknowledged in his hands 23,000l. more than what will pay the debts and legacies. And by the statute the inventory is to consist only of goods, chattels, wares and merchandizes, and not of things in action; and this estate consists mostly of specialties; and it would be very disadvantageous to debtors (as this case is) to have their debts discovered when no necessity requires; and the Ordinary doth frequently dispense with a longer time to bring in an inventory, and so he may dispense with the inventory upon cause; and such inventory was dispensed with in the estate of Sir Henry Martin who died 1641, and in the case of Vandeput 1647, and so sentence was confirmed.

Trover of divers goods. The defendant pleads an action of trespass vi & armis brought against them formerly, for taking and disposing of the same goods; and upon not guilty pleaded, a verdict for the defendants: judgment si actio. The plaintiff demurs; and adjudged for the plaintiff in this action of trover, because trover and trespass are actions sometimes of a different nature; for trover will sometimes lie where trespass vi & armis will not lie; as if a man hath my goods by my delivery to keep for me, and I afterwards demand them, and he refuses to deliver them, I may have an action of trover, but not trespass vi & armis, because here was no tortious taking: and sometimes the case may be such, that either the one or the other will lie; as where there is a tortious taking away of goods, and detaining them, the party may have either trover or trespass, and in such case judgment in one action is a bar in the other. And the rule for this purpose is, that wheresoever the same evidence will maintain both the actions, there the recovery or judgment in one may be pleaded in bar of the other; but otherwise not; and so this judgment will not clash with Ferrer's case, 6 Co. which is good in law; for here it is to be presumed that the plaintiffs in the first action had mistaken their action; for that they had brought a trespass vi & armis, whereas they had no evidence to prove a wrongful taking, but only a demand and denial, and therefore the verdict passed against them in that action, and so were forced to begin in this new action of trover. This judgment was given positively by Pemberton, Jones and myself, Dolben hæsitante.

Trover for a ship and its tackle and furniture. Upon not guilty pleaded a special verdict was, that one William Gault a denizen of England was owner of the ship at the time of the taking, and was Dutch-built, and taken in the war between the Dutch and French as a Dutch prize, and condemned for prize in the Court of Admiralty of France, and sold, and that when the said ship was taken as prize, there was amity between England and France. That the master was a Dutchman born, but a denizen of England. The mate was English, and eight mariners English, and two Dutch on board; that the said ship was sold to divers persons by virtue of the sentence of the Admiralty of France, and that the plaintiff bought the said ship from the persons to whom the same was sold as aforesaid; that the defendants as servants of the said William Gault took the said ship from the plaintiff; and if the defendants be guilty, &c.

The chief question intended was, whether this sentence shall be examined by the common law? and resolved, it shall not, because though it be in another King's dominions, we ought to give credit to it, or else they will not give credit to the sentences of our Courts of Admiralty; and the defendants are at no prejudice; for the way is, if they find themselves aggrieved, to petition the King, who will examine the case, and if he finds cause of complaint, will send to his ambassador residing with the prince or state where the sentence was given, and upon failure of redress, will grant letters of marque and reprisal; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

DESIGNY'S CASE.

Bail. 1 Danv. Abr. 680, p. 7. 2 Show. 221.

Designy a merchant trading to Jamaica spirited away the eldest son of one Turbet, who was a scholar at Merchant-Taylors School, and a hopeful youth. Turbet exhibited an information against Designy, and upon not guilty pleaded he was found guilty at Nisi Prius before the Chief Justice Pemberton, the sitting after Trinity-term last, and this last Michaelmas-term he appeared in Court, and was fined 500l. and to lie in prison till he paid it; since which fine imposed, the prisoner procured a promise of a pardon of his fine: but the Court last term being informed of it, and it being an offence of an heinous nature, directed the father of the child to bring a homine replegiando, and thereupon an elongatus was returned, and the prisoner charged with it in prison; and now Designy procured a letter from the Commissioners of the Treasury, signifying His Majesty's inclination of pardoning the fine, if the Judges of B. R. met at the Lord Chief Justice's chamber in Serjeants Inn in Fleet-street; and upon hearing counsel of both sides, we could not think it reasonable to bail the prisoner upon the withernam, but did propose, that if the prisoner would bring [475] 1000l. into Court, we would give him his liberty, but the money to be forfeited if he produced not the child within six months, and gave him time to consider. The counsel for Designy produced a case 16 R. 2, Rot. 16, B. R. David Degois versus Count de Warwick, and 5 H. 4, Rot. 25, B. R. William Uscot versus Simon Brig, and 12 E. 4, 4, but none of the cases reached to this case, wherein the defendant could pretend to no title to the child, because he hath been already convicted upon an information.

It was objected, that if an elongatus est returned by the sheriff be conclusive to the defendant, so as he may not traverse it, then the defendant hath no remedy.

It was answered, 1. The defendant may bring an action upon the case for the false return, and if it be found for the plaintiff, the defendant in the homine replegiando may be bailed.

2. If the sheriff shall die before the issue tried, or the action brought, then the King may issue out a commission to inquire of the truth of the return, which inquisition taken by virtue of the said commission may be traversed by the defendant in the homine replegiando; and if the issue upon that traverse be found for him, he shall be bailed. Vide Rast. Intr. 402 and 403. And the capias in withernam is no execution; but unless the defendant will confess the taking, and having the party in custody, he cannot be bailed, as appears by all the cases before cited.

In the first week of January 1682 died Sir Thomas Twisden, Knight and Baronet, one of the Justices of B. R. grandævus senectute. He continued Judge to his death, but was dispensed with from sitting in Court by reason of his age and infirmity, and was allowed, ut dicitur, 500l. per annum pension from the Crown; he died in Kent, of which county he was; none succeeded him at his death, because Justice Dolben was sworn at his being dispensed with, about three years ago.

On Friday Jan. 5, 1682, in a matrimonial cause between Emerton, alias Hyde, alias Dunblane, contr. Emerton, before commissioners of delegates, and to the former commissioners a commission of adjuncts being procured, all the Judges who were therein named, and were then in town received a note subscribed by the Lord President of the Council, the Earl of Radnor, the Duke of Ormond, Lord Steward of the Household, Sir Leolin Jenkins Knight, Principal Secretary, [476] Doctor Hedges and Doctor Saint John, two doctors of the civil law, condelegates with the Judges, in these words,

We do appoint to meet and consult about a day for the hearing and determining this cause upon the ninth day of January next, in the council-chamber at Whitehall, between the hours of nine and eleven in the forenoon of the same day, and do require the proctors on each side to attend accordingly, dated this sixteenth day of December 1682.

At the receipt whereof the Judges were somewhat troubled, for that they heard nothing of it before, and it is to attend at White-hall whereas all commissions of delegates, wherein any of the Judges are named, have always been heretofore executed at one of the Serjeants Inns, because the Judges are constantly employed in the public affairs of the kingdom, in the business in their several Courts, and other things which cannot be done so conveniently for the subjects elsewhere; and also every summons upon such commissions used to be signed by one of the Judges named in the commission, which was herein wanting; and thereupon six of the Judges repaired together to the Lord Keeper North to inform him of the matter, and to desire his directions, who seemed to advise that we attend according to the note, but put the Judges in hope that the ancient course should be observed in hearing the cause; he told the Judges that the like had been attempted in Henry Martin's time, under pretence, that because bishops were named in the commission, the commission ought to be executed at Doctors Commons, but the King ordered, that the Judges should not stir from their usual places of executing such commissions. This (ut dicitur) did now arise from the promotion of Sir Leolin Jenkins, who is a civilian, and would favour his profession as much as might be.

Poor.

On Wednesday January 17, 1682, at Justice-Hall at Old-Baily in London, a case was referred to the justices, which was this; one Fletcher a widow, having several children by her former husband, who lived in the parish of St. Buttolph without Aldgate, which parish lies in two counties, viz. London and Middlesex, marries a second husband, and then they put out the children to nurse at Enfield in Middlesex, and then the mother dies, and after her the father-in-law; the nurse applies herself for money to the parish of St. Buttolph, which hath one church-warden, and several overseers of the poor of the county of Middlesex, and City of London, and the parish rates are several; the woman [477] lived and died in that parish which lies in Middlesex, who contended with the other part of the parish in London, and upon application to the Quarter-Sessions in Middlesex, the justices of peace there ordered that the part of the parish which was in London should go equal charge in relieving these children; and that part of the parish which is in London not satisfied with the order, applied themselves to the gaol-delivery at the Old-Baily, and there resolved by Pemberton Chief Justice, Dolben and other justices there, that without any particular usage to the contrary, the parish in both counties ought to contribute their shares towards the relief of the children, because the statute of 43 Eliz. cap. 2 names only parishes; but in regard it was made appear that each part of that parish had distinct officers, and made distinct rates, and had used time out of mind to make distinct accounts to the justices of each county, the Court did not look upon each division as a several parish, and thereupon ordered, that that part of the said parish which lies in Middlesex shall pay the nurse, and provide for the future for the said children. And it was resolved, that no notice can be here taken of the place of the birth of the children, but of their last settlement, by 43 Eliz. cap. 2, because they are only poor children, and not vagabonds; but they which are rogues or vagabonds within 39 Eliz. cap. 4 shall be provided for by the place where they were born.

At the same sessions a woman was indicted as accessory after to a burglary committed by one Johnson in Leicestershire. Johnson had been tried and attainted, but procured his pardon, which hath been allowed: and now the woman prayed that she might be discharged: but resolved she must plead to the indictment, for though if the principal have either his clergy, or be acquitted, or obtained his pardon before judgment, the accessory shall not be questioned; yet if the principal be attainted, the accessory must answer, though the principal be pardoned.

Memorandum, the first day of this term Edmund Saunders, Esq; of the Middle Temple appeared at the Chancery-Bar, to a writ tested in the vacation to command him to take the state and degree of a serjeant at law, and was there sworn, and immediately went from thence into the Common Pleas Treasury, and there in the presence of all the Judges, except Levinz, who was sick, made his count, and had his coif put on, and went to the Common Pleas Bar, and made some motions, till the Lord Keeper came into the Court of King's-Bench, and then he was sent for to the Bar, and when he was there placed, the Lord Keeper made a very excellent speech to him, and then he came into the Court, his writ for Chief Justice was read, and having taken the oaths of obedience and supremacy, and oath of Chief Justice, he was placed Chief Justice of the said Court, in the room of Sir Francis Pemberton, who was the day before sworn Chief Justice of the Common Pleas at his own desire, for that it is a place (though not so honourable) yet of more ease and plenty, as the Lord Keeper said in his speech to Saunders.

Memorandum, January 25, 1682. At the importunity of one Brumskil, who did formerly pretend himself able to advance the revenues of the Crown, the King commanded all the Judges to meet and consider of his proposals, which were in the general very extravagant, and totally rejected; but upon inquiry after the management of popular actions, we did find that the party who was plaintiff would frequently get an execution to levy his part, and either left the King's part unreceived, or made some private agreement with the sheriff or defendant, or else the sheriff received it, and never accompted for it, for that it was not in charge in the Exchequer, and thereupon all the Judges made this rule to be observed in all their respective Courts.

[479] That all clerks of assise and associates do return the posteas in all popular and penal actions and informations qui tam, &c. ex officio, into the respective offices whence they issue, and to receive their fees for the returning the same at the trial from the party for whom the verdict shall be given, and the master of the respective offices to whom the said posteas shall be returned by the said clerks of the assise shall send a note into the Exchequer to the clerk of the estreats there to the intent the sheriffs may be charged therewith.

Duncomb and Singleton versus Sir William Walter. Error in C. B. Action upon the Case. Middlesex.

Bankrupt. 1 Danv. Ab. 688, p. 1. 3 Lev. 57. 1 Vent. 370. Skin. 22, 87. 2 Show. 253.

Duncomb and Singleton bring an action upon the case against Sir William Walter, executor of David Walter, Esq; deceased, and set forth that the said David Walter the testator, 21 November 30 Car. 2, was indebted to John Staley in 1000l. for so much by the said testator of the said Staley had and received, and so being indebted promised to pay the same; and also that the said Staley for five years last past, before the said 21 November, was a goldsmith, and got his livelihood by buying and selling, and became indebted to Pigot in 200l. to Clayton in 600l. and being so indebted, the said 21 November began to conceal himself in his house with an intention to defraud his creditors, and became thereby a bankrupt within the meaning of divers Acts of Parliament. That 20 Febr. 31 Car. 2, at the petition of Pigot and other creditors, exhibited to the Lord Chancellor, a commission issued out to certain commissioners to inquire thereof, who after the death of the testator, viz. 14 May 31 Car. 2, by indenture assigned Staley's estate to the plaintiffs, by virtue whereof the plaintiffs are intitled to the said 100l. And the plaintiffs farther declare upon an indebitatus assumpsit for another 1000l. by the defendant received for the use of the testator. Upon non assumpsit pleaded, the jury find a special verdict, viz. that before the plaintiffs original writ sued out, viz. 1 November 1678, and by the space of five years then last past, the said Staley was a trader, and during that time became indebted to the said Pigot in 200l. to Elizabeth Clark in 1000l. and to the said Martha Clayton in 6000l. The said Elizabeth Clark made her will 5 July 1677, and made John Crew Esq; her executor, and died, after whose [480] death, and before Crew's probate of the said will, viz. 6 November 1678, the said Crew prosecuted a bill of Middlesex against the said John Staley and William Staley, returnable die Jovis prox' post quindenam Sancti Martini, for the said 1000l. on which day he was arrested, and put in sufficient security for his appearance, and so was delivered out of custody. That afterwards, viz. 18 November 1678, which was before the return of the said writ, the said John Crew proved the said will. That the said 18 November 1678, the said David Walter received the said 1000l. from the said John Staley, being before that time due to the said David Walter upon bond and judgment. That before the return of the said bill of Middlesex, viz. 26 Nov. 1678, the said John Staley voluntarily rendered himself in discharge of his bail in the suit against him by the said John Crew, and was then committed to the prison of the Marshalsea, for want of bail. That the said debt due to the said Elizabeth Clark was a just and true debt, and the said John Staley being so in custody, 14 Febr. 33 Car. 2, did remain ever since his commitment, the said debt not being paid or compounded for. That the said Staley was, and yet is a subject of the King, born at Westminster. That 20 Febr. 31 Car. 2, at the petition of the said John Pigot on his and others behalf, a commission issued out of the Chancery prout, and that the commissioners 14 May 31 Car. 2, assigned over the estate of Staley to the plaintiffs prout. That the said 100l. mentioned by the said David Walter had and received, is the same mentioned in the declaration. But whether upon the whole matter the said John Staley was a bankrupt 18 November 30 Car. 2, penitus ignorant & petunt advisamentum Curiæ, and if he was then a bankrupt they find for the plaintiff, and if not, then for the defendant. And judgment was given in C. B. for the defendant; and now the plaintiff brings a writ of error, and assigns the general error.

The case in short is, Staley being a trader becomes indebted by bond and judgment to David Walter in 1000l. and to Elizabeth Clark in 1000l. and to several other persons in several other sums. 5 July 1677, Elizabeth Clark makes her will, and John Crew her sole executor and dies. 6 November 1678, Crew arrests Staley for the 1000l. who immediately puts in sufficient bail. 18 November 1678, Staley pays David Walter the 1000l. and then the same day renders himself to prison in discharge of his bail, and lies in prison to the time of the action, which is above two years, 20 February [481] 1678, a commission issues 14 May following, the commissioners assign Staley's estate to the plaintiff; and the sole question is, whether Staley was a bankrupt on 6 November 1678, which was the day of his arrest; for if so, then it is for the plaintiffs, because he paid the 100l. to David Walter after he became a bankrupt; but if he did not become a bankrupt on that day, then it is for the defendant.

The words of the statute of 21 Jac. cap. 19 are, Being arrested for debt, shall after his or her arrest lie in prison two months or more upon that or any other arrest, or other detention in prison for debt. And in the said cases of arrest or lying in prison for such debt or debts, shall be adjudged a bankrupt from the time of his or her said first arrest.

Dyosse for the defendant in the writ of error. Here is an arrest and lying in prison two months after, and so within the words of the statute.

1. Object. Here is not an immediate lying in prison upon the arrest, for here was bail put in.

Resp. The statute distinguishes not between the cases where bail is, and where it is not put in, and though the case may not be within the second clause, it will be within the first; for here was lying in prison two years.

2. Object. A man cannot be a bankrupt, but where there is a real debt due; but here Crew had not proved the will, and till then he could not claim the debt of the testator at the time of the arrest.

Resp. The money is due to the executor before probate, for he may release, as Middleton's case is, 5 Co. 28 a. And probate is only an allowance of the executorship, and an executor may before probate bring a writ, but not declare, 1 Roll. Abr. 917 A. pl. 2. And here the will was proved before the return of the writ; and where it is said an executor cannot sue before probate, it is meant he cannot sue effectually.

This statute doth not distinguish between a legal and illegal arrest; and if a bankrupt should not become so from the first time of his arrest, he might make over his estate, and then deliver himself up to prison in discharge of his bail, and so elude the statute.

Walcot Serjeant for the defendant. The question is, from what time Staley shall be accounted a bankrupt; and I conceive only from the time that he rendered himself in discharge [482] of his bail, viz. 20 November 1678. A tradesman's being arrested barely, makes not a bankrupt. Et adjournatur.

In the case of the town of Nottingham, it appeared, that at a common council of the said town, it was ordered that there should be a surrender made of the charter to the King, and thereupon the mayor pursuant to the said order did take out of the town-chest the said charter, and surrendered the same accordingly; and so it fell out, that in the said charter was contained not only the franchise of the corporation, but also the grant of certain common to the inhabitants, and because the surrender was against the minds of a great number of the inhabitants who were discontented, and were opposers of the present government of the kingdom, they took advantage of this omission, and exhibited an information into B. R. and desired the master of the Crown-Office (in whose name the information was exhibited) to file it, but in regard it was matter of State, and of great concern, he this term desired the directions of the Court, who ordered that the Attorney General should be made acquainted therewith, who at another day appeared, and refused to meddle therewith, and so it was left to Mr. Astry to file or not to file, at his discretion, for the Court would not use any compulsory means for filing it, in regard they could not know whether such an information was necessary or no; and it is properly the office of the King's attorney to manage informations of such concernment.

ROW versus SIR THOMAS CLARGIS, KNIGHT, FOR WORDS. ERROR IN C. B.

Words. 1 Danv. Ab. 86, p. 29. 3 Mod. 26. 3 Lev. 30. Skin. 68, 88. 2 Show. 250.

The plaintiff in C. B. declares, that he was such a day deputy-lieutenant for the county of Middlesex, one of the King's Privy Council for the realm of Ireland, and stood for to be chosen burgess for the Parliament at Christ-Church in com. Hants, and that the defendant spake these words of him, viz. He is a Papist. Upon not guilty pleaded, verdict for the plaintiff, and judgment; and now Clargis brought a writ of error, and judgment affirmed by all the four justices, viz. Saunders, Jones, Dolbin and myself, and resolved, 1. That the words taken abstractively are actionable, [483] because the Acts of Parliament of 23 Eliz. 3 Jac. and 25 Car. 2 do expose a Papist to several penalties and incapacities. 2. A fortiori, as the words have relation to the quality of the person, for a deputy lieutenant is an officer of great trust; and though 'twas objected, that 'tis not an office of profit, and so no prejudice to lose it: it was answered, that 'tis of as much profit as a justice of peace; and yet the words spoke of a justice were adjudged actionable; and the times alter the law when the sense of words alter; for though formerly (Papist) was not actionable, yet now 'tis grown to be a word of more reproach. So healer of felons was not actionable till it appeared to be a concealer of felons: and to say of an attorney he is a knave, is actionable, though antiently knave was no more but servant. It was objected farther, that to have the word Papist to bear an action would be a means to discourage prosecution of Papists. To which it was answered, that railing is no prosecution; and we must not punish the innocent, because we cannot exceed in our expressions of the nocent.

And the law doth alter with the time; for before 21 E. 3, 23, an infant could not bring an appeal; and we find no precedent before that time of an appeal so brought, but now 'tis frequent; and judgment was affirmed.

Debt upon an obligation dated 24 July 18 Car. 2, against the defendant, administratrix of John Godolphin, durante minore ætate of Rebecca his daughter, for 168l. The defendant pleads, that the testator became bound by obligation, dated 18 May 26 Car. 2, in 6000l. to Brook and Wallis (trustees of Rebecca the defendant, upon her marriage with the said John Godolphin) upon condition to pay to the defendant herself 3000l. within fourteen days after the death of the said John, if she should survive him, and says that she survived him, and that she hath not assets ultra 1000*l.* which she retains towards satisfaction of the said 3000l. The plaintiff demurs generally, and I conceive judgment ought to be given for the defendant, and that it is a good plea.

[484] 1. I do agree, that if John Godolphin had made a stranger executor, there must have been an actual payment, or judgment upon the bond before this action brought, or else pleinment administre had not been a good plea.

2. If the payment here had been to be made to Brook and Wallis, though in trust for the feme, retainer could not have been pleaded, though the law seems contrary, 3 Cro. 754, Huish versus Philips, where a bond was to A. to the use of B. conditioned to pay B. money, 'twas a good plea, that the obligor tendered the money to B. because he was in a manner privy to the obligation, and so is Co. Lit. 209 a.

3. But here though the bond be to Brook and Wallis, yet the condition is that the executors of John Godolphin shall pay to the wife herself the money, and she is administratrix herself; now she cannot pay to herself, and therefore the payment must be by way of retainer.

Object. She is but administratrix durante minori ætate of Rebecca, so we cannot retain.

Resp. She may sell goods for payment of debts, 5 Co. 29, Prince's case, & eadem ratione she may retain to pay herself, Hob. 250, Bryars versus Goddard, administrator durante minori ætate may retain.

DOMINUS REX versus HIGGINS & AL'. TRIAL AT BAR. WORCESTER.

Challenge. 1 Vent. 366. Skin. 91, 101, 105.

An information in nature of a quo warranto exhibited against certain persons being citizens of the City of Worcester for using several liberties and franchises within the said city, setting forth, that King James 2 October 19 Jac. did incorporate the said City of Worcester by the name of Mayor, Aldermen and Citizens of the City of Worcester. That there should be a mayor, six aldermen, one sheriff, two chamberlains, twenty-four (of which the mayor and aldermen should be seven) to be capital citizens and counsellors, and forty-eight capital citizens, whereof the chamberlains should be two, and that the twenty-four and forty-eight should be called the common council, and that the aldermen should be elected out of the twenty-four. That upon the death or removal of any of the twenty-four, their place should be supplied out of the forty-eight. That the defendants and several others named in the information 1 November 32 Car. 2, [485] to the day of exhibiting the information, without any authority did claim to be mayor, aldermen, sheriff and citizens of the number of twenty-four and forty-eight, and by all that time did usurp upon the King, &c.

Higgins pleads, that die Lunæ post Festum Sancti Bartholomæi anno 32 Car. 2, he was chosen mayor, and the second Monday after Michaelmas took his oath for execution of his office prout letters patent require, and so justifies, &c. The King's Attorney General replies, that when elected mayor he was not of the twenty-four, and thereupon takes issue.

Edward Cooksey another of the defendants pleads, that he 9 July 13 Car. 2, by the commissioners upon the Act of Corporations was made one of the twenty-four; and that on Monday post Festum Sancti Batholomæi 32 Car. 2 he was elected alderman and sworn, &c. The Attorney General replies, that when the defendant was elected alderman he was not of the twenty-four; and issue thereupon.

Edmund Osdnal another defendant pleads, that he being one of the forty-eight, was 16 Jan. 1663 chosen of the twenty-four. The Attorney General replies, that when elected of the twenty-four he was not of the forty-eight; and issue thereupon.

John Millington, William Hughes and others plead, that 29 March 1677, &c. they were chosen of the forty-eight. The Attorney General replies, that when they took the oaths to execute the office of one of the forty-eight, they did not subscribe the declaration prout the Act of Parliament requires. The defendants rejoin, that they did subscribe; and issue thereupon; and a trial at the Bar upon all these issues.

The counsel for the defendants took a challenge to the array, because the jury was out of the City of Worcester; and it being suggested by the Attorney General upon the roll, that the sheriff of the said city was one of the defendants, he prayed a venire facias to the coroners, and that there were two coroners, and though both the said coroners were mentioned upon the record to have returned the panel, yet that in truth, but one only, viz. Trimnel, did return the same, and so not good; but the Court unanimously resolved, that the challenge ought not to be allowed, because it appears by the record itself, that both did return the same; and that no challenge contrary to the record ought to be allowed.

Another challenge was taken to the polls, because the jurors had not any freehold within the city; and this challenge was debated by all the four Judges, and it seemed to [486] them all, that it can be no good challenge, because the statute of 2 H. 5, cap. 3, doth not extend to this case, for that is only in causes between party and party; nor doth 35 H. 8, cap. 6, reach thereto, because that statute cannot extend to cities and corporations, but to sheriffs of counties at large; for if a panel made in corporations, must have freehold jurors, they must have likewise six hundredors, which cannot be in any corporation of England; and so 27 Eliz. cap. 6. But the jurors of corporations are to be at the common law; and though it is said 3 Cro. 413, in Blunt's case, that there ought to be some freeholders, that cannot be intended in corporations, for in some corporations there are no freeholders at all, and so justice would fail; and by constant practice in all the trials at Guildhall, London, by Nisi Prius, no such challenge was ever made or allowed, and therefore it would be very mischievous after so long practice to the contrary to admit this challenge; and yet nevertheless, because the counsel for the defendants were not well satisfied with this resolution, I was desired by the other Judges of the Court to know the opinion of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, and I discoursed with them, and propounded the challenge to them; and Pemberton Chief Justice, Wyndham and Charleton (Levinz being absent propter agritudinem) did clearly concur with us, and I returned their answer so to the Court; and for not allowing these two challenges, the defendants counsel preferred a bill of exceptions, which they desired might be signed by us, that they might be afterwards enabled to alledge the same for error in Parliament, if occasion should be.

Vide 17 Ass. 15. In an inquest in an action of debt it was not allowed for a challenge, that the jurors had not sufficient land, because the freehold was not in demand.

Note; In the case of Sir Henry Vene it was resolved 14 Car. 2, B. R. that a bill of exception doth not extend where prisoners are indicted at the suit of the King. Syderfin Rep. 85.

[487] HITCHINS versus STEVENS.

Attornment. 1 Danv. Abr. 610, p. 10. 2 Jon. 217, 232. 2 Show. 233.

Debt for rent. The plaintiff sets forth, that A. was possessed of the lands for the term of ninety-nine years by the demise of B. and afterwards A. demised the premisses for twenty-one years to the defendant, who entered and was possessed, and afterwards granted the reversion to the plaintiff, and that so much was in arrear, unde actio accrevit. Upon nihil debet pleaded, and verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the plaintiff had not alledged in his declaration, that the defendant did ever attorn to the plaintiff's grant of the reversion. And resolved good enough without it after a verdict, 2 Roll. Rep. 489, for 'tis apparent, that if the plaintiff had not given the attornment in evidence, he must have been nonsuited; and wheresoever it may be presumed that any thing must of necessity be given in evidence, the want of mentioning of it in the record will not vitiate it after a verdict; and so judgment was given for the plaintiff.

THE KING against THE INHABITANTS OF BITTON. GLOUC.

Fences. 2 Show. 255.

Resolved by Saunders Chief Justice, that cutting down of timber-trees by unknown persons noctanter, is not within the Statute of Westm. 2, cap. 46, for the words of the statute are, fossatum & sepem prostraver'.

SMITH versus BATTERTON.

Costs. 2 Danv. Ab. 222, p. 13. 2 Jon. 232. Skin. 100. 2 Show. 258.

Trespass quare vi & armis the defendant flung down certain stalls of the plaintiff in the market place of Highworth in com. Wilts. Upon not guilty pleaded, verdict was found for the plaintiff, but damages were given under 40s. and upon the Secondary's refusing to tax costs, as being a case within 22 & 23 Car. 2, cap. 5, pl. 236, it was moved by the plaintiff's counsel that costs might be taxed; and upon debate it was resolved by the whole Court, that the plaintiff shall have his ordinary costs, because the statute shall be intended to reach only to such actions in which the [488] freehold may apparently come in debate; but in this case the action is not quare clausum fregit, but only for destroying a chattel, and the freehold cannot come in debate, any more than if a man shall take his sword out and run a coach-horse into the guts, whereby he died, and the owner shall bring an action vi & armis for it, and recover under 40s. damages, yet he shall have his full costs.

SANDS versus EXTON.

Prohibition. Skin. 91. 2 Show. 300.

[489] AT THE COURT AT WHITEHALL, DEC. 13, 1682. PRESENT THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

Lord Archbp. of Canterbury, Lord President, Lord Privy Seal, Duke of Albemarle, Duke of Ormond, Duke of Beaufort, Lord Chamberlain, Earl of Chesterfield, Earl of Sunderland, Earl of Clarendon, Earl of Bath, Earl of Craven, Earl of Conway, Earl of Rochester, Lord Viscount Fauconberg, Lord Finch, Lord Bishop of London, Lord Chief Justice North, Mr. Secretary Jenkins, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Godolphin.

Whereas the Governor and Company of Merchants of London, trading to the East-Indies, did represent to His Majesty in Council, that the ship Expectation alias Commerce of London, was at Graves-end bound for the East-Indies to trade within the limits of the said company's charter; His Majesty having taken into consideration that the East-India Company have several contracts, treaties and articles of peace with several princes in the East-Indies, and that in case such are permitted to trade who have no such leagues or treaties with the said princes, acts of hostility may ensue, and the trade of the nation much prejudiced, was pleased to order the Right Honourable the Commissioners of the Admiralty to cause the said ship to be stopped until she shall be cleared, or that the owners shall give security in the Court of Admiralty, where His Majesty hath directed a prosecution of the said ship.

It is this day ordered by His Majesty in Council, that His Majesty's Advocate General and Proctor do take care forthwith that process be issued against the said ship Expectation, alias Commerce, for staying of her until security be entered in the Court of Admiralty, that she shall not go nor trade with any infidel country within the limits of the East India Company's charter without His Majesty's licence.

Serenissimus dominus noster Rex contr. navem quand vocat. The Expectation, alias The Commerce of London.

Which day the Right Worshipful Sir Thomas Exton the King's Advocate, and Samuel Franklin, Esq; His Majesty's Proctor, did on the behalf of our Sovereign Lord the King propose that if Captain Sands, or any of the parties, having any interest in the said ship and lading will give security into this Court in the sum of 40,000l. that the said ship shall not go nor trade with any infidel country within the limits of the East-India Company's charter without His Majesty's licence, pursuant to any order of the King and Council lately presented to this Court bearing date the 13th of this present month of December, or otherwise will take out a commission of appraisement to appraise the said ship and the goods laden on board her, and give in bail in the double value of the said ship and goods according to the said appraisement, in case they will not unlade the said goods, or if they will take their goods out of the said ship (which the King's advocate and proctor offered them to do if they should think fit) then in the double value only of the said ship, and of her tackle, apparel and furniture, that in such case the said ship may be decreed to be released from the arrest she now lies under, otherwise they prayed that she may still be continued under the said arrest until such bail be given as aforesaid in the presence of the said Captain Sands and Mr. Chapman, his proctor, dissenting and alledging, offering and praying as in the former act of this Court is contained.

Whereupon the Judges declared and offered, that any of the persons concerned in the said goods and lading may unlade and take their goods out of the said ship, if they please, and that, if they will so take them out, he will require bail in [492] no greater sum than in the double value of the said ship, and of her tackle, apparel and furniture, according to the appraisement to be made as aforesaid; and farther declared that if Captain Sands and the persons chiefly concerned with him in this business will affirm upon oath, that they did not design or intend to go or trade, nor will go or trade with the said ship in any infidel country within the limits of the East-India Company's charter without His Majesty's licence, that then he will take their juratory caution, and will decree the said ship to be released from the said arrest without requiring any other or further caution or security; which they refusing, and also refusing to give in bail as aforesaid, the Judge decreed that the said ship with her tackle, apparel and furniture should still continue under the arrest of this Court until such bail be given as above required. Concordat cum originali quod attestor Tho. Bedford publ. dictæ Curiæ Registerii Deputatus.

The ensuing case and argument I had from the Lord Chief Justice North, May 25, 1681.

CARTER versus CRAWLEY. IN PROHIBITION.

Distribution.

Robert Hamond died intestate leaving neither wife nor child, father nor mother, brother nor sister, nor uncle. The administration was granted to Agnes, the plaintiff's wife, the surviving sister of the intestate's father. The defendants are the children of Margaret the other sister of the intestate's father, who sue in the Spiritual Court to have a proportion upon distribution according to the late Act of 22 & 23 Car. 2, cap. 20, for settling of intestates estates, and the Judge did award distribution; whereupon they prayed a prohibition. And the defendants appearing to an attachment upon the prohibition, and denying the contempt, set forth this matter in a plea to have a consultation; whereupon the plaintiff demurs.

[497] The question is single, the intestate having neither wife nor child, nor father nor mother, but his next of kin being two aunts, one whereof was dead in his life-time, and the other having administration, whether the children of the deceased aunt shall be admitted jure repræsentationis in loco parentis to demand a share upon distribution, as their mother should have had if living.

It depends upon the exposition of the Act for Settling Intestates Estates, and is of great consequence; for whatever is determined by the common law to be the true meaning of this Act must be a rule to the Ecclesiastical Courts, for the Courts of Common Law are entrusted with the exposition of Acts of Parliament, and we ought not to suffer them to proceed in any other manner than shall be adjudged by the King's Courts to be the true meaning of this Act; therefore if this Court shall award a consultation upon this point, it is final, and this sentence cannot be corrected by any appeal.

Because the Ecclesiastical Courts did before this statute exercise a kind of jurisdiction of distribution, of which notice is taken by the Act, as if it were legal; whereas by our law no such jurisdiction was allowed, but prohibitions were sent to restrain them therein, and this Act intended to restore this jurisdiction.

It will not be amiss to take a short view of the history of their practice.

Ecclesiastical Courts anciently grasped at a large jurisdiction de debitis & catallis upon pretence of taking cautionary oaths to perform contracts and such like, and then upon breach thereof did proceed pro læsioni fidei; but by statutes and mandatory writs they were contained within their due bounds not to meddle de debitis & catallis (which were temporal things) nisi de testamentis & matrimonio.

In the jurisdiction de testamentis & de debitis & catallis relating to them, their power was very large by the common law; for if there were no will appearing, the Ordinary had the absolute disposal of the estate.

If they would not pay debts with the estate, yet they were so far intrusted that they were not subject to suit until 13 E. 1, Westm. 2, c. 19, which subjected them to the suit of the creditors in the same manner as executors were.

Upon this their meddling with deceaseds estates, which was very beneficial before, became very troublesome, and to free themselves from it they were fain to put the administration [498] thereof into third persons hands, who might give them security to save them harmless from suits.

17 E. 3. When it was desired in Parliament, that administrators might have the power to sue, it was answered, that the Ordinaries might sue sith they were to answer; whereby it appears that Parliament would not discharge them of the burthen, or take notice of administrators otherwise than as their servants or attornies:

But 13 E. 3 eased them in this particular, for they being thereby bound to grant administration to the best friend of the intestate, and the administrators being made as executors, they retained only the safe jurisdiction of granting administration and calling the administrators to account.

The common law was hereupon to judge who were the best friends, and therefore if there were husband or wife, in default of them, son or daughter, in default of them or their children, father or mother, in default of them, brothers or sisters, in default of them or their children, uncles or aunts, the Ordinary was compellable to grant administration to them in their several orders.

They were bound to grant to the next friends, if they were loyal, but if they were many in equal degree, perhaps they were not bound to grant administration to all, but might choose the most fit person for avoiding confusion.

22 H. 8. This was made plain, for thereby they had a liberty expressly provided to refuse the wife, if they pleased; and if they were many in equal degree of the next of kindred, to grant administration to which they please, and refuse the rest, which liberty was a great advantage to their jurisdiction.

For they would choose him that was most obsequious to them, and when they called to account upon pretence of bestowing the overplus for the good of the deceased's soul (a device in those popish times to make profit to the clergy) they disposed the overplus as their own.

Upon the reformation that pretence vanished, but they thought it allowable to distribute the overplus amongst the kindred, according to the rules of the civil law, de successoribus ab intestato. And this was so reasonable, that they used that course without blame a great while, and inserted a clause into all their bonds for security to account to the Ordinary, that the overplus upon such account should be distributed as the Ordinary should appoint.

Which was more than they could justify, and it came to be questioned in Slany's case, Hob. 83, and Moor 864, but ended [499] by reference, and afterwards in Took and Lawne's case, Hob. 191. The administrators were willing to make a reasonable distribution; but their adversaries not being satisfied, appealed to the delegates, which unreasonable opposition drove the administrators to the King's Courts, where it was resolved that he was not compellable to make any distribution at all; and accordingly it was resolved in Fotherby's case, 2 Car. 1. 1 Cr. 62. and Levannus's case, 6 Car. 1. 1 Cro. 201, whereby the law came to be settled and known, that they could neither compel administrators to make distribution by suit in the Spiritual Court, nor sue any bonds taken for that purpose.

The only way then left for them was this, whilst they were under deliberation whether they would grant administration to the wife or next of kin, and to which of the next of kin, they did treat with the parties, and consider what sum the overplus was like to amount unto, how that ought by their rules to be distributed, and they would prefer him to the administration that would beforehand perform such distribution by payment of monies, and giving security to persons unto whom it was appointed; and this practice held till the making of this Act whereon the question arises.

The occasion of making this Act was, because it was found very inconvenient for any administrator to pay before he received; it was hard for him to know what he might undertake before he had possession, and the Judge could not have a perfect knowledge of the true value of the overplus to give him in the measure of his distribution till after the administration ended, and the account of the estate taken.

There were public inconveniencies, which were urged to the Parliament by the civilians, who yet had another reason to desire the former methods might be changed; for the allotting distributions in this manner was but a barren jurisdiction that could not be drawn out in length; all disputes were ended uno statu without appeal, and the accounts of administrators were never contested when there was no adversary concerned to demand a share in the overplus upon taking them.

Having said thus much concerning their practice before the Act of Parliament, and the causes of making this law, I will now proceed to the exposition of it.

The statute is introductivum novi juris, and therefore ought to receive a strict interpretation in restraint of distributions, which are hereby introduced against the policy of former laws.

[500] Before the statute the administrator that had all the burthen of the administration had likewise the benefit, and when he had paid all the debts and legacies, was never more questioned upon his account, because no man could demand the overplus from him; but now by this law the overplus is given away, and he is to have no part of it, but as he stands related to the intestate, no recompence for his pains, no more than he should have had if another had been administrator. And here is not only lucrum cessans, but damnum emergens, for at the end of his administration he must give an account, which will be disputed by the parties concerned, and if he hath not acted very cautiously may bring a considerable loss upon him.

Methinks we should expound this Act as much in favour of administrators as we can in restraint of distributions and remote representatives, that are brought to participate of the benefit of the administrators thrift and good management.

But I admit that all Acts of Parliament are to be expounded according to the true meaning to be collected from the words of them, and that must be a rule in this case; therefore I will endeavour to find out that meaning, 1. By considering the reason of distribution, and the practice in the Ecclesiastical Court grounded upon that reason, as it was before this statute. 2. By considering the words of the Act relating to this clause.

As to the rules of Spiritual Courts in ordering distribution, I should have been glad the parties would have brought civilians to have informed us concerning the grounds of their law and practice in this particular.

Not having had that assistance, I have considered in the best manner I can upon the nature of the thing, whereupon I apprehend there are two motives of distribution, one in respect of the intestate, another in respect of the Ordinary that grants administration.

In respect of the intestate it may be thought an obligation upon every man to provide for those which descend from his loins; and as the administrator is to discharge all other debts; so this debt to nature should likewise exact a distribution, to all that descend from him in the lineal degrees, be they never so remote.

And because those which are remote have not so much of his blood, therefore the measure should be according to the stocks, more or less as they stand in relation to him.

Upon this reason representations are admitted to all degrees in the lineal descent.

[501] There is no such obligation to the remote kindered in a collateral line, therefore they are not regarded but in respect of proximity as they are next of kin, it being to be supposed, every man would leave his estate to his next kindered: but the children of those that are deceased come not within this reason, for they are a degree more remote.

In respect of the Ordinary it may be considered that those that are of equal degree and next of kin, be they never so many, ought to be looked upon by the Ordinary with an equal eye, therefore when he has preferred one to the administration, he ought to give some recompence to the others, that he may not appear partial, they being as capable to demand and have administration as the other. But the children of those which are deceased have not the same pretence; for they were not capable to contest the administration.

Another reason there is to exclude representations in remote degrees, that thereby the estate might come to be divided into so many and so small parts that the benefit would not be valuable.

I have heard civilians say, that representations are rejected in remote degrees of collaterals by their law upon this ground.

Now the case of brothers children is of a mixed consideration, 1. In respect of the obligation, for the intestate was a kind of parent to his brothers children, and in that respect marriages between them are prohibited. 2. There is no danger that the subdivisions should be very many and the estate reduced into very small parts; for brothers and sisters cannot be many, as cousin germans and other remote degrees may, therefore there may be reason to admit brothers children to distribution by representation, and reject all farther degrees.

Having touched the reasons whereupon I suppose distribution grounded, concerning the practice, I can only say what I have learnt by enquiry from civilians of my acquaintance, having had no other means to be informed of it, the Bar not having produced any precedents of the Spiritual Courts on either side.

In the case at Bar the order of the Spiritual Court is for a distribution to the brothers children of the collaterals, who are not the intestates brothers children; and by that it should seem as if their law (if we should let them alone) would carry on the distribution by representations to a more remote degree.

[502] But I have been informed by eminent civilians of my acquaintance, I suppose I may name them without their displeasure, Sir Leoline Jenkins, Judge of the Prerogative Court, and Sir Robert Wiseman Dean of the Arches, that it is the constant and clear practice of their Court to reject all representations of collaterals, except children of the intestate's brothers and sisters.

I am sorry the plaintiff in this prohibition did not seek redress by way of appeal, that we might have seen what would have been finally ordered in their law, by which we might have known how their law stood, as to this point, which might have given us some light towards the understanding this Act.

I must confess that I do acquiesce in the opinion of those learned men, and take their law to stand in this point for the exclusion of all representations to remote collaterals. I give little credit to the sentence in this cause: I remember the same Judge, the Archdeacon of Huntington, the other day ordered distribution amongst the kindred of the first intestate upon an administration cum testamento annexo, where the residuum bonorum was devised to the executor, who died intestate, whose next of kin ought clearly to have had it, which occasioned our granting a prohibition upon sight of the sentence. This being the same Judge, I have the less reverence for his opinion in the other matter.

I will now consider the words of the Act of Parliament, whereupon this question ariseth, they are these,

[The residue of the said estate to be distributed equally to every of the next of kindred of the intestate, who are in equal degree, and those who legally represent them.

Provided that there be no representations admitted amongst collaterals after brothers and sisters children.]

Upon these words, the question is thus, Whether in the collateral line only the intestate's brothers and sisters children can be admitted to have distribution jure repræsentationis in loco parentis, or whether representations are admitted in remoter degrees of collaterals to the children, of such as were brothers and sisters to the collaterals.

In short, whether the words brother and sister shall relate to the intestate, or to the collaterals.

I hold, that the words of the Act must be understood of brothers and sisters to the intestate, and not of brothers and sisters of remoter collaterals; for these reasons:

[503] 1. All other relative terms generally expressed through the whole Act have the intestate for their correlative, so (wife) is meant wife of the intestate, (children) are children of the intestate, (heir at law) is of the intestate, so that in the most plain and obvious sense, the intestate ought here to be taken for the correlative to the words brothers and sisters.

2. My second reason is, because the distribution is given by the Act for their relation to the intestate, and not for their relation to the collaterals, therefore the relation mentioned ought naturally to refer to the intestate, and not to the collaterals. There may be cases put wherein brothers and sisters children of collaterals may be no kin to the intestate, if they were by the half blood, and it cannot be pretended that such shall have a share in the distribution. Now why should the words be taken in the sense that comprehends those that have no title to distribution?

3. My third reason is, because as these words comprehend more than ought to have distribution in some instances, so they fall short and leave out many that by parity of reason ought to have distribution, and therefore this sense they would put upon the words is very improper.

As for instance.

Suppose the next of kin are nephews by several brothers, and some of them are dead, leaving children, these children are not brothers children to the collaterals, and cannot within the words claim any share; but if by chance any of them had had uncles surviving, then they had been brothers children to the collaterals.

So if the next of kin are cousin-germans, and some of them are brothers to one another, others are not; the children of such of them as had brothers that survived the testator shall have a share, but the children of such who had no surviving brothers shall have no share, which is most absurd, for they ought to have a share as they relate to the intestate, and not as they relate to the collaterals.

I must needs say it is hard to imagine the Parliament could oversee these absurdities which are so plain in consequence, and they had been so easily avoided, that we ought for that reason to believe, that they meant the relation to the intestates in this as well as other places.

If they had meant the relation should have been to the collaterals, how easily might it have been expressed so, and by words that would have brought in all cases in parity of [504] degree, as if it had been thus expressed (Provided that there be no representations admitted amongst collaterals after their children).

This had been without ambiguity or question, and it had extended to all cases in pari gradu, and to no case but where there was kindered to the intestate.

I cannot imagine the Parliament meant to let in representations in remote degrees, because they might so easily have expressed it in plain terms, and they would certainly have done it in this Act, which is carefully penned in other parts of it.

4. A fourth reason is, because the excluding representations in a remote degree agrees with the reasons upon which distribution is grounded. For, 1. Nephews and nieces to the intestate are of so near relation, the intestate having been as a parent to them, that they are of great regard, whereas remoter degrees have no regard but for their proximity (because there are none nearer) and therefore no reason to admit representations amongst them, to bring in a remote degree to share with those that are nearer of kin. 2. Again, nephews and nieces cannot be many, so that the division cannot come into very many parcels; but in a remote degree there may be very many of the same degree, and to admit a subdivision to the children of any deceased would make the shares of such children very inconsiderable, not worth demanding.

5. My fifth reason is, because by the opinion of the learned, the law and practice of the Spiritual Courts before this Act did exclude all representations of collaterals, after the intestates nephews and nieces.

The whole scope of the Act was to make their jurisdiction as to distribution legal, which before was condemned by the King's Courts, and the words of the Act (legally representing) (pro suo cuiq; jure) and (according to the laws in such cases) and (the rules and limitations set down) shew that there is a reference to their laws. Now if there were an opinion this way before the Act; there is great reason to believe this clause was founded upon that opinion, and to expound it that way. I never heard of any opinion that before the Act the representations were bounded to brothers children of collaterals. It may be the learned doctor who hath ordered distribution in this case, has done it upon an imagination, that this clause has changed their law in this particular, taking it in that sense that my brothers do that have argued against me.

[505] I shall now observe the objections that are made against me.

1. Object. They say, Ad proximum antecedens fiat relatio, and the next precedent relative is the word collaterals.

Sol. This maxim hath always this restraint, that it must agree with the sense, so that it admits an enquiry which relative best agrees with the sense, and we must judge according to the sense, and not by the order of words.

2. Object. They say it is strange this proviso should restrain representations of collaterals to one particular case, which were left under a generality before.

Sol. I see no cause of wonder, if it were so; but that which is called a generality, is by the words (legal representatives) and if by the course of their law representations were not admitted to other collaterals than brothers and sisters children, then those remoter degrees had no legal representations; so that this clause is but explanatory of the word (legal) in the sense of their law, our law having no notice of it at all.

3. Object. They say there is no inconvenience in the other exposition, but it seems reasonable that the nephews in all cases should have a share with the uncles.

Sol. I have already shewn by my reasons, that by the other exposition the symmetry and reason upon which distribution is grounded fails, and many absurd cases will follow upon it.

4. Object. Then they object that there are few Acts of Parliament that provide for all cases; there are casus omissi upon the most clear laws, and the sense of an Act must not for that be lost.

Sol. I confess a law clearly penned shall have its force in cases it does reach, though it does not reach all cases; but where a law is penned, that it may be expounded one way or other, and there is a question of the meaning of it, it is more natural to believe it was meant in that way that is clear, and that reaches all cases that are in parity of reason, than in that way that has absurd consequences, as this hath, both by including those which were not intended, and leaving out those which stand in the same degree, as I shewed before.

To conclude, I conceive this Act was intended for a plain rule, and I think it much better to interpret it in the most plain and obvious sense which will establish the succession of personal estates, according to reason and symmetry, than to strain to find out another sense for the sake of remote kindred, that are of no regard, which will produce apparent absurdities, [506] and subject personal estates to fanciful and intricate disputes, that will need another Act to compose and settle.

Having desired the opinion of the learned doctors of Doctors-Commons upon the question following,

Whether before the late statute of 22 Car. 2 for settling intestates estates upon ordering distributions, representations were admitted amongst collaterals in remote degrees? or, whether there were any bounds set by their law or practice beyond which representations were rejected, and what those bounds were? or, whether it was not merely discretionary as the Ordinary thought fit? I received this answer from them:

In making distributions of intestates estates amongst collaterals, our civil law, and the practice of the Ecclesiastical Courts have constantly observed these two rules.

The first is, repræsentatio in filius fratrum & sororum tantum locum habet, ad ulteriores vero collaterales non extenditur.

The second is, that in case there be no brothers nor brothers children, vocantur ad successionem reliqui collaterales quicunq; in gradu sunt proximiores, remotioribus exclusis. Ita quod infallibiliter semper prior in gradu sit potior in successione, whereby representation must needs be out of doors, the next of kin, whether one or more being only to be admitted to the distribution.

[1] TERM. SANCT. MICH. ANNO 12 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

SLATER against SLATER AND HIS WIFE.

Husband and wife taken on an obligation by both, and she discharged. Vide post. 51. Vide 1 Salk. 115. 1 Mod. 8, 135. 1 Sid. 20, 395. 2 Keb. 355, 442. 6 Mod. 17, 105. Habeas corpus, where without motion.

Debt was brought against them on an obligation sealed by them both, and both were taken by capias: it was moved for an habeas corpus to bring them into Court, to the intent that the husband only might be committed in custody, and the wife discharged; (and it was held) by the Court, that this habeas corpus for removing the bodies might have been for them without motion; but where the party is committed for a crime, there it ought to be on motion.

HEATH against PAGET.

Assise of an office in B. R. S. C. 2 Keb. 3, 13, 19, &c. 1 Sid. 40. Palm. 285.

Assise of a freehold (laid) in Westminster, of the office of keeper of the writs and records of this Court, and shews it to be an ancient office grantable by the Chief Justice to any person for life, to be exercised by himself or his sufficient deputy; and that the office being void, Heath Chief Justice, granted it to the plaintiff: the defendant prays a day for excepting to the writ, and had it; and then took an exception (viz.) that the writ being sued in the times of the late troubles, was by [2] security and pledges, whereas the writ in Latin is pone per vades & plegios, and vades is sureties: and for this exception the writ was abated by consent. But as I have heard, this exception was over-ruled in the Common Pleas the last term: and note, the writ in the Register, 169 b. is pone per vadium, &c. and in F. N. B. 177 it is pone per vad', &c. which may be vades or vadium; and thereupon a new writ was brought, returnable this term, in Latin, and the tenant prayed a special imparlance (with) salvis, &c. until another term: but by Twysden Justice, this is against an officer of the Court, who ought to be always present (in Court) and this writ is (to be) a speedy remedy; and thereupon time was given to the defendant for excepting to the writ, but not till another term, but to another day in this term: and then the exception was, that the writ in the teste was duodecno of this King, for duodecimo, and this was prayed to be amended, it being only an error of the clerk (or writer) and cited 8 Co. 160. 1 Cro. Turner against Palmer in a quare impedit ecclesia for vicaria amended. Hob. 118, Brickhead against The Archbishop of York, in a quare impedit vaccaria for vicaria amended, the instructions being right. And Hob. 249, in ejectment, divisit for dimisit in the writ was amended: but on the other side were cited F. N. B. 14. Hob. 128, Oglethorpe against Maude, 9 H. 7, 17. 5 Co. 121. Also, this is the substance of the writ, viz. the date, and it is the ignorance of the clerk in not duly dating the writ: and as to that which is said in 8 Co. 159 b. that false Latin in writs is not amendable, but a word that is no Latin is, Twysden and Wyndham Justices said, that the contrary thereof had been oftentimes adjudged, and the difference is, if the word be of the substance of the writ, be it (either) false Latin or no Latin, it is not amendable; but if it be not of the substance of the writ it is amendable, be it false Latin or no Latin; and this word, viz. the date, is of the very substance of the writ, for if it has no date it is not pleaded in another assize. And for this fault only the writ was abated by the whole Court, divers other exceptions of less force being over-ruled: and after in Trinity term on a new original brought the assize was tried here at Bar, and verdict and judgment for the tenant.

[3] TALBOT against BACON.

Battery by husband and wife, and taking of goods not cured by a verdict, finding not guilty as to the goods. Vide Hob. 184. 2 Cro. 665. Noy's M. S. Case 17. Hard. 166. Ld. Raym. 1208. Buller's N. P. 20. 1 Com. Dig. 108, 576.

Trespass (was brought) by the husband and wife, for the beating of the wife, and taking the goods of the husband; and on not guilty (pleaded, &c. a verdict was for the plaintiff for the beating, and for the defendant for the residue: and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the action was not well brought as to the goods, and the severance (thereof) by the verdict had not cured it; and cited Hob. Revel against Gray, and 2 Cro. Buckley against Hales. And judgment was stayed, no body appearing on the other side.

HUDLAND against POVY.

In debt on an obligation, the defendant demands oyer of the condition, which was to perform covenants in an indenture, and then pleads, that there were not any covenants in the indenture; whereupon the plaintiff demurred and prayed judgment, (for that if there were no covenants the obligation is single) and had it, except cause (shewn, &c.)

DAYE against WEBB.

Assumpsit to purchase at the best rate he could. Vide 3 H. 4, 14. 11 H. 6.

In assumpsit the plaintiff declares, that in consideration of, &c. the defendant promised to purchase such lands at the best rate that he could, and assigned a breach, that the defendant had not purchased the lands; on which the defendant demurs: and it was now argued for him, that the declaration is not good, not having averred that he could purchase them: and Twysden Justice held, the assumpsit or promise absolute, and that he had taken upon him to purchase them absolutely, but that the price was to be so reasonable as he could. (But by) Foster Chief Justice, he hath not undertaken to purchase them except the owner will sell; and he is only to purchase them at the best rate that he can, and therefore he is not to purchase them if he cannot. But judgment was ruled for the plaintiff, except cause (shewn.)

Whether the wife's contract shall bind the husband or not. S. C. 1 Mod. 9, 124 to 243. 1 Keb. 69, 80, 87, 206, &c. 1 Sid. 109, 425. 1 Vent. 42. 2 Vent. 155. Vide 1 Salk. 116, 118, 189. 6 Mod. 239. Allen 61, post 6, 7.

In assumpsit on (issue) non assumpsit, a special verdict at Guild-Hall, before Mallet Justice, found, that Scott's wife departed from him without his consent, and lived twelve years separate from him, and then returned; but he then would not receive her, nor allow her any maintenance, and discharged (or forbid) tradesmen, particularly the plaintiffs, from trusting her with any wares: and that the plaintiffs being mercers, sold the wife wares to the amount of 40l. and that the prices were reasonable, and the things fit for her quality; and if the husband was obliged to pay for them they found for the plaintiff, and if not for the defendant.

This case was argued at the Bar three several times, first by Alleyn for the plaintiff, and Wylde for the defendant; secondly by Finch for the plaintiff, and Serjeant Beare for the defendant; and thirdly by Jones for the plaintiff and Serjeant Baldwin for the defendant, and afterwards by all the Judges at the Bench, viz. Foster, Chief Justice, Mallet, Twysden and Wyndham: and the whole Court agreed, that the verdict was sufficient, though it did not find what the goods were; for although what are fit and necessary, is to be tried by the Court, yet it is that Court before which the cause is tried, and not the Court here before which it comes to be adjudged on the special verdict: and that these goods were fit for her quality is agreed by (both) the jury and the Court where the cause was tried. But whether the husband should be charged the Court was divided in opinion; Twysden and Mallet held that he should be charged; for when she returned to her husband, and he would not receive her, nor provide a maintenance for her, if no body would trust her (so as) to charge the husband, she must starve, for she cannot earn her living by her labour, for whatever she gains by her labour the husband shall have; and therefore of necessity she must be trusted, and the things being necessary for her living, the husband ought to be charged for them, and the husband's prohibiting (forbidding) the plaintiffs to trust her, cannot deprive her of the liberty which the law gives her for preservation of her life; for the law for necessity dispenses with things which otherwise are not lawful to be done, as to throw down my neighbour's house [5] for preventing the spreading of fire, to throw goods out of a boat when it is overladen, and the like; and they agreed the case put by Fineux, 21 H. 7, 40, that the wife cannot provide bread for the family (so as) to charge the husband: but here the provision is necessary for the maintenance of her own life; and though alimony be recoverable in the Spiritual Court, yet if the husband be obstinate, and will not obey their sentence, how shall the woman live? And if he will obey it, yet how shall she live in the mean time? And (as to) the cases cited at the Bar of writs to the sheriff, for delivering to the wife reasonable estovers, those were in time of H. 8, and (have been) long time disused. And Twysden Justice held, that in this case the plaintiffs might have trover against the husband for the goods, if the contract be void, which all the others denied; the goods being delivered (by the plaintiff) and (he) not to rehave them: and the said two Judges held, that as the husband shall be bound in trespass for a trespass done by the wife, or (in) trover for goods taken by the wife, so he shall be here for goods sold to her or relief of her necessity; and to maintain the opinion for the plaintiffs, were cited 20 H. 6, 26. Dyer 234. 11 H. 6, 30. Also 10 Co. Bishop of Salisbury's case, that a bishop may grant an office of necessity notwithstanding the statute. And 9 Co. 73. A feme covert excused in a ravishment of ward for necessity, because she has nothing to pay; and it is no advantage to the husband, for he is charged only for necessaries, and those he must have provided if the wife had continued with him, and divers other matters were said, and divers other authorities cited on this side.

But of the contrary opinion were Foster and Wyndham, and on this part it was argued, that the husband shall not be charged; for when she departs from her husband against his will, and remains so long absent, and returns again at her own pleasure, the husband shall not be obliged to maintain her after her return, any more than when she was absent; for if it were so, wives might leave their husbands in their youth, and return in their old age, when they cannot be so assisting to their husbands as before; and their society, assistance, and comfort to their husbands is one consideration of their maintenance: a feme covert cannot make any contract to charge her husband without (his) asssent, precedent or subsequent, expressed or implied; they did not deny, but that as circumstances [6] may be, an express or implied assent of the husband may appear to a jury, so that the contract of the wife may be the contract of the husband; as if the goods come to his house, or he appears well content with the use of them; but here the contrary appears, for the plaintiffs were forbid by him to sell to (or trust) his wife, and it does not appear that he ever had knowledge of this sale, and so could not approve thereof; and the jury having found only the forbidding and the sale, the Court is obliged to adjudge according to the law, that the contract is void, for a feme covert has not power of her self to make any contract: and it is not like to the case of infants, for their contracts are to some intents good, and may be made good by them at their age; but the contracts of feme coverts are absolutely void, for they have not any power or wills, but (are) subject to the will of their husbands; every man may trade with what tradesman he will, exclusive of all others; but by this means they shall (be forced) against their will to trade with such as their wives please. And the laws of England have provided for wives more reasonably than to make them their own carvers (viz.) to go to the Ordinary for alimony, the costs of which suit the husband shall pay, if the wife hath just cause of complaint. 1 Cro. Green's case, and to supply it in case of the husband's obstinacy, 8 H. 3, Rot. But the Court being thus divided, the cause for the great weight thereof, was adjourned into the Exchequer; and there, after divers arguments at the Bar, it was solemnly argued by all the Judges severally at several days at the Bench, where Tyrrell, Justice of Com' Banco, joined in opinion with Twyden and Mallet; all the rest, viz. Bridgman, Chief Justice of C. B. Hale Chief Baron of the Exchequer, Hide and Brown Justices of C. B. and Atkyns and Turner Barons of the Exchequer, and Foster Chief Justice, and Wadham Wyndham Justice of the King's Bench agreed, that the husband should not be charged, but that judgment ought to be given for the defendant: and so it afterwards was on a motion in Banco Regis, and the judgment was there entered in Easter term, 15 Car. 2.

On a fi. fa. against an executor, the sheriff returns no goods as to the debt, but levies the damages of the testator's goods, it is ill; and all subsequent proceedings thereon are also ill. Vide 3 Lev. 100. 1 Sid. 317. A scire facias against an executor, with a fieri facias for levying the debt and damages of the testator's goods, if so much (in his hands) and if not, then damages of his own goods: the sheriff returns, that the executor had not goods to satisfy the debt, but that he had levied the damages of the testator's goods; whereupon issued another fieri facias, surmising that the defendant had wasted the testator's goods, on which the sheriff returns, that he had wasted the goods: and this was traversed and tried, and verdict for the plaintiff, and on motion in arrest of judgment, it was stayed by the whole Court, for (that) the return of the writ was ill; for the goods of the testator ought to be charged with the debt, and not with the damages, except they are sufficient to satisfy both, but the damages are to be levied on the goods of the executor for the delay; and although that the trial and verdict be on the return of the second writ, and the first admitted (to be) good, and accepted by the plaintiff, and that it is the advantage of the defendant to have the costs levied of the testator's goods, yet all the proceedings on the second writ being founded on the return of the first, which is ill, all is ill. And by the whole Court judgment was stayed.

[8] THE KING against WARD EXECUTOR OF WENTWORTH.

Felo de se, is not murder within the exception of murder in a pardon.

It was found by an inquisition on a writ directed to the sheriff, that Wentworth, of his malice forethought, murdered himself; and this writ issued after the restoration of King Charles II. but the murder was done long time before. And now the question was, whether by the general pardon of all offences, forfeitures, &c. except murder, this murder was pardoned, or excepted, so that the King should have the goods? Foster Chief Justice, and Mallett (said) this is a fact excepted out of the Act, by the exception of murder, and that a felo de se is a murderer in the highest degree: and divers precedents were produced where it had been so taken; but all (of them) being sub silentio, Twysden and Wyndham held the contrary: they said, that felo de se and murder are distinct things, and distinctly treated of by all authors; and the reason why murder is excepted out of all statutes, is not because it is a Mosaical law, but a patriarchal law inforced by nature, that none shall destroy himself: but that the vengeance of blood is Mosaical, and given only upon the murder of another: but in the case of felo de se no vengeance of blood can be, but only a forfeiture of goods given to the King for the offences which he has done to the law of nature, and depriving the King of a subject; and the meaning of the exception of murder out of pardons is, (in order) for putting the murderers to death, which cannot be in this case; and so the Court was divided in opinion: but afterwards Mallett being withdrawn from his place, Kelynge coming in his room, joined in opinion with Twysden and Wyndham, and gave (his) opinion, that this murder was pardoned, and not excepted by the exception of murder; and so was the forfeiture for it also, the offence (itself) being pardoned: but where it was argued at the Bar, that the pardon being before the inquisition, and so before the goods came to the King, should enure to the executors as a release, though that the offence had not been pardoned; it was denied by all the justices; for the King's title was before the inquisition, and the goods forfeited to him immediately by the fact.

No new trial on a defendant's acquittal in criminal or capital cases: otherwise on a conviction. Vid. 1 Sid. 143, 153. 1 Keb. 124, 127, 138, 198, 213, 214, 233. Raym. 34. Vide post 124. 1 Sid. 153, 154.

Indictment of perjury, and the defendant acquitted, motion was for a new trial for the King, for that divers witnesses were absent, Wyndham Justice held it grantable, it not being touching life; to which it was answered, that new trials may be in criminal cases at the prayer of the defendant, where he is convicted (but) not at the suit of the King where he is acquitted, no more in criminal cases than in capital; and whereas two cases were cited, wherein new trials had been (granted) on the King's behalf; Twysden said, that was in the late troublesome times, and by the parties assent; and thereupon the Court would advise and gave time for searching precedents.

Note, That afterwards in Michaelmas term, 13 Car. 2, between The King and Bowden, an information of perjury, and the defendant acquitted, and motion was, for a new trial on affidavit, that one of the witnesses was absent by reason of sickness; and denied by the Court: (for) the party being acquitted, cannot be tried again; but after a conviction, a new trial may be had for the defendant on good cause: and in Trinity 15 Car. 2, The King against Fenwicke and Holt, information for perjury, and the defendant, acquitted, motion was for a new trial, on affidavit that some of the witnesses were kept away by practice of the defendant; and Wyndham Justice held it grantable, being in a case only criminal, and not capital: (but) Kelynge said, no case could be shewn of a new trial in a criminal case, more than in a capital; for the fame of the defendant shall not be often drawn in question for the same thing, no more than his life. And Foster and Twysden directed an information to be brought for the practice, and if it were found a new trial should be granted; to which Wyndham Justice agreed: and this case being moved again in Michaelmas 15 Car. 2, Foster, Twysden and Kelynge continued their opinions; (but) Wyndham was contrary, and said that in an information for the practice he would not have the same punishment that he would have for the perjury, and therefore held a new trial grantable. The others (said) the course of the Court is the law of the Court, and better it is that an [10] innocent person should suffer than the law changed. And note, in Hilary term, 15 & 16 Car. 2, in the case of Sir John Jackson, where he conveyed away the witnesses in an indictment of parjury, an information was brought against him for the practice, and he convicted and fined 1000 marks; and then as I suppose a new trial was granted, the information being brought by the direction of the Court to that intent; but I did not hear any rule for a new trial given at the time.

See 2 Jo. 163, and 2 Show. 165, Rex versus Smith, a new trial after a verdict for the King, on an information for perjury.

Devise to one for life, and if he die without issue living at his death, remainder to another in fee; quære if any executory devise, or a contingent remainder? S. C. Raym. 28. 1 Sid. 47. 1 Keb. 29, 119. 2 Danv. 519, 15. 1 Salk. 224, 225. Vide 4 Mod. 282. 3 Lev. 208, 434. 1 Salk. 228, 233. 2 Danv. 520. Fearne Con. Rem. 207, 303, 432.

In ejectment, not guilty (was pleaded) and a special verdict (found) on which the case was, a man seised in fee, devised the land to his eldest son Thomas for life, and if he dies without issue living at the time of his death, to Leonard, another son, and his heirs; but if Thomas had issue living at his death, that then the fee should remain to the right heirs of Thomas for ever: Thomas enters after the devisor's death, and suffers a common recovery (under which the defendant claims) and dies without issue; whereupon Leonard enters and makes the lease to the plaintiff. This case was argued twice in this and the following term, by Scroggs and Alleyn for the plaintiff, and Jones and Finch, the King's Solicitor, for the defendant, and two questions (were) made. 1. If Thomas had by the will only an estate for life by the devise, with a contingent remainder to Leonard, or whether the fee was vested in Thomas, with an executory devise to Leonard? 2. If it be an executory devise to Leonard, if the common recovery has barred it? And for the plaintiff it was argued, that Thomas had a fee, for though only an estate for life be devised to him, yet by discent of the reversion the whole fee was in him, which merged his estate for life, and this is executed in him; and then the estate to Leonard cannot be any other than an executory devise, for when the whole fee is given or vested in one person, with a limitation of a fee to another upon a contingency, this cannot be a remainder, for one fee cannot remain [12] upon another, but of necessity must take effect as an executory devise: but when only part of the estate is disposed, as for life, or in tail, and the residue given to another on a contingency; as to the right heirs of J. S. who is in life, or to such (a person) as shall be living in the house at such a time, this is a contingent (remainder). But here the whole estate is in Thomas, either by the devise or by discent, and then the devise to Leonard, must of necessity be an executory devise which being to happen within the compass of a life, has been allowed; as in Pell and Brown's case, 2 Cro. &c. And as to the second (question) they also relied on Pell and Brown's case, where it is adjudged, that a recovery shall not bar in such case. But on the other side it was argued, and so resolved by the whole Court in Michaelmas term, 13 Car. 2, that Thomas took but an estate for life by the will, and the remainder to his heirs not executed; and though he be the heir to whom the reversion descends, that shall not drown the estate for life contrary to the express devise and intent of the will, but shall leave an opening as they termed it, for the interposing of the remainders when they shall happen to interpose between the estate for life and the fee; and (they) compared it to Archer's case, 1 Co. where though Robert the devisee for life was heir, yet the remainder to his next heir male was contingent, and so not an estate for life merged by the discent of the reversion: and so the estate of Thomas here being only for life, by this devise the remainder to Leonard was a contingent remainder, and barred by the recovery; and then the second point will not come in question, whether an executory devise shall be barred by a common recovery. But on the first point they all gave judgment for the defendant.

Custom to take apprentices laid in the solet only. S. C. 1 Keb. 376, 469, 512.

Covenant (was brought) and declared on the custom of London: that time out of memory, &c. every freeman (solebat) hath used to take apprentices, who by the same custom have used to be bound by their covenants to serve faithfully; and that the plaintiff took the defendant apprentice by indenture, whereby he covenanted to serve the plaintiff for seven years, and that he had not done it, but had departed from his service without licence. And on issue, that he had [13] served him according to the covenants, and had not departed: verdict was for the plaintiff; and it was moved in arrest of judgment by Jones, that the declaration being in the solet only, and not in the debet and solet, is not good; and cited 22 E. 4, 8, and 1 Cro. The King and Bagshaw. And if he be obliged by the covenant to serve at all, being an infant, it ought to be by the custom. To which it was answered and resolved by the Court, that the action being founded on the covenant, and the custom (being) but inducement, it is sufficient: and gave judgment for the plaintiff, nisi, &c.

RADFORD against BLUDWORTH.

One does an act of bankruptcy, and sells the land, and five years after does another act, on which a commission issues. S. C. 1 Keb. 11. 2 Sid. 96, 114, 176. Vide post 17.

In ejectment a special verdict (found) a merchant seised of lands, and indebted, in 1643 committed an act of bankruptcy; and in 1645 was outlawed, and in July 1649, sold the lands to the lessor of the plaintiff; and in 1649 was outlawed again. In 1653 a commission of bankruptcy was sued and in 1657 he declared a bankrupt; and the commissioners sold the lands to the defendant, who entered and gained possession, on which the lessor brought the ejectment. And first, It was objected, that the commission not being sued within five years after 1643, ought not to have issued at all; for when the statute of 21 Jac. restrains the suing of the commission to five years after the act of bankruptcy committed, it ought to be intended the first act of bankruptcy. But all the Court were against this, (and that) it might be sued within five years after an act of bankruptcy. Secondly, It was objected, that the verdict was insufficient, not having found that he permitted himself to be outlawed, with intent to defraud his creditors; as the words of the statute are, and he may be outlawed without his knowledge. To which Finch at the Bar answered, that in a special verdict it shall be so intended. But thirdly, The principal question was, whether by the commission issuing in 1653, and he being found a bankrupt thereon, it should now relate to the first act of bankruptcy committed in 1643; so that the sale by the bankrupt in 1648, should be now defeated by the vendees, by reason of acts of bankruptcy done in 1643, or in 1645; which were more than five years before the commission sued? And it was resolved by all the Court, that the sale shall not be defeated by any act of bankruptcy made before [14] the sale, if the act was not made within five years before the suing of the commission: for if a man does an act of bankruptcy in 1654, and continues in possession till 1658, and then sells, and after commits another act of bankruptcy; and in 1660, a commission is sued, the vendee is safe, no commission being sued within five years after the act of bankruptcy made in 1654; for the act to avoid the purchase must be done within five years before the commission, and also done before the sale.

And in Easter term 16 Car. 2, a man did an act of bankruptcy in 1651, and in 1657, did another act; and in 1658, made a lease of lands: in 1660, a commission issued, on which he was found a bankrupt, and the land sold, and there it was again resolved, that the commission was well sued within five years after the last act; although not within the five years before the commission, and also before the lease, the vendee of the commissioners should avoid the lease; which I myself heard and observed.

MAYOR AND COMMONALTY OF LONDON against BERNARDISTON.

Return on a habeas corpus to the City of London. S. C. 1 Keb. 32, 35, 39. 3 Sid. 178. Vide 6 Mod. 122. 1 Sid. 284. 1 Mod. 47, 48.

It was returned on a habeas corpus, that London is an ancient city, and that time out (of mind,) &c. there had been an ancient beam, called the King's beam, maintained by the city; to which all foreigners have used to bring all their goods usually sold by weight to be weighed, and their custom to make by-laws, and a by-law, (made) that every foreigner who sells any goods usually sold by weight without bringing them to the beam to be weighed, shall pay 13s. 4d. for every five hundred weight, to be recovered by the Chamberlain in the Sheriffs Court, and not elsewhere; and that no essoin, protection, &c. shall be allowed: and that Bernadiston being a foreigner, had 3300 weight of raisins, things usually sold by weight, without bringing them to the said beam to be weighed; and for this forfeiture he was sued in the Sheriffs Court; and this is the cause of the imprisonment. And on this return divers exceptions were taken and argued this term and the term ensuing, at divers times, by Jones, Glyn, and Becus, for the defendant [15] Bernardiston; and by Finch the King's Solicitor, Wylde the King's Serjeant, and Allen for the mayor and commonalty. The first exception was, that the by-law for bringing all goods usually sold by weight was unreasonable; for they are oftentimes sold by lump, and then (there is) no need of weighing; and to put all foreigners to this charge, trouble and attendance to no purpose, was unreasonable; but if it had been, that all goods when they are sold by weight should be brought to the beam and weighed, it might be to some purpose, for preventing false weights; and compared it to the case in Mich. 1654, between Alant and Janon, where a custom to grind all the grains spent in his house was void; for he may use grain there without grinding: but if it had been to grind all grain ground and spent at his house, it might be good. But to this it was answered, and at length resolved by the Court, that the by-law was good, for this by-law was founded upon the customs of London, which are of such force, that they shall stand against negative Acts of Parliament; as where Magna Charta, cap. 36 says, It shall not be lawful for any to give lands in mortmain, yet they might alien in mortmain before their charter of 7 R. 2, as appears by 45 E. 3, 36. And this custom was reasonable in any place, for it is of great use for preventing of false weights between the buyer and seller, and it is also of great use for preventing deceit in the King's customs, by comparing the weight entered at the Custom-House with the weight at the beam, and such deceits are most usually committed by foreigners; and though that in truth they sell their goods by weight at their houses, they may say that they sold them by lump. And Twysden said, that the city had (an) interest in their beam, and are at charge to maintain it, and for servants to attend the weighing; and therefore 'tis reason that they should be compelled to weigh, and to pay for it, notwithstanding among themselves they agree by the lump. 2d Exception, That the by-law was unreasonable in respect of the penalty and inequality thereof, for perhaps some of the goods are not of the value of 13s. 4d. the 500 weight, and others of the weight of 500 pounds, may be of the value of 500l. And Coke, in his 8 Rep. 147, says, by-laws with unreasonable penalties are void: but to this 'twas resolved, that the by-law was good notwithstanding this exception, for the [16] by-law ought to lay the penalty on the weight, for that is the thing provided for; besides, it would be endless to put the penalty on the value, and also uncertain; and the penalty is only a means to compel obedience, which every one may avoid who will bring his goods to be weighed; and a case was cited in Sutton's case in this Court, in 1652, where a by-law to pay a mark for a truss of hay sold unweighed, was adjudged good: and Osborn's case, where a penalty of 40s. for using of a cart was adjudged good, though perhaps he did not gain 4s. by it because the penalty is but to inforce obedience to the law, but if it had been to pay a great sum for the weighing, it might be otherwise. 3d Exception, That this by-law took from the subjects divers priviledges that the law allows, as essoines, &c. But this exception was disallowed, for it is generally so in all by-laws; and so it was in Waggoner's case, 8 Rep. 4. 4th Exception, That the by-law restrains the action to their own Courts: but this exception was also over-ruled, for there the facts and the persons are best known. 5th Exception, That it does not appear that he had notice of the by-law, and he is a foreigner, who cannot take notice of their by-laws, nor is any appointed to give notice, nor any publication of the by-law appointed. But hereto 'twas answered, that this by-law is growing (springing) out of the custom, and every man who will trade in London ought to take notice of the customs of the city, which are the laws of the city; and afterwards in Easter term, 13 Car. 2, a procedendo was awarded, except better cause (shewn) within three days.

A plea that answers only to part is ill. 1 Saund. 207, 309. Vide post, 31.

Covenant brought, and declares, that the plaintiff covenanted to go with a ship to D. in Ireland, and there to take in 280 men from the defendant, and to carry them to Jamaica; and the defendant covenanted to have the 280 men there ready, and to pay for the carriage of them 5l. a man, and says, that the defendant had not the 280 men ready, but that he had 180, and those he took and carried, and the defendant had not paid for them: the defendant pleads that he had the 280 men ready, and tendered them to the plaintiff, and that he would not receive them, but says nothing [17] to the carrying of 180 men, nor to the non-payment for them, and for that it was not a plea to the whole but to the carrying only, judgment was given for the plaintiff upon a demurrer.

Ejectment, and, on a special verdict the case was, Harvy being a merchant indebted to divers persons, left off trading being so indebted, in 1645; in 1647 he absconded, and a commission was sued, and he adjudged a bankrupt in 1653, the debts not paid wherein he was indebted when he left off his trade: and if he may be a bankrupt for those debts by absconding in 1647, was the question. 'Twas argued by Baldwin, Serjeant, for the plaintiff, and by Brown for the defendant, who said, that for calling him bankrupt in 1647, when he did not gain his living by buying and selling, as the statute is, he cannot have an action, and cited 1 Cro. Colly against Mayne, and 2 Cro. 578, Upwike against Beks. But the Court inclined that he should be a bankrupt as to those debts, but not as to debts contracted afterwards. But 'twas adjourned.

Obligation to two, the one becomes bankrupt, his part is assigned to the other obligee. S. C. Raym. 6. 1 Keb. 167. Vide 1 Mod. 45. 1 Salk. 110, 111. 2 Show. 103, 238.

Debt on an obligation to Boylston and Stodder, entered in to them by Radcliff; and on a special verdict the case was, that Stodder became a bankrupt, and the commissioners assigned the debt to the plaintiff the co-obligee, who brought the action, being a creditor himself, and the assignment being for the benefit of himself and the other creditors: if by this assignment he alone might bring the action, was the question. And 'twas argued by Finch for the plaintiff, that he might, and that this was the only means for the recovery of the debt; for if it had been assigned to another, he alone could not bring an action on the bond for the moiety, and the action ought to be brought by virtue of the statute in his own name; though before the bankruptcy it ought to be brought in the name of the obligee; and now the whole interest is in the obligee Boylston, one [18] moiety in his own right, and the other moiety for the advantage of the creditors; and therefore he alone shall maintain the action in his own name, for he is obligee of the one moiety, and assignee as to the other, and being all one person, therefore it is to be sued by him alone; for after the assignment it cannot be sued by him and Stodder, and thereto Wyndham Justice inclined; but none being ready on the defendant's part, it was adjourned.

In ejectment a special verdict (found) Baldwin seized of capite land to him and his wife, and to the heirs of the husband, and the husband being sole seized of soccage land in fee, devised all the soccage land to his wife for life, the remainder to the lessor of the plaintiff in fee, and dies, the wife survives, and afterwards she dies; and the lessor being the devisee in remainder of the soccage land, enters and makes the lease to the plaintiff. And if this seisin of the remainder of the capite land be such a having within the statutes touching capite land, that the devise shall be void, as to the third part of the soccage land, was the question: 'twas argued several times at the Bar by Powys and Aleyn for the plaintiff, and by Howel and Jones for the defendant: and afterwards in Michaelmas term 12 (Car. 2) 'twas argued by all the Judges, and judgment given for the plaintiff for all the lands; and Mallet, Twysden and Wyndham, held clearly; that this having of this dry reversion was not any having within the statutes, which should restrain the devise of all the lands; for as the statutes of 32 and 34, give power to the subject to devise, they provide for the saving of the King's wardships, that where the devisor hath any capite land, he shall not devise more than two parts of the soccage land, but shall leave one third part thereof to descend to the heir; but this was not intended to extend to any case but where the heir should be in ward; but of such a dry reversion he should not be in ward at common law, and the proviso in 32 Hen. 8, which says, When two hold lands to them and the heirs of one, and he that has the fee dies, his heir [19] shall be in ward, is intended only as to the body, not to the lands; for there being in this clause a new affirmative law, it implies a negative, and shall not be extended beyond the strict words; and therefore if the heir had been within age at the time of the wife's death, the heir should be in ward for his body, but not as to his lands, because no wardship could be of them at the time of the death of the testator, the surviving wife being the King's tenant, and not the remainder-man: but Foster, Chief Justice, with all his force opposed this, and said, that as the proviso is a new law so are the statutes throughout, (they) giving power to the subject to devise his lands, which he could not do before: but they gave this power to devise with a restriction, and that is, that when he had capite lands, he should not devise more than two parts of the soccage; and he had in him this reversion, and it shall descend from him to his heir, and therefore he shall be in ward; and the judgments, statutes and incumbrances of the father shall bind it: he confessed, that for a meer dry remainder no wardship should be; but when it is a vesting remainder, importing an immediate advantage on the death of the tenant for life, as here, there it shall cause a wardship. But at length (tho' doubtingly) he agreed, that judgment should be entered for the plaintiff, according to the opinions of the other three.

Mandamus for a Fellow of the College of Physicians. S. C. 1 Sid. 29. 1 Keb. 75, 84. Vide post, 23, 75. 1 Sid. 71. 1 Mod. 83, 84. 1 Keb. 14, &c.

A mandamus was moved for to the College of Physicians, for restoring him to a fellowship of the college, and some doubt was made, whether a mandamus would lie (for this) or for any fellowship in any of the colleges in the universities? But at last 'twas granted, and (said) that it should be considered on the return, whether it lies or not. And afterwards in Trinity term a return was made, whereby it appeared, that a fellow (here) is not, as fellow, member of a corporation, but is a kind of officer, as a manciple is to a college: and the return (was) adjudged good, and no restitution.

Assumpsit in consideration that he hath undertaken to do a thing, is a promise against a promise, and performance need not be averred. 1 Keb. 333. Vide post, 27, 70, 77, 87, 164, 293.

Assumpsit brought, and declares, that where the plaintiff had undertaken, that whereas the defendant was obliged to the coroner in an obligation of 1600l. for an appearance; which obligation the coroner had authorized the plaintiff to sue: that the plaintiff would not sue it; and where the plaintiff had an outlawry against A. for 400l. that (if) the plaintiff would permit the defendant to take the advantage of the said outlawry against A. to pay to the plaintiff 400l. and avers that he had admitted the defendant to take the advantage of the said outlawry against A. yet the defendant had not paid him the 400l. After verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment, that here are two considerations, and the plaintiff had averred the performance only of one. But (held) by the Court, insomuch as the plaintiff hath undertaken, that he will not sue the obligation to the coroner, it was a promise not to sue; and so he need not aver the performance thereof, it being a promise against a promise, as is Nicholas against Ramhead, Hob. 88, 106. And gave judgment for the plaintiff.

Lease for forty years after death, surrender or other determination of an estate for life. Vide post, 77. 2 Lev. 108, 242.

In ejectment, on issue not guilty, and a special verdict the case was, a copyhold was granted to A. B. and C. for their lives, successively as they are named; then the lord grants and demises the lands for forty years after the death, surrender, forfeiture, or other determination of the estate of A. B. and C. Then A. and B. die, and C. takes a wife and dies, and the wife keeps herself in (possession) for her life, by the custom, as her free bench, and dies; and if the lease for forty years should commence from the death of the husband, or of the wife, was the question: for if it should commence from the death of the husband it is expired, if of the wife, it had still a continuance for twenty years. It was agreed, that the free bench is to many purposes a continuance of the husband's estate; but here the words of the lease for forty years [21] are, To have, &c. from the death, surrender, forfeiture, or other determination of the estate made to A. B. and C. and then the law supplies the words, which shall first happen; as was adjudged in this Court in Hillary term 1652, Rot. 1617, between Stephens and Capel, that the subsequent lease should commence from the first of the contingents which shall happen: and by Twysden and Wyndham it was held on the first argument, that the lease shall not commence till after the wife's death, and that the words death, forfeiture, surrender, were to be understood, such death, forfeiture, &c. as should determine the estate; and this by reason of the subsequent words, or other determination of the estate; and the first words are only an enumeration of the particular ways by which the estate might be determined; but if the estate does not determine by any of those ways, (as in the case at Bar, it does not by reason of the wife's free bench, which is a continuance of the husband's estate) the lease shall not commence till the death of the wife, by which the husband's estate is determin'd; and it cannot be reasonably intended, that the subsequent estate should commence before the continuance (determination) of the precedent, which by possibility might continue longer than the forty years, for the wife might out-live the forty years, and then the lease for forty years from the husband's death, would be vain and idle. But it was adjourned.

An assignee of rent reserved on a lease for years, shall have debt for it. S. C. Raym. 11. 1 Keb. 1, 42, 71, 153, 250. 2 Jo. 2. accord.

In debt, plaintiff declares, that A. was seised of lands, and leased it to the defendant for years, rendering 30l. yearly rent, and after granted the rent to the plaintiff; to which grant the defendant attorned, and for 30l. being a year's rent, was the action brought: and after verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the action lay not for default of privity; for the privity of estate remained with the lessor, and no privity of contract passed to the grantee; and of such opinion were Foster and Mallett, on divers arguments at the Bar. But Twysden and Wyndham on the contrary, that the attornment of the tenant made a privity, for his attornment is a consent to the grant, and that the grantee shall have the rent: and by Wyndham, the privity of estate remains with the lessor; but the privity of contract is transferred to the grantee with the rent; and divers cases were cited on both sides, pro & contra, but not coming up directly to the point in question, the Court was divided in opinion, and the case adjourned into the Exchequer-Chamber. But after this, the third part of Sir George Croke's Reports were published and there fol. 637, 651, in Ard and Watkins's case it was adjudged, that the devisee of a rent reserved on a lease for years, as here, might maintain debt for the rent. (Whereupon) the parties before any argument in the Exchequer-Chamber agreed, and the rent was paid without more (ado.)

Mandamus for a fellow of a college, does not lie where there is a visitor. S. C. 1 Sid. 71. 1 Keb. 2, 50, 61, 68, 79, 131, 150, 234, 458. Quære 2 Jo. 174. Raym. 31, 68. Vide ante, 19. Post, 65. 2 Lev. 14. Raym. 101. 1 Sid. 29, 40, 71, 169, 346. 1 Mod. 84, 85.

The Court was moved for a mandamus to restore him to a fellowship in Christ's College in Cambridge, which was opposed by Jones, because the universities have conusance of pleas by their charter, and the colleges have their visitors; and therefore no mandamus lies: but two precedents were remembered to have been cited by Arthur Trevor in Dr. Godland's case, of mandamus's granted in the like case, the one in the time of Edw. 2, and the other in the time of Edw. 3. To which Jones said, that no mandamus had been granted since those till within these ten years: but Foster, Chief Justice, said, that there was one about the end of Queen Elizabeth's reign, or the beginning of King James's; and thereupon the mandamus was granted: but the Court said, that if they returned matters proper for themselves to determine, this Court would send back the matter to them; and in Trinity (term) following a return of the writ was made; and some exceptions taken thereto for misnaming the corporation; and day was given to amend the return, and to make it so as they would stand by it: and in Michaelmas (term) following, the return was argued at the Bar, and the return was of the foundation of the college, and of some of the statutes of the founder, whereby he appointed the chancellor of the university to be their visitor; and thereupon it was only insisted, that there being a special visitor appointed by the founder, this Court had nothing to do in the matter, but that all appeals were to be to him and not to this Court, let the foundation be either spiritual or temporal; which was much controverted, whether it was the one or the other. And 'twas agreed, that if the master of a college be outed by wrong, an assise will lie, as is said in the end of Canon's case in Dyer; but not if he be outed by his proper Ordinary or visitor; and as the King may give licence to found a college, [24] so he may give power to make laws for the order and government of such college; and by those they shall be governed, and by no others, and the acts done by such governors shall be intended rightly done, and not examinable in this Court, 7 Co. 42. And although it was objected, that this Court hath the superintendency of all Courts Spiritual and Temporal to keep them within their jurisdictions, (which the Court agreed) yet seeing it did not appear, that they had executed their jurisdiction, but only outed a scholar, subject to their jurisdiction; they are not for that (matter) to appeal to this Court; for if so, the matters of all colleges and particular jurisdictions would be drawn hither; but if they are grieved they ought to appeal to their visitor, which if they had done, there would be more reason to hear them here; but to hear them now was to go by leaping, which ought not to be, for all proceedings ought to be by degrees, (or steps) as from one Ordinary to the next Superior Ordinary, and not at first dash to leap to the metropolitan, nor from the Common Pleas in Ireland, immediately to this Court; but first to the King's Bench in Ireland, and from thence to this Court; and the like: and afterward in Hillary term next following, all the Judges delivered their opinions, that the mandamus did not lie on this return: but inasmuch as the return contained many false scandals of the doctor, the Court advised the doctor to bring an action on the case for those as for a libel; but they could not relieve him by a mandamus.

Contract to retain tithes for the life of the parson. S. C. Raym. 14. 1 Keb. 5, 21. 3 Burr. 1873. 3 Bac. Abr. 338. 5 Bac. Abr. 93.

In debt for tithes for four years, the defendant pleads an agreement between the plaintiff and him, that he should retain the land discharged of tithes during the life of the plaintiff, if he so long continued parson: issue (was) on the agreement, and a verdict for the defendant; and judgment for him after motion in arrest of judgment. For although first, a lease of tithes cannot be without deed. And secondly, that it cannot be a good lease for the uncertainty, as Co. Litt. 45 b. and 2 Cro. Hawkes v. Brogfield, Owen 103. Hob. 176. Yet this being only a contract for retaining the tithes, it is good, according to 2 Cro. Honicomb against Sweet. And by the whole Court judgment was for the defendant.

Assent by an executrix to the devise of a term. S. C. 1 Keb. 15. 1 Sid. 37. Vide post 290.

Ejectment was brought, and in evidence to the jury at the Bar, the case was, that a man possessed of a long term for years, devised it to his wife for life; remainder to trustees for his son's life; remainder in trust for the heirs of the son's body; remainder to the son's right heirs, and makes the wife executrix; (and held) by the Court, (that) the wife took the term wholly as executrix in the first place, till she agreed to the devise; but it being proved, that she said, she would take the term according to the will, it was held by the Court to be a sufficient assent. And a case was cited, where in a like case, the wife's saying, that the son was to have the estate after her, it was resolved to be a good assent. But then the original lease could not be produced; but it being an ancient lease, the grandson of the lessor producing a counterpart found among the other evidences of his grandfather, it was allowed for evidence, though no witness was subscribed thereto: for Justice Wyndham said, he had seen many deeds of the time of Queen Elizabeth's reign, without witnesses: then a title being made to the term by one as administrator, and no letters of administration produced, the book of the Ecclesiastical Court where it was granted being produced, wherein was entered the Act or order of the Court for the granting thereof, it was allowed to be good evidence. And Twysden said, that it was so done in The Earl of Manchester's case.

Rent arrear on a lease to the wife whilst sole, is recovered against the husband after her death. S. C. 1 Keb. 20, 22. Raym. 6. 3 Lev. 403.

Debt for rent, on a lease made to a woman whilst sole, who (after) takes husband; the rent is arrear, the term expires, the wife dies, and the action is brought against the husband, to which he demurs: and it was argued by Wylde, that the action does not lie against the husband, because it being a thing in action, and not recovered in the wife's life, the husband is not chargeable any more than on her obligation. But by Allen, and so adjudged; the husband here is charged in respect of the perception of the profits [26] by himself, and therefore shall be charged after the wife's death; and it is not like the case put of an obligation; which was agreed to be law; wherefore judgment was for the plaintiff.

Pardon with exceptions, where the party is to shew he is none of those excepted. S. C. 1 Keb. 20. Post, 120, 121. Ante 8.

Debt on the Act of General Pardon for speaking scandalous words of him contrary to the said Act, which prohibits such speaking under a penalty, for which penalty the action is brought; and after verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that divers persons are excepted in the Act, and the plaintiff has not shewn that he is none of the persons excepted: to which it was answered, that the body of the Act is general, and the persons are excepted by proviso; and then the plaintiff need not shew that he is not any of the persons excepted; but if in the body of the Act a pardon was of all persons except such and such, there he ought: but in this case of a proviso, if he be one of the persons excepted, the other party ought to shew it; as in the case of an obligation, or a feoffment on condition, the obligee or feoffee need not shew the condition, but it is enough for him to shew the obligation or feoffment, and the other party for whose benefit it is, is to shew the condition, if he will take advantage thereof.

In ejectment, in evidence to a jury at the Bar, resolved; First, That if a copyholder commit a forfeiture the lord may grant the copyhold estate to another before any seizure; for it is a determination of the will, and the estate is immediately in the lord, as in his reversion. Secondly, That a lord pro tempore of any legal title, though it be at will, by admission of a copyholder after a forfeiture committed, hath dispensed with the forfeiture, not only as to himself, but also as to him in the reversion, for he may make voluntary grants; 4 Co. 23 b. 24, and such [27] new grant and admittance amount to an entry for the forfeiture and a new grant. But a lord by tort or by disseisin, cannot by such admittance purge the forfeiture as to the rightful lord.

Indenture to suffer a recovery of a manor, and of all lands reputed parcel, the recovery is suffered of the manor. What lands reputed parcel shall pass. S. C. 1 Vent. 51, 52. 1 Sid. 190. 1 Mod. 251. 2 Mod. 235. 1 Keb. 26, 591, 691, 716.

Assumpsit on a feigned issue directed out of Chancery, for trying whether certain lands did pass by a common recovery, and if the entail of them were thereby barred. And on the evidence, the case was, a man seized of the manor of Lavington, and of divers other lands there, which in truth were not parcel of the manor, but purchased by the lord of the manor divers years before, and after the purchase reputed parcel; and being so seized, with intent to make a tenant to the præcipe, bargains and sells the manor, and all lands parcel or reputed parcel, to A. against whom a præcipe was brought, and a common recovery suffered by name of the said manor, with voucher of the lord; and if this recovery should bar the entail as to the lands (that were) not parcel, was the question. It was agreed; that they passed by the bargain, by the name of reputed parcel. But it was insisted, that they did not pass by the recovery of the manor: for tho' by recovery of the manor, a manor in reputation, tho' it be not in truth a manor, shall pass, as Sir Moyle Finch's case, 6 Co. is, because otherwise the recovery should be void: but here where there is a manor in fact to answer the name of a manor in the recovery, other lands, which are not parcel, but in reputation, shall not pass; and tho' the lands have been used with the manor, now fourscore years, and reputed parcel, yet they shall not pass by the recovery of the manor with its appurtenances, as it is so; for the word appurtenances shall not pass a thing that is not parcel; and there may be a difference between a fine and a præcipe for a common recovery, where the demand ought to be of certain things by certain names. And Justice Twysden said, that he had seen the opinion of all the justices at one time, that the fine in Sir Moyle Finch's case, did not pass the reputed manors: but that Sir Edward Coke, after he came to be Chief Justice, caused it to be adjudged as he reports it: and he said, it was well he did so, for it would concern the settlements of very many [28] estates: and therefore this case here was found specially. And afterwards in Michaelmas term, 15 Car. 2. It was argued at the Bar by Jones of the one side, and Winnington of the other; and the Judges were then of divers opinions; and in Easter term, 16 Car. 2, it was argued again by Finch of the one part, and Serjeant Glyn of the other, and the Court took time till the end of the term to deliver their opinion, and then all agreed, and Hyde, Chief Justice, delivered the opinion for all of them, that the lands reputed parcel, passed by the recovery as well as the other (lands) and so they did in a conveyance in the case of the King; for he had made grants of the manor of St. James, which is not a manor, but in reputation. And common recoveries are common assurances, and the indenture of bargain and sale, which made the tenants to the præcipe, and declared the intent was to suffer a recovery, not only of the manor, but also of all lands, parcel, or reputed parcel (thereof;) and these (lands) have been reputed parcel for 80 years: and they made no difference between a fine and a recovery of a manor, where it is nothing but a manor in reputation, nor where it is a manor indeed, and other lands, besides the manor, not parcel, but so reputed both shall pass by the fine or recovery, the indenture shewing the intent to pass the manor and all lands reputed parcel.

Grant of dutchy lands may be without attornment, but to a feoffment livery must be.
S. C. 1 Sid. 189. Ray. 90. 1 Keb. 37. N.'s Lutw. 392. Vide 2 Lev. 24.

Ejectment was tried at the Bar, and found specially; where the case was, a lease for years, being made by the King of dutchy-lands lying out of the County-Palatine; afterwards King James I. in the seventh year of his reign, granted the reversion by the dutchy-seal of the County-Palatine; and the Great Seal to one, under whom the plaintiff claims, but no attornment was had. King Cha. I. reciting the said grant, and that it was void, granted the reversion under the dutchy-seal to the defendant to whom the lessee attorn'd; and the lease being determined, the lessor brought ejectment against the defendant, who had got the possession; whereupon the sole question was, whether the land passed by the first patent, being dutchy-lands, lying out of the County-Palatine, [29] without attornment? And it was argued in Hillary term 15 & 16 Car. 2, by Jones for the plaintiff and Weston for the defendant; and in Easter term the 16th by Maynard for the plaintiff, and for the defendant; and it was agreed on both sides, that the Great Seal, and the County-Palatine seal, signify nothing in the case. For by the stat. 37 H. 8, c. 16, lands with in the County-Palatine, must pass by the County-Palatine seal; and lands out of the county by the dutchy-seal: but the objection was, that the lands of the dutchy being severed from the Crown by the statute of 3 H. 5, n. 15, and 1 H. 7, Sess. 1, n. 2. That at the passing of those lands, livery and attornment are necessary, as in the case of a subject; for the King has those lands as duke, and not as King. But afterwards in the same Easter term, it was resolved by all the Court, that the lands passed by grant of the reversion without attornment; and the grant under the dutchy-seal is a grant by record, and passes the reversion, as a fine, viz. to divest the estate without attornment: but not to make a privity to found an action of waste, &c. according to the 4 Inst. 209. But if the King will make a feoffment thereof, livery ought to be made, as in the case of a subject; for this the King may do by attorney: and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Case, for that whereas he was possessed of the sixteenth part of a ship in common with the defendant, the defendant to defraud him of his part, had disposed of the whole, and sent him to India without his assent. And after verdict, judgment was stayed, because no such action lies by one tenant in common against another: nor as Lit. sect. 222 says, where one tenant in common disposes of the whole, has the other any remedy; therefore not by action on the case: nor is the supposal of fraud material in the case, for between tenants in common, there cannot be fraud, as Wyndham said; for by the law, each has the power to dispose of the whole.

Judgment against two, one dies. Execution in the personalty, if against the survivor only. In the realty, if against him and the heir of the other. S. C. Raym. 26. 1 Keb. 92, 123.

Judgment in debt was had against two, one dies, the plaintiff brought a scire facias against the survivor only; the defendant pleads, that the other hath left lands and an heir, to whom they were descended, and demands judgment, whether he should be compelled to answer without the heir's being warned; whereupon the plaintiff demurred, and judgment was given, that he should answer, for the judgment is against the person: and tho' that now by the statute, which gives the scire facias and elegit, he may charge the lands to make it real: yet it is at his election to pursue in the personalty, if he will. 29 Ass. 27. 29 E. 3, 39. 1 E. 3, 41. But if he will take execution on the lien real, there the charge ought to be equally against both, and a scire facias against both. But it was said, that if he brought a scire facias against both, and had judgment thereupon, he might have a fieri facias against the survivor only, or an elegit against both.

Note, This cause depended till Michaelmas term, and then it was ruled to answer after divers arguments.

Debt on a lease for years, where the case was, that Chute, the plaintiff's husband, covenanted in consideration of marriage to stand seized to the use of himself for life, remainder to the plaintiff for life, remainder to his own right heirs, and a proviso was for making leases, and that he made the lease in question to the defendant, rendering rent, and died; and for this rent, the wife brought the action, and had a verdict. But on the motion of Jones judgment was stayed; because the power being general to make leases, and not particular to any particular person, nor on any particular consideration, no use could arise upon the covenant to stand seized, as it might upon a feoffment or fine, as is resolved in Co. Mildmay's case; and therefore in this case the lease is void, and then no rent is due.

[31] PRIDEAUX against WEBBER.

Trespass, assault, &c. and no answer to the battery. Vide ante 16, & 1 Saund. 207, 209. B. 423.

Trespass for an assault, battery and imprisonment, 1° May 1657. The defendant pleads, that the trespass, assault and imprisonment aforesaid, were done the 29th of October 1655, and pleads the Statute of Limitation: the plaintiff replies, that certain rebels (not naming any) had usurped the Government, and none of the King's Courts were open; the defendant rejoins, and confesses the usurpation, and further pleads the Act of pardon of all things, and acts of hostility done under the usurped authorities; and further pleads the Act for confirming all judicial proceedings in the late times; and further pleads a warrant to imprison him, et hoc parat. est verificare, &c. whereupon the plaintiff demurs. And now by Bear Serjeant, for the plaintiff it was argued, that the plea in bar was ill in not answering to the battery; but to this it was answered, and so resolved by the Court in Hillary term following, that (the words) transgressio prædict' is an answer to the whole. Secondly, It was argued by Bear, that the Statute of Limitations is not pleadable, because there being a stop of justice, and no legal Court, held, none was bound to prosecute, especially for such an imprisonment as here in those times. Thirdly, It was objected by him, that the rejoinder is multifarious and impertinent, in pleading two statutes. And fourthly, In not concluding on the statutes prout patet per recordum. But Afterwards in Hillary term it was adjudged for the defendant, and that the Statute of Limitations was a bar, and the bar being good, and the replication insufficient, it is not material what the rejoinder is; and judgment was given for the defendant by the whole Court. And the reason they gave that the Statute of Limitations was a good bar, (be it so, as it was pleaded, that the Courts were not open) was, because there is not any exception in the Act of such a case; and infants had been bound (thereby) if they had not been excepted.

Issue improper or immaterial, where a repleader shall be or not.
S. C. 1 Keb. 33, 39, 89, 90. Vide 6 Mod. 2, 3, &c.

Debt against lessee for years for the rent, the defendant pleads, that he before the rent was due for which the action is brought, had assigned the term to another, of which the plaintiff had notice; the plaintiff took issue on the notice, and a verdict being for the defendant; it was moved by Allen for the plaintiff, that no judgment ought to be given, but a repleader (awarded) because the issue was taken of a thing immaterial; for it is not the notice of the assignment of the term, without agreement of the lessor, or acceptance of the rent by him from the assignee that discharges the lessor, but his agreement thereto, or acceptance of the rent from the assignee does it; and he cited Nichols's case in 5 Co. where issue taken of payment on a single bill being found for the plaintiff, he shall have judgment; but if it had been found that he had paid, judgment should be arrested; and the difference, he said, is when the issue is found against the pleader, judgment shall be for the plaintiff, but if for him, not. (But) Justice Twysden said, that if an improper issue is taken, and verdict given (thereon) judgment shall be given thereupon, be it for the plaintiff or defendant; and cited 2 Cro. 575. But an immaterial issue is, whereupon the verdict the Court cannot know for whom to give judgment, whether for the plaintiff or for the defendant, as in Hob. 175. And with him the Chief Justice and Wyndham wholly agreed, and awarded a repleader. See 2 Cro. 585. 3 Cro. 227, 228, & 2 Cro. 5.

Assumpsit to pay, &c. If Charles Stuart were King of England within twelve months, he being then in exile. S. C. 1 Keb. 56, 65. 1 Danv. 41, pl. 12.

Assumpsit in consideration of 20s. paid to the defendant by the plaintiff, to pay the plaintiff 20l. if Charles Stuart should be King of England within twelve months then next following; (this being when the King was in exile, and about six months before his restoration). After verdict for the plaintiff 'twas moved in arrest of judgment, that here is no consideration, for he was then King of England at the time of the promise; but if it had been, if he should be King of England six months hence, it might have been good, because of the accident that he might die without six months: but held by the Court, that the consideration is good, for the words are to be taken according to the subject matter; the King was at the time of the promise out of possession, and the promise is to be intended, if he should be in possession within the twelve months.

WINDSOR against SAYWELL.

One outlawed in a personal action, aliens before seizure.

In ejectment and special verdict, the case was; Gorge seised of lands in fee, confessed a judgment to the lessor of the plaintiff, he being then outlawed in a personal action; but before any seizure of the lands, levied a fine to a stranger; and afterwards the lessor sued execution of the lands by elegit: and it was argued by Glyn and Wylde, the King's Serjeants, that no execution may be had after the outlawry; and they cited the case of one Pickering, to be so resolved in the Exchequer. Jones and Allen on the other side argued, that nothing accrues to the King by an outlawry in personal actions, but only perception of the profits, Hob. 20. Plowd. Com. 541, and that he could not in such case plough or sow the land; and Allen said, he was of counsel in Pickering's case, and the case was, that after inquisition, but before return thereof, the person outlawed made a bargain and sale of lands, and it was adjudged for the King, but principally for default in the pleadings; for he said there were only two Judges in Court, and those divided in opinion as to the principal matter. And afterwards at another day, [34] the Chief Justice and Twysden saying, they had spoken with Hale Chief Baron, and the other Barons of the Exchequer, who told them, that the course of the Exchequer is, that by a feoffment before seizure, the King is outed of the pernancy of the profits; but not by a feoffment after seizure. And thereupon they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

GOODWIN against CLARK.

A settlement to the husband for life, remainder to the son in tail: and if he dies without issue male, remainder to his daughters for 500 years, he dies leaving a son, who dies without issue. S. C. 1 Sid. 102. 1 Keb. 73, 78, 169, 247, 462. Vide The D. of Norfolk's case in Chancery Cases, 3 part.

Ejectment and special verdict. A settlement was in consideration of marriage, and 1000l. (paid) for the use of the husband for life, remainder to his son in the usual manner, and if he (the husband) should die without issue male, to the use of the daughters for a term for raising 1500l. for their portions. The husband left a son and a daughter, and afterwards the son died without issue, whereby the lands remained over to another, according to the settlement, and the daughter brought ejectment. This case had been adjudged two several times before in several Courts, the one time for the plaintiff, the other for the defendant; and the sole question was, if the husband leaving a son, who after dies without issue, whether the husband shall be now said to die without issue male be within the intent of the settlement, so that the term should arise to the daughter? For it was said for the defendant, that he did not die without issue male, for that he left a son, tho' this son afterward died without issue; and the intent of the settlement was well satisfied by the leaving of a daughter in satisfaction of the portion: but it cannot be intended, that when, or at what time whensoever, the issue male fails, the daughters should have portions, for that may happen 100 years after, when the sons are dead, and so no benefit or advantage to the daughters. It was also said to be ill in the creation, if it should be so intended to arise at such a distance of time, viz. whensoever there should be a failer of issue male. But to this it was answered, [36] that whensoever the issue male fail, the husband is said to be dead without issue. 8 Co. Bulmer's case, and 38 E. 3, 26. Dyer 4 & 349, were cited to this purpose. And as to the benefit or advancement of the daughters, it was said, that this expectation is an advantage for them to be advanced in marriage: and as to the creating of the term, it was said, that a term may as well be created to arise upon a failure of issue male, as a power to sell on the failure of issue male, which hath been adjudged good in the case of Vincent and Lee in Moor. Rep. 147. 3 Cro. 26. 1 Leon. 285. 3 Leon. 106. Co. Lit. 113 a. And as to the objection of a perpetuity, it is nothing, for the son, who had the estate precedent, might bar it by a common recovery. And of this opinion were all the Court, except Mallet. And after divers arguments at the Bar by Serjeant Nudigate for the plaintiff, and Wylde the King's Serjeant for the defendant in this term, and in Michaelmas term following, by Aleyn for the plaintiff, and Kittlewel for the defendant, and in Easter term, 14 Car. 2, by Finch the King's Solicitor for the plaintiff, and Jones for the defendant; judgment was given in Easter term, 14 Car. 2, for the plaintiff.

STEPHENS against BRITRIDGE.

Husband tenant for life, remainder to the wife for life; remainder to the heirs of their bodies; they levy a fine with warranty, it doth not discontinue nor devest the estates, nor is the warranty any bar. S. C. Raym. 36, 37. 1 Sid. 83. 1 Keb. 321. 2 Danv. 577.

In ejectment on not guilty, and a special verdict, the case was, Sir Francis Wortley, seised in fee, covenanted on his intended marriage with the woman which he afterwards married, to stand seised to the use of himself and his heirs till the marriage, and after the marriage, to the use of himself for life, remainder to the heirs males of their bodies begotten, remainder to the lessor of the plaintiff, being a daughter by a former venter, the remainder to his own right heirs. The marriage took effect, and they had issue only one daughter, wife of the defendant; and afterwards he and his wife levied a fine with warranty to the defendant's wife; and both Sir Francis and his wife were dead without other issue: whereupon the lessor brings ejectment; and the question is, whether this warranty being descended on the plaintiff shall bar him? And in order thereto, two questions were made; First, If the fine made any discontinuance? 2dly. If it was no discontinuance, yet whether it [37] made no divesting of the estate in remainder to the lessor? For if so, it was said for the defendant, that it made room for the warranty to operate thereupon, and to become a bar. And for making it a discontinuance it was much insisted, that the estate-tail was executed in the husband and wife; and the case of King and Edwards, in 1 Cro. was strongly relied on; and it was said, that the interposing estate of the wife could not prevent the execution of the estate-tail, for the remainder in tail being next to the estate for life to the wife, merged it; and it being so merged, nothing then interposed between the estate for life to the husband; and therefore that ought to be merged also by the remainder in tail, and so the estate-tail was executed: and this was the substance of the arguments for the defendant, for whom it was argued this term by Winnington, and the following term by Maynard. But on the other side it was argued this term by Allen, and the next term by Jones, and resolved by the Chief Justice, Twysden, and Wyndham, that the fine did not make any discontinuance, nor the warranty any bar. First, Because the estate was not executed, being by the same deed. 2 Co. Wiscot's case, but it is a mean (intervening) remainder between the husband's estate for life, and the estate-tail, viz. the estate to the wife; and it cannot be intended, that when a remainder for life is limited to the wife, that it should instantly merge by the remainder in tail, to the heirs of the husband and wife; and the case of King and Edwards cited on the other side, does not come up to this case; for (there) the husband and wife were jointly seized to them and the heirs of the body of the husband, and so the estate tail was executed in law; (but) here the wife had an estate in remainder for life; and then it is no more in effect than Bredon's case, that where a particular tenant and him in remainder levy a fine, it is no discontinuance, but each grants that which he lawfully may; and the estates being here in the same persons, it is all one as if they were in divers; and if the estate-tail be not a discontinuance, the warranty cannot be a bar, 10 Co. Seymor's case: and the Chief Justice and Wyndham held, that there is not any displacing or divesting of the remainder to the lessor, but that the fine operates only as a grant of him that has for life, and of the remainder in tail, which they might lawfully grant, and not disturb any estate in remainder; and if it made any displacing of the estate, [38] yet Twysden said, that it was only at the election of him in remainder, as where he shall bring a formedon, and admit himself out of possession, there perhaps the warranty might have been pleaded in bar; but here he has entered and does not admit the estate to be out of him, and thereupon he brings his ejectment; and (he) cited 7 H. 5, 2. And they seemed to rely in some sort on the case in Littleton, sect. 0, where a wife being tenant for life, a confirmation to the husband and wife shall not enure to the husband, but as in remainder, and Peck and Channel's case in 3 Cro. where a woman tenant for life, married the remainder-man in tail, and then they levy a fine, this shall not discontinue the tail; and in Trin. term. 14 Car. 2 judgment was given for the plaintiff by the Chief Justice, Twysden and Wyndham; but Mallet being very aged, was of a contrary opinion, but gave no good reason for it. And note, Twysden in this case said, that the use to the wife in this case was good, being by way of remainder, viz. to himself for life, the remainder to his intended wife; but if the limitation had been to himself, and such a woman as he should marry by way of present limitation, it had not been good: but quære, of this opinion, for it seems contrary by the case in Dyer, 274 b. and it seems the case cited in Littleton does not come up to this case, for the husband cannot by any acceptance (of another estate, &c.) destroy the freehold of the wife.

A judgment in dower is compleat without damages, and error lies thereon. S. C. 1 Sid. 188. 1 Keb. 85, 171, &c. 2 Danv. 681.

The demandant in dower unde nihil habet had judgment, and the writ of seisin was executed; the tenant brought error, and the judgment was affirmed, but pending (the writ of error) the tenant aliens the land and dies, and now the demandant brings a sci. fa. against the heir of the heir, and against the alienee; suggesting that her husband died seised; to which the tenants severally plead this matter, whereupon the demandant demurs: and it was argued this term and Michaelmas term following at the Bar, by Strode and Seis Serjeants for the demandant; and by Powys and Allen for the tenant, and afterwards in Easter term 16 Car. 2 judgment was given for the tenant. The Court agreed, that the judgment is a compleat judgment at common law without the damages, which are given by the Statute of Marlbridge, and that it is enough for the wife to suggest the dying seized of the husband after the judgment in dower, for recovering the damages; but the Statute of Marlbridge, which gives the [39] damages, gives them against deforciatores (i.e. expellers by force) and that neither the alienee, nor the heir of the heir are in that case; the heir (it is true) shall be charged with damages if he be in life, but not his heir or alienee; but they are lost by the death of the heir, and are not a lien upon the land which passes therewith: and if they should be recovered, from what time shall they be recovered? Not from the death of the husband, because neither of them had the land at that time; nor from the time of the death of the heir against whom the judgment was; for neither of them was the deforceor, but the heir who is dead, and against whom the judgment was, is the deforceor; and they said, this was not like the case of tithes on the statute of Edw. 6, which they agreed are not lost by the death of the tenants who ought to pay them; for there the duty is certain, viz. the value to be trebled in an action of debt; but here the damages are wholly uncertain, and in nature of damages to be recovered in trespass.

Special bail in an action for words.

In an action on the case for calling a person a quality whore, whereby she lost her marriage: it was ruled on motion, that the defendant should find special bail, although generally in actions for words no special bail is usual; yet on the circumstances of the case, the Court may compel the defendant to find special bail. And so in cases of executors, though they do not find bail in ordinary cases, yet in special cases they shall find bail; as where it appears that they have wasted the goods, &c.

See 1 Mod. 2, & 6 Mod. 230. Special bail denied, though in gross batteries.

opinion, that the distress in this case was sufficient notice. Hob. 207, 208. And it is not like to the case where a forfeiture is to be taken for the breach of a condition. 5 Co. 113 b. Also here the estate passes by the surrender and admittance in Court, which are public acts, of which every tenant may take notice, and no attornment necessary, because no means to compel it, Co. Covenant that he is seized in fee, according to the indenture whereby he purchased, the covenant is absolute. S. C. 1 Keb. 91.

Covenant brought, and declares, that the defendant bargained and sold to him certain lands (which he had purchased of Woolaston and other trustees, in the late times for the sale of delinquents estates) and covenanted, that he was seized of a good estate in fee according to the indenture made to him by Woolaston, &c. and assigns for breach, that he was not seized of a good estate in fee; the defendant pleads, that he was seized of as good an estate as Woolaston, &c. conveyed to him; whereupon the plaintiff demurs, and judgment was given for him, for the covenant is absolute; that he is seized of a good estate in fee, and reference to the conveyance by Woolaston, serves only to denote the limitation and the quality of the estate, and not the defeasibleness or indefeasibleness of the title.

Marriage or no marriage triable by jury, so is the legality of marriage in personal actions.

Debt on an obligation, conditioned for paying to the plaintiff at his marriage, or age of twenty-one years, which should first happen: the defendant pleads, that the plaintiff has not yet attained the age of twenty-one, and that he was never lawfully married; the plaintiff takes issue, that he was lawfully married, and this is found by the jury for the plaintiff. And it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the issue being on the legality of the marriage, ought to have been tried by the Ordinary, and not by jury; though a marriage or no marriage is triable by jury, 2 Cro. 102. But the Court held, that the material part of this issue was, married or not married; for the condition of the obligation is, to pay at his marriage, and though the defendant has put lawfully in his plea, whereby the plaintiff might have demurred, and has not, but has taken issue thereupon; yet this being in a personal action, where the right of marriage does not come naturally in question, as in dower or other real actions (it does) the trial is well enough. Another exception was taken, that the replication does not say that he was married tempore brevis, and so it may be after the action commenced; but this was not allowed, for after verdict it shall be intended to refer to the time of the writ.

Judgment against the father tenant for life or in tail, sci. fa. against the heir, and he returned warned, suffers judgment by default. S. C. Raym. 19. 1 Keb. 112, 141. 1 Sid. 54. 2 Sid. 12.

In ejectment, on not guilty, a special verdict. The father tenant for life, remainder to his son in fee, the father acknowledges a statute and dies; and a sci. fa. was awarded against the son, who was returned warned; but made default, and judgment was against him by default, and the lands delivered on an elegit to the plaintiff's lessor. And it was argued for the plaintiff by Serjeant Wylde, that by this judgment by default he being warned, and a sci. fa. returned, the land of the son is bound without remedy; and cited Barcock and Thompson's case to be so adjudged in 1652, which see in Style's Reports, to which the Court inclined, and Twysden Justice cited the case of one Gilbert and Ragg, where a scire facias was sued upon [42] a supposed judgment, where there was none, and on scire facias returned, and judgment by default, the party was left without remedy; but Wyndham doubted: for here the estate of the son was never liable, and therefore he might have an assise if he be outed; (but) by the other three, (though) the estate of the heir in tail is not liable to the judgment against his father; yet if a judgment in a scire facias after a scire feci returned, be had against him by default, he shall be bound without remedy: and afterwards judgment was given for the plaintiff, except, &c.

Avowry for rent due at a later day no bar of a rent due at a former day. S. C. 1 Keb. 95, 113. Raym. 21. 1 Sid. 44.

In replevin, the defendant made conusance for a rent-charge due at Michaelmas 1658, as bailiff of J. S. The plaintiff pleads in bar, that the defendant had at another time made conusance as bailiff to J. S. in a former replevin brought by J. D. then tenant of the land; for the rent due to J. S. at Michaelmas 1659, on which the conusant demurs; and it was argued for the plaintiff, that the conusance made for a rent due at a latter day, was a discharge of the rent due at a former day; and that there is no book against this, except Fitzherbert's Abridgment, Barr. 79, where he also says, that an acquittance for rent due at a latter day, is no discharge of rent due at a former day, which is contrary to all the other books; and therefore he is not to be much regarded in the other point; and tho' the former conusance was made upon another person, it is not material, seeing it was made by the same person, and in the same right. But the whole Court, except Mallett, (who held, that if an acquittance be an estoppel, a conusance on record is much more so) held the contrary; and that Fitzherbert, Barr. 79, is good law in this point of avowry, and it would be the same thing if the former conusance had been made on the same person, and they differenced in this case from the case of an acquittance, which is a voluntary act of the party, and therefore is an estoppel by force of his hand and seal; but this is a compulsory act, whereto he is compelled by the bringing of the replevin: and [44] Foster, Chief Justice, said, that the avowry for rent due at a latter day, cannot be a discharge of rent due at a former day, any more than a recovery in an action of debt for rent due at a latter day, can be a bar in an action of debt brought for rent due at a former day; and they said the case would have been all one if J. S. himself had avowed at both the times: and gave judgment for the conusant. Except (cause shewn) on the Monday following.

Covenant to convey according to the draughts agreed, needs no tender of wax, &c. for he hath taken it upon himself. S. C. 1 Keb. 122.

Assumpsit, in consideration the plaintiff had promised to pay the defendant 700l. for the reversion of a manor, the defendant promised to seal two instruments for the assurance thereof, with warranty, &c. according to two draughts agreed on before between them; and altho' the plaintiff had tendered him on the first of March two instruments in writing, according to the draughts aforesaid; and on the third of March requested him to seal them, yet he had not sealed them, nor conveyed the reversion of the manor. After verdict for the plaintiff, on non assumpsit (pleaded) it was moved in arrest of judgment by Serjeant Beare; 1st, That he ought to shew the instruments to the Court, that they may judge of them. 2dly. He does not shew that he tendered him wax, pen, ink, &c. as he ought. 3dly. That the request was not well made, it being at another time, and not when the tender was: but judgment was given by the whole Court for the plaintiff. For as to the first, the instruments were agreed before, and therefore he need not shew them to the Court. As to the second, there needs not any tender, for the defendant has taken upon himself to do it. And as to the third, the request after the tender is the better (way), for so he had time to read and consider them. And Justice Wyndham said, Where conveyances are before agreed, and to be sealed according to that agreement, so that there is no need of counsel, the defendant is to do it at his peril. And where one is to grant a reversion, he has time to do it any time during his life, if it so long continues a reversion, if he be not hastened by request; here was a request, and the conveyances being (before) agreed, there needs no tender. But if one be to seal a conveyance generally, there the counsel of the purchaser is intended to draw them, and then the purchaser ought to render them. Quære, for it was not denied by any.

Grant of so much of his term as should be to come at his death. S. C. Raym. 27. 1 Keb. 164, 130, 183.

Debt on an obligation conditioned for performance of covenants in an indenture, whereby the defendant's testator being lessee for years of a long term, assigned so much of the term as should be to come at the time of his death to the plaintiff, and covenants that he should enjoy it, and makes the defendant his executor, and dies; and assigns a breach, that the defendant, after the testator's death, outed him; and after verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment by Bigland, that the assignment of so much of his term as should be to come after his death, was void; and then the covenant is so also, for the covenant cannot subsist without an estate; and that the assignment was void; he cited, 1 Co. The Rector of Chedlington's case, and Gravenor's case in Dyer, and 2 Cro. Child and Bayley's case. And that the covenant is so also, he cited Yelv. 18, Sophrani against Scarro, and so held the Court as to those matters. But then it was moved by Jones, that the obligation is then single; for if the condition refers to a thing which is not, it is all one as there were no condition, and to this the Court inclined: but afterwards, as I heard, for I was not present, they held, that the covenant and the obligation being both for the corroborating of a grant, which was void, they were also both void; and gave judgment for the defendant.

HENNINGS against BRABASON.

Lease for 80 years, if A. should so long live; and from the death of A. for 31 years more, all is but one term. S. C. 1 Keb. 154.

In ejectment on a special verdict, the case was, The Earl of Meath 23 Sept. 13 Car. 1, leased the tenements in question to Underwood: to hold to him for 81 years from Michaelmas next following, if A. should so long live; and from and after the day of the death of A. for 31 years, the lessee enters the said 23d of September before the commencement of the term, and continued in possession till the year 1643, and then the lessor re-entered, the lessee being out of possession assigns the term to the lessor of the [46] plaintiff, who being kept out of possession, brought an ejectment and recovered, and the judgment (thereon) was delivered by Bridgman, Chief Justice; and first, he said, that the term not being to commence till Michaelmas, it was till then a future interest, and the entry by the lessee before was a disseisin; and his whole continuance in possession till 1643, was a seisin by disseisin, and not a possession by virtue of the lease. The second question was, What estate this term for 31 years was? And he held it a continuance of the first term, and an addition thereto, and not a remainder or a future interest; but 31 years added to the former, all being under one habendum. But some of his brothers, he said, differed from him in this matter: but he took it so, as the most strong against him: and altho' the 31 years are not from the time of the death of A. but from the day of his death, it is all one, for the whole day whereon he died is part of the first 81 years, if he should so long live, and the next 31 years shall be adjoined thereto, and no fraction of a day, but the last day of the 81 years, and the first day of the 31 shall be conjoined, and make up one entire term; and it is not to be supposed that he should survive the 81 years, and so finish one term before the other shall commence; for it is to be supposed, that he was 21 when he took the lease; and David says, that 70 years is the age of a man, and long terms are considered in law, for they make a mortmain, and of them shall be a wardship. But if the power had been only for 30 or 40 years, then it would be otherwise, for those might be supposed to determine before the life of a man, and not a term for 80 years; and so he concluded, that both the terms being to the same person, makes only one term, as a lease to one for three years, and so from three years to three years, makes but one term of six years: but if the 31 years had been to another person, this would be a remainder or future interest; and he said, that all his brothers agreed with him, that it could not be presumed that the lessee would survive the term of 80 years. Then 3dly, Admitting it to be one and the same term, which is the most strong against him; for if the 31 years was a future interest, as his brothers took it, then it would be more easy to maintain that the judgment ought to be given for the plaintiff, for then the lessee was never possessed thereof, and then the entry of the lessor cannot turn it to a right, and it is then well assigned [47] out of the land. But taking it for a certain term, yet he said it was not turned to a right by the entry of the lessee; for that he never was possessed by virtue of the term, but only by disseisin; and the lessor had reason, and might enter to purge the disseisin; and he put the case, if a stranger had after Michaelmas, entered and disseised the lessor, this could not turn the term to a right, into which the lessee had never entered; no more shall it where the lessor himself enters, wherein the lessee hath never entered; and so he concluded, that his whole term was at the first a future interest, and that the lessee was never possessed thereof, and so the entry of the lessor cannot turn it to a right; and so it is well assignable at a place out of the land. But some of the other Judges, as it seems, took the last thirty-one years to be a distinct term, and a future interest, and never displaced; and so that term (of which the question is, for the eighty-one years determinable as aforesaid was ended) was well assignable. And judgment was given for the plaintiff.

BRICE against CARRE, EMERSON AND OTHERS, EXECUTORS OF J. S.
COMMON PLEAS.

Covenant lies on a writing, by which the defendant covenants to be accountable for 100l. S. C. 1 Keb. 155.

Covenant on a writing sealed, by which the defendants testator acknowledges himself to be accountable for all such monies as should be charged by him on A. to be paid to B. and says, that he charged so much on A. to be paid to B. and that he had not paid it; for which he brings this action against the defendants, his executors; and it was moved by Serjeant Bernard, that covenant did not lie on such words in a deed, but it ought to be account; and cited 1 Cro. Gury against Reason; and though now account lies not against executor, yet that shall not be turned into covenant against the executor, which was not a covenant against the testator. But (by the Court) it well lies, and so would it do on any words in a deed, purporting an agreement for the payment of money: then he moved, that there is not any notice given how much the money was, and that it was not paid over. But thereto the Court answered, that he having undertaken it, and the person being certain, so that he could inform himself; and the agreement [48] not being to pay it on notice, the defendant is obliged to take notice himself. And gave judgment for the plaintiff.

ANONYMUS.

Trover de uno pullo. S. C. 1 Sid. 60. 1 Keb. 124, 176.

Trover was brought, and among other things declared de uno pullo: after verdict judgment was stayed, for that as to the word pullus, it is uncertain what was intended thereby; for pullus is Latin for the young of any thing, and if it had been with an

Anglice a colt, it had not been good, but it ought to be pullo equino, Anglice a colt: then the plaintiff moved to discontinue that he might commence another action. But it was said by the Court, this cannot be after a verdict, by the stat. 2 H. 4, 7. (Quære.)

WEBB against MARTIN.

Promise to do a thing on request, the action arises on the request, and the Statute of Limitations not pleadable to the promise. S. C. 1 Keb. 177, 197. 1 Sid. 66. Statute of Limitations pleaded to two things, where not pleadable to one, is ill for the whole.

Assumpsit, in consideration that the plaintiff would deliver to the defendant such a deed; the defendant promised that he would re-deliver it to him on request; and also in consideration that he had upon request delivered to him another deed, the defendant promised to pay him 40l. and alledges, that he had delivered to him the first deed; and although at such a day afterwards he made request, yet he had not re-delivered the first deed, nor paid the 40l. The defendant pleads the Statute of Limitations, and that he did not promise within six years before the action brought; whereupon the plaintiff demurs, for the cause of action as to the first (deed) did not arise on the promise, but upon the refusal after request, and the request was within six years. And so held the Court. Then it was moved, that the payment of the money was to be without request, and therefore the plea was good as to that: to which it was answered, that the plea being intire to both parts of the declaration, and being ill in part, is ill in the whole; whereupon it was adjourned. But at a day afterwards the Court held the plea ill in the whole, for the reason alledged; and they cited a case between Bridges and Ade, to have been so adjudged. And gave judgment for the plaintiff for the whole.

[49] JONES against PHILPOTT.

Remitter by entry of one who comes in by way of use. S. C. 1 Keb. 187. 1 Sid. 63.

In ejectment on a special verdict, the case was, Husband and wife tenants in special tail, of the provision of the husband, the remainder to the heirs of the husband, make a feoffment in fee, having two sons, to the use of themselves for their lives; the remainder to the second son in fee; the husband dies, the wife enters and infeoffs the second son in fee; and wife dies, the elder son enters: and it was adjudged by the whole Court, that his entry was lawful, for that the wife on the death of the husband was remitted; for although that she coming in by the statute by way of use, could not be remitted by the limitation of the use by the statute, according to Townsend's case, in Plowd. Com. yet her entry being lawful, she is remitted by her entry; and then if this second feoffment made by her makes a discontinuance, the entry of the elder son was lawful, as for a forfeiture; by the statute of 11 H. 7. And if it was not a discontinuance (as they held, that it was not, being made to him in whom the reversion in fee was well lodged by the first feoffment) nor forfeited, then the entry of the elder son is lawful, as heir to the first intail, the first discontinuance being purged by the remitter of the wife; so that take it either way, let the second feoffment by the wife be a forfeiture or not, the entry of the elder son was lawful.

A habeas corpus to the Justice of Chester, returned by the Chief Justice. S. C. 1 Keb. 187, 165, 210. 1 Sid. 64. See 6 Mod. 61.

A certiorari was issued to the Justice of Chester, or his deputy; and returned and subscribed by such a one Chief Justice; and it was moved to be an ill return, because not by the same person to whom directed; whereto it was answered by Buck, that justice is the substance, and chief is no more than ornament; and he cited 2 Cro. 368, & Hob. 135, 138, and a case lately in this Court, between Harrison and Munford, where a writ was directed to the Justices of Ely, and returned by the Chief Justice of Ely, and adjudged good. And after divers motions the Court held the return good in this case.

RAMSY against ATKINSON.

A promise within the jurisdiction, in consideration of a thing not appearing to be done within the jurisdiction is ill. S. C. 1 Keb. 128, 190. 1 Sid. 65. 1 Vent. 28. 2 Danv. 301.

Error of a judgment in the Palace-Court in an assumpsit, wherein the plaintiff had declared, that the defendant, in consideration that the plaintiff at his request, had taken pains to procure him a lease of a messuage in Holbourn; he promised at Southwark, within the jurisdiction of the Court, to pay him 10l. and had not paid it. And the error assigned was, that it is not alledged, that Holbourn where the messuage is, is within the jurisdiction of the Court; and the jury is to try not only the promise, but also the consideration, viz. the pains in taking the house, and this they cannot do if it be not within their jurisdiction; and for this cause after argument, the judgment was reversed.

[51] THE LADY CHAWORTH'S CASE.

Husband and wife taken in execution, and she discharged. S. C. 1 Keb. 194. Vide ante 1 Mod. 8, 135. 1 Keb. 189, 198, 637. 2 Keb. 355, 442. 1 Sid. 29, 395. 6 Mod. 17, 105.

Her husband Mr. Smith had confessed a judgment against himself and his wife, as for a debt due by the wife whilst sole; whereas upon examination it appeared, that the debt was contracted after the coverture, and this done by practice for taking the wife in execution; but now it appearing, that the husband was taken in execution also, the wife was discharged; for the husband being in execution, the wife shall not be so also, supposing the contract to have been before the marriage. But this being done by practice, the Court said, if it could be made appear who was guilty of the practice, they would punish them.

[52] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 13 & 14 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

BILL against NEAL.

Words spoken of a justice of peace. S. C. 1 Sid. 67.

Action on the case, for that the defendant said of him, being a justice of peace, He is a fool, an ass, a beetle-headed justice. After verdict, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the words are not actionable, for they sound only in disability and not criminally. But on the other side it was said, that the words are scandalous of him, and import his unfitness to be a justice of peace, and are a cause to remove him from his office; and they cited 1 Cro. Peal against Jones. Dunce of a lawyer, and he will get little by the law, which were adjudged actionable. And in the same book, Cawdry against Highly, words spoken of a physician, He is a drunken fool, an ass, never was scholar, nor fit to speak to a scholar, adjudged actionable; and here those words charge the plaintiff with indiscretion, and render him incapable of the office of a justice of peace. But it was adjudged by Foster, Chief Justice, Wyndham and Twysden against Mallet, that those words are not actionable, and cited 2 Cro. 58, Biscoe against Hollis, as a stronger case than this, and Hammond and Kingsmill's case in this Court, 7 Jac. 1, where, for saying of a justice of peace, He is a debauched man, and unfit to be a justice, it was adjudged, no action lay; and Justice Twysden said, that words which found in disability only, are not actionable, except they are spoken of one who gains his living by that thing (profession) wherein the words do disable him. Mallet held these words actionable, being spoken of a magistrate. But all agreed, that the defendant deserved to be bound to his good behaviour for his [53] sawciness of a magistrate.

Whereupon the counsel of the plaintiff moved immediately, that he might be bound to his good behaviour; but thereto the Court answered, that the Court could not do it without a supplicavit first made, and before the supplicavit there ought to be a bill of the complaint filed. But Foster, Chief Justice, said, that if any would sue to him for a warrant for the good behaviour, he would grant it; but as to the action, they gave judgment for the defendant.

SHEPPARD against WAKEMAN.

One claims a contract of marriage with a woman, by which she lost her marriage. S. C. 1 Keb. 255, 269, 303, &c.

Case, where the plaintiff was to be married to such a one who intended to take her to his wife; the defendant falsly and maliciously to hinder the marriage, writ a letter to the said person, that the plaintiff was contracted to him, whereby she lost her marriage. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved, that the action did not lie, the defendant claiming title to her himself, like as Gerrard's case, 4 Co. for slander of title. But after divers motions, the plaintiff had judgment, for it is found to be malicious and false; and if such an action should not lie, a mean and a base person might injure any person of honour and fortune by such a pretence.

Londoners to serve on a jury out of Londin, where the King is party.

A man being cheated in a tavern in London, and having given a judgment for the money, moved here to have the judgment reversed for the fraud; and the Court for the present ruled the execution to be stayed till the matter be examined: and Foster and Twysden advised the party to bring an information against the cheat, and also against the vintner in whose house it was, in this Court: for they said, that the privilege of Londoners not to be returned of juries out of the city, extended only to cases between party and party, and not (to cases) where the King is party.

[54] NEAVE against NELSON.

Privilege of the party pleaded to the jurisdiction after a special imparlance. S. C. 1 Keb. 195, 221, 256. 1 Salk. 1.

Debt in the King's Bench against an attorney of the Common Pleas, who imparls specially, with saving to himself all exceptions, and afterward pleads his privilege, whereupon the plaintiff demurs. And it was objected, that privilege is not pleadable after such an imparlance: but if he would have reserved liberty to plead to the jurisdiction of the Court, he ought to have shewn it specially in his imparlance; and not only as here (salvis, &c. tam ad breve quam ad billam, &c.) but also to the jurisdiction; the others are only as to the person and the action, and not to the jurisdiction of the Court; and cited 7 H. 6, 37. 22 H. 6, 7, also the plea is not averred as it ought. Wyndham and Twysden held at this time the plea to the jurisdiction, receivable on this imparlance: but it was adjourned. And afterwards in the following term, a respondeas ouster was awarded for the fault of the plea in wanting an averment; but nothing further was spoken of the special matter. But afterwards in Michaelmas term, 18 Car. 2, in this Court, entered Trin. 18 Rot. 121, between Trussel and Maddox, it was adjudged, that a plea to the jurisdiction is not to be received after such an imparlance, which you may see hereafter reported at large, p. 188. SAYER against GLEAN. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

Bottomry bill with excessive interest. S. C. 1 Sid. 27, 28. 2 Danv. 77, pl. 15.

Debt on an obligation conditioned, that if a ship sent to sea, or the goods (therein) or the obligor returns safe, to pay him the sum, beyond the use allowed by the statute for the loan of 100l. and also the 100l. And upon demurrer it was objected, that it was an usurious contract, and the bond void, because the payment depended upon so many things, one of which in probability must happen. Though if it had been on the return of the ship only, it might be good. But it was resolved by Bridgman and the whole Court, that it was a good bill of bottomry, and tolerable by the usage among merchants, and allowable by reason of the great perils of the sea, and not like to the case in 5 Co. where the condition was to [55] pay within six months, if one of the three persons were in life; for by the same reason then it might be so for ten lives. Secondly, The defendant here having pleaded, that the obligor died before the return, and the plaintiff having demurred thereupon without assignment of any breach, it was objected, that the plaintiff could not have judgment. But to that it was answered and resolved, that the defendant having pleaded a collateral plea, and that being defective, had saved the plaintiff the labour of assigning a breach, and had given the plaintiff the advantage of putting himself on the judgment of the Court, whether the plea be good or not; and this before he comes to make any replication, Yelv. 78. But if the plaintiff had admitted the plea, and made a replication, which shewed no cause of action, it would have been otherwise (said Bridgman.) Thirdly, It was objected, that the defendant had election to pay upon which of the contingents he would, and of one of them he is deprived by the death of the obligor, and therefore is excused of all. But to this it was answered and resolved, that all those things being contingent and uncertain which of them would happen, the law supplies these words, which shall first happen; and it shall be expounded, to pay at which of the contingents shall first happen; and so foreclose the election of the obligor, and give it to the obligee to take the action on which of the contingents shall first happen: and it is not like the case where one is obligee to pay a sum at Michaelmas or Lady-Day, if he were then in life, and he died after Michaelmas and before Lady-Day, as Bridgman said. And judgment was given for the plaintiff.

FOSTER against FOSTER.

Agreement to convey to the son, will not raise a use. S. C. Raym. 43. 1 Sid. 82. 1 Keb. 160, 225, 274.

Ejectment, and upon a special verdict, the case was, Margery Foster being seized, there was a deed made between her and her son William Foster, in this manner. Articles of agreement for conveyance of, &c. the tenements in question. Imprimis, The said Margery in consideration of 20l. hath bargained and sold, demised and granted, and doth hereby bargain and sell, demise and grant, &c. to Matthew Foster, the tenements in question, to have and to hold to him and his heirs [56] for ever, she to have it during her life, and also she to have his barn during her life for her third part, &c. And the jury find, that the articles were made as well in consideration of natural affection, as of 20l. but no execution by livery or inrollment; and afterwards she made feoffment of those lands to Nicholas Foster the defendant, against whom Matthew Foster brought the ejectment; and the question was, whether those articles amount to a covenant to stand seized to the use of Matthew? And it was after argument adjudged in Trinity term, 14 Car. 2, for the defendant, that the articles did not raise any use, but rested only in covenant, and as preparatory agreements: it was agreed, that though the 20l. is the consideration express, yet the jury may find the other consideration of affection. And Twysden said, that a covenant in consideration of 20l. to stand seized to the use of my son, is not good without inrollment, but a covenant in consideration of 20l. and affection, is good without inrollment, because both considerations are express; but all agreed, that in this case no use should arise, and that the deed rested only in agreement. And this appears, first, from the title, viz. articles, &c. Secondly, She to have all for her life; which is but an agreement that she should have it. Thirdly, That she should have his barn; this rests only in covenant, and if the estate should pass to her by way of use, and she have covenant only for the barn, it would be unequal.

COUNT OF STANDFORD against NEDHAM.

Venue not changed in scand. mag. S. C. 1 Keb. 514. 1 Sid. 143.

In scandalum magnatum, and the action laid in London; the defendant moved to change the venue, for that he was prohibited to stay in London, having been in arms against the King: but the motion was denied, for the plaintiff is a Peer of the Parliament now sitting at Westminster, and has election to lay his action where it is most convenient for himself; and the rather in this case it ought not to be removed, because this action is as well on behalf of our lord the King, as himself.

[57] THE KING against ALICOCK.

Indictment for treasonable words.

He was convicted of treason for speaking those words, The King is a bastard, his mother is a whore, he is gone to convey the whore out of the kingdom, (the King being then gone to leave his mother at Portsmouth, in order for her transportation to France) but may come short home, if I meet him I will kill him; and on the trial at the Bar the Court held the words treason: but it appearing that the witnesses were of ill fame, and inhabiting in a scandalous part of the city, where the defendant had oftentimes disturbed them, being four or five, and some of them women of ill fame; and it being proved that they had conspired to rid him out of their way, the jury found him not guilty. See the stat. 13 Car. 2, stat. 1, cap. 1.

BROWN against BROWN.

Covenant general restrained by a particular covenant subsequent.

Covenant on an indenture, whereby the defendant grants a fee-farm-rent to the plaintiff, which he had purchased of the late trustees for the sale of the King's tenements, and covenanted, that he was seized in fee, and had good right to sell; and assigns a breach, that he had not good right: the defendant pleads, that it was further agreed in the same indenture, that all the covenants in the indenture should not extend further than to acts done by the vendor and his heirs, whereon the plaintiff demurs; and there being a remote agreement in the end of the deed, far distant from the other covenant, it was adjudged, that it had qualified the first covenant, and restrained it to acts done by the covenantor himself only; as in Nokes's case, 4 Co. whereupon it was adjudged for the defendant.

[58] HARRIS against KNIPE.

An award of mutual releases, without any other thing on one part, yet good.

Debt on an obligation to perform an award, and in the first part of the award it is awarded, that all suits and controversies shall cease, &c. and though in all the award afterwards nothing is well awarded, but only on one part; yet it was agreed by the Court, that this is a good and mutual award on the first party only.

LADY DACRE'S CASE.

Ejectment of a stable, orchard, cottage, &c.

Ejectment was brought among other things de uno stabulo: after verdict it was moved in arrest of judgment, that an ejectment does not lie of a stable; but on view of precedents in the Common Pleas, of recoveries suffered of a stable, it was resolved it well lay; as also of an orchard, and of a cottage. And Twysden said, that though an ejectment would not lie of a croft, yet it will lie of a croft called Black Acre; for this is certain enough to be delivered in execution; and so, he said, it was adjudged in one Fairbeard's case.

HUNT against HURLEWOOD.

Damages in the whole above the particulars, good, if the jury give no more than the particulars.

Assumpsit of several particulars of divers values, which amount to 69l. 9s. but by a miscasting at the foot it was made to amount to 70l. 14s. And after verdict this being moved, it was resolved, that the jury not having given more damages than 69l. 9s. it is well; but otherwise it had been, had they given above the 69l. 9s.

[59] COLLINGWOOD against PACE IN THE EXCHEQUER-CHAMBER.

[See S. C. 1 Ventr. 413.]

Devise to the heir of one who is alive, or to the heir of an alien, is void. 1 Sid. 193. 2 Sid. 23, 51, 108, 194. Vaugh. 274. 1 Keb. 65, 174, &c. 2 Jo. 10. 1 Vent. 413, &c. 2 Vent. 1. Hard. 224. Hob. 29. Raym. 163, 330. 2 Mod. 291. 2 Jon. 99, 212. Mo. 860. 3 Lev. 330, &c. 2 Danv. 515.

In ejectment in the Common Pleas on a special verdict, the case was, that Ramsey, an alien Scot, before the Union, had issue four sons, viz. Robert, Nicholas, John and George, Robert had issue, three daughters now living. Nicholas had also issue two sons Patrick and William yet in life. John had no issue; George had issue the lessor. John being seized of the lands in question, devised them to the heir of Nicholas and his heirs. John and Robert being before naturalized by Act of Parliament, with words, that they should inherit to any ancestor lineal or collateral, as fully to all intents and purposes, as if they had been natural subjects born in England. John and his wife are dead, and also George. Patrick the elder son of Nicholas, enters as heir of Nicholas, claiming by the devise, against whom the lessor brought ejectment, as son and heir of George, and brother and heir of John. And this case being argued in the Common Pleas, two points were made; 1. If the devise to the heir of Nicholas was good? And resolved by Bridgman and the whole Court, that the devise was void, first, because Nicholas was alive, and none can be heir to a living person. 2dly, Nicholas being an alien cannot have any heir by our law; an heir he might have in Scotland, but not in England, where the lands are which this devise concerns; and so it was agreed by all, that the defendant had no title. But then the question was; 2dly. Whether the plaintiff had any title, or whether the lands should escheat? And thereupon the question was, if John and George being aliens, sons of an alien, may be heirs or inherit to one another by the Act of Parliament, being naturalized as aforesaid? And it was held by Bridgman and Tyrrel, that they cannot inherit to one another, according to the opinion of 1 Co. Inst. 8 a. because they do not derive any inheritable blood from their father; and Hobbie's case, Noy 158, 159. But they agreed, where a man had two sons and afterwards is attainted, the sons shall inherit to one another, because they had inheritable blood derived from their father and mother before the attainder, which cannot be extinguished by the attainder afterwards; and for this reason each of them might inherit from their mother such [60] lands as came by her. But if the attainder had been before the birth of the sons, it would have been otherwise. And they agreed with the others, that the being of daughters of Robert the elder brother, would not prevent the descent, as it would have done, had they been at once (together) legal heirs and attainted. And the Court being divided, Hide and Brown, Justices of the Common Pleas, being of the contrary opinion, the case was adjourned into the Exchequer-Chamber before all the justices of England, where Kelynge, then a Justice of the King's Bench, joined in opinion with Bridgman and Tyrrel, who adhered to their former opinion. But Hyde, then Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and Brown, still Justice of the Common Pleas, retained their former opinions, and with them joined in opinion, Hale Chief Baron, Twysden and Wyndham Justices of the King's Bench, and Atkins and Turner Barons of the Exchequer; and they held, that by virtue of the Act of Naturalization, John and George were inheritable the one to the other, and so the lessor, son of George, was inheritable to those lands as heir to George; and they held, that if an alien has two sons born in England, the one shall inherit to the other, tho' neither of them could inherit to the father, for the descent between them is immediate, and they shall make their title in a mortdancestor, &c. as heir to the brother, without mentioning the father: and this answers the objection, which was made on the other side, and strongly insisted on, that altho' the Act enables them to inherit to any ancestor lineal or collateral, it is restrained by the words as if they were born in England: and Bridgman and those of the other side, saying, that two brothers born in England of an alien father, could not inherit to one another; all the Judges of this side denied it, and for this cited Godfry and Dean's case, 2 Cro. and they denied that which is said in Co. Lit. 8 a. which is not there spoken as the opinion of Coke himself; but he says, that some have said, that if the father be attainted, and afterwards have two sons born, the one shall not inherit to the other, because they never had any inheritable blood derived from their father; and the words of the Act of Parliament which say, He shall be inheritable to any ancestor lineal or collateral, would be vain, if he being descended from an alien father could not have any ancestor. And afterwards in Easter term, 16 Car. 2, judgment was given for the plaintiff by the opinions of the said seven Judges against the said three, that the one brother shall inherit to the other by virtue of the said Acts of Naturalization.

THE KING against OKEY, BARKSTEAD AND CORBET.

Persons attainted, tried whether the same persons, &c. S. C. 1 Keb. 244. 1 Sid. 72. Keel. 13, 14.

They having been attainted by Act of Parliament for the murder of King Charles the First, being three of his Judges, which sate in the High Court of Justice, as they called it; and having escaped, and retaken, and being brought to the Bar, and demanded, whether they were the same persons in the Act mentioned; they said they were of the same names, but there might be divers persons of the same name: but they (further) said, that the Court ought not to proceed against them without having a record of their attainder here in Court, as was done in Sir Walter Raleigh's case, where the indictment, tho' long before, was (made) a record of this Court, and produced. And thereupon the record of the Act of their attainder being removed by a certiorari into Chancery, and thence sent hither by a mittimus, was read unto them; whereupon they pleaded, that they were not the same persons, and issue was taken thereon, and a jury returned immediately to try it, which was done, and they (were) not permitted to challenge peremptorily, for they are not now to be tried for the treason, but (only) of the identity of persons; and the jury found them the same persons; and thereupon sentence of execution was immediately given, and three or four days afterward they were executed at Tyburn.

[62] THE KING against KIMBERTY AND MARY NORTH.

[Distinguished, Mogul Steamship Company v. MacGregor, 1889-92, 23 Q. B. D. 630; [1892], A. C. 25.]

An indictment lies for conspiring only, without other act done. S. C. 1 Keb. 203, 254.

They were indicted for conspiring to indict J. S. for having begot a bastard on the body of the said Mary, with intent to extort money from him. After verdict and motion in arrest of judgment, it was resolved, that the indictment lies for the meer conspiracy, without any indictment or other act done, as 9 Co. 56 b. The Poulterer's case; but the Court would consider what punishment they should have.

And note, afterwards in Hillary term, 15 & 16 Car. 2, B. R. The King against Sterling, an indictment for conspiracy to depauperate the excise-men, was adjudged good.

NEVILL against HANCERTON.

One justifies the inclosing of common, for the enlarging of his curtilage. S. C. 1 Sid. 79. 1 Keb. 314, 283.

Case (was brought) and declares, that he had common in three acres, and the defendant had enclosed two of them: the defendant pleads, that he had a house there, and made the inclosure for the enlargement of his curtilage; whereupon the plaintiff demurred, and took these exceptions to the plea, viz. 1. That it is not said to be an ancient messuage; for which cause Twisden said, the plea was not good. But Wyndham contra, it being for enlargement of a curtilage, for the lord may build a new house for his herdsman, and afterward enlarge the curtilage, 2 Inst. 476. 2dly. That it was unreasonable to inclose two acres out of three. To which it was answered, that the quantity is to be considered with the quality of the person. 3dly. That it is not averred that sufficient common was left; to which Twisden inclined, Wyndham contra, said, that it was to be averred only, where the inclosure was for the improvement of the land, and not where it was for the enlargement of the curtilage. But afterwards in Trinity term, the plea was agreed by all (the Court) to be ill, because it was not said, that the messuage was for his own habitation, or of his shepherd; for he might (perhaps) build a great messuage to lease to a nobleman, which might require a greater curtilage than the lord himself or his herdsman: and therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[63] PORTER against HARRIS.

Covenant brought against two, and judgment by default against one, the other pleads performance, which is found, the plaintiff shall not have judgment against the other.

Covenant was brought against two for not building a house for the plaintiff according to their covenant; judgment was against one by default, the other pleads performance, and it is found for him; whereupon it was moved in arrest of judgment, that no judgment nor writ of inquiry of damages, could be against him against whom the judgment was by default: because although in trespass, one may be guilty and the other not, yet in covenant, debt or other contract where it is joint, the one cannot be convicted without the other; and here by the verdict for one of the defendants, that the covenant is performed, it appears now, that the plaintiff had not any cause of action, and therefore shall not have judgment, as Tillies and Woodie's case is, E. 4. and so should it be, although the defendant against whom the judgment is by default had confessed the judgment. It was also resolved, that the defendant should have costs on the verdict against the plaintiff, for now it is a verdict against him, and that he should have neither costs nor damages against the other.

EARL OF SALISBURY'S CASE.

Seizure of copyhold until, &c. good without custom; but not a seizure as forfeited without a custom. S. C. 1 Keb. 287.

In evidence to a jury at the Bar, (on a trial) in ejectment, the question was, whether the heir of a copyholder, not coming in to be admitted on proclamation, if the lord might seize the land without a particular custom to do it? And it was held, that he might seize until the tenant came in to be admitted without any custom but to seize as forfeited, he could not without a custom. Another question was, if in the proclamation there ought to be particular mention of all the lands by name, as they are named in the copy, or if a general proclamation to come in and be admitted to all the lands of his ancestor (were sufficient)? and this was intended to have been found specially. But afterwards the parties agreed in Court.

[64] SIR HENRY HERBERT against PAGETT.

An officer chargeable for defaults in his office which he could not hinder. S. C. 1 Sid. 77. 1 Keb. 288.

In case, plaintiff declares, that where a judgment was had against the plaintiff in case for words, and the judgment entered with a capiatur instead of misericordia, he thereupon brought a writ of error to have the judgment reversed; but that the defendants being Keeper of the Writs and Records of the Court, kept them so negligently, that the record was amended, and made misericordia; and on (issue) not guilty and trial at the Bar, although it appeared that all the attornies of the Court had privilege to view the records without controul, and that sometimes they viewed many of them at the same time, so that it was almost impossible to observe them all; and that many times the attornies amended their judgments at any time, if there were not a rule to the contrary; and an ancient attorney swore, that it had been oftentimes done even after a writ of error brought, before the record removed; and thereupon it was insisted by the defendant's counsel, that the defendant could not take notice what they amended, or ought to amend: yet by Mallett and Wyndham it was held, that though here appeared no neglect or want of care in the defendant, yet he having taken upon him to keep the records, he is at his peril to answer for all the misusage that is in the records, and so is chargeable in the action. Twisden held the contrary, that he ought not to be chargeable, for that by no industry he could prevent it; but forasmuch as the declaration recited, that the writ of error was from the Chief Justice, &c. directed to another Chief Justice, &c. but mis-directed: all agreed that it was a variance, for which the plaintiff ought to be non-suited, and so he was.

Words. S. C. Raym. 51. 1 Keb. 293, 303.

Case was brought for words, that the defendant said, The plaintiff says I am a perjured rogue; he is a perjured rogue as well as I: After verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the words are not said positively (of the plaintiff) but relatively to the defendant; and it is not averred that the defendant is a perjured rogue; as for saying He is as very a thief as any is in Warwick gaol, an action does not lie without an averment that a thief was there. But it was said by the Court, the defendant had supplied the want of an averment, in saying, as well as I, whereby he had confessed himself to be a perjured rogue; and afterwards in Trinity term judgment was given for the plaintiff.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE CASE, alias DR. PATRICK'S CASE.

A mandamus does not lie to a college where there is a visitor. S. C. Raym. 101. 1 Sid. 346. 1 Keb. 289, 294, 298, 551, 610, 665.

Dr. Patrick being duly elected, as he thought, to the Mastership of Queen's College in Cambridge, but denied to be admitted, and sworn by the senior fellow, being of the party of another who stood in competition with Dr. Patrick; the doctor prayed a mandamus. Twysden and Wyndham held, that it did not lie, for Twysden said, he knew they had a visitor. But by Foster Chief Justice, Let the writ go, and upon the return it will appear whether they have a proper visitor; and the writ was granted; but that not being returned, the next term an alias was granted and returned, and many exceptions were taken to the return, the most part whereof afterwards appeared not to be material. But in Hillary 15 & 16 Car. 2 the case was argued at the Bar by Jones for the doctor, and by Finch the King's Solicitor, for the college; and now the return was opened at large, viz. that they were incorporated by Hen. 7, ad Studend' & Orand' and to consist of a president and nineteen fellows, and that all differences between the president and fellows, should be referred to, and determined by the chancellor of the university and the major part of the heads of the colleges there. And they further [66] returned the patent 2 Jac. 1 whereby the statutes of the colleges in the university are confirmed, and thereby it is appointed, that where no other is visitor, the chancellor shall be visitor if he be present, and if absent, the vice-chancellor, if he be present and appointed; and that Dr. Marten the late president died such a day, and that Dr. Patrick was elected president by such a number of the fellows, and one other by such another number (being the greater) and admitted; and that the chancellor was then absent, but that the vice-chancellor was then present in the university, and that Dr. Patrick had not appealed: and it was much controverted, whether this were a spiritual or a temporal foundation, ad Studend' & Orand', and not agreed, some of the Judges holding the one way, and some the other: but the principal point was, that here being a visitor appointed, whether this Court could meddle with the matter, be the corporation either spiritual or temporal, for the return was in some things agreed not to be very good? And the principal matter was argued at the Bar, in Trinity 15 & 16, and in Michaelmas the 16th; and in Trinity the 18th of Car. 2. And in Hillary the 18th it was argued at large by all the Judges, and Kelynge now Chief Justice (who before had been counsel for Patrick) and Moreton the puisne Judge held, that the mandamus well lies, and that a peremptory mandamus ought to go for admitting Doctor Patrick, and an attachment against the senior fellow, for a contempt on this return, and not admitting him before. But Twysden and Wyndham held the contrary; and that here being a visitor appointed, this Court had nought to do in the matter, for the founder intended that his college should be free of all foreign suits, and that all controversies should be determined within the university, to the intent that they might the better follow their studies: but by this means, if they should come hither upon every controversy, the order and rule of the universities should be overthrown; and the visitors are the proper judges of their laws and statutes, and not this Court. And the Court being thus divided, it was considered whether this being a cause of the Crown-Side, might be adjourned into the Exchequer Chamber, and it seemed to some that it might, but it was not.

[67] Note, The exceptions principally insisted on were; First, That it is not returned, that the vice-chancellor was appointed visitor, and by the return (it appears) he is not (to be) visitor if he be not appointed. And the return is, that the chancellor was absent, and the vice-chancellor present: but it does not say that he was appointed. And 2dly, they have not returned any cause, wherefore they refused to admit Dr. Patrick: but return the special matter as aforesaid, but do not say which of them was duly elected, and yet they return, that Dr. Patrick had not appealed.

Note, The parties being agreed, the return in this case was afterwards agreed to be vacated, because it could not be taken off the file.

[68] TERM. SANCT. TRIN. ANNO 14 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

SIR HENRY VANE'S CASE.

A copy of indictment and counsel denied in treason. S. C. 1 Sid. 84. 1 Keb. 304, 315, 319, 324.

He being excepted out of the general pardon, was indicted of high treason committed before the King's restoration; and after that the indictment was read, he desired it might be read again, which was done: but then he desired it might be read in Latin, which was denied, it being never done. Then he desired a copy thereof, and counsel, which was denied: but the Court said, that if he took any legal exception, he should have a copy of so much thereof as concerned the exception, and counsel to argue it. And then being tried and found guilty, and being brought to the Bar at a day afterwards, he tendered a bill of exceptions, which the Court refused to accept; for a bill of exceptions does not lie in criminal cases, but only in actions between party and party. And he was afterwards executed on Tower-hill by beheading only.

AT GUILD-HALL.

Duress cannot be, where the party is in prison by the King's writ. Vide 1 Sid. 43, 74.

Audita querela on a release given after judgment; the issue was, that the release was made by duress; and it being tried before Bridgman, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, the evidence was, that the defendant not having good cause of action, caused the plaintiff to be arrested and detained in prison till he made the release, with menaces, that he should lie there and rot, if he would not seal a release; whereupon he made the release, and was presently discharged: and held by Bridgman, that he [69] being in custody of the law by the King's writ, it was not any duress to be pleaded in avoidance of the deed, but being arrested without cause of action, he had his remedy by action on the case: but he offered to have it found specially, if Baldwin would pray it, but he did not do it, and (so) the jury gave their verdict, that the release was good.

ANONYMUS.

A writ tested the term that the judgment was given, where the action was commenced before. Qu. if good. Q. Raym. 244.

Error of judgment in the Common Pleas, and want of an original assigned, and upon diminution alledged, the judgment being of Hillary term, with an imparlance of Michaelmas term, and the judgment being of Hillary term when the original is given, tho' in the Common Pleas an original sued returnable the same term, that the judgment is given, is good; yet it is not so to be allowed here, where the record is all made up of the same term, as they generally do without an alias prout patet, &c. But in this case, seeing the record is here certified with an alias prout patet, term. Michaelis, so that it appears the action was commenced before the original, it cannot be intended the original in this action, but in some other by Twysden; whereto the Court agreed, and reversed the judgment.

LITTLEBOY against WRIGHT.

Words spoken within the palace jurisdiction, loss of marriage without the jurisdiction. S. C. Raym. 63. 1 Sid. 85, 95, 105. 1 Keb. 328.

Case (was brought) for saying of the plaintiff within the jurisdiction of the Palace-Court, She is a hackney whore, whereby she lost her marriage: and after verdict and judgment for the plaintiff in the Palace-Court, error was brought here, and the judgment reversed, because it is not shewn, that the loss of marriage was within the jurisdiction of the Court, and that is the cause of the action, and not the speaking of the words only; and if the action be brought within two years after the loss of the marriage, the Statute of Limitations is not pleadable, tho' the words were spoken ten years before, if the words are not actionable, without the loss of marriage.

[70] TERM. SANCT. MICH. ANNO 14 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

OLIVER against EVENS.

A. promises B. to deliver him a deed; B. promises A. on the delivery to pay him 60l. A. ought to averr performance of the delivery. S. C. 1 Keb. 333, 342.

Assumpsit, and declares, whereas the plaintiff had purchased a lease of certain lands, then in the defendant's possession; the defendant in consideration that the plaintiff had promised to the defendant to pay him 60l. the first of February 1661, the defendant promised the plaintiff to deliver to him the said lease on the payment of the 60l. and also to deliver to him the possession of the land the first of April next following; and assigned a breach, that he did not deliver the possession of the land the said first of April. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment by Aleyn, that tho' here is a promise against a promise, yet the lease being to be delivered on payment of the money, the plaintiff ought to aver that he had paid the 60l. for otherwise he is not to have the lease delivered to him: to which the Court agreed; but they held, that the delivery of the possession of the land is another thing and distinct, and to be done at another time; and therein is the breach alledged, and that ought to be done be the 60l. paid or not; but if the breach had been for not delivering of the lease, it had been as Aleyn said. But the breach being for not delivering the possession of the land, they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

[71] BUNTON against BATEMAN.

Case for disturbing a seat in the church, without a prescription to repair. S. C. 1 Sid. 88, 201. 1 Keb. 345, 370, 386, 420, 433, 457. 1 Wils. 326. 1 Term Rep. 428.

Case for disturbance of a seat in an aysle of the church, and prescribes, that he and all the tenants of such a house, had all the seats in the said aysle; and after verdict it was moved in arrest of judgment, that he had not shewn any cause or consideration for the prescription, as to repair, &c. And it was moved several times, and much debated, and divers cases were cited on the one side and the other as Hob. 69. Buckly & Bailie's case, 2 Cro. 366. Francis v. Lee, ibid. 605, Davis & Dee. And on the other side were cited Co. 3 Inst. 202. Corven against Pym, 1 Inst. 121, 122. 12 Co. Rep. Corvin & Powis's case there reported; and 2 Inst. 489. And some would make a difference between a seat in a church and an aysle, for an aysle may be on his own soil: and after many debates it was at length adjudged for the plaintiff, on this difference, viz. it is good in an action of the case against a disturber, but not in a prohibition, as many of the cases before cited are; also, in case where one claims a right against the Ordinary, he ought to shew a title by repairing, &c. but not in case against a trespassor or tort-feasor; and thereupon judgment was given for the plaintiff, whereupon a writ of error was brought in the Exchequer Chamber, and the judgment affirmed there in Easter term, 16 Car. 2.

SCOT against STEPHENSON.

Assumpsit where one was obliged for the defendant's testator, and forced to pay the money. S. C. 1 Sid. 71. 1 Keb. 346.

Assumpsit, that whereas Sanders was indebted to divers persons and the plaintiff obliged for him, and forced to pay them; the defendant being Sanders's executor, in consideration the plaintiff would forbear to sue him for the money, promised to pay him: after a verdict for the plaintiff on the issue non assumpsit, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that here was no consideration; for it does not appear that Sanders had promised or was obliged to save him harmless; and Borden and Thyn's case in Yelverton 40, [72] and Smith and John's case, Owen 132, were cited. But by the Court, there was equity, that Saunders should save the plaintiff harmless, and a suit in equity is a suit, or perhaps he might be charged by (a writ) de plegiis acquietandis, and therefore they held the consideration good, and gave judgment for the plaintiff, except cause (shewn to the contrary) on Monday next, &c.

WINN against LLOID.

Entry (alone) no plea in a writ of error, but entry and feoffment, and entry and lease is. S. C. 1 Keb. 54, 351, 388, 459, 717, 748, 809, 914. Raym. 16, 55, 70, 96, 134. 1 Sid. 213. Post, 130, 146.

Error of a common recovery in Wales, and a scire facias against the demandant in the recovery; but then it being shewn that others were tertenants, a scire facias issued against them also, and the sheriff returned J. S. and J. D. tertenants. J. S. came and pleaded an entry by the plaintiff in the error, into part pending the writ.

J. D. pleads, that he is lessee for years to one Owen, and demands judgment if he shall be compelled to answer without the said Owen: the plaintiff demurs to both; and as to the first it was resolved by the whole Court, that entry by the plaintiff in the error is no plea, for he might have a writ of error before any possession recovered against him, when he is possessed of the whole for reversing the judgment, although he cannot have restitution of that which he had never lost. But an entry and feoffment is an extinguishment of the writ of error, for that he hath (thereby) departed from his title, and an entry and lease is a suspension of the writ of error for the time; and as to the second (plea) it was said, first, that to say he is only lessee for years, where the sheriff has returned him tertenant, is contrary to the record: it was also said, that the tertenant cannot plead in abatement of the writ of error, but only in bar, as a release, &c. in maintenance of his title; for the scire facias against him is not to hear the errors, but only to hear the process and record; and thereto Twysden and Wyndham inclined. And afterwards it being moved again, and the matter appearing to be for delay, the pleas were both over-ruled, and a respondeas ouster awarded.

[73] WHEATLY against THOMAS.

An Act of Parliament, that the heirs of one attainted shall inherit. S. C. Raym. 53. 1 Keb. 349, 395, 436, 549, &c.

Ejectment by Francis Brook, lessor of a third part of lands in Cooling, and on not guilty tried at the Bar, a special verdict found George Brook, Lord Cobham, seized of the manor of Cooling, had issue William, Duke, Charles, Calisthenes, and John, and three other sons, and devised the manor to William for life, remainder to the first and all other sons of William, and the heirs males of the bodies of every of the sons of William; with like estates for life to each of the other seven sons of the Lord Cobham, and the heirs males of their bodies; the remainder to the heirs of the body of William; with like remainders to six of the younger sons of the Lord Cobham in tail; the remainder to the right heirs of Edward, the eighth son of the Lord Cobham: William the eldest son had issue Henry and George, both which were attainted of treason, 1 Jac. 1, and afterwards by Act of Parliament, 3 Jac. 1, reciting their treason, it is enacted, that all their estates, rights, &c. shall be forfeited and vested in the King, saving the rights of others; provided and be it enacted, that the manor of Cooling shall be and remain to Duke Brook, and the heirs male of his body, the remainder to Charles in like manner, remainder to Sir William Brook, (who was father of the now plaintiff) the son of George in like manner; remainder to Calisthenes, son of the Lord Brook in like manner; remainder to Sir John Brook, another son of the Lord Cobham in like manner; and for default of such issue, to and for such other persons and estates as are limited by the will of the Lord Cobham. And afterwards in the seventh year of King James I. by another Act of Parliament it was enacted, that Sir William Brook, son of George, who was attainted, and father of the lessor, should be restored in blood to be heir to any ancestor lineal or collateral, as if George had never been attainted: and it is further found, that Duke, Charles, Calisthenes, and all the other sons of the Lord Brook are dead without issue male; and Henry without issue, and that William the son of George, had issue only three daughters, one of which is lessor of the plaintiff, who entered into the third part, and devised it to the plaintiff, as appears, &c. and (conclude) if for the plaintiff, for the [74] plaintiff; and if not for the defendant: and it was argued this term by Serjeant Baldwin for the plaintiff, and Jones for the defendant; and Mich. 15 Car. 2, by Serjeant Glyn for the plaintiff, and Finch the King's Solicitor for the defendant. And the only question was, whether those daughters, the issue male being spent, should inherit as heirs of the body of William, the son of the Lord Cobham, notwithstanding the attainder, either by virtue of the proviso of the statute 3 Jac. or if not by that only, if by that and the statute 7 Jac.? And for the defendant it was argued, that the statute 7 Jac. signified nothing in the case, and that they could not take by the proviso in 3 Jac. for if they should take the estate thereby, they ought to take as purchasers, and that they could not do, not being heirs, for by the attainder the blood was corrupt, and they cannot be heirs to any person: and although by 7 Jacobi, the blood of their father was restored, it came too late, for he was not heir at the time of the Act, 3 Jac. when the grant by the proviso of 3 Jac. was made; and that in the end of the proviso, it is only for default of the issue male of Duke, Charles and William, and the others there named, that it shall remain, and be to such persons, and for such estates as is limited by the will of the Lord Cobham; and by the will it is limited to the heirs of the body of the Lord Cobham; and this neither William nor his heirs could not be at the time of the making of the Act of 3 Jac. and the Act of 7 Jac. comes too late to make them heirs by relation to the time of 2 Jac. To which it was answered, and afterwards in Trinity term, 16 Car. 2, adjudged by the Chief Justice, and Twysden and Wyndham, that by virtue of the stat. 3 Jac. without the aid of 7 Jac. they should have the land: and the Act enacting, that it should go according to the will of the Lord Cobham, is all one as if the will had been recited, and had been expresly so as in the words of the will, 9 Co. Abbot of Strata Marcella's case, a grant per tot tanta talia, &c. as good as if all the particulars had been expressed; and when the statute says, that the lands shall be and remain as is limited by the will of the Lord Brook, and that it is to the heirs of the body of William, when the Parliament intended to grant, they intended the grantee should take, and therefore if they are not heirs, it has made them heirs as to this purpose; as where a lord grants to his villein, he thereby enables the villein to take it. [75] And 10 H. 7, 13, the King by his grant may enable his subject to take; and so by the intent of the Act it appears what persons shall have the land, and then by the same intent they are made heirs; and they said, that the Act of 3 Jac. had so qualified the attainder, as to the manor of Cooling, so that as to it, it is as if no attainder had been; and an Act of Parliament may capacitate a man to have an heir, or to be an heir, that otherwise could not have or be an heir. And they held, that by this Act, the persons themselves attainted, if in life, might have and enjoy the manor of Cooling: and Wyndham said, with whom the Chief Justice agreed, that if a manor be given by Act of Parliament to the heirs of J. S. who is attainted, this shall enable his son to take it. But Kelynge at this time puisne justice held, that the statute of 3 Jac. worked by way of reviver of the old estates where there are persons capable, and not as a grant of new (estates) and that the blood being corrupt at the time of the Act of 3 Jac. none could take as heir at that time, and therefore the plaintiff could not recover: but he and all the rest agreed, that the statute of 7 Jac. signified nothing in the case; but all that is done, is by the proviso in the statute 3 Jac. And the Ch. Justice, and Twysden and Wyndham agreeing that that was sufficient, gave judgment for the plaintiff.

HURST'S CASE.

Mandamus for an attorney. S. C. 1 Sid. 94, 151. Raym. 56, 94. 1 Keb. 349, 354, 387, &c.

A mandamus was prayed to restore him to an attorney's place in the Court of Canterbury; but it was denied, because it is but a private employment; and a mandamus lies only for offices concerning the public: but they agreed it had been granted for a schoolmaster, and for a church-warden, and for a parish-clerk, because they are public offices: but it was said at the Bar, that it had been granted for an attorney, for he is an officer concerning the public justice, and is compellable to be attorney for any man, and has a freehold in his place. Whereupon the Court gave day to produce such a precedent, and at the day a precedent was produced in 1651, for restoring an attorney of the Borough Court of Southwark; but that being in the late troublesome times, the Court did not regard it: but afterwards in Trin. 15 Car. 2 he had a mandamus in [76] this same case. And in the same term another mandamus was granted to restore an attorney of the Court of the liberty of St. Martin's le Grand, London.

MOLINS against WERBY.

Error in fact and in law is double, but must be specially demurred to.
S. C. 1 Sid. 94. 1 Keb. 355, 388.

Error of a judgment in the Palace-Court, held before James Duke of Ormond; and the error assigned was, that the Duke was not in Court, (the Court being held before one Wynne his deputy, according to the grant). Second error, that the judgment was given for the plaintiff, where it ought to have been for the defendant. Whereupon the defendant demurred; and now for the plaintiff it was said, that the assignment of the error is double, the first being error in fact, the second error in law; and error in fact and in law cannot be assigned on one writ: but as to the first, it was said, that it is not assignable, being contrary to the record. And as to the second, it was said, that he ought to have demurred for the doubleness, otherwise he shall not have advantage thereof on a general demurrer: to both which the Court agreed; and it being moved again, the Court held the same opinion in both the said points; and then it was touched, that a judicial place to hold a Court by deputy cannot be, and so held Foster, Chief Justice, and Twysden. But Wyndham held otherwise, and said, that many recorders are made to hold Court, &c. by themselves or deputies; and so said Wylde at the Bar, and that he so held his place of Recorder of London at that time. Foster said, that is by the custom of London: but surely many other recorders hold their Courts by deputies; so does the Recorder of Northampton, which is the Earl of Manchester, and holds the Courts by his deputy Harvy at this time. And the steward of the Borough-Court of Southwark holds it by deputy.

Obligation conditioned to pay, &c. and if he fail to be void. S. C. 1 Sid. 105. Raym. 27, 68. 1 Keb. 356, 415, 451, 625. 2 Danv. 25.

Debt on an obligation, conditioned to pay 7l. by 2s. a week till the 7l. were paid, and if he failed of the payment of the 2s. at any of the days wherein it ought to be paid, the obligation to be void, or else to remain in full force. The defendant pleads, that he did not pay 2s. on one of the days wherein it ought to be paid. The plaintiff demurs, and it was argued by Pawlet, that whereas by the first part of the condition he is to pay 7l. by 2s. a week; the latter part, that if he does not pay the 2s. at any of the days, is repugnant and void, for it appears plainly by the former part, that the intent was to have the money paid; and cited 3 Cro. 780. Also by his plea he hath confessed that the money ought to be paid, when he says, that he did not pay on one of the days wherein it ought to have been paid. Wyndham, Justice, held, that either all the condition is void for repugnancy, and then the obligation is single and without a condition, or else the first part of the condition is good, and the latter part is void for the repugnancy. But it was adjourned: and afterwards the same term it being moved again, the Court held, that the condition should be taken distributively, by referring particulars to particulars, viz. that if he paid the 7l. the obligation should be void; but if he failed of paying the 2s. at any of the days, it should be in full force; to which the rest agreed; for the obligation shall not be of no effect, if by any means it may be made good.

BASSETT against LEWIS.

A lease to commence after the end of another, where there was no such lease.
S. C. 1 Keb. 260.

Error of a judgment in a quare impedit, in Wales, where the plaintiff being nonsuit, the defendant made title to have a writ to the bishop, viz. that the Dean and Chapter of St. D. were seized, and presented J. S. and granted the advowson for years to Richard Williams, from the time that the advowson then granted should determine; and it was assigned for error, that it was not known when the advowson granted did determine, and therefore the advowson granted to Williams for years, was void for the incertainty [78] when it should commence. Whereto it was answered by Aleyn, that then the grant to Williams shall commence immediately at the time of the grant: to which the Court agreed, and affirmed the judgment.

Note, The plaintiff in the quare impedit, had averred, that there was not any grant in esse at the time of the grant to Williams; but the Court held the grant to be good without the aid thereof.

ANONYMUS.

Administration of goods in divers peculiars, belongs to the metropolitan.

It was held by Twysden and Wyndham, Justices, that where a man dies intestate, having lands in divers peculiars, that the granting of the administration does not belong to the Ordinary of the diocess, but to the metropolitan of the province, for they are excepted from the Ordinary's jurisdiction.

Bounds of vills triable by the Ecclesiastical Courts, but not of parishes. 1 Sid. 89. 1 Keb. 369.

A prohibition was prayed for that the bounds of two vills, viz. D. and S. in the parish of Abingdon, were in question, viz. the one claimed the tithes in question, as lying in the vill of D. and the other claimed them as lying in the vill of S. within the same parish: but the prohibition was denied by the whole Court; for tho' the bounds of a parish are not triable in the Ecclesiastical Court, yet the bounds of vills in the same parish are triable there.

CONIERS against SMITHE.

Breach assigned, that the lessee did not pay the rent due at the said several feasts during the term.

Error of judgment in an action of covenant in Durham, where the action was brought on a lease for twenty-one years, and the lessee covenanted to pay 20l. yearly by equal portions at Michaelmas and Lady-Day, and assigned a breach, that he did not pay the rent due at the aforesaid several feasts during the [79] term aforesaid, and judgment was by default, and a writ of inquiry of damages; and then judgment quod recuperet, and the error assigned by Aleyn was, that the breach was not well assigned, but he ought to have assigned the breach particularly; for which cause (he said) it was erroneous: but after several debates the judgment was affirmed in Hillary term following, and adjudged that the breach was well assigned, for perhaps it was never paid at any of the days.

Lands disgavelled by Act of Parliament, yet the custom to devise remains. S. C. Raym. 59, 76. 1 Sid. 77, 135. 1 Keb. 288, 372, 492, 505. Hard. 325. 2 Danv. 441.

On a trial at Bar in a feigned issue, directed out of Chancery: the question was, If the lands in question having been gavelkind, and disgavelled by Act of Parliament in the time of Edward the Sixth are that notwithstanding devisable? And the case was found specially, that Roper being seized of the lands in question, which were then gavelkind and departible, it was on his petition enacted by Parliament, that his lands should be disgavelled to all intents and purposes, and descendible as lands at common law, to the eldest son only: and it was objected, that the custom to devise, is a custom of gavelkind, and that by disgavelling the land the custom of devising is as well taken away as the custom of partibility; for it is a custom incident to gavel-kind; and cited the Statute of the Customs of Kent, 13 E. and 4 E. 1, Com' Banco, Rot. 2. Fitz. Aid, 129, 144. Rast. Entries Dower Demand 6. 2 E. 4, 19. 5 E. 4, 8. Mich. 16 Jac. Com. Banco Rot. 3063. Mich. 21 Car. 1, Rot. 497. F. N. B. 198, &c. And that all their customs, to devise, to have dower, to lose dower, to be tenant by the curtesy, &c. are included in the custom of gavelkind; so that by the pleading of gavelkind, it is sufficient without pleading of any such particular customs, to devise, to have dower, &c. Also by the words of the Act, the lands are not only to be disgavelled, but to be so to all intents and purposes, by which words all the particular customs are taken away, if they had not been so by the general words before. But after two several arguments at the Bar, it was afterwards in Easter term, 15 Car. 2, adjudged, that [80] by this Act of disgavelling, the custom of devising was not taken away; for by Foster, Twysden and Mallett, it is a mere collateral custom, and no part of the custom of gavelkind; and it is not enough in pleading, to say that the lands are gavelkind, without pleading the custom to devise, which proves it a meer collateral custom to gavelkind; and although the words of the Act are, that it shall be disgavelled to all intents and purposes, yet the words subsequent are, and shall descend as lands at common law, which restrains the foregoing general words by this particular conclusion, according to 8 Co. 154 b. To which Wyndham also agreed, but he held it to be a custom of gavelkind. But they all agreed, that the Act being made upon Roper's petition, and it being a privilege at common law to devise lands, it could not be supposed that he petitioned to destroy a privilege of devising which he had by the custom of Kent, but only to take away the partibility of the estate, whereby many families by a division of their estates, were reduced to a more inferior degree: and all agreed, that the custom to devise, remained notwithstanding the Act for disgavelling, and gave judgment accordingly.

DARKIN against DONE.

Error assigned that the plaintiff died before judgment. S. C. 1 Sid. 93, 131, 143. 1 Keb. 368, 375, 416.

Error of a judgment in ejectment, that the plaintiff was dead before the judgment given. Plea by attorney, that he was living at the time of the judgment, and issue thereon and verdict found that he was dead. It was objected by Aleyn, that the judgment ought not to be reversed, but a scire facias (to go) against the executors of the plaintiff; for now it appears, that the attorney who pleaded that he was living, did it without authority; for he could not be attorney to a dead man. But a case was cited in Rastal's Entries, tit. Brief, Division Mort, where such pleading is as here. And said by the Court, that it was not known to the Court when the plea was pleaded, but that the party was alive, and therefore the Court could not deny to receive the plea; and now though it appears by the verdict, that he who pleaded it could not be attorney, yet by the [81] same verdict it appears also that the plaintiff was dead, and therefore by the opinion of Mallett, Twysden and Wyndham, the judgment was reversed, Foster Chief Justice, being of a contrary opinion, because though it appears by the verdict that the plaintiff was dead, yet it does not legally so appear, the verdict itself not being legally obtained.

MOLE against WALLIS, OR BOLD against WARREN.

Matter pleaded as at common law, cannot be maintained by a custom. S. C. Raym. 60.

Covenant on an indenture of apprenticeship to serve him seven years which he had not done, but departed: the defendant pleads infancy, the plaintiff replies the custom of London, for infants to bind themselves apprentices; the defendant demurs; and whether this was a departure? was the question. And Wyndham and Foster Chief Justice at one time seemed that it was not, it being laid in London, where the custom is known; and Foster cited a case, where infancy being pleaded to a feoffment, the plaintiff replied the custom of gavelkind in Kent, that an infant might make a feoffment at fifteen, and the action being laid in Kent, it was resolved to be good: Twysden and Mallett on the contrary said, that which is pleaded generally as the common law, cannot be maintained by a custom, but is a departure, and cited Yel. 14, Plowd. Com. 105. Mich. 6 H. 7, pl. 4. Hill. 21 H. 7, pl. 29. 2 Cro. 494. Hutt. 63, 64. But they agreed, that if one pleads a statute, and the other says that it is repealed, the other may say that it is revived by another statute; or if a man pleads a statute, and the other says that it was to continue but till such a time, which is expired, the other may say, that the first statute was afterwards made perpetual, because it is only a fortifying of the first matter. And in Hillary term following, the party (plaintiff) prayed leave to discontinue.

Words, one told me that he carried such a one to gaol for felony, where no body told him so. S. C. 1 Keb. 344, 353, 377. 1 Com. Dig. 182, 187. 4 Bac. Abr. 509.

Case for that the defendant carrying one Woodford to Lincoln gaol for felony, when he came to Lincoln, falsely and maliciously said of the plaintiff, that he met one upon the road, who said to him, What, are you carrying Woodford to gaol? I shall follow you shortly, and bring with me Heneage Crawford (the plaintiff) for stealing a mare. After verdict for the plaintiff on issue not guilty, it was moved in arrest of judgment. First, That the words are not actionable, not being any direct affirmative that the plaintiff had stole a mare; and cited Hob. 177, Steward against Bishop, He is in Warwick gaol for stealing of a mare; adjudged not actionable for that reason. But to this it was answered, that it was adjudged 1 Cro. 195. 2 Cro. 154, 247, 736, contrary to that in Hobart. And so held all the Court here (except Mallett) that the words are actionable: and the Court now questioned, whether the case in Hobart were law or not? Then it was moved, that it is not said in the declaration, that in truth no body met him upon the road, and so spoke to him; whereto it was answered by Aleyn, and agreed by Twysden, that it being laid to be falsly and maliciously, and so found; it is a proof that no body said so to him. But Foster, Wyndham and Mallett were against this, and held the declaration ill for want of the averment, that in truth no body said so to him; for that had been traversable, and the defendant might have pleaded thereto that another so told him; and so put the plaintiff to bring the action against such other; and they gave a rule, that the plaintiff should take nothing by his bill. In this case Twysden mentioned a case tried before Hobart, which he himself heard; where the plaintiff brought an action against one, for falsly and maliciously saying of him, that he heard he was hanged for stealing of an horse; and on the evidence it appeared, that the words were spoken in grief and sorrow for the news; and Hobart caused the plaintiff to be non-suit, for it was not maliciously; which all the Court here agreed to be done according to law.

One pleads an execution without a judgment. S. C. 1 Keb. 379, 380, 413. A plaintiff evicted without shewing title. 3 Bac. Abr. 715. 5 Com. Dig. 44, 83. Term Rep. C. B. 275. 1 Term Rep. 671. Vide post, 302, 312.

Covenant, and declares, that the defendant leased to him such lands, and covenanted to save him harmless against all suits, evictions or expulsions. The defendant pleads, that J. S. outed him by an habere facias possessionem. The plaintiff demurs, and the plea was ruled by the Court to be ill for two causes; 1st. For that he pleads an expulsion by an execution, without shewing any judgment. He ought to have said, that J. S. brought an ejectment whereupon were such proceedings, and that it was adjudged he should recover, and thereupon issued the habere facias possessionem, &c. 2dly. He ought to have shewn that J. S. had a legal title before the lease on which he brought his action, for the covenant only extends to expulsions upon an elder right: and perhaps in this case J. S. might recover by virtue of a lease made to him by the plaintiff himself.

PULLIN against NICHOLAS. VIDE SUPRA.

A negative pregnant, when good, &c. 1 Com. Dig. 332. Stra. 925.

Debt on an obligation to perform covenants in an indenture of lease made by the plaintiff to the defendant, whereby the defendant covenanted that he would not deliver the possession to any but the lessor, or to such persons as should lawfully evict him. The defendant pleads, that he did not deliver the possession to any but such as lawfully evicted him. Whereupon the plaintiff demurs; and it was objected, that the plea was ill, and a negative pregnant; that he ought to have said, that such a one lawfully evicted him, to whom he delivered the possession, or that he did not deliver the possession to any: but for the defendant it was said, that the plaintiff had not assigned any breach, and therefore could have no judgment; for it was said by them, that he ought to have replied and assigned a breach; whereto it was said for the plaintiff, that he [84] having pleaded an ill plea, had necessitated the plaintiff to put himself in judgment of the Court upon the plea; and cited Yelv. 78, 152, 153. And Wyndham held the plea ill, for it was in the conusance of the defendant, whether he had delivered the possession to any or not, and for what causes, and therefore he ought to shew it. Twysden on the contrary (said), the plea was pursuant to the words of the covenant, and therefore sufficient; and that the plaintiff ought to have replied, that he had delivered it to such a one and shewn a breach. And afterwards in Michaelmas term following, it was argued again; and then for the plaintiff was cited 2 Cro. 559, 560, that the plea was not good. But now all the Court held the plea pursuing the words of the covenant, good, being in the negative; and that the plaintiff ought to have replied and assigned a breach; which not having done, he could not have judgment, and therefore they gave judgment against him.

THE KING against GILLIFER.

Where one is compellable to take an apprentice. Raym. 65, 67. Blackburn's Cases 18, 19.

It was moved by Aleyn to quash an order of the justices of peace of the county of Derby, for compelling a man against his will to take an apprentice on the stat. 43 El. c. 2. First, For the order does not say it was a poor child. 2dly, It is not shewn what trade the defendant used, husbandman or what. 3dly, For the matter, the justices had not power to compel a man to take whom they would to be apprentice, for so they might impose upon me my mortal enemy; and of this opinion, he said, were Brampton and Rolle in their times, and so was Twysden now. But Foster, Mallett and Wyndham on the contrary said, injustice was not to be supposed in the justices, and as the statute obliged the justices to put our children apprentices, so it obliged the masters to receive them; and they confirmed the order, and directed an information on which they would deliver their opinions more at large, when it appeared what the defendant had to say for his excuse.

Plea of no award, rejoinder, a void award, is a departure. S. C. 1 Keb. 414. V. 2 Saund. 34, 189. N. Lutw. 117, 144.

Debt on obligation to stand to an award: the defendant pleads no award: the plaintiff replies, and shews an award and a breach. The defendant rejoins, that a new cause of action arose after the submission, and before the award, and they awarded mutual releases to be made at the time of the award made, and nothing further is awarded on one side but the release, and so the award was void; on which the plaintiff demurred, and it was adjudged for him, for the rejoinder is a departure; for when he pleads no award, it shall be intended no award at all; and then to shew and confess an award in fact, but (saying) that it is void in law is a departure; and they cited Rugles against Witherly, Trin. 15 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 604, as so adjudged, and the like between Dean and Isham, the following term adjudged.

LAWSON against WIDDRINGTON.

Condition to pay 50l. the 10th of January next ensuing on three months warning. S. C. 1 Keb. 380, 415. Raym. 61. Lutw. 124. 2 Danv. 68, pl. 8.

Debt on obligation to pay 50l. the 10th of January next ensuing on three months warning: the defendant pleads the action lay not, because the defendant did not give three months warning before the 10th of January next ensuing the sealing of the obligation. The plaintiff demurs; for the money being to be paid on a certain day on three months warning, the defendant is to give the warning to be ready to receive it. 2dly, If the plaintiff is to give the warning, the plea cannot be but in abatement, because the action is brought before the money is due and not in bar, (for) so the money would be lost; and then a plea in abatement commencing or concluding in bar is ill; and cited Bro. Brief 77. 36 H. 6. 3 Cro. 102. The Court at this time thought the warning ought to be given by the plaintiff, for otherwise, if the defendant would never give warning, the money should never be paid; and it was adjourned. But afterwards it being moved again, the Court held, that it shall be taken that the obligor is to pay the [86] money on the 10th of January next ensuing, giving the plaintiff three months warning thereof; for the words shall be taken the most strongly against the obligor; and they ruled judgment for the plaintiff, unless cause were shewn before the end of the term.

Sufficiency of the bail taken by the sheriff is not traversable. S. C. 1 Sid. 96.

Case for an escape on mesne process: the defendant pleads, that he let the prisoner go on sufficient bail. The plaintiff demurred, and it was argued, that the plea was not good, because he had laid no venue where he took the bail, and the sufficiency of the bail is traversable. But by the Court, the sufficiency of the bail taken by the sheriff is not traversable, for the bail is only for security of the sheriff to save him against amerciaments: for by the stat. 23 H. 6 he is obliged to let the party to bail by sufficient mainpernors; and the statute was made for the ease of the subject that he should be let to bail, which sheriffs had refused to do before the statute: but then the statute provides for the security of the sheriff, that he should take reasonable sureties, and yet if he takes one surety only, it has been adjudged sufficient. And Twysden said, that it was held by Rolle and Glyn, when they were Chief Justices here, that the statute 23 H. 6 was a general law, of which the King's Courts ought to take notice without pleading of it.

RUSSEL against LEE.

A single bill by an infant for necessaries, is good. S. C. 1 Keb. 382, 416, 423. 2 Danv. 768 c.

Debt on a single bill: the defendant pleads that the bill was made by him when within age: the plaintiff replies, that it was for victuals and necessary clothes delivered to him, and suitable to his quality. The defendant demurs, and now it was argued for him, that the bill was void as well as an obligation; but that a contract or promise for necessaries was good. 2dly, It is not averred that they were delivered to him to his own use, 2 Cro. Ives against Chester, where this exception is allowed good. But on the other side it was argued, that his single bill for necessaries is good; but not an obligation with a penalty; and they cited Co. Lit. 172 a. and 3 Cro. 920, and so held the Court; and to the 2d exception, [87] it was said, that in Popham's report of the case of Ives and Chester it was disallowed; and so held the Court here, viz. that the exception was not good, for when the things are delivered to him, and suitable to his quality, it cannot be intended but that they were for his own use, and gave judgment for the plaintiff nisi.

Demurrer on the evidence cannot be for a thing which the jury may know of their own conusance. S. C. 1 Sid. 103, 105. 1 Keb. 450.

Error of a judgment in the Palace Court in assumpsit, where to prove the consideration an arrest was to be proved by the plaintiff; and for that he did not produce the writ, the defendant demurred on the evidence; and thereupon judgment was given for the plaintiff; and now to reverse the judgment it was said for the plaintiff in error, that the King's writs are matters of record, and are not to be proved but by themselves; and it was agreed by the Court that the writ ought to have been produced in evidence, but by the demurrer it is confessed, the arrest being matter of fact, though it be to be proved by a matter of record, and the jury might of their own knowledge know that there was a writ, Dyer 239. Plowd. Com. Scholastica's case. And by the demurrer on the evidence, all matters of fact are confessed that the jury could know of their own conusance; and the judgment was affirmed.

ANONYMUS.

On a promise against a promise there needs no averment. S. C. 1 Keb. 333, 342. 1 Sid. 270.

Assumpsit, where the plaintiff had agreed to take the son of the defendant apprentice; the defendant promised to give a bond to pay to the plaintiff 40l. and the plaintiff says, that he had accepted the son into his service as apprentice; and the defendant had not given bond to pay the 40l. After verdict for the plaintiff on issue non assumpsit, it was moved in arrest of judgment, [88] that it is not said that the son was bound apprentice, but (only) that he had received him into his service as apprentice, and this he might do and turn him out of doors the next day; but it was not allowed, for the agreement to take him apprentice, is a promise whereon the defendant might have his action; and so it is a promise against a promise, and needs no averment. Secondly, (urged) That it is not alledged of what sum the obligation should be: this was also disallowed, for a contract or covenant to give bond for the payment of money, is to be intended of double the sum; but an award to give a bond, without mentioning the sum for the payment of 20l. is not good; for the arbitrators are to make an end of all.

ELLIOTT against BLAKE.

Covenant with a proviso, the plaintiff need not shew more than the covenant. S. C. Raym. 65. 1 Keb. 424, 426.

Covenant and declares, that the defendant covenanted to deliver to him 1500 measures of salt-petre before such a day, and that he had not done it; the defendant demands oyer of the deed, wherein the covenant was as before said; provided, that if any mischance happen by fire or water to disable him, that he should be excused; and pleads that he was disabled by accident of fire; issue thereupon, and verdict for the plaintiff: and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that there was a variance between the deed on which he declared, and that produced in Court; for the one is absolute and the other conditional. But judgment was given for the plaintiff, for he need not declare on more of the deed than the covenant, and it is on the defendant's part to shew the proviso, which goes by way of defeasance of the covenants.

NEAL against DEUCTON.

Conuzance of pleas. S. C. 1 Sid. 103.

Action brought here for words spoken at Wisbich in the Isle of Ely; the defendant imparls, and afterwards Turner for the Bishop of Ely, came and demanded conusance of the plea, and produced the bishop's charter, whereby he had conusance of pleas granted to him, and a letter of attorney to make the demand: but Twysden Justice said, Conuzance was not grantable after imparlance: to which Turner replied, The party himself cannot plead to the jurisdiction after imparlance, because by the imparlance he had admitted the jurisdiction, but the bishop who is a stranger might demand it at any time; and he cited 40 E. 3, 1 a. 11 H. 4, 41 b. 43 b. Mich. 6 H. 7, pl. 6. Mich. 9 H. 7, pl. 6. Trin. 6 H. 7, pl. 17. And to this opinion Justice Wyndham inclined, but it was adjourned: (this case was between Neal and Deucton). And note, in Easter term, 18 Car. 2, B. R. conusance was demanded in another case; and then it was held by the Court, that the warrant of attorney for demanding the conuzance, ought to be filed in Court. And former allowances of the conuzance were shewn, and there were cited 1 H. 7, Rot. 107. Rast. Ent. 128. Hill. 21 E. 3, Rot. 21. Rast. Ent. 130. 35 H. 6. 54. It seems the conuzance is demandable by the Lord of the Franchise, but not pleadable to the jurisdiction by the party.

Forcible entry into a church. S. C. 1 Sid. 101. 1 Keb. 438. Hawk. P. C. 280.

It was moved to quash an indictment of a forcible entry into a parish-church, and in the parsonage-house, because there is another remedy by a writ de vi laica removenda; and the statute does not extend thereto, this indictment being on the statute of H. 6. But he agreed it to be within the statute of R. 2. But it was held by the Court to be within both statutes, and that it well lay: and the party took nothing by his motion.

Words traitorly rogue. S. C. 1 Sid. 102. 1 Keb. 469.

Error of a judgment in the Common Pleas in case for these words, Thou art a traitorly rogue; where the words were adjudged not actionable, because adverbially spoken, as thievish rogue, because it signified no more than an inclination to thieving. But by Alleyn, bankruptly knave has been adjudged actionable; and by the Court the words seem actionable, as 3 Cro. Ward against Thorn, traiterous knave are adjudged actionable.

A bailiff pleads property in replevin. S. C. 1 Keb. 360, 441.

In replevin, one as bailiff made conusance, and pleaded property in a stranger; and upon demurrer it was objected that he could not; and cited 1 Inst. 145 b. 11 H. 4, 4. One arrested by an illegal warrant, kills the bailiff, and by Act of Parliament made afterward, the warrant is made good by relation to the first day of the Parliament. S. C. 1 Keb. 454, 456.

Indictment of murder, and on a special verdict found at the Assizes at Bury, the case was, in Hillary term 1659, a latitat issued to arrest him returnable in Easter term 1660, on which the 29th of May he was arrested by a warrant thereupon, and upon that arrest the bailiff was killed; and afterwards an Act is made for the confirmation of all judicial proceedings, which related to the first day of the Parliament, viz. 15 April, 1660, and the sole question was, if by the relation of the Act, which made the proceedings legal, and the arrest good (which else had been void and without authority) this killing be murder. And it was argued at the Bar, by Kelynge for the King, and by Jones for the defendant: and Kelynge said, that by relation all the process is made good, for it shall relate to the first day of the Parliament; Jones agreed the Act should relate to the first day of the Parliament, but not to such intent as to make it murther ex post facto, which was not so when the fact was done. The Court said nothing. But afterwards in Easter term 16 Car. 2, I heard Thurston plead his pardon of this murder, whereby it seems as if the opinion of the Court was against him.

TOWNSEND'S CASE.

A mandamus to make an apprentice free of a town. S. C. 1 Sid. 107. 1 Keb. 458, 470, 659.

A mandamus was prayed for him to the Mayor, &c. of Oxford, to admit him to be a freeman of that city, having served seven years apprentice; and on view of a precedent in the like case of Norwich, it was granted: and thereupon it was returned, that he put himself apprentice for seven years according to the custom, and that he covenanted to serve seven years, and not to marry within the time; and that within the first two years he married, and so broke his covenant, and that his master accepted of him to serve for the residue of the time, which he did, but not as an apprentice, but rather as a journeyman. And it was objected, that by this breach of covenant he had lost his right of freedom: but the Court held the contrary, for that an action of covenant might lie, but not loss of his freedom, and awarded a peremptory mandamus to admit him to his freedom, in Hillary term, 15 & 16 Car. 2.

[92] GLASCOCK against MORGAN.

Debt on a judgment after elegit, and part levied of the goods. S. C. 1 Sid. 184. 1 Keb. 692.

Debt on a judgment of 1000l. The defendant pleads, that the plaintiff had sued three several elegits on the said judgment into several counties, on one of which the sheriff returned, that he had levied of the defendant's goods 500l. whereon the plaintiff demurs. This case was argued three several times at the Bar, viz. in this term and Easter term following; and in Easter term 16 Car. 2, by Aleyn, Baldwyn and Winnington for the plaintiff, and by Jones and Wylde, and by Jones again for the defendant: and first it was questioned, if the suing of the elegit be not an election of that writ, and a waiver of all others? 2dly, If the suing of the elegit be not an election to have such an execution, and no other? 3dly, If the suing of three writs, and it not appearing what is become of the other two, be not a bar of this action; for lands may have been delivered on the other writs? And many books and authorities were cited on the one side and the other, and the Court was a long time in variety of opinion: but at length agreed, that judgment should be given for the plaintiff; for when the Statute of Westminster 2 gave the elegit, it said, To hold the tenements aforesaid until the debt shall be levied; so that it intended to give a remedy for the debt until it was levied, and to give a further remedy than was at common law, and not to take away any remedy which was at common law before; and (the Court) said, that the judgment lies at common law, and at common law, debt will lie on the judgment after the action when no execution lies. And it was not the intent of the statute by a nice construction of the word elegit, to say that it was such an election of the writ, so as that he should never after have any other writ, when it appears the statute intended to add a larger remedy to men than they had before. And the levying of goods for parcel only upon the elegit, is no impediment, but that he shall have another elegit, and take the lands for the residue. But when an elegit is sued, and lands are taken, and that returned and filed, he shall not have any further execution. And as to that, that it does not appear what is become of the other writs of elegit, it shall not be intended [93] that any lands are extended thereupon, it not being shewn; and if there were any lands extended, the defendant ought to have shewn it in pleading. And in Easter term 16 Car. 2, judgment was given for the plaintiff by the whole Court. Whereupon the defendant brought a writ of error immediately, as I was informed, but what became thereof I never heard.

OTES against THORNHILL.

Obligation to make a suit of linen for one. Q. Who shall provide the cloth? S. C. 1 Keb. 466. Q. 2 Jon. 2 Danv. 99, pl. 5 & 6.

Debt on an obligation conditioned to make for the plaintiff all the linen he shall wear during his life, and assigned a breach, that he desired the defendant to make such linen for his necessary wearing, which she had not done. The defendant demurs, and the reason was that the plaintiff did not deliver to the defendant the cloth of which it was to be made. To which it was answered for the plaintiff, that the defendant being to make the linen, is also to find the cloth, as if one be obliged to cover the lord's hall, he is also to find the materials, 11 H. 4, 25. 16 H. 7, 9, 11. But by the Court, the contracts of parties are to be interpreted according to their intent and the subject matter. As if a tailor be obliged or promise to make a suit of cloaths for me, I ought to deliver him the cloth, for that it is usual, and not for him to provide it. But if a shoemaker be obliged to make a pair of shoes for me, he is also to find the leather, because it is usual. Also if a sempstress be obliged to make for me a suit of linen, she is to find the linen-cloth; but it is not here shewn, that the defendant was a sempstress, nor such a person as uses to make linen and find the cloth: and therefore judgment was given for the defendant.

Obligation not to waste: replication, that he had wasted divers goods, is well, but otherwise in covenant. S. C. 1 Keb. 467, 471.

Debt on an obligation to satisfy for all goods that an apprentice shall waste, and in the replication assigns a breach, that he had wasted divers goods to the value of 100l. Whereupon the defendant demurs, and it was now excepted as to the replication, that it was too general, not shewing what the goods were. But by the Court, it is well enough in this action on the obligation, where damages are not to be recovered, but the penalty of the obligation upon any breach (thereof); otherwise in covenant, where the recompence is to be by damages: and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Note, This whole term I was sick, and the cases which I have before reported of this term are (taken) from the report of my friend Mr. Lemuel Sholdam.

A judgment vacated, yet the officer is excused for executing the writ, but not the party. S. C. Raym. 73. 1 Sid. 107. 2 Sid. 125. 1 Keb. 453, 478, 488, 822. Bull. N. P. 84.

This case was cited and remembered by Twysden and Wyndham Justices, to have been adjudged within six or seven years last past: a man had a judgment and execution executed, and afterwards the judgment was vacated for being unduly obtained, and restitution awarded; and afterwards the defendant brought trespass against the plaintiff in the first action, for the taking of the goods; and it was adjudged that it well lay against the party; for by the vacating of the judgment it is as if it never had been; and is not like a judgment reversed by error: and note, this action was against the party, and not against the sheriff, who had the King's writ to warrant him, which is sufficient for him; for in trespass or false imprisonment, it is enough for the sheriff to plead the writ only, but the party ought to plead not only the writ, but also the judgment. But Justice Twysden said, that he was not satisfied with this judgment when it was given, in the time of Glyn Chief Justice, nor was he yet for making a man a trespassor by relation, for when the execution was served there was a judgment, though that afterwards the execution was vacated. But note, the difference between charging of an officer and charging of the party; for in Bayly and Bunning's case hereafter (vide post. 173, 174), it is held, that the officer shall not be charged, where perhaps the party will be charged.

Citation out of a diocess, for tithes within the diocess. S. C. 1 Keb. 481, 501. Vide 1 Keb. 638, 647, 651, 669.

A prohibition was granted to the Bishop of Sarum, for citing one out of his diocess to appear at his Court at Sarum; whereas the party was living in London: but it being a suit for tithes of lands in the diocess of Sarum, the Court on notice thereof granted a consultation, for the lands lying in the diocess of Sarum, the suit cannot be elsewhere, let the defendant live where he will; and therefore this case is not within the statute; and a consultation was granted.

WHITEHEAD against BROWN.

A promise within a jurisdiction, to pay for a thing that does not appear to be done within the jurisdiction. S. C. Raym. 75. 1 Keb. 522.

Error of a judgment in the Palace-Court, where the plaintiff declared, that whereas the defendant being indebted to him for the nursing of a child, afterwards such a day at such a place within the jurisdiction of the Court, he did promise to pay. After verdict and judgment the error was assigned, that it does not appear where the nursing was, nor where he was indebted: and therefore Twysden held the judgment ought to be reversed, for the jury is to inquire of the nursing, and of the being indebted; Foster and Wyndham on the contrary held, that it does not appear that those were out of the jurisdiction; and where a man is indebted to another in one place, he is indebted to him in all places where he comes; and when he promises within the jurisdiction, he was (became) indebted within the jurisdiction, and it was adjourned. But afterwards at another day, Foster was of Twysden's opinion, for that the jury is to inquire of the consideration, as well as of the promise, otherwise it is a naked or void agreement. But it was further adjourned.

Debt for tithes of 20 acres, and that he carried the corn from the said 30 acres. S. C. 1 Sid. 135. 1 Keb. 492.

Debt on the statute of Edw. 6, for tithes, and on nil debet verdict was for the plaintiff: it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the declaration is, that the defendant was occupier of twenty acres of land, which before-said thirty acres he sowed, and carried the corn from off the same without setting out the tithes; so that (it appears) they are not the same acres that he sowed: but by the Court: there not being any thirty acres before, the word thirty is void; and it shall be taken the before-said acres, which were well enough ascertained before, and good; and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

ROE against HAWKES.

A new trial not granted for the excessiveness of damages, nor for words spoken by the attorney. S. C. 1 Sid. 131.

Action on the case by an officer of the custom-house at Portsmouth, for that the defendant said of him, He set his hand to the petition to bring the King to justice. After verdict for the plaintiff it was moved for the defendant for a new trial, for the excessiveness of the damages, which were 700l. and cited Wood and Gunston's case in Style's Reports. But thereto it was answered by Twysden Justice, that the new trial was not granted in Wood and Gunston's case meerly for the excessiveness of the damages, but because a tampering with the jury was proved. Secondly, It was moved, that the attorney for the plaintiff said before the trial, that the jury were their friends, and understood their business, and that they would do well enough. But by Wyndham Justice, If express embracery of the jury be not proved, the words of the attorney shall not work any prejudice to the cause of his client; and if the damages are excessive an attaint lies, and a new trial was denied.

[98] BENSON against FRENCH.

Promise to the bailiff on the plaintiff's part, that if he would permit the prisoner to tarry out of prison to pay the debt. S. C. T. Jo. 139. 1 Sid. 132. 1 Keb. 483. 1 Danv. 45, 22.

Assumpsit and declares, that he had arrested a woman for 20l. and that she being in the custody of the bailiff at the defendant's house, the defendant in consideration that the bailiff would permit the woman to tarry at the defendant's house for one night, promised to the bailiff on the plaintiff's part, to deliver the woman to the bailiff the next morning, or to pay the 20l. And that the bailiff permitted the woman to tarry there that night; but that the defendant did not deliver her to the bailiff the next morning, nor had he paid the 20l. After verdict on non assumpsit for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment by Wylde the King's Serjeant, that the woman was either always in the custody of the bailiff, (and then it was not any consideration) or out of his custody, and then it was an escape, and the consideration and promise were (then) both illegal. To which it was answered by Jones, that it might be for the ease of the woman to lie there that night, and so a good consideration, though never out of the custody of the bailiff; and if it be intended that she was out of the bailiff's custody, yet it shall be intended that it was by the plaintiff's assent, because the promise was made to the bailiff on the plaintiff's part; and the plaintiff having brought the action it proves his assent, and his assent after is sufficient to make the promise good. And held by the Court, if it was an escape, the consideration and promise were both illegal; but they held that it was not any escape, but rather an undertaking that she should not escape: and the promise being laid to be made to the bailiff on the plaintiff's part, it shall be intended that she was left there by the assent of the plaintiff. And they gave judgment for the plaintiff, except better cause were shewn.

Trover de salsura, Anglice a salting tub, and damages given for that particularly is ill.
S. C. 1 Keb. 420, 428, 488. 1 Sid. 98. 2 Danv. 460, pl. 11.

Trover was brought among other things de una salsura Anglice a salting tub. And after verdict for the plaintiff on not guilty, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that salsura is Latin for seasoning and not for a salting tub, and then damages given for that, is ill. The Court said, then the Anglice is void, and no damages given for it. But the record being inspected, it was found, that damages were given particularly for the (several) things in particular, and among the rest pro salsura præd. and yet were also given for all the particulars together. And that salsura was altogether uncertain, which is to be intended a seasoning: and they held it incurable, and stayed the judgment.

Judgment in a real action that the demandant should hold the tenements, &c.
S. C. 1 Sid 138. 1 Keb. 495, 343, 557, 626.

Error of a judgment in a quod ei deforceat in Wales, by protestation to prosecute in nature of a writ of right, obtained there thirty years before, because the judgment being for the demandant, was quod teneat tenementa præd', where it ought to have been, that he should recover seisin, &c. And after divers arguments in this and the following term, the judgment was reversed.

HENN against HANSON.

A release of all demands does not release rent on a lease for years not due.
S. C. 1 Sid. 141. 1 Keb. 491, 510.

Covenant brought on a covenant in a lease for years to pay the rent reserved. The defendant pleads a release by the plaintiff of all demands at a day before the rent in question became due. The plaintiff replies, that the release was in performance of an award of all matters in controversy between the plaintiff and the defendant: whereupon the defendant demurs, and it was argued for the defendant, that the release is a bar; for a release of all demands will release a rent-service, and extinguish the inheritance thereof, Co. Lit. 310. 2 Cro. 486 & 170, 171, this very case is put, that such release shall release a rent on a lease for years before that [100] it be due, because it releases the contract. See Hancock against Field's case, Moor 544, 545. 6 H. 7, 15. 14 H. 8, 6. And of this opinion was Twysden, Justice, that the release in this case was a bar, for the rent is a thing in demand tho' not yet due, and the release discharges the means to come by it, and cited 40 E. 3, 47. 20 Ass. 5. And altho' this release was made in pursuance of an award, and so not within the intent of the arbitrators, because this rent was not then in controversy; yet (says he) the intent ought to be ruled by the law, and not the law by the intent. But for the plaintiff it was argued, that this release ought not to be a bar; 1st. For that it was out of the intent both of the arbitrators and the parties, the award being made of other matters, and this rent not then due nor in controversy, and cited 2 Cro. 300, Tinan against Bridges, a release of all demands after the award made, does not release a sum awarded to be paid at a day subsequent to the release: also they cited 2 Cro. 486, Witton against Bye, where it is held by Houghton, that a release of all demands, does not release a rent incident to the reversion; but there, for that the lessee had assigned his term rendering rent, for that this rent was a sum in gross, and not incident to the reversion, it was barred by the release of all demands, and there 170. Hancock against Field's case, adjudged by the whole Court, that where the lessor on payment of 60l. to him by the lessee due on a judgment, released to him all demands; this did not release a covenant for repairs not then broken, but a release of all covenants would have released the covenant. And of this opinion were Wyndham, Mallet, and Foster, that the release here did not bar, as well for that it was not the intent of the parties, as for that this rent being incident to the reversion, and part thereof, is no more released hereby than the reversion itself is. But a rent-service in gross, as a seigniory of which Littleton is to be intended, would have been released by such a release, for that the seigniory is thereby extinct; also this rent becomes due by the perception of the profits, and is not like to a rent-charge; or a rent, parcel of a seigniory. And they gave judgment for the plaintiff: and of the like opinion was the Court, in Michaelmas term, 29 Car. 2, between Ingram and Bray, which is entered Hill. 2 Rot. 49, which see hereafter. And so in Trinity 21 Car. 2, B. R. between Stokes and Stokes, which also see hereafter, where by a [101] release of all demands on his proper account, it was adjudged by the whole Court, that an obligation taken by the plaintiff in his own name in trust for the children of J. S. was not discharged thereby. And in Easter term 1 W. & M. B. R. between Knight executor of Knight, and Cole executor of Lawford, where Knight had a judgment of 6000l. against Lawford, and Lawford had given a legacy of 5l. to Knight, and on the receipt thereof Knight gave to Cole, the executor of Lawford, a release in this form; I acknowledge to have received of Cole 5l. left me as a legacy by Lawford, and do release to him all demands which I against him, as executor of Lawford, can have for any matter whatsoever. And it was adjudged by the whole Court, that the generality of the words all demands should be restrained by the particular occasion mentioned in the former part thereof, viz. the receipt of the 5l. legacy, and should not be a discharge of the judgment.

BROWN against SPENCE.

Reading the articles in the porch of a chapel of ease, well enough, where he is kept out of the church and chapel. S. C. 1 Sid. 163. 1 Keb. 502, 590.

On a trial at Bar in a quare impedit, the plaintiff proved, that he read the Articles on the fifth of November, where his induction was September the fifth, and it was ruled insufficient, because not within two months after the induction, computing twenty-eight days to the month. But then he proved, that he read them in the porch of a chapel of ease within the same parish within a month after his induction, the keys of the church and of the chapel being detained from him by the defendant; and this was admitted by the Court to be a sufficient reading of the Articles within the statute of 13 Eliz.

PEASELIE'S CASE.

Administration proved by the act of the Court without seal. S. C. 1 Keb. 509.

In ejectment tried at the Bar where the plaintiff made title as administratrix, and proved her administration by the act of the Court for the grant of it to her; and this was admitted sufficient (evidence) by the whole Court, without shewing any grant thereof under the seal of the Court.

[102] EKINS against TRESHAM.

Case for falsly affirming a messuage to be let at 42l. per annum, where it was let only at 32l. per ann. S. C. 1 Sid. 146. 1 Keb. 518, 522.

Case, that whereas the plaintiff and defendant were in treaty for the sale of a messuage; the defendant falsly and fraudulently affirmed it was let at 42l. per annum; whereto the plaintiff gave faith, gave him 500l. for it, where in truth it was let at 32l. per annum only. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the action did not lie; as for saying that a thing is of a greater value than it is, without warranty no action lies, Yelv. 20. No more will it for saying that it is demised for more than in truth it is; for the party might inform himself from the tenant, and a warranty will not bind a man in a thing that is apparent; as to warrant that a horse has both his eyes, when he is apparently blind of one of them. But by the Court, tho' an action will not lie for saying, that a thing is of greater value than it is (nor by Wyndham, it is perjury to swear it, because value consists in judgment and estimation, wherein men many times differ). Yet to affirm that a thing is demised for more than it is, is a falsity in his own knowledge, and the party who is deceived, may for such deceit have an action, for perhaps the lease is by parol, or the tenant will not inform the purchaser what rent he gave. And after it had been twice moved, judgment was given for the plaintiff in Trinity, 15 Car. 2, by the whole Court.

HOOKES against SWAIN.

Covenant to pay 20l. annually, and does not say how long, if it shall be for life. S. C. 1 Sid. 151. 1 Keb. 511, 517, 555. 2 Danv. 58, pl. 6.

Covenant was brought on a covenant, whereby the defendant covenanted if the plaintiff married his daughter to pay him 20l. per annum, without mentioning for how long, and assigned a breach in non payment for two years: the defendant as to the first year pleads payment, and as to the other demurs, supposing that no time being limited, he was not obliged to pay more than one year. But on argument, the Court inclined, that the payment should be for life, for annually imports more than for one year; but whether for the life of the husband or the wife, [103] it was not determined; and adjourned: but it seemed by some to be for the life of the husband, because it is in lieu of a portion, and it shall be taken most strongly against the covenantor; others held that it should be for the life of the wife, because it is for the marriage provision for her.

Note, In Trinity 3 Jac. but entered Pasch. 3 Jac. 2, in the Common Pleas, between Death and Benns, a widow woman covenanted on marriage with her husband, that he should enjoy the wife's lands during their joint lives; and the husband covenanted with the wife's trustees, to pay them 20l. annually, not saying how long, and it was adjudged to be for their two lives, as the covenant on the other part was for the enjoyment of the wife's lands.

FOSTER against HOLYMAN.

A promise that if they agreed on a price, to pay it. S. C. 1 Keb. 512, 627.

Error of a judgment in the Palace-Court, where the plaintiff declares, that he and Higden were bargaining for a horse, and the defendant assumed (undertook) that if they agreed on the price, the defendant would pay the money; and that they agreed for so much, and the defendant had not paid. And verdict and judgment for the plaintiff there on the issue non assumpsit; and the error assigned was, that there was not any consideration, for it is not that he should sell or deliver, (but only agree, &c.) and so no loss to the plaintiff, nor benefit to the defendant: but the judgment was affirmed, for it shall be intended after a verdict, that the horse was upon the agreement delivered, and the promise the inducement thereto, and good.

DRAKE against BEARE.

Debt for rent on a lease made in an inferior jurisdiction, but not said that the lands lay within the jurisdiction. S. C. 1 Sid. 151. 1 Keb. 555, &c. 1 Vent. 2, 72. 2 Danv. 301, 11.

Error of a judgment in the Court at Exeter, where an action of debt was brought on a lease for years at Topsham, within the jurisdiction of the Court, of lands at D. but does not say, that the lands lay within the jurisdiction of the Court, whereto the defendant pleads nil debet; and thereupon the plaintiff had verdict and judgment: and this was assigned for error, because it does not appear that the lands lay within the jurisdiction of the Court, and if part of the cause of action lies within the jurisdiction of the Court, and part without, the Inferior Court ought not to hold plea; and though the issue be nil debet, and so the contract in question, yet an entry, suspension, &c. might be given in evidence, whereof they have no power to inquire, and yet for an entry, suspension, &c. the defendant (might say) he owed nothing. And of this opinion were Foster, Twysden and Kelynge Justices: but Wyndham Justice on the contrary said, it could be no reason to out a Court of its jurisdiction by supposal of a thing which might have been pleaded, but is not; and he put a difference between a case, where on the pleading any thing appears to have been out of the jurisdiction, and where any thing might have been out of the jurisdiction, but does not appear to be so; it shall not be supposed, except it be shewn by the pleading, or otherwise appears to the Court: but the three others said, that the Inferior Court shall not hold plea, except the whole matter be within their jurisdiction, [105] for suppose here he had declared on a lease made at Topsham, and did not say that Topsham was within the jurisdiction, the Court would not suppose it to be within the jurisdiction without it were shewn, no more would they suppose the lands (here) to be within the jurisdiction, it not being shewn. And afterwards inasmuch as all the others were in opinion against him, Wyndham consented to the reversal, which was done accordingly. The like case is entered Hillary 14 & 15 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 240, between Draper and Kent, in error of a judgment in the Palace Court, in an assumpsit, where the plaintiff declared on an indebitatus within the jurisdiction, for divers merchandizes to him (the defendant) sold and delivered, and did not say within the jurisdiction of the Court.

SLAUGHTER against TUCKER.

Judgment ought not to be in real actions upon default made, but a grand or petit cape.

Error of a judgment in a quod ei deforceat to the Grand Sessions in Wales, and assigned divers errors, some in fact, others in law, upon the record; whereupon the defendant in the error demurred for duplicity, and now the plaintiff waved the errors assigned on the record, and assigned a new error, viz. that judgment final was given on a default after appearance, where there ought to be a petit cape only in all real actions on a default after appearance, and a grand cape on a default before appearance, which the Court (agreed and therefore) held this a manifest error.

Consideratum est, and not said per Cur', in what Court good or not. S. C. 1 Keb. 478, 529. 1 Sid. 147. Post, 123.

Error of a judgment in dower in the Court at Durham, for that it was entered consideratum est, and not said per Cur', but held by this Court, it is well enough in Courts of Counties Palatine, or Grand Sessions, which are not to be resembled to inferior base Courts; otherwise of the Court of the Grand Franchise of Ely; and a case was cited where a judgment there was reversed for this cause.

Plea, that Longhope is ancient demesne, proof that Hope is so, is not sufficient, tho' known by the one name and the other, but it ought to be pleaded. S. C. 1 Sid. 147. 1 Keb. 530.

Ejectment of lands in Longhope, the defendant pleads it is ancient demesne, issue that it is not ancient demesne, and the book of Domesday brought into Court to try it; wherein it appears, that Hope is an ancient demesne; and by Foster, Twysden and Kelynge Justices, this shall not maintain the issue for the defendant, but the defendant ought to have pleaded, that it is known as well by the name of Hope, as of Longhope, and that it is ancient demesne; and then it should be tried by the jury if it be known by the one name and the other; but it cannot upon this pleading be supplied by any proof or examination de hors (i.e. foreign to the record) Wyndham held that it might be supplied by proof of witnesses, for this is a trial by the Court on the (Domesday) book, and not by jury; and he resembled it to a trial of infancy on inspection and affidavits, but the rest were contrary, and so it was ruled.

BOCKENHAM'S CASE.

Bail for striking in Westminster-Hall, body for body. S. C. 1 Sid. 211. 1 Keb. 751.

He was brought into Court immediately for beating of a man in Westminster-Hall, sedente Curia, and obliged to find sureties to appear to an indictment, which were four persons, each obliged in a recognizance, and also body for body to stand to the judgment upon the indictment. And Twysden said, that though on an assault and battery in another place, the party struck may justify the striking the other again, yet he cannot do so when he is struck in Westminster Hall, sitting the Court, nor in the church-yard, Bockenham having said that Harlston had struck him first: and afterwards in Hillary 16 & 17 Car. 2, he was tried at the Bar for this upon an information, and a verdict against him, that he struck, beat, wounded, and evil intreated Harlston; and he pleaded a pardon which recited the information, omitting [107] verberavit (that he beat) and pardoned the beating, omitting the wounding, and yet the pardon was allowed. For it was held by the Court, that the word percussit (he struck) includes the beating, and the wounding is not material; for the striking made the offence, be there any wounding or not; also the pardon had general words, viz. all malefeasances in the information contained: and he being discharged, was immediately arrested at the suit of Lenthal the marshal for 100l. that Lenthal had paid for him for an escape, and the Court permitted the arrest.

[108] THE KING against THE INHABITANTS OF WOODFORD, CHINGFORD, AND OTHER ADJACENT TOWNSHIPS IN ESSEX.

Fences thrown down in the day or in the night by persons known, not within the statute.

A distringas issued on the Statute of Westm. 2, for throwing down inclosures against the inhabitants of the next town, and two of each came and pleaded for themselves and the other inhabitants of the several towns, that the fences were thrown down in the day-time, when the persons might be known; and traverse that they were thrown down in the night, or at such a time as the offenders could not be known; and issue was accordingly joined in the disjunctive; and now on a trial at Bar it was said for the defendants, that if the prosternation was either in the day or in the night so publickly, that the malefactors were known, it is not within the statute; to which the Court agreed, for the statute was made to give remedy in cases where the malefactors not being known, the parties were without remedy by action of trespass, &c. But if it was done either in the day or in the night before the face of the owners, so that they had remedy by trespass, &c. this is not within the statute: and on the evidence it appearing to be done publickly, altho' by the doers (i.e. the defendants, &c.) the jury, by the direction of the Court, found for the defendants.

[109] TERM. SANCT. MICH. ANNO 15 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

KITCHEN AND KNIGHT against BUCKLY.

Tenants in common join in covenant for repairs. S. C. 1 Sid. 157. Raym. 80. 1 Keb. 565, 572.

Covenant, and declares, that Randal devised the tenements to the defendant, who covenanted with the lessor to repair them; and afterwards Randal grants the moiety of the reversion to Kitchen; and then granted the other moiety of the reversion to Knight, and they brought a joint action of covenant against him for not repairing of the messuage; and after verdict for the plaintiff, on performance pleaded, it was moved in arrest of judgment. 1st. That they being tenants in common ought not to join in this action for repairs, which concerns the inheritance, but ought to have several actions in this case, which savours of the realty, according to their several interests. 2dly. That the covenant is not with the lessor and his assignees, and therefore the assignees shall not have any action (not) being named; whereupon judgment was staid. But afterwards it was argued by Jones for the plaintiff, and he agreed that in real actions, or mixed which savours of the realty, they ought to join; but in actions personal, where damages only are to be recovered, they may join, and cited Littl. sect. 311, 312, 313, and 18 H. 6, 5, 6, 7. And as to the second objection, he said, that as an assignee of a lessee shall be charged in covenant for repairs (tho' assignees are not named in the covenant) in respect of their having the possession, as in 5 Co. Spencer's case; so an assignee of the reversion shall have an action of covenant for default of repairs in respect of his having the reversion, tho' assignees are not named in the covenant. And to this opinion the whole [110] Court agreed. But as to the first point, it was argued by Baldwin for the defendant, that this action of covenant is mixed in the realty, because it concerns the inheritance, as well as in the personalty to recover damages; and in such cases tenants in common ought to sever: and he cited Moor 452. Godb. 90, 280. Dy. 326. sect. 314, 317. That they shall not join in an assise or an avowry for rent because mixed. Nor in a cessavit, waste, &c. Mo. 40, and in Pyott and St. John's case 2 Cro. where Pyott claimed by two grants of the reversion of several parts at several times, and he brought an action of covenant for repairs, and it was allowed; for that both grants were to one and the same person, and he could not be tenant in common with himself; but here the grants are to several persons and at several times, by several grants. But held by the Court, that this was merely a personal action, wherein tenants in common may join: and in Pyott's case he was tenant in common with himself, for he had the fee in part of the reversion, and for years only in the reversion of the residue; and by the whole Court, judgment was given for the plaintiff in this case.

LEE against ROGERS.

Assumpsit on a promise twenty years before, no benefit of the statute without pleading it. S. C. 1 Keb. 566, 578. Raym. 86.

Assumpsit on a promise made the first of May, 3 Car. 1, for money lent: the defendant pleads, that the writ was first brought the 4th of February, 14 of this King, and that he did not promise within six years before the said 4th of February. The plaintiff replies, that he assumed within six years before the said 4th of February: and after verdict it was moved in arrest of judgment, for that it appears by the declaration, that the cause of action did arise above six years before the action brought. 2. That the replication is a departure from the Court. But by the Court, judgment was given for the plaintiff; for first, tho' the cause of action appears to be 20 years before the action brought, yet the plaintiff shall recover, if the defendant does not plead the statute, which was made for the ease of those who would take advantage thereof, but the Court shall not give the defendant advantage thereof if he will not plead it. 2dly. The replication is no departure from the declaration, for the time put in the declaration was not material, for he might [111] declare of an assumpsit at any time, but when the defendant makes the time material by his plea, the plaintiff may by his replication answer to that plea, for maintaining his action by the time that before was not material; and they gave judgment for the plaintiff. And in Hillary term the 15th of Car. 2, in the Common Pleas, between Sir George Bremion and Sir John Evelyn, on a promise made in 1646, the defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations; to which the plaintiff replied, that the defendant was a member of the House of Commons till 1648, and that then the Government was usurped, and no Courts erect: and that he brought his action as soon as the Courts were erected by the King's restoration. And on demurrer it was adjudged, (as I heard) first, That none should take advantage of the statute without pleading it. Secondly, That the replication is no departure, because it is not but an answer by the time to the plea, which before was not material. Thirdly, That privilege of Parliament, nor the Courts not being open, are not any excuse against the Statute of Limitations, not being excepted out of the statute; and a man might here file an original against a member of Parliament without breach of privilege, and continue it till his privilege be determined.

JAMES against MORGAN.

Assumpsit to pay for a horse a barley-corn a nail, &c. S. C. 1 Keb. 569. 6 Mod. 305. 1 Jo. 138.

Assumpsit to pay for a horse a barley-corn a nail, doubling it every nail; and avers that there were thirty-two nails in the shoes of the horse, which being doubled every nail, came to five hundred quarters of barley: and on non assumpsit pleaded, the cause being tried before Hyde at Hereford, he directed the jury to give the value of the horse in damages, being 8l. and so they did: and it was afterwards moved in arrest of judgment for a small fault in the declaration, which was over-ruled, and judgment given for the plaintiff.

[112] MILLS against MONDAY AND HIS WIFE.

Cousiner, He made false letters, spoken of a carrier without a colloquium of his trade, not actionable. S. C. 1 Keb. 571, 612. 1 Sid. 155.

Action for that the wife of the defendant having colloquium of the plaintiff, being a carrier, said of him, He has made false letters, he has cousined my husband of 21*l. and gave me a false and forged acquittance:* after verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, and the judgment was stayed because the colloquium was not laid of his trade of a carrier, but (only) of himself. And it being moved again at another time, and the Court continuing in their former opinion, judgment was given, that the plaintiff should take nothing by his bill.

BISCO, LESSOR OF STRODE, against DR. HOLTE.

Chancellor of a cathedral is enabled by stat. 32. H. 8 to make leases. S. C. 1 Sid. 158. 2 Keb. 576.

In evidence to a jury at the Bar in ejectment, on a lease made by the chancellor of a cathedral church, not being confirmed by the dean and chapter: there was a doubt made, whether this being for twenty-one years or three lives, should bind the successor within the statute 32 H. 8, c. 28, or not? And by the whole Court, it shall bind without confirmation, for he is a prebendary and more, for he hath a prebend, and besides that he is a dignitary, and is seized in fee in right of his church within the words of the statute; and they would not permit it to be found specially, as it was desired by the Attorney General; for they said, they would not have it made a doubt.

Note, in 3 Cro. 350, Watkinson against Man, it was adjudged on a special verdict, that a lease by a prebendary shall bind the successor; and it is there said by Fenner to have been so adjudged in the case of a treasurer of a church. But see 1 Inst. 300 b. where a prebendary is taken as a parson or vicar, not to have the whole fee in him.

[113] And note, the statute excepts parsons and vicars, but not prebends, and Hyde said, that precentors of old foundations are enabled by the statute, but otherwise perhaps of new foundations: and whereas a case was cited in the Exchequer, that leases made by the chanters of Paul's ought to be confirmed; Hyde said, that they were not properly chanters, but of the lesser order, and only singing men: but chanters, precentors, &c. are of the greatest order.

TILFORD against FRENCH.

A parol submission to an award, does not imply a promise to perform it. S. C. 1 Sid. 160. 1 Keb. 599, 600. 1 Danv. 27, 3.

Debt for 50l. and declares, that the plaintiff and defendant mutually submitted to the award of J. S. who awarded, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 50l. and that the plaintiff on payment thereof should deliver to the defendant, certain writings, and also make to him a release: after verdict for the plaintiff judgment was stayed and given for the defendant, because the award is void; for that the defendant had no remedy for the writings and the release upon this parol submission; for it did not imply any promise to perform it, and so it is an award of one part only.

THE KING against CHALONER.

The year of the King, and the year of the King's reign, all one. S. C. 1 Sid. 156. 1 Keb. 572. Record of a force on the statute R. 2 quashable by motion.

It was moved to quash a record of a force, made on the view of a justice of peace on the statute of R. 2, because it was only anno Regis Car. 2, omitting regni; but by the Court, it cannot be intended the year of his life but of his reign; for it is not the 14th year of the King, except it be the 14th year of his reign, for he is not King but from the commencement of his reign; but they said, that it is quashable by motion without writ of error, if it had been insufficient.

Boilery of salt, what, an ejectment lies thereof. S. C. 1 Sid. 161. 2 Danv. 751, pl. 2.

Ejectment of a boilery of salt, tried at the Bar on a lease by the Corporation of Droitwich, and proof, that the pit is divided into twenty or thirty boileries, viz. that one shall have the first boilery, and another the second; and so of the residue, which consists in this, that one shall have the first tub of water that is drawn out of the pit, and another the second tub, &c. And the water that is so drawn by officers appointed, makes the boileries.

GILBERT against MARTIN.

Covenant in Berks to repair a house in Hampshire. S. C. 1 Sid. 157. 1 Keb. 575. Raym. 85.

Covenant, and declares of a lease made in Hampshire, of a messuage in Berkshire; and assigns a breach in not repairing of the house: the defendant pleads that he had not broken the covenant, and issue thereupon tried in Hampshire, where the covenant is supposed to be made, and verdict for the plaintiff: whereupon it was moved in arrest of judgment, that it ought to have been tried in Berkshire, where the house is, and where the repairs are to be made: to which it was answered, that where the cause of action arises on a thing in two counties, the plaintiff has election to bring it in which county he will; as where it arises on the covenant made in one county, and on the not repairing in another. To which it was replied, that true it is, so it is in many cases, where on a general issue divers things in divers counties are to be tried; as where a man brings debt for an escape on an arrest in one county, and an escape in another, there on nil debet both are triable, viz. the arrest and the escape, and both are triable in that county where the plaintiff will at his election bring his action; and yet there if the arrest be traversed, the trial shall be in the county where the arrest is alledged: and if the escape be traversed, it shall be tried where the escape is alledged. And here when the breach is alledged in not repairing, and the issue is non infregit, &c. this shall be intended only an answer to the breach (alledged) viz. that he hath not broken the covenant for want of repairs; and so that is the only matter triable, and that only where the house lies, and cited Bro. Issue 19. 22 H. 6, 13, 23. 16 H. 7. 1. [115] 44 E. 3. And of this opinion were the whole Court, except Wyndham, who agreed, that a particular issue shall bring the trial to the county where the matter in issue arose, and out the plaintiff of his election; but he held that non infregit conventionem, is not such a particular issue, but other things may be given in evidence thereupon: but by the opinion of the three others, judgment was stayed.

TERRY against HOOPER.

Colloquium of the party, but the words spoken of him and of his trade. S. C. Raym. 86. 1 Keb. 60, 2, 644.

Case, for that the plaintiff being a lime-burner, the defendant having colloquium of him, said of him and of his art, He is a cheating knave: after verdict for the plaintiff on not guilty, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that here is no colloquium laid of his art, but only of himself; and the laying the words to be spoken of him and his art, is but a colloquium of the plaintiff himself, and cheating knave of a lime-burner is not actionable if it be not spoken with reference to his trade: whereupon judgment was stayed, and in Hillary term next following, Jones moved for judgment, and cited 1 Cro. 371. 2 Cro. 674. That the words being laid to be spoken of him and his trade, are sufficient without any colloquium either of him or his trade, they being found by the jury to be spoken of him and his trade; and of this opinion were Wyndham and Twysden, they being now found spoken of him and his trade. But Hyde, Chief Justice, and Kelynge were of a contrary opinion, and the judgment was stayed, the Court being divided. And by Kelynge, Wyndham and Twisden, an action lies for speaking scandalous words of a lime-burner, or of any man of any trade or profession, be it ever so base, if they are spoken with reference to his profession.

[116] BAWDRY against BUSHEL.

Custom for foreigners to pay 4d. per acre for tithes.

A prohibition prayed on a custom alledged, that all persons who have lands in such a village, but inhabiting out of the vill shall pay 4d. per acre only in satisfaction of tithes: and that the defendant here sued him inhabiting out of the vill for tithes in kind in the Spiritual Court. But the prohibition was denied, for the custom is unreasonable to give a greater privilege to foreigners than to inhabitants, who are at greater charge, in respect of their resiancy, to repairs and vestments for the church.

WHEELER against WELCH.

Case for calling whore in London, proved to be spoken in Middlesex. S. C. Raym. 81. 1 Keb. 578, 603.

Action was brought in London for calling the plaintiff whore there, which was removed hither by habeas corpus, and afterwards remanded and tried in the Sheriff's Court in London; and on the trial, the words were proved to be spoken at Clerkenwell, i.e. out of the city and liberties thereof, for which I demurred on the evidence, for that those words spoken at Clerkenwell, are not actionable. And the Judge overruled the demurrer presently; whereupon I prayed him to seal a bill of exceptions. But the parties being poor, I upon their request waved it, and a verdict was given for the plaintiff and 45s. damages.

Note, The defendant might have pleaded, that the words were spoken at Clerkenwell, and have traversed the speaking in London; and if the Judge had denied to have received the plea, the Court of King's Bench would have granted a prohibition.

[117] THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF ST. PAUL'S against CAPELL.

Obligation conditioned to pay so much as J. S. shall appoint, is within the statute of 3 Jac. 1. of finding bail in error on a judgment thereupon. S. C. 1 Keb. 613, 690.

Debt on an obligation conditioned to pay to Biggs such (a sum of) money as J. S. should declare upon an account by him stated between the plaintiff and defendant, to be due from the defendant to the plaintiff. Whereto the defendant pleads, that J. S. had not declared any thing due to the plaintiff, issue thereupon and judgment for the plaintiff, and thereupon error brought, and the question was, whether the plaintiff in error should find bail on the statute of 3 Jac. 1, c. 8? For it was objected, that this was not an obligation for the payment of money only within the words and intent of the said statute, which extends only where a certain sum is expressed in the condition; and therefore Yelv. 227, Girling's case, where a man recovered on an insimul computasset, it was adjudged not to be within the statute: and a case is there cited, that a recovery in debt upon arbitrament is not within the statute: and a writ of error is a writ that every subject of right ought to have, and therefore the statute made in restraint thereof shall be taken strictly. And of this opinion was Kelynge, but the rest of the justices contra, viz. that altho' writs of error are writs of right, yet they are for the most part used for delay, for remedy whereof the said statute was made, and therefore was to be taken beneficially for the subject. They agreed the case of Girling, and that of debt on an award, for those are not actions on a bill or obligation for the payment of money which are only within the words of the statute; but this action is grounded on an obligation made for the payment of money only, which altho' it be not certain when the obligation is made, is yet certain before the action is brought; and they ruled, that the plaintiff should take his execution, notwithstanding the writ of error brought, except the plaintiff in error gave in bail before such a day.

[118] THE KING against THOMAS.

Trial for murder in the next English county. Plea that he was formerly acquitted in the Grand Sessions in Wales. S. C. 1 Sid. 179. 1 Keb. 663. Hawk. P. C. 121. Wils. 320. Atk. 175, 182.

Thomas was indicted at Hereford, the next English county, for a murder committed at Coyty in Wales; whereto he pleads, that he was at another time (i.e. formerly) tried and acquitted of this murder at the Grand Sessions of Wales. The Attorney General replied, that Coyty was parcel of one of the lordships marchers; and that the stat. 26 H. 8, c. 6, enables the justices of gaol delivery in the next English county to try traitors, murderers, and felons, for facts done in any lordship marcher, as if it had been committed in the English county; and that the acquittal in the lordships shall not be at any Bar. Whereupon the defendant demurs; and the case was oftentimes argued at the Bar, and it was at length resolved by the whole Court, that the defendant should be discharged; for the reason of the making of the statute of 26 H. 8 was the irregularity of proceedings in the lordships marchers. And by the statute of 27 H. 8, c. 26, the lordships marchers are divided into the six new counties of Wales, and the English counties adjacent, and the English laws to be used in Wales, and they are thereby enabled to send knights and burgesses to the Parliament in England; and altho' by a proviso in this statute, the trials for murder, treason and felony done in the lordships marchers are saved, yet that was before the erection of the Court of Grand Sessions, which was done by the Act of 34 H. 8, c. 26. And that divides all the counties into divisions wherein the Grand Sessions are to be held, where the trials are (to be) according to the laws of England; and therefore, where after this Act a man is tried and acquitted at the Grand Sessions of treason, murder and felony, he may plead it, and not be tried again for the same offence.

Note, This matter was doubted at the Grand Sessions, and therefore to have it settled here, it was removed hither by certiorari, and resolved as aforesaid.

COXE against SMITHE.

Case for a false oath, causing him to lose his office. Vide ante 97. Hard. 221, 222, &c. 1 Sid. 131.

Case for that he being an officer of the Custom-House, the defendant made a false affidavit against him in Chancery, touching malfeasance in his office; and afterwards petitioned the commissioners of the customs against him, and thereupon caused him to be turned out of his place: after a verdict (upon not guilty) for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that no action lies for the making of a false oath, Owen 258. 2 Cro. 601. Hutt. 11. Poph. 144. 1 Leon. 107, and that no action lies for the petition, because it is done in a course of justice. But (said) by the Court. The action is not founded on the oath, nor on the petition, but those are only inducements to prove the malicious procurement to have him turned out of his place; and that it was falsely and maliciously done, is now found by the verdict; and they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

[120] TOMBES against ETHRINGTON.

A pardon excepting murder, does not accept a felo de se. S. C. 1 Keb. 66, 548, 628. 1 Sid. 167. 1 Saund. 361. Vide ante 8, 26. 2 Show. 334. 1 Mod. 102. 2 Mod. 53.

A scire facias as administrator of Tombes the intestate, upon a judgment recovered against the defendant by the intestate: the defendant pleads that the intestate killed himself, and shews an inquisition found thereof before the coroner, in the times of the late usurpation. The plaintiff replies the general pardon of 12 Car. 2, whereby the King pardons all felonies, debts, &c. The defendant demurs; and now it was adjudged on argument, that by the pardon the crime of felo de se was pardoned, as was formerly adjudged in the case of The King and Ward, the Executor of Wentworth, in Mich. 12 Car. 2, in B. R. (which see here before p. 8), but the pardon does not restore the debt vested in the King by the inquisition before the pardon, without words of restitution. But to this it was argued, that the inquisition taken in those times was void, and is not confirmed or made good by the stat. 12 Car. 2, c. 3, for the continuance of judicial proceedings not being inserted under any of the titles in that Act; whereto it was answered and resolved, that whether it were committed by the Act or not, it was yet good at the common law, for the coroner being elected by the county, his office does not determine by the King's death. But they would not award execution for the plaintiff, because they held the King had title to the debt. Whereupon, one Lock was promised a grant of the debt by the King; and in Hillary 16 Car. 2, B. R. brought a scire facias against Ethrington, and shewed the felony de se, and the inquisition, and the King's grant to him: the defendant pleads the general pardon, and it was now resolved again, that the crime of felo de se is pardoned, and is not within the exceptions of murder in the Act of Pardon. And secondly, That though the crime be pardoned, yet the debt is not restored to the administrators, being vested in the King by the inquisition, no words of restitution being in the Act. But the third question was, whether the debt is not extinguished in the hands of the debtor, by the fifth branch of the Act, which pardons and releases all causes, things, quarrels, suits, judgments and executions not excepted in the Act. And as to this it was said for the plaintiff, First, That the commencement of this clause is a pardon of treasons, offences, &c. and the words judgments and executions shall be [121] satisfied, and refers only to judgments and executions for the offence, and not judgments and executions for the debt. Secondly, The clause shall be satisfied with judgments and executions originally (due) to the King, and shall not include debts which came to the King by assignment or forfeiture. Thirdly, The pardon is to all subjects, and the defendant in his plea avers that he is modo subditus, and that may be by naturalization since; and if he was not a subject at the time of the Act, he is not within the pardon; and as to the first and second of those objections it was answered by Jones, that though the clause in the statute speaks of treasons and such offences, yet afterwards the clause contains rents, arrears of rents, forfeitures, penalties, and many other general words, as bonds, securities, &c. and therefore it is to be taken generally, and shall be extended to the case in question: and of this opinion were Hyde and Twysden on the first argument, but Wyndham and Kelynge were of a contrary opinion. And as the case of Sir George Binion, cited to be lately adjudged in the Exchequer, that debts which came to the King by assignment, were not pardoned; Sir George Binion was an accomptant, and in arrear; and by the tenth clause of the Act, such accounts are excepted out of the pardon; for J. S. being indebted to Binion, Binion assigned the debt to the King for the better recovery thereof, to be paid to the King in satisfaction of his accounts, and the Court at first held it discharged: but afterwards for that it came to the King in lieu of the account, they by equity of the Act held it to be excepted as the account itself was; but Hale Chief Baron, and the whole Court of Exchequer, always ever since the pardon have adjudged, that debts coming to the King by assignment, were pardoned as well as debts originally due to him. And as to the third (question) the word subditus shall be taken in the more worthy sense, viz. a subject born; as the Feast of St. Michael shall be taken for St. Michael the Archangel. But it was adjourned, and the case was again argued at the Bar in Easter term, 16 Car. 2, and then Hyde Chief Justice doubted more than before; but Kelynge having spoken with the Chief Baron Hale, and being satisfied by him of the course of the Exchequer, and the case of Binion to have been as was before declared by Jones, he altered his opinion, and held the debt to be discharged in the hands of the debtor. Wyndham continued his former opinion, but it was adjourned; and afterwards in Trin. 16, Hyde being [122] dead, it was adjudged by Twysden and Kelynge, that the debt was discharged; Wyndham continuing his former opinion. But all agreed that modo subditus was sufficient, and shall be intended to have been always so. And judgment was given for the defendant.

A man builds a new house on part of his lands, and after sells the house to one, and the lands to another, he cannot obstruct the lights. S. C. 1 Sid. 167, 227. Raym. 87. 1 Keb. 553, 625, 794.

Case was brought for stopping of his lights. The case was, a man erected a house on his own lands, and after sells the house to one, and the lands adjoining to another, who by putting piles of timber on the land, obstructed the lights of the house: and it was resolved, that although it be a new messuage, yet no person who claims the land by purchase under the builder, can obstruct the lights any more than the builder himself could, who cannot derogate from his own grant, by Twysden and Wyndham Justices, Hyde being absent, and Kelynge doubting. For the lights are a necessary and essential part of the house. And Kelynge said, Suppose the land had been sold first, and the house after, the vendee of the land might stop the lights; Twysden to the contrary said, Whether the land be sold first or afterward, the vendee of the land cannot stop the lights of the house in the hands of the vendor or his assignees; and cited a case to be so adjudged; but all agreed, that a stranger having lands adjoining to a messuage newly erected, may stop the lights; for the building of any man on his lands, cannot hinder his neighbour from doing what he will with his own lands; otherwise if the messuage be ancient, so that he has gained a right in the lights by prescription. And afterwards in Mich. 16 Car. 2, B. R. a like judgment was given between the same parties, for erecting a building on another part of the lands purchased, whereby the lights of another new messuage were obstructed.

A mandamus to restore the treasurer of the new water-works, London. S. C. 1 Sid. 169. 1 Keb. 625.

A mandamus was prayed for restoring him to the treasurership of the company, which was much opposed by Coleman and Powys, because it was only a thing of private concernment, and not touching the publick; and of this opinion was Wyndham, and that it did not lie, nor for a fellow of a college, nor had it been ever seen that a mandamus was granted to restore an abbot, a monk, a Knight-Templar, or Hospitaller, &c. But it was strongly pressed by Maynard, and the Attorney General, and Wylde (all of the King's Counsel) to have the writ, and they said it concerned the King, who had an interest in the waterworks, viz. certain parts or shares. And Twysden held, that the mandamus well lay, but to Hyde, Chief Justice, it seemed that it did not, because a private corporation and a private office; but at length they consented that the writ should go, and they would consider further upon the return thereof.

[124] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 15 & 16 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

THE KING against SIR JOHN JACKSON.

No new trial in a criminal case where defendant is acquitted. V. ante 9, 10. 1 Sid. 153, 154. 1 Keb. 124, 127, 484, 546, 566, 568.

In trespass between Sir John Jackson and Primate, the verdict being against Primate, he indicted the witnesses of perjury; which being at issue and brought to trial, Sir John commanded his servants to beat and imprison the witnesses which were to prove the perjury, so that they did not come to give evidence, whereupon the others were acquitted. And Primate (after) moved for a new trial of the perjury, which was denied, it being in a criminal case, wherein the party being once acquitted, shall never be tried again. But the Court directed an information against Jackson, which was done, and he convicted. And now it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the information was by way of recital how an issue was joined, and does not positively say, then an issue was joined and appointed to be tried, &c. But it was not allowed, it being only by way of inducement to the suit on the information, which is for the battery and the detaining the witnesses. 2d. Objection, that the information is against Jackson for procuring A. and B. to beat and imprison the witnesses, and Jackson only tried and convicted, and the others never yet tried; so that it does not appear that they were guilty of the battery and imprisonment, and then Jackson cannot be guilty of the procuring of that which does not appear to have been done. But it was resolved, that he commanding the same to be done, is a principal and not an accessary, and he being found guilty, it shall be intended that the fact was done; and the Court imposed a fine of 1000l. upon Jackson, and that he should find sureties for the good behaviour for a year before he should be discharged. But being specially [125] committed by the Court at the King's suit, they ordered that no action or execution should be put upon him during his imprisonment without licence of the Court: and afterwards Primate moved to have part of the fine allowed him towards his charges, and thereof the Court would consider. And note in the same term, in Sir Charles Stanley's case, the Court would not permit him, being in prison at the King's suit, to be charged.

SHEROCK against BOUCHER.

A prebendary who has a peculiar, leases his prebend, q. if the lessee may hold courts. S. C. Raym. 88. 1 Bl. Rep. 81. Doug. 378. 1 Term Rep. 552.

A prohibition was prayed, on which the case appeared to be, that a prebendary who had a peculiar jurisdiction, made a lease of his prebend, with all profits, commodities and advantages, &c. thereto belonging. And the question was, whether the ecclesiastical jurisdiction should pass to the lessee, so that he might make a commissary to hold courts or not? And the Chief Justice and Wyndham held, that it should not, for that it is annexed to the spiritual person, and not to the lay-body of the prebend: and Wyndham said, The commissary is only the deputy of the prebendary (as prebendary) which his lessee could not make for him. Kelynge and Twysden held to the contrary, and that it was annexed to the body of the prebend, and passed with it. But this being the first motion, it was appointed, that the plaintiff should declare on his suggestion, and that the defendant should demur thereupon, so as to bring the point judicially in question.

THE KING against ALDERMAN STERLING AND SEVENTEEN OTHERS.

[See Mogul Steamship Company v. MacGregor, 1889-91, 23 Q. B. D. 631; [1892], A. C. 25; Allen v. Flood [1898], A. C. 88.]

Information for a conspiracy, not saying vi & armis. S. C. 1 Sid. 174. 1 Keb. 650. V. ante 10, 62, 124. Hawk. P. C. 343, 344.

Information against them, for that they with divers others of the brewers of London did factiously and unlawfully assemble themselves, and conspire to impoverish the excise-men, and made orders, that no small-beer called gallon beer should be made for such or so long time to be sold to the poor, nor no ale but of such a price, with intent to move the common people to pull down the Excise-House, and bring the excise-men into the hatred of the people, and to impoverish and disable them from paying their rent (being then 118,000l. per ann.) to the King; and [126] on not guilty pleaded, they being found guilty on a trial at Bar of assembling and consulting to impoverish the excisemen, and not guilty of the residue, it was moved in arrest of judgment, 1st. That there wanted vi & armis in the information; but held by the Court it was well enough without it, the information being for plotting and contriving which may be without force. 2dly. That they are found guilty only of the conspiring without any act done, for they are found not guilty of the making the orders, &c. and this is only against private men, and not punishable at the King's suit, but by suit by the parties, if they are endamaged thereby. 3dly. That the contriving to impoverish the excise-men, is uncertain what is meant, and it may be by bringing actions against them for just debts. To the first of which objections it was answered by the King's Counsel, that this conspiracy tends to the public, because it concerns the loss of the King's revenue. And as to the second objection, the information says, that it was factiously and unlawfully, and is so found by the jury, which well enough explains what kind of impoverishment is intended, and a conspiring to do an unlawful thing is punishable without any overt act done, as 9 Co. Rep. Poulter's case, Moor 788, and the same in The Lord Gray's case, and Scrogg and Midwinter's case in the Star-Chamber 1636. And the whole Court gave their opinions, that judgment should be given for the King. And Hyde, Twysden and Kelynge held, that the bare conspiracy in this case to diminish the King's revenue, without any act done, is finable. 27 Ass. 44. 43 Ass. 20. Wyndham said, that if it was no more than a conspiracy without an act done, it was not punishable, but that here was more, viz. a confederacy and a coaduna-tion, by assembling themselves to this purpose, and he cited 45 E. 3, 19. And so all agreed, that they should be fined, but not jointly, but separately, according to their ability, with a salvis contenementis; and thereupon they fined Sterling 1000 marks, and the others 300 marks each.

[127] MORGAN against MAN.

Where the plea, is no award, you cannot rejoin, a void award. S. C. 1 Sid. 180. 1 Keb. 678. 2 Saund. 24, 189. Post, 133.

Debt on an obligation conditioned to perform an award. The defendant pleads no award; the plaintiff replies and shews an award, and assigns a breach; the defendant rejoins, and shews another matter in controversy, of which the arbitrators had notice, but made no award thereof; and so the award was void, the submission being with an ita quod. But by the whole Court, this rejoinder is a departure, for no award is none at all, and is not to be maintained by shewing the award to be void; but he ought at first to have pleaded the award, and also that other matter, whereby it was void. And judgment was given for the plaintiff, as it was in a like case before, between Howe and Launder, Mich. 14 of this King, in this Court. Vide ante 85.

HELIER against CASEBERT.

The lessor brings debt against administrators of the lessee after an assignment by him. S. C. 1 Sid. 240, 266, 402. 1 Keb. 839, 923. 2 Vent. 209. 1 Saund. 137 to 141, &c. Ibid. 2 Show. 133. 2 Jo. 144. Nelson's Lutw. 95, 211, 109, 136, 145. Cro. El. 555.

Debt for rent by the lessor, against the administrator of the lessee, who pleads, that before the rent was due he had assigned the term, whereupon the plaintiff demurs. And after divers arguments, it was in Trinity term, 17 Car. 2, adjudged for the plaintiff, by Twysden, Wyndham and Kelynge, (Hyde the Chief Justice being then dead) for the privity of the contract continued between the lessor and the administrator of the lessee, as it was between the lessor and lessee themselves: and this is not contrary to Overton and Syddal's case, cited in Walker's case in 3 Co. and Popham's Reports; for there the action was brought by the successor of the prebend, against the executor of the lessee; and privity of contract shall not go to the successor any more than to the heir, and the heir of the lessor shall not maintain debt against the executor of the lessee after assignment, because no privity of contract, but only of estate descended to him. And here Wyndham said, that an executor cannot waive a term so, but that he shall be charged for the rent if he has assets; for he is bound to perform all contracts of the lessor, if he has assets, be the rent above the value of the land or not, which was not denied; and Kelynge said, that he cannot so waive it, but that he shall be charged in the detinet, on which the assets shall come in question: [128] and if he continues the possession, he shall be charged in the debet & detinet in respect of the perception of the profits, whether he has assets or not; to which Twysden agreed.

Note, Michaelmas term, 2 W. & M. in the Common Pleas, Rot. —— there was the like case between Coghill and Fructon, as the principal case here, and the like judgment.

AT LENT-ASSIZES AT SOUTHWARK.

EARL OF PETERBOROUGH against SIR THOMAS BLUDWORTH.

A disseisee levies a fine, and declares the uses thereof.

An ejectment was tried before Bridgman, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas; and on the evidence the case was, that a disseisee levied a fine, and declared the use thereof by deed to the conuzee. And Bridgman held, that it should not enure to the use of the disseisor, but if no use had been declared, it should have been to the use of the disseisor, and extinguished the right of the disseisee. And it was intended to have been found specially; but the jury gave their verdict at large against the direction of the Court.

SANDERS against POWELL.

Case for a malicious attachment of another's goods. S. C. 1 Sid. 183. 1 Salk. 14, 15. 6 Mod. 25, 216, 261.

Case was brought for that the plaintiff having among other things two duodenas, Anglice dozens, of guns in the possession of J. S. the defendant did falsly and maliciously attach them in the hands of the said J. S. as the goods of A. for a debt due to him by A. After verdict it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the action did not lie. First, Because an attachment is a legal suit in a course of law, for which no action lies; but all the penalty is, that he shall pay costs on a nonsuit, or verdict against him, if he found he has no right, F. N. B. 49, & 3 Cro. 2. Secondly, It is not said scienter, nor that the defendant knew the goods to be the plaintiff's. But by the Court, the action lies, as where the sheriff levies the goods of A. for the debt of B. though they were among the goods of B. (an action lies against the sheriff) and the scienter is not material, for the sheriff is at his peril to levy the goods of B. only. Thirdly, It was objected, that duodenas is either no Latin, or at most is only an adjective word; and then the damages are only given for the Anglice, which is ill, because all pleadings ought to be in Latin: but by the Court, if there be not any Latin word for a dozen, then duodenas may be taken for a Latin word made for it, and so it is well; and if it be an adjective word, then no damages are given for it, nor for the Anglice. And thereupon they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

[130] GOODWIN against NEWTON.

Debt against the heir in the detinet. Vide 1 Sid. 342. Post, 147, 224. Ante 128.

Debt again an heir, who pleads he has nothing by discent. After verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the action is in the detinet only; to which it was answered, that it is for the benefit of the defendant, and that it may be either in the debet and detinet, or in the detinet only; and cited 10 H. 7, 8. But held by the Court to be ill, and not cured by the verdict: and they gave judgment, that the plaintiff should take nothing by his bill.

A warrant of attorney tested before the summons ad warrantizandum. S. C. 1 Sid. 213. 1 Keb. 54, &c. 748, 809, 914. Vide ante 72. Post, 146.

Error of a judgment in a quod ei deforciat in Wales, for that the tenant vouching, the warrant of attorney is tested before the summons ad warrantizandum. Whereto Jones answered, that the vouchee may come in before the summons ad warrantizandum if he will, and make an attorney, as Fitz. Voucher 230. 22 E. 3, 7. Fitz. Voucher 197. 13 H. 7, 24. And it shall be intended here, that the vouchee being present in Court, made the attorney, and so the summons to warranty, the dedimus potestatem, and the warrant made thereupon, were void: and of this opinion was the Court, and said, that they would not reverse a common recovery, if by any means they could make it good; and they affirmed the recovery.

[Disapproved, Smyth v. Smyth, 1878, 8 Ch. D. 567.]

A will wherein he says, I give all to my mother, lands do not pass thereby. S. C. 1 Sid. 191. Raym. 97. 1 Keb. 719. 2 Danv. 527, 16. Vide 1 Salk. 236. 6 Mod. 110. Al. 28. 3 Mod. 228. Post, 212. 2 Vent. 285, 286. 1 Mod. 100. 3 Lev. 434. Hob. cited 2 Shower, Case 367.

Ejectment and a special verdict, where a man seized of lands in Newcastle upon Tine (where lands are devisable by parol by the custom) by a parol will devises in these words, I give all to my mother, all to my mother: and whether the lands passed by those words was the question: and it was argued by Glyn the King's Serjeant for the plaintiff, who said, that by the word all, it was uncertain whether he intended lands or goods: and by Jones for the defendant, who said, that he who gives all excepts nothing; and cited a case, where by the devise of all his estate, all the estate as well real as personal [131] passed; and Bendl. 6, where a devise of all his livelihood extended to lands and goods. But by the Court, all is altogether uncertain, and not sufficient to disinherit an heir, and they gave judgment for the plaintiff, that the lands did not pass by the will.

ARCHER against BENNETT.

Demise of a mill with the appurtenances, if a kiln used therewith shall pass, Q. S. C. 1 Sid. 211. 1 Keb. 736.

Ejectment, and upon not guilty, a special verdict: a man seised of a close, on one part whereof was a house, and on another part thereof was a kiln; and also of two mills adjoining to the close; and used and occupied them all together till 1655, when he divided them, and sold the house and a part of the close, and reserved the other part and the kiln, and used them with the mill (and in truth the kiln was a kiln for the drying of oats, and the mills were for the making of oat-meal, but this was not found by the verdict). And afterwards he sold the mills cum pertinentiis to the plaintiff: and whether the kiln, and the parts of the close on which they stood, should pass to the plaintiff, was the question. And it was held clearly by the Court, that they did not pass; for by the grant of a messuage or lands cum pertinentiis, any other land or thing cannot pass, tho' by the words cum terris pertinentibus it would: and gave judgment for the defendant. But by Wyndham Justice, If all the matter had been found, and that the kiln was necessary for the use of the mills, and without which they were not useful, the kiln had passed as part of the mills, tho' not as appurtenances. As by the grant of a messuage, the conduits and water-pipes shall pass as parcel, tho' they are remote; to which no answer was given.

An executor pleads a judgment, and that he had not goods besides, except such which were not enough, not shewing the value, 'tis ill. S. C. 1 Sid. 210. 1 Keb. 734.

Debt against an executor who pleads a judgment, and that he had not any goods, except such as were not sufficient to satisfy the judgment; whereto the plaintiff demurs specially, because not shewn of what value the goods were which he had. And now Jones argued, that it was ill in substance for this on a general demurrer, as Tresham's case is in 9 Co. and if it be no more than form, as Moor and Andrew's case is in Hob. 133, yet being specially demurred on, it is ill. And per Cur', it is only form, as in Co. Entries 146, 148, 149, 152, 269, 617 b. But being specially demurred on, it is ill.

HOPPER against HACKETT.

An award recites differences and arrears of rent, and about trees, and awards 4l. for the arrears of rent. S. C. 1 Keb. 738.

Debt on obligation, conditioned to perform an award: the defendant pleads no award. The plaintiff replies, and sets out an award, which recites, that whereas several differences had been between the plaintiff and defendant concerning a house and divers elms, and arrears of rent: [133] they to make a final end of all, did award, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 4l. for all the said arrears of rent. The defendant demurs, for that it is an award of one part only, and not of all differences. But by the Court, the award being to pay 4l. for the arrears, is mutual therein, for it being for the arrears, it is in satisfaction of the arrears, and they are thereby discharged; and tho' the award recites other matters, yet it shall be intended they were otherwise determined, or at least when the award says to make an end of all differences, it shall be intended, that the 4l. was in satisfaction of all, the other matters not appearing but by the recital of the award itself; and they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

GARRETT against WEEDEN.

After no award pleaded, to say it was not ready to be delivered is a departure. 3 Keb. 739. Ante 85, 127.

Debt on an obligation conditioned to perform an award: the defendant pleads no award. The plaintiff replies and sets out an award made, and ready to be delivered to the defendant, that he should pay to the plaintiff 5l. and assigns the breach for not paying the 5l. The defendant demurs, because not shewn that it was ready to be delivered to both parties, but only to the defendant, and the condition is, so that it be ready to be delivered to both parties. But by the Court, it shall be intended to be ready to be delivered to the plaintiff also, and he has brought his action thereupon; and if it was not ready to be delivered to both, the defendant ought to have pleaded no award; after which he cannot shew the award to be void without a departure: and they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

Judgment in an Inferior Court removed into B. R. when execution shall go thereon. S. C. 1 Sid. 214. 1 Keb. 758, 735.

Judgment in an Inferior Court, being removed into this Court (by error) and affirmed; it was adjudged, that execution should issue from this Court, for now it is a judgment of this Court. But a judgment in an Inferior Court, removed hither by certiorari, shall not be executed here, to make this Court subservient to the Inferior Court: but on such judgment removed hither by certiorari, debt may be brought in this Court, according to Hutton's Reports 117.

Whore spoken of a woman who held lands while sole and chaste. S. C. 1 Sid. 214. 1 Keb. 731, 758.

Case for calling a widow, who held an estate while sole and chaste, whore, falsly and maliciously, with intent to oust her of her estate, and saying he would oust her thereof; and at another time calling her whore. After verdict for the plaintiff on the issue not guilty, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that no special damages being laid, the words were not actionable: but by the Court, they import damage in themselves in this case, in respect of her estate; as for calling a man thief, an action lies without special damage, because the words import it in themselves. But for the last words spoken at another time, which are not actionable in themselves, and the damages being entire, the judgment was therefore stayed till the matter be examined, whether the damages were given entirely or not? For on the back of the writ where the damages are entered, there seemed to have been some alteration.

[135] SNOWE against CUTTLER.

A woman tenant for life, her husband devised to the heirs of the wife's body, if they attain fourteen: she after has issue, but before they are fourteen, suffers a recovery; it is no remainder, but an executory devise. S. C. 1 Sid. 153. 1 Keb. 567, 752, 800, 851. Raym. 162, 164. 2 Danv. 517, 2.

In ejectment tried at Bar, a special verdict found, that husband and wife were seized of a copyhold to them and the heirs of the husband; the husband surrenders to the use of his will, and devises the lands to the heirs of the wife's body, if they attain the age of fourteen years, and dies without issue; she takes a second husband, by whom she has issue, but before the issue attains fourteen, the wife and second husband suffer a recovery in the court of the manor: and if the heir of the wife shall have the land, (the wife being dead) was the question, which was argued at the Bar several times in this and the following terms; and divers points were moved and argued, viz. First, Whether this devise were good at all, being to a person not in esse? Secondly, If it could be good in respect of the double contingency, or a possibility upon a possibility, viz. if the wife should have an heir of her body or not? and though she had such heir of her body, if it should attain to the age of fourteen, at the time of her death? Thirdly, If the devise were good, what estate it should be, viz. a remainder or an executory devise? Fourthly, Whether it should be barred by the recovery? and the Judges delivered their opinions in Mich. term 19 Car. 2, and then as to the first point, Wyndham and Moreton held the devise void, as well for want of a person in esse when the devise was made, as also for the double contingency, viz. if the wife should have any heir of her body, and if such heir should be fourteen at the time of her death. And they held, that a devise to an infant in his mother's womb is void, according to Dyer, 304 a. (but that a devise to an infant in his mother's womb when he shall be born, is good) because he is (not) a person capable; and the statute enables to devise to any person or persons; and not only on the words of the statute, but so it was of lands devisable at common law, by Paston 11 H. 6, 13 b. But as to this point Twysden and Kelynge then Chief Justice held, that a devise to an infant in his mother's womb is good; and that it, and a devise to an infant in his mother's womb, when it shall be born, was all one; and they said, that Hale Chief Baron was of the same opinion, and told them he had caused the roll of Dyer, 304, to be searched, and that it [136] did not warrant that opinion; and so said Hyde Chief Justice, when the case was argued in Michaelmas term 16 Car. 2, viz. that he had seen the roll, and he seemed to be of Hale's opinion; and those two Judges, viz. Kelynge and Twysden, held this devise good notwithstanding the double contingency: and as to the third point, all agreed, that if this devise were good, it must be by way of executory devise, which may well be allowed to take place within the compass of a life, but not after a dying without issue, for that would make a perpetuity; and it should not be by way of remainder; for though the wife had an estate for life, yet this is a new devise to take place after her death, and is not a remainder joined to her estate. Fourthly, All agreed, that if it was an executory devise, it was not barred by the recovery as Pell and Brown's case in 2 Cro. and much more in this case of a copyhold, the recovery is no bar without custom, and no custom is found of barring estates by a common recovery. But the Court being divided in the principal point, no judgment was given, but the cause was agreed to be adjourned into the Exchequer-Chamber. But I suppose the parties afterwards agreed, for I heard nothing of it after.

A man hang'd by the bell-rope. Q. If the bells are deodands. S. C. Raym. 97. 1 Sid. 204, 205. 1 Keb. 123, 744.

In an information for the King, the case was one Brockhurst ringing a bell in the church, was strangled with the rope; and whether the bell should be a deodand was the question on this information for detaining it from the King; and the objections against the King were two: First, That the bell was fixed to the freehold: to which it was answered, that it was not fixed to the freehold, but (only) tied in the steeple, and bound down with pins or keys, which might be removed without altering the freehold. 2d Objection, That the bells are parcel of the church goods, and it would be in vain to forfeit it to the King, to be by him given back to the church again, viz. to pious uses: to which it was said, that it should be forfeited as a satisfaction for blood, to be disposed by the King to other pious uses. Hyde Chief Justice, and Wyndham were of opinion, that the bell was not forfeited; the other two seemed contrary: but nothing further was done in the case, that I could hear of.

Bail cannot bring error of a judgment against the principal and himself, nor can they join in error. Q. 1 Sid. 216. 3 Term Rep. 79.

The bail in Inferior Court before any judgment given against them there, but after judgment against the principal there, brought error of the judgment against the principal and himself, in which are the usual words, If judgment be thereupon given; and suppose the error, as well in giving the judgment, as in adjudging of the execution, and the writ was quashed, because the bail cannot bring error of the principal judgment, nor can the principal and the bail join in error. But whether the record was removed thereby was the question; and that it was removed: Pollexfen cited 1 Cro. Smith against James where principal and bail join, which was therefore quashed, and yet the record was removed. But Twysden Justice, cited Hill. 21 Car. 1, B. R. Rot. 217, that by a writ of error brought by the bail, the judgment against him only can be removed, and here no judgment being against him, nothing is removed; for judgment against him is not yet given. But it was adjourned.

Assumpsit in an Inferior Court on a promise within the jurisdiction for goods sold, and not saying sold within, &c. S. C. 1 Keb. 760. 1 Saund. 74.

Error of a judgment in Wallingford Court, where the plaintiff declared, that the defendant being indebted to him at Wallingford, for goods to him sold and delivered, promised at Wallingford, (to pay) &c. and because he does not shew where the goods were sold and delivered, and so it may be without the jurisdiction, therefore the judgment was reversed.

THE KING against SUMMERS AND SUMMERS.

A scandalous letter indictable before justices of the peace as a libel. S. C. 1 Sid. 270. 1 Keb. 772, 788, 931.

Error of a judgment on an indictment for reciting a libellous letter scandalous to Mellish, to a woman whom he intended to marry, before the justices of peace at Guild-hall. And the errors assigned were; 1st. That it was only a private letter, and not punishable by indictment. 2dly. If it were, yet not before justices of peace, but commissioners of oyer and terminer, who have these words in their commission, de propalationibus verborum. And for both causes, Hyde, Chief Justice, at first held it to be erroneous. But in Trinity term following, Hyde being dead, Twysden, Kelynge, and Wyndham held it indictable, because it tended to a breach of the peace, and before justices of peace, as well as before justices of oyer and terminer.

BEAN against NEWBURY.

A. and B. of one part, and C. of the other part, submit, and the award is between B. and C. only: it is void.

Debt upon an obligation conditioned, that whereas the defendant by himself and his son, had submitted to the award of A. and B. to perform it, so that the award be ready, &c. before the first of May, and if they made none, to the award of such an umpire as they should chuse, to be made the 1st of June: the defendant pleads no award nor umpirage; the plaintiff confesses no award by the arbitrators, but (says) that the umpire awarded the plaintiff to seal to the defendant three obligations, and the defendant to pay to the plaintiff 100l. which he had not done. The defendant demurs, [140] and the award was adjudged void for two causes; 1st. For that nothing is awarded as to the son, and it ought to be to every one for some part, or else it is void in the whole. 2dly. Altho' the ita quod be in the clause referring to arbitrators, and the award is made by the umpire, yet the ita quod by construction shall relate as well to the umpire as to the arbitrators, and for this was cited by the counsel 2 Cro. 278. 3 Cro. 838, but of this the Court for some time differed in opinion, but at length all agreed as aforesaid. Then the plaintiff seeing the opinion of the Court against him, prayed leave to discontinue, which was denied; for tho' they permit discontinuances in case of obligations for payment of money, yet never in case of obligations for performance of awards, except upon extraordinary occasions.

COLEMAN AND HIS WIFE against HARCOURT.

Husband and wife cannot join in an action for saying, Thou keepest a bawdy-house. Ante 3. Hard. 166.

Case for saying to the wife, they keeping a victualling-house, Thou art a bawd to thy own daughter, whereby J. S. that used to come to the house forbore, &c. to the damage of both. After verdict for the plaintiff, judgment was staid, because the words are not actionable, except in respect of the special loss, which is the husband's only.

Put your daughter to school and I will pay for her for a year. He puts her to school a quarter of the year. Action lies. S. C. 1 Sid. 225. 1 Keb. 792.

Assumpsit, in consideration the plaintiff would put out the plaintiff's daughter's daughter to a school-mistress, he the defendant would pay for her board for a year. And that he put out his daughter for three quarters of a year, which came to 10l. and that the defendant had not paid: after verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the consideration is not performed, for when he promised to pay for a year, it ought to be intended, that he should put her out to school for a year, otherwise the plaintiff might put her out for a week only, and yet oblige the plaintiff to pay for a year. But by Twysden and Wyndham, it may be intended, Put her there to school, and I will pay for a year, stay she more or less; and by [141] Hyde, Chief Justice, it may be intended, Set her to school, and I will pay for a year or less, according to the rate she stays. And thereupon by all the three, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Indeb' assump' for goods, implies sold and delivered. S. C. 1 Sid. 225. 1 Keb. 781, 783, 792, 823.

Assumpsit, that where the defendant was indebted to him for such tithes arising from the Vicarage of Dale; he the defendant promised to pay, &c. After verdict on non assumpsit, it was moved in arrest of judgment. 1st. That tithes are in the realty of which an assumpsit does not lie no more than for a rent. 2dly. That the vicar is to have and not to pay tithes. 3dly. It is not said, sold and delivered to him. But answered by the Court, as to the 1st. It may be intended tithes severed. To the 2d. An abbot or other person might have had a portion of tithes out of a vicarage, which is now come to the plaintiff. 3dly. The indebitatus implies sold and delivered, otherwise he could not be indebted; and they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

HILL against ELLARD.

Prescription for common for 4 cows and a half. So much of the prescription as is enough to justify, is good, tho' the whole prescription is not found. S. C. 1 Sid. 226. 1 Keb. 793.

Replevin of a cow. The defendant avows damage feasant: the plaintiff pleads in bar to the action, and prescribes for four cows and half a cow, issue on the prescription and verdict for the plaintiff. It was moved in arrest of judgment, that the issue is senseless and void; for one cannot have common for four cows and an half. But by Wyndham and Twysden, the rest being absent, if in replevin so much of the prescription be found as will serve the turn of the party, tho' the whole be not found, it is sufficient. And here the action is for one cow only, and the prescription as to the four is a good justification of putting in one cow: and they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

[142] ELRINGTON against DOSHANT.

Not guilty pleaded in assumpsit. 1 Stra. 574. 2 Stra. 1022. Bull. N. P. 151.

In assumpsit the defendant pleads not guilty, issue thereon and verdict, that he was guilty, and that he assumed in manner and form as declared. It was moved in arrest, that not guilty is no issue in this case, and the finding farther that he assumed, is void, not being in issue. But held by Wyndham and Twysden only in Court, that it was cured by the verdict at least; and by Wyndham, not guilty is a good plea and issue in assumpsit, for it is trespass on the case; and they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

REBY against ROBINSON.

Vouchee alone brings error without the tenant. S. C. 1 Keb. 141, 880, &c. 2 Saund. 95. 1 Sid. 321. Infant suffers a recovery in person, and being of age, assigns the infancy for error.

Error of a common recovery suffered by an infant in person as vouchee, he being now of age: and two questions were argued, 1st. Whether the vouchee alone might have error without the tenant; for that the principal judgment is to be reversed, and the judgment against the vouchee is but as a consequent thereof. 2dly. Whether the infant might assign it for error, he being now of age, so that it cannot be tried by inspection, as in the case of one within age, and it not being done by attorney, it cannot be tried by jury, as in judgments where he appears by attorney (it may). And the case was often argued, but at last the parties agreed before any judgment given. But Jones told me, he heard the Judges were of opinion against the plaintiff in error upon the second point.

[143] BEVEN against CLAPHAM.

Statute of Limitations no bar where the plaintiff goes beyond sea. S. C. 1 Sid. 228. 1 Keb. 799.

Assumpsit, that where the defendant at the parish of Bow, in the ward of Cheap, London, was indebted to him, he promised to pay, &c. The defendant pleads he did not promise within six years: the plaintiff replies, that the debt was contracted at Tenerif beyond sea, viz. in the parish and ward aforesaid; and that within six years after his return he brought the action: the defendant demurs. First, For that the replication is a departure from the declaration, which lays the indebitatus at Bow in London; and the replication is at Tenerif beyond sea. But by the Court, it is well enough, it also saying in the parish and ward aforesaid. Secondly, This case is not within the action, which saves the statute till the defendant returns; but here it is founded on the return of the plaintiff, which is not mentioned in the statute. But by the Court, it is within the reason and intent of the statute: and they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

ELLIS against JACKSON.

A writ executed before the quarto die after the return is ill. S. C. 1 Sid. 229. 1 Keb. 718, 805.

Trespass for battery and imprisonment; the defendant justifies by execution of a writ, but on the plea it appeared to be executed after the return, but before the quarto die post: and the execution was adjudged to be illegal. Moor 733. 3 Cro. 180. 23 H. 6, 45 b. were cited; and judgment was given for the plaintiff. And Justice Wyndham cited a case, where the writ by the roll was awarded to be returned on a Wednesday, but it was made returnable on the Thursday, and executed on the Thursday; and the writ was ordered to be amended according to the roll, and the execution on the Thursday made void.

[144] BURMAN against ASTON.

A. being tenant of B. (who holds of C.) is under-tenant of C. S. C. 1 Keb. 775, 806.

Covenant against the defendant, as executor to Eltonhead, who covenanted in a lease made by him to the plaintiff, of certain gravel pits in Black-Acre, that he, his heirs, assignees, or under-tenants, would not dig or sell any gravel there; and assigns a breach, that Brent, an under-tenant to Elton-head, did dig and sell gravel in other pits in Black-Acre. Issue that Brent was not under-tenant to Eltonhead; the jury found, that Brent held the other pits in which, &c. by lease from one J. S. who held them of Hunt, who held them of Eltonhead; and it was objected: First, That Brent was not under-tenant to Eltonhead, for Brent had not the whole term granted by Eltonhead to Hunt, nor could Eltonhead maintain debt against him for want of privity: but it was adjudged that he was under-tenant mediately to Eltonhead, for he claims under him, though not immediately. Secondly objected, that the covenant extends only to the pits demised, and not to other pits. But by the Court, it ought to be intended of all the other pits in the close, and not only of the pits demised to the plaintiff, for in them Eltonhead had nothing to do before the term (ended). And judgment was given for the plaintiff.

SMITH against FARNABY. IN THE COMMON PLEAS.

Remainder of a new rent, good. S. C. 1 Sid. 285. 2 Keb. 89. Carter 52. Nelson's Lutw. 386.

A rent de novo was devised to one for life, remainder to another in tail; he in remainder suffered a common recovery, and adjudged in the Common Pleas, that it was a good rent and remainder, and not an executory devise of the rent after the death of the devisee for life, and that it was barred by the common recovery. This I had by report from Roger Moore, then a student, afterwards serjeant at law: and note, this judgment was afterwards affirmed on a writ of error in B. R. in Easter term 18 Car. 2, which see in 1 Sid. 285. But it is there put, that the first devise was in tail, the remainder in fee; and adjudged that the remainder of the new rent was good.

[145] MASON against TREDWAY.

Tenant for years releases to him in the reversion. S. C. 1 Keb. 807. 5 Com. Dig. 409, 630. 3 Bac. Abr. 457. Gilb. Ten. 301. 1 Burr. 78, 80. Cowp. 599. Doug. 139.

Tenant for years remises, releases, discharges, and for ever quit-claims to him in reversion: and whether it was a good release or surrender of the term, was the question: and it was argued by Raymond, that it was in the case of a lessee for years, though it would not be so in the case of a tenant for life. Co. Lit. 275 b. 276 a. 2 Cro. 160. Tenant for life releases to him in reversion, it is void by way of release, and not good by way of surrender for want of apt words: but in the case of a lease for years, consisting only in contract, it may be extinct by the word discharge, which shews his intent not to have any thing further to do with the land, and therefore it shall be a surrender. 3 Cro. 21. Perkins, sect. 607. And the Court inclined, that it was a good surrender. And Wyndham Justice, cited a case, where a lessee for years remised and released to his lessor; and it was adjudged a surrender, for that the lease for years stood only in point of contract. But it was adjourned.

BROOKES against DEAN.

Condition to deliver goods such a day, plea, a delivery according to the condition is not good. Q. 1 Keb. 678. 2 Mod. 269. 1 Lutw. 546. Nelson's Lutw. 168, 178.

Debt on an obligation, conditioned to deliver goods upon such a day: the defendant pleads that he delivered them according to the form of the condition aforesaid.

Whereupon the plaintiff demurs, for that he ought to have pleaded expressly according to the words in the condition, that he delivered the goods upon the said day, and not generally, as here; and the Court seemed of the same opinion: but it was adjourned.

[146] MR. BACON'S CASE.

An intent to commit felony is finable. S. C. 230. 1 Keb. 804, 809.

He was indicted for intending to murder the Master of the Rolls, and for offering 100l. to J. S. to do it; and saying, that if he would not, he would do it himself; and he being convicted, it was moved, that this intent only was not indictable: but the Court to the contrary said, anciently the will was reputed or taken for the deed, in matters of felony; and tho' it is not so now, yet it is an offence and finable; and they fined him 1000 marks, 3 months imprisonment, and to find sureties of good behaviour during life.

Note, He pleaded by attorney, which the Court said he might do by the favour of the Court, though not by strictness of law: but the Court being moved to charge him in prison with other actions, they would not permit it.

WINNE against LLOYD.

No costs in error, where none in the original action. Strange 139, 262, 617, 834, 977, 1072, 1084. 1 Bac. Abr. 524. S. C. 1 Sid. 213. Raym. 16, 55, 70, 96, &c. Vide ante 72, 130.

Error of a judgment given for the plaintiff at the Grand Sessions in Wales, and the judgment affirmed (as before 72, 130). And now it was moved, that the demandant in the former action, (being the defendant in error) might have costs on the statute 3 H. 7, because the writ of error was sued in delay of execution. But by the Court, no costs shall be given on the writ of error, because no costs or damages in the original action, according to 1 Cro. Smithe against Smithe, Mich. 11 Car. 1.

But note, in 3 Cro. 616, 617, Graves against Short, entered Hill. 40 Eliz. Rot. 847, costs were given in error upon a formedon, and in the same book, 659, Penruddock's case, and 5 Co. 101, in error of a judgment in a quod permittat, 41 Eliz. costs were given in the writ of error, though none were in the original action.

[147] COREY against THINNE.

When an executor shall be charged in the debet and detinet on a devastavit or not. S. C. 1 Sid. 102. 1 Saund. 219.

Error of a judgment in debt given in the Common Pleas, entered in Easter term 1655, Rot. 844, where the plaintiff declared in the debet and detinet against an executor, and of a devastavit, and had judgment of the executors own goods, and the judgment was affirmed in B. R. And in Easter term 15 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 546, was the like case and the like judgment, in debt on a judgment, where the plaintiff recovered, and the defendant paid the money; and so in Michaelmas term, 20 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 740, a like case was in debt on a judgment by Wheatly against Lane, and the like judgment. But in the case of Ent against Withers, Mich. 29 Car. 2, B. R. in debt on an obligation, the count was devastavit against an executor in the debet and detinet, and it was ruled by judgment for the defendant, for the Court would not allow the action to go further than it had been before, viz. than in debt on a judgment; and so held the Court formerly in the time of Hale, in the case of one Horsey and Daniel.

RUTTER against HEBDEN.

Assumpsit to marry a woman. S. C. 1 Sid. 180. 1 Keb. 252.

Assumpsit in consideration that she would marry him he would marry her. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved, that it was a matter ecclesiastical on which no action would lie. But the Court would not permit it to be argued, but gave judgment for the plaintiff, see 7 H. 6, 1. Deceipt brought for not marrying his daughter according to the agreement; and held well, for the contract is temporal.

[148] ANONYMUS.

A power is to elect a jurate for life, if they think fit; he is not removeable at pleasure.

A mandamus to restore a jurate of Maidston; they return their incorporation, with power to elect jurates for their lives, if they think it expedient; and that they elected him, and afterwards it seemed expedient to them to displace him; wherefore they accordingly did so; and the return was adjudged insufficient, for tho' they had power to elect for life, if it seemed expedient to them, yet they had no power to displace or put him out of it, if it seemed expedient to them.

PROBY against THE MARQUIS OF DORCHESTER.

Scand' mag' for saying, I value him no more than a dog. S. C. 1 Sid. 233. 1 Keb. 813. 1 Com. Dig. 190. Stra. 618.

Error of a judgment in the Common Pleas in scandalum magnatum, for saying, I value my Lord Marquis of Dorchester no more than I value the dog at my foot: and the errors assigned were, 1st. That the words are not actionable within the statute, for they do not import any ill action done, or words spoken by him (i.e. the marquis) but only shews the esteem or value the defendant had for him. 2dly. The declaration is, that he said these false and opprobrious words of him, and does not say, lies, or false news or tales, as the statute speaks. 3dly. The judgment is in misericordia, where it ought to be a capiatur, the suit being as well for the King as for himself. But as to this last, the Court thought it sufficient, but they spoke nothing as to the two former, only adjourned it to be further argued. But afterwards before it came to be argued again, Proby was killed, and it was said, that the judgment passed without debate in the Common Pleas. But the executors, after Proby's death, paid the money, as the marquis himself told me.

[149] CORNHILL'S CASE.

Error lies in B. R. on a judgment in criminal cases in the same Court of Errors in fact or in law, and in civil cases in fact only. S. C. 1 Sid. 208. Q. 721.

Error of a judgment given here on an indictment in London, against him for seducing him into an ill house, and there cheating him of 300l. removed hither by certiorari; and it was objected, that the writ lay not here upon a judgment given by themselves, and cited Read and Dawson's case about two years before, where the writ of error on a judgment in an indictment of perjury in this Court was brought in Parliament: the Court said, that proves that it may be brought in Parliament, not that it must; and they affirmed their jurisdiction, that error may be brought in this Court in cases criminal on judgments given in the same Court: but now in cases civil, except it be of errors in fact triable by jury. But in cases criminal, as well of errors in law as in fact. And it was said by Twysden and Wyndham, and not denied, that error lies here of an attainder before the Lord High Steward: but the plaintiff in error ought to assign his errors in person.

COLLINS against SUTTON.

The plaintiff lays transitory matter in one county, the defendant cannot by plea carry it to another county. S. C. 1 Sid. 234. 1 Keb. 816.

Debt on an obligation at London, conditioned, that if such a ship did not miscarry in such a voyage, to pay, &c. The defendant pleads, that the ship miscarried at Falmouth in Cornwal. The plaintiff demurs, and judgment for him, for all this matter is transitory, and the plaintiff hath election to bring his action in which county he pleases, and the defendant is obliged to plead to all transitory matters, as this is, in the same county; for whether the ship perished in the one county or the other, it is all one: but if he had local matter to plead, he may plead it in the county where such local matter arose, and thereby bring the plaintiff to try it in another county, otherwise not, as 9 E. 4, 46, and Hill. 1655, Rot. 864, between Lenois and Williams.

[150] JASON against MORGAN.

Warrant of attorney amended.

A judgment was obtained forty years before, and no warrant of attorney to acknowledge satisfaction entered, till within these two years, and the entry was, He acknowledged himself about to be satisfied, instead of, he was satisfied; and the warrant being good, it was resolved to be amended, being only the fault of the clerk, and it was done accordingly.

JENKINS against KEYMIS IN THE EXCHEQUER.

Consideration of a former marriage extended to the second.
S. C. Hard. 395. Post, 237, 238.

Ejectment tried at Bar, and a special verdict, viz. Sir Nicholas Keymis tenant for life, and remainder to his son Charles in tail general, with a remainder over, they on the marriage of Charles with Blanch his first wife, and in consideration of the marriage, and 2500l. marriage-portion, levy a fine and suffer a recovery to the use of Sir Nicholas for life, remainder to Charles and the heirs of his body on Blanch begotten, the remainder to the heirs of the body of Charles, remainder over, with power for Sir Nicholas by deed in writing, to charge all and singular the premises with the payment of 2000l. After which, Sir Nicholas and Charles without recital of the power, by lease and release for 2000l. convey part to David Jenkins and his heirs, on condition to be void on the payment of 160l. at the end of the first year, and 160l. yearly for nine years after (being the interest) with the said 2000l. or of 2000l. and interest at the end of any year after the first year: Sir Nicholas dies, Blanch dies, Sir Charles marries a second wife, by whom he had issue the defendant, and dies; and the money not being paid, the lessor, son and heir of David Jenkins, brought ejectment. And two points were argued at the Bar by Levinz for the plaintiff and Stephens for the defendant, viz. 1st. If the conveyance by the lease and release be a good execution of the power? 2dly. If not, then whether the settlement be not voluntary and void against Jenkins the purchaser for 2000l.? And as to the first, It was said and agreed by the counsel, that the lease and release was a good execution of the power as to the form, tho' that the power is to charge by deed in the singular number, and this is done by two deeds. For [151] a condition to make a feoffment is well satisfied by a lease and release. Secondly, It was said and agreed, that notwithstanding the power be not recited, it may be a good execution of the power, as 6 Co. Cleer's case. And also it may be good notwithstanding Charles joined in the conveyance, and though it be only of part of the lands: but the principal matter in this point was, if this conveyance of a fee, redeemable on the payment, not only of 2000l. but also interest for a year certain, and also for more years if not paid at the end of the first year, be good; or if it be not good for the interest, it be good for the 2000l.? For it was said, that when a man performs his whole power and more, it shall be good for that which is within his power, and void for the residue. But as to this point Hale and the Court held, that it was not an execution of the power, for by this means he might charge all the estates with a great sum of money, which would defeat the whole settlement; and the power is intire, and so is the execution, and cannot be made good for part, and void for the residue at law: but Hale said, that perhaps there might be reason in equity to aid the execution, as to the 2000l. And he said also, that the power might have been better executed by a grant of the debt, till 2000l. were levied of the profits, or by declaration of a use till 2000l. were received, or by a deed charging the land with the payment of 2000l. But he doubted, that it could not be good by feoffment, or by lease and release of the inheritance, till 2000l. and interest were paid: and as to the second point it was said, that the settlement was meerly voluntary as to the issue by the second wife; for the marriage of the first, and the portion paid with her could not extend to the issue by the second wife; nor could it be supposed that any thing was given for it; for the estate as to the issue by the second wife, is no more than he had before; for the remainder before the marriage-settlement with Blanch, was to Charles, and the heirs of his body, which extends to the defendant without the settlement, and therefore it cannot be intended that the marriage-portion was paid for that which Charles had before; and then the settlement being voluntary, and the conveyance to Jenkins, made by Charles as well as Sir Nicholas; and the settlement being with a proviso to charge the lands with the payment of 2000l. it is voyd against Jenkins, a purchaser for a valuable consideration within the provision of [152] the statute 27 Eliz. c. 4, which makes conveyances with power to revoke, alter, or determine at their will and pleasure, void: but as to this the Court held, that this proviso for charging with 2000l. is not a power within the words of the statute, (it being a particular sum) to revoke, determine or alter the estate; and no fraud being found, they could not adjudge the consideration of the marriage and portion, might extend to all the estates in the settlement. And they gave judgment for the defendant.(1)

And note, that Jenkins afterwards brought his bill in Chancery to have the defect of the execution of the power supplied there, but could not have any relief.

JOHNSON against CARRE.

A covenant in the same deed, how pleadable in bar. 1 Danv. 722.

Debt for rent on a lease for years, the defendant pleads in bar a covenant by the lessor, that the lessee might deduct so much for charges: and upon demurrer it was adjudged, that the covenant being in the same deed, is well pleadable in bar, the thing being executory; and the party shall not be put to a circuity of action, viz. to bring an action on the covenant.

[153] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 16 & 17 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

ADAMS against TOMLINS.

Debt in B. R. on a judgment there, after error brought thereof in Cam. Scacc. S. C. Raym. 100. 1 Vent. 34. 3 Lev. 396. 1 Sid. 236. 1 Mod. 121. 1 Keb. 827.

In trespass 300l. damages were recovered, and judgment thereon; and error brought thereof in the Exchequer Chamber; pending which the plaintiff brought an action of debt in this Court for the 300l. And by all the Judges, except Kelynge, it well lies, for the record itself is yet in this Court, and the writ of error is a supersedeas of the execution only. See 4 H. 6, 31.

---

(1) Note, This cause was heard in Chancery, Pasch. 20 Car. 2, before Bridgman, who held, that the marriage and portion of the first wife extended to the issue by the second, and that Sir Charles joining with Sir Nicholas in the conveyance to Jenkins, and not reciting the power, it could not be intended to be done in execution of the power, but as owners, and therefore denied relief; although there was a covenant for further assurance, which Sir Charles might have made by recovery, but he not having done it, his issue shall not be compelled to do it. Vide post, 238, 239.

CORVEN OR CORBET against PIERSON.

Judgment in an Inferior Court for lose of an office, which does not appear to be within the jurisdiction of the Court. S. C. 1 Sid. 342. 2 Keb. 267. Vide Pasch. 22, Bernard v. Bernard, puis icy, pag. 289.

Error of a judgment given in Exeter Court in case, for that he being an officer of the Custom-House for the port of Exeter, the defendant falsly and maliciously at Exeter, within the jurisdiction of the Court, informed the commissioners of the customs there, that he took bribes, whereby he lost his office. After verdict and judgment for the plaintiff in Exeter Court, it was assigned here for error, that it does not appear that the office is within the jurisdiction of the Court, and the action lies not but for the special damage, of which the jury cannot inquire, if the office be not within the jurisdiction of the Court; but where words are [154] actionable of themselves, there the jury may inquire for the aggravation of damages of a matter out of the jurisdiction, as Taylor's case in 1 Cro. where by reason of words (that of themselves were) actionable, spoken within the jurisdiction, the jury may inquire for aggravation of damages of the loss of trade out of the jurisdiction. And for this reason the whole Court here, except Kelynge, held, that the action was not well brought, and that the judgment was erroneous: but Kelynge held the matter of itself actionable, it being found to be false and malicious: but it was adjourned, and so it depended till Mich. 19 Car. 2. And then after divers motions and arguments, the Court said, they would not intend the port of Exeter, to be out of the jurisdiction of the Court of Exeter, but within it, and affirmed the judgment.

BAKER against BERISFORD.

Administrator pays debts of the intestate, and does not say, with his own money. S. C. Raym. 58. 1 Sid. 76. Clayt. Rep. 116. 1 Keb. 285.

Debt for rent, as administrator of an administrator of a lessee for thirty years, who demised to the defendant for twenty years, rendering rent, and that the first administrator had paid debts of the first intestate, to the value of the term, on which the defendant demurs; because the plaintiff had not shewn that the first administrator had paid the debts with his own money; and it may be he paid them with the money of the first intestate, for which cause the Court held the declaration ill. But it being further declared, that he elected and took the term in satisfaction, the Court held it a strong implication, if not a plain averment, that he paid them with his own money: and thereupon in Easter term following, they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

[155] SHERWOOD'S CASE.

Record made of a confession in Court, &c. S. C. 1 Keb. 341.

He having forged the Chief Justice's hand to divers bails, and being brought into Court and examined, confessed it, of which confession a record was instantly made, and judgment given, that he should be set in the pillory three several days, at three several places, and appear at the Bar with a paper on his hat, shewing his offence; and this was done without information, only upon the record of his confession.

CLAPHAM against MOYLE.

Proviso to pay is a covenant. S. C. 1 Keb. 842, 860, 897.

In debt, he declares on articles indented, whereupon Clapham was upon the marriage of Moyle to receive the marriage portion of Moyle's wife, being 1500l. and that Clapham should convey an office to Moyle; provided, that Moyle out of the first profits of the office should pay to Clapham 500l. and avers that he had conveyed the office, and that the defendant had received 500l. out of the profits, but had not paid. And on demurrer it was adjudged, that the action brought on the proviso well lies, for this proviso is not by way of condition or defeasance, but by way of agreement to pay the 500l.

BOIS against NORLIFFE.

Matter which proves the writ abateable, not assignable for error, but matter which proves it abated, is. S. C. 1 Sid. 238. 1 Keb. 841, 850. 1 Stra. 492.

Error of a judgment in ejectment assigned, that the plaintiff after verdict, and before judgment entered; and it was argued by Weston, that it is not assignable, for nothing is assignable which proves the writ abateable, but only that which proves it abated, and cited 4 H. 6, 27. 8 E. 4, 19. 2 Cro. 303. 1 Bulst. 5, whereto Jones answered, that that is true, where the party hath time to plead it, but that he had not here after verdict: but by the Court, it is not assignable for the reason given by Weston, and they affirmed the judgment.

[156] STONE against WADDINGTON.

Judgment in an Inferior Court reversed, the goods not said to be sold within the jurisdiction. 1 Keb. 842.

Error of a judgment given in the Court at York, where the plaintiff declared, that the defendant being indebted to him at York, within the jurisdiction, for divers goods to him sold and delivered, did then and there promise to pay; and the judgment was reversed, for that it was not shewn where the goods were sold and delivered, and that may be out of the jurisdiction.

ERING against STREETE.

Hast stole lead out of my master's house.

Case, for saying to the plaintiff, Thou hast stole as much lead out of my master's house as is as big as a house; moved in arrest of judgment, that it might be lead fixed to the freehold: like the case in Cro. Thou hast stolen iron bars out of my master's windows, intended to be the iron bars fixed, and here it might be the covering of the house. But by the Court, it might have been so intended, if the words had been stole off my master's house: but the words being out of my master's house, it shall be intended lead there lying.

HARRIS against WILLIS.

Presentment to a church, intended to extend to institution and induction. S. C. 1 Sid. 239. 1 Keb. 844.

Error of a judgment in the Common Pleas, where the case was on the statute of 12 Car. 2, for confirmation of ministers, which establishes such as were in possession the 25th of December 1659. Provided that it should not prejudice such as were presented by the King before the 9th of December, 1659. And here the parson was presented by the King (before) but not instituted and inducted till after. And it was adjudged in the Common Pleas, that he being presented was within the proviso; and of the same opinion were Hyde, Wyndham and Kelynge; but Twysden not having read the Act, would give no opinion, because presentment is sometimes taken to present, institute and induct as a [157] grant of an annuity till he be presented, shall not determine till induction, which is the perfection thereof. But judgment was affirmed by the other three.

PRICE against PARKER.

Administration duly granted according to the statute, cannot be revoked without just cause. S. C. 1 Sid. 280. 1 Keb. 146, 854.

Debt for rent brought as administrator: the defendant pleads, that the administration granted to the plaintiff was debito modo revoked and granted to J. S. The plaintiff replies, that he was the next of kin to the intestate, and that he had sued an appeal from the said sentence, whereto the defendant demurs, and it was argued at the Bar in this term, and in Easter term following: and the principal point argued, was, whether the Ordinary having granted the administration to the next of kin according to the statute, could revoke it? And it was argued for the plaintiff, that when the Ordinary had granted the administration according to the statute, he had executed his power given him by the statute, and had nothing further to do in the case, 2 Rolle's Abr. 303, 27, 28, and 1 Cro. Fotherbie's case, and the same in Levein's case, Sty. 10, 74, 75, and Sir George Sand's case in this Court within two or three years last past: where the son of Sir George being dead, and the administration granted to him, it not being then known that the son had any wife. And afterwards the wife discovering herself, sued to repeal it, and was prohibited. But for the defendant it was said, that an administration was only a deputation, and in its nature always revocable; and that administration in this kingdom did originally belong to the Ordinary by the laws of the realm, and was not given to them by any statute, nor lost, as is supposed by 9 Co. in Henslo's case, and cited Selden's Titles of Honour, pa. 713, 714, and by their law they might have granted it to whom they pleased, and have revoked it when they pleased. And the alterations that have been made by statute are 31 Ed. 3, c. 11, which appoints the Ordinary to depute the next friends to the dead, and gives to them an action, which the person deputed by the Ordinary before could not have. Then the statute 21 H. 8 goes further, and directs, that it shall be granted to the wife, or next of kin, under a penalty; so that at this day, if they [158] grant it to any other, it is not void, but they incur the penalty only; and so it remains as it was before a power committed by the Ordinary, and revocable in its nature; and cited 3 Cro. 163,460. And. Rep. 303. 27 H. 8, 26, and Ow. 50, which cases are all since the statute 21 H. 8. Wyndham on the first argument held, that the Ordinary could revoke. Twysden held, that he could not without just cause, as if the administrator becomes lunatick, or where it was not duly granted at first; and the cause ought to be shewn to the Court, so that they might judge thereof: and it is not enough to say, that it was debito modo revoked, to which Wyndham replied, we ought to believe that their proceedings are just, till the contrary appears. Hyde, Chief Justice, held, that after administration granted according to the statute, it cannot be revoked without just cause, as lunacy; but whether the cause ought to be particularly pleaded, he said, would be the question. And it was adjourned; and afterwards in Easter term, Wyndham agreed, that the Ordinary could not revoke an administration granted according to the statute without just cause, and that the Court here is Judge of the cause; but after he is made by the Court there, this Court ought to intend it done upon just cause; and the party who will revoke an administration, ought by pleading to shew the cause, so that it may appear to the Court to be (granted) without just cause. And Kelynge and Twysden held, that the cause was to be shewn by the party who procured the revocation, so that it may appear to the Court to be revoked for just cause. But they both (all) agreed, that it might be revoked for just cause, as if it was unduly granted contrary to the statute at first, or if the administrator afterwards becomes disabled by lunacy or the like. But it was adjourned, and so it long depended; but, as I heard, judgment was afterwards given for the plaintiff, because by the appeal, the sentence of revocation was suspended.

And note, Justice Wyndham said, that the roll cited, whereon Coke grounded his opinion in Henslo's case, is 7 H. 3, where a writ was directed to the sheriff to seise the goods of an intestate into the King's hands, whereupon he collected, that administration belonged to the King. But (says he) that was only a prerogative writ to seise the goods of an intestate, who was indebted to the King, to the intent the King should be satisfied his [159] debt before others, as the law is at this day: but note also, that Lyndewode acknowledges the granting of administrations did not belong to the Ordinary of right, but that he only had it by the concession of princes. See the case of Offly and Best, hereafter, pag. 186, 187, and that of Ravenscroft against Ravenscroft, pag. 305. Hill. 22 & 23 Car. 2, B. R.

CLARKE against MOLINEUX.

A habeas corpus by justices of peace, to discharge one arrested in coming to the sessions. S. C. 1 Sid. 269. 1 Keb. 845. Raym. 100.

Case against the sheriff, for an escape upon mesne process: the defendant pleads a habeas corpus by the Duke of Newcastle, and other justices of the peace, at the sessions of the peace, to bring the prisoner before them, who for that the arrest was made on the person coming to the sessions, discharged him, because he ought not to be arrested in going or returning, &c. on which the plaintiff demurs; and Wyndham and Twysden inclined the privilege ought to be allowed, or else the King's business would remain undone. But by Kelynge, the justices of peace cannot grant a habeas corpus. And it was adjourned.

THE KING against THE CITY OF CANTERBURY.

Exemption of jury-men not to be allowed by the sheriff's return, but by the prayer of the party. S. C. Raym. 113.

Indictment for a riot there, being to be tried at the Bar, and the venire returned, on the distringas the sheriff returns a grant of King James I. That the citizens should not be returned to serve on juries out of the city, except in cases of treason. And it was doubted by the Court, whether such a privilege could come (in debate) on the sheriff's return, and it seemed not; but that the party when he comes in may excuse himself thereby. 30 Ass. 1. 18 H. 8, 5. And Jones of counsel with the city, seemed afterwards to agree thereto. But for another cause the return was clearly insufficient, viz. that he had returned the panel on the venire, whereby he admits them chargeable to serve; and then he cannot afterwards return a discharge from serving upon the distringas.

[160] EARL OF STAMFORD against NEDHAM.

On an elegit, the moiety of every part is to be delivered. S. C. ante 56. 1 Sid. 239. 1 Keb. 858.

By the Court, if the sheriff on an inquisition upon an elegit, returns the defendant to have twenty acres in Dale, and twenty acres in Sale; and delivers the twenty acres in Sale for the moiety of the whole, all is void; for he ought to deliver a moiety of the twenty acres in each vill; and this might be avoided in evidence in ejectment brought for the lands.

SWALLOW against EMBERSON.

An executor pleads another executor not named, not saying that he had administered. S. C. 1 Sid. 242. 1 Keb. 865.

Debt against an executor, who pleads that J. S. is co-executor with him not named in the writ, judgment of the writ, but does not aver that the other had administered; whereupon the plaintiff demurs, and the plea was adjudged ill. For although when an executor sues, the defendant may plead another executor not named, without shewing that the other hath administered, because he cannot know whether he has administered or not; yet when an executor is sued, if he pleads another executor not named, he ought to go further and say, that he has administered, for that lies in his own conuzance.

QUICK against COPPLETON.

A promise in consideration of forbearance, by one who is not liable. S. C. 1 Sid. 242. 1 Keb. 886. Post, 165.

Assumpsit. Whereas the defendant's late husband was indebted to the plaintiff, and she about to come to London, and being in fear to be arrested by the plaintiff, she promised him in consideration that he would not trouble her, and would forbear till Michaelmas, to pay, &c. After verdict it was moved, that she not being shewn to be executor or administrator, her forbearance was not any consideration, which was agreed by the Court: but the subsequent words forbear till Michaelmas, are distinct and general, not only to forbear her but all others, and makes a good consideration, whether she be liable or not; and they cited Heriot and Hinton's case adjudged, that a general forbearance is a good consideration, [162] whether the party promising be liable or not. But Kelynge at first doubted, that by the copulative et, all was one sentence; and that it was not only to trouble her, but also to forbear her till Michaelmas; but afterwards he agreed with the others; and judgment was given for the plaintiff. And Hyde Chief Justice held, that a forbearance to sue one who fears to be sued, is a good consideration; and he cited a case in the Common Pleas, when he sate there, where a woman who feared that the dead body of her son would be arrested for debt, promised in consideration of forbearance, to pay; and it was adjudged against her, though she was neither executor nor administrator. But of this the other Judges here doubted.

THE KING against APPROVED MEN OF GUILFORD.

Q. If a mandamus lies for one suspended from his office. S. C. 1 Keb. 868, 880. Raym. 152. 2 Keb. 1.

A mandamus to restore an approved man, they return certain scandalous words spoken by him of another approved man, for which being summoned before the mayor and aldermen in their Court, he said, that he would justify it; for which they suspended him: it was objected, that the return was ill, because not returned any power to turn out; and by the Court, it was ill if they had turned him out, but here he is only suspended: and by Hyde Chief Justice, and Kelynge, a mandamus does not lie for suspending, for the freehold still remains in him: but Twysden with his whole force to the contrary; for a suspension is a temporary amotion, and perhaps they will never discharge the suspension; and Wyndham being absent it was adjourned.

WILKINSON against BOULTON.

Custom for the custody of the orphans of London, pleaded. S. C. 1 Sid. 250. Raym. 116. 1 Keb. 868, 895. 2 Danv. 312, B. 3.

In trespass and imprisonment, the defendant justified by the custom of London, that the mayor and aldermen should have the custody of all male orphans till twenty-one, and of females till twenty-one or married, and of committing them to guardians; and any person taking them from the guardian, is to be brought to the next Court and to be imprisoned; and that the plaintiff took such an one an orphan, out of the guardianship of such an one, and was (thereon) brought to the next Court and committed in prison to the defendant. Whereupon the plaintiff demurs; and it was objected by Williams, that the plea was not good to take a man without notice of his crime, and to bring him to the [163] Court to be immediately committed; that he ought to have notice for what cause he was brought to the Court, that so he might be prepared to answer. But by the Court, this pleading, that he had committed the offence, and was convicted thereof (is sufficient), and the matter is criminal, for which every justice of peace may commit. 2dly. It was said by him, the custom is not good to commit without exception of peers. But by the Court, a peer is not privileged in this case, for in homine replegiando where he detains the body, he shall be committed, F. N. B. 68, C. 11 H. 4, 15 b. Wherefore judgment was given for the defendant.

AMCOTS against AMCOTS.

Issue on a dilatory plea tried by jury, is peremptory. S. C. Raym. 118. 1 Sid. 152. 1 Keb. 869, 900. Q. 2 Danv. 773, H. 3. V. ante 142.

Error of a judgment on a formedon in remainder, where the tenant pleads infancy, and that the remainder descended to him, and prayed his age. The demandant pleads, that the remainder did not descend to him, issue joined, and found for the demandant and judgment final, and that assigned for error. Argued by Serjeant Newdigate, that there ought to be a respondeas ouster; he agreed, that generally on an issue upon a dilatory plea judgment final ought to be given, but that infants were not to be within this rule, and he cited many authorities of the privileges of infants, but none that came up to this case. To whom Jones answered, the law is general, and if he would have infants excepted, he should shew a precedent thereof, L. 5 E. 4, 90. The law is general upon any issue joined. But see Fitz. Issue 14, Age 22. An issue joined on infancy tried by inspection, and a respondeas ouster; but in all cases when the issue is upon a dilatory, and tried per pais, the judgment is peremptory, otherwise it is in all cases where it is tried by demurrer, except it be in one only, and that is in the case of a demurrer upon evidence, where it is peremptory, because no respondeas ouster can be, because the parties are at the end of their pleading, L. 5 E. 4, 139. 2 E. 4, 10. And the reasons why judgment is peremptory on an issue tried per pais are, for that the delay is greater, and that issues of fact lie in the cognizance of the parties, but issues of law not. And the whole Court were of opinion, that the judgment ought to be final, and affirmed the judgment in C. B. except cause shewn, &c.

[164] GUILLAN against GILL.

Two executors are, the one dies, and then the other; and the executor of the first was sued in the Spiritual Court for a legacy. No prohibition where they proceed in an ecclesiastical matter although contrary to our law. S. C. Raym. 123.

A man makes two executors, one whereof makes his executor and dies, and afterwards the surviving executor dies intestate; a legatee sues the executor of the executor who first died, in the Spiritual Court for his legacy, who pleads this matter, which plea they refused, wherefore he prayed a prohibition, and it was denied; for the matter is testamentary. And perhaps the executor of the executor has all the goods in his hands, and is executor of his own wrong, and no other in the case to be sued for the recovery of the legacy. And tho' the survivor shall have all by our law, it is not perhaps so in theirs, and the matter belongs to their law; and if they proceed wrong, he ought to appeal, but they shall not be prohibited by this Court; and the prohibition was denied.

BUCKLER against ANGIL.

Assumpsit that he would be willing to pay. S. C. 1 Sid. 246. 1 Keb. 878. Raym. 123.

Assumpsit, and declares, that in consideration that the plaintiff would surrender a term, the defendant would be willing to pay 10*l*. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that here was no promise, and then non assumpsit was no issue to be tried; and so held the Court, and stayed the judgment.

[165] WIRRALL against BRAND.

Two executors sued in assumpsit, and one dies, the writ shall abate.
S. C. 1 Sid. 259. Raym. 131. 1 Keb. 906.

Assumpsit against two executors on the promise of a testator; issue non assumpsit, one executor dies, which is suggested on the roll, and the trial had against the other, and verdict for the plaintiff. And it was moved by Jones in arrest of judgment, that the bill was abated by the death of the one in cases of contract, but otherwise in cases of trespass, as 50 E. 3, 7. 40 E. 3, 26 b. Fitz. Brief. 263, 344, & Plowd. Com. 186 b. In case of executors sued on a contract, the death of one abates the writ.(1) But of this, in case of executors, the Court at first doubted; but at another day having seen the case in Plowd. 186, Woodward against Davis, which is directly in point, they resolved, that the writ abated and staid the judgment.

HUNT against SWAIN.

Consideration to forbear one not chargeable in assumpsit, not good; otherwise of a consideration to forbear in general. S. C. 1 Sid. 248. Raym. 127. 1 Keb. 890. 1 Danv. 57.

Assumpsit against the heir on a promise, in consideration he would forbear him till Michaelmas to pay, &c. After verdict, judgment was staid, because it does not appear, that the ancestor obliged himself and his heirs, and the consideration is not to forbear generally, but to forbear him who does not appear to be chargeable; and afterward the plaintiff perceiving the judgment of the whole Court against him, prayed a nil capiat per billam, with intent to begin de novo. And note, the case of the Lord St. Paul was cited to be adjudged contrary in the late times; but to that the Court gave no regard, and Twysden, who was of counsel in that cause, said, that it was then taken to be a hard case.

PRICHARD'S CASE.

By prorogation of the Parliament all their orders are determined.
S. C. 1 Sid. 245. Raym. 120. 1 Keb. 887.

On an habeas corpus for bringing him hither, it was returned, that he was taken by an order of the House of Peers for a contempt; and the House of Peers being prorogued, it was held by the Court, that their orders are all at an end, and every thing else before them, except writs of error and scire facias thereupon.

[166] ANONYMUS.

Promise to pay on collateral request, on non assumpsit, the request being traversable, is admitted.

Assumpsit in consideration the plaintiff would deliver to J. S. ten quarters of malt, to pay him for it on request, if J. S. did not do it; and says, that he delivered it, and that J. S. had not paid, and that such a day he requested the defendant, and that he had not paid: and at a trial in Middlesex before Twysden and Wyndham, the defendant would put the plaintiff to prove the request, but the Judges would not permit it, for the request was traversable, and not being traversed, is admitted, and (so) the issue arises solely on the assumpsit, the defendant having pleaded non assumpsit.

Note, Towards the end of this term, Hyde, the Chief Justice, died suddenly at his chambers in Serjeants-Inn; in whose place Kelynge was (afterwards) made Chief Justice, but not till Michaelmas term following at Oxford, the term being kept there because of the plague at London.

[167] TERM. SANCT. TRIN. ANNO 17 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

OPY against THOMASIUS.

Settlement of the reversion, with power to make leases in possession. Q. If a lease in present of a reversion expectant upon another lease, be a pursuing the said power. 1 Sid. 260. S. C. Raym. 132. 1 Keb. 778, 910. 3 Bac. Abr. 416, 417. Powell on Powers 412. Cowp. 260. 1 Term Rep. 705.

In ejectment, upon not guilty and a special verdict the case was, that one Rouse seised of lands in fee, made a lease for ninety-nine years, if three persons or either of them so long lived; and afterwards Rouse levied a fine of them to the use of A. for life, the remainder to B. for life; the remainder to C. in tail. Provided, that each of them might successively make leases for ninety-nine years, or three lives in possession, or for two lives in possession, and one in reversion; or for one life in possession and two in reversion: and that during the first term A. made a lease for life to the defendant, and that afterwards A. B. and C. levied a fine to the lessor of the plaintiff; and the first lease being determined, the defendant enters as upon the second lease, and the conusee of the fine entered, and let the same to the plaintiff. And two questions were made. First, If the second lease (A. and B. being dead) being now leased by tenant in tail, be pursuant to the power? Secondly. If not, then, whether the conuzee of the fine may avoid it as the issue in tail might have done? And it was argued for the plaintiff, that the lease was not pursuant to the power, for that was to make leases in possession, and the possession was demised before by the first lease, and so it is only a lease in reversion; and Thecomb and Hawkin's case in 2 Cro. was cited in point: and as to the second point, that the conuzee may avoid the lease as the issue in tail might have done; and a difference was taken, where tenant in tail did [168] an act which might be to the advantage of the issue, that is not void, but only voidable; but where the act cannot be of advantage to the issue; as if he grants a rent, or makes a lease without rendering any rent, it is void, Plowd. 436. 12 H. 8, 8, and then without doubt it shall not bind the conuzee, it being void in itself. And if it be not void, but only voidable, yet the conuzee may avoid it, as the issue might have done, Co. Litt. 46. Plowd. 437. But for the defendant it was said, if the settlement had been of lands in possession, then without doubt the power could not extend to make a lease in reversion; but the settlement being of a reversion, the power ought to be taken, to make leases in possession in præsenti of the reversion; for it cannot be supposed, that a tenant for life should expect to make a lease for life after three lives ended, who would probably survive him: and as to the second, the lease is not void, but voidable by the issue, by virtue of the Statute de Donis, which extends only in privity to the issue. Plowd. 424. Co. Litt. 46 b. and Kelynge inclined, that this lease was within the power, for the settlement being only of the reversion, a present lease of the reversion is within the same; and he held, that if it were not within the power, that yet it was not a void, but a voidable lease, and that the conuzee may notwithstanding avoid it as the issue in tail might. Wyndham and Twysden held, that the settlement being of a reversion, if the words of the power had been general to make leases, a lease of the reversion, or a lease in reversion had been within it: but the power here being expressly to make leases in possession, this lease in reversion is not within it; and they held it not void but voidable. And Twysden held, that the conuzee could not avoid it. But Wyndham held, that the conuzee might avoid it as the issue could: and they both observed the particulars of the power to make leases for two lives in possession and one in reversion, or one in possession and two in reversion; so that it appeared the whole scope and intent was not to have an estate above three lives in being at one time. But it was adjourned.

[169] JOHNSON against PIE.

An infant, q. if chargeable in an action for a false affirmation, whereby one is deceived. S. C. 1 Sid. 258. 1 Keb. 905, 913. 2 Danv. 770, pl. 14.

Case, for that the defendant being an infant, affirmed himself to be of full age, and by means thereof the plaintiff lent him 100l. and so he had cheated the plaintiff by this false affirmation: after verdict for the plaintiff on not guilty, and 100l. damages, 'twas moved in arrest of judgment that the action would not lie for this false affirmation; but the plaintiff ought to have informed himself by others, and cited Grove and Nevill's case, to be adjudged in this Court in Easter term 16 Car. 2, Rot. 400, where in case against an infant for selling a false jewel, affirming it to be a true one, 'twas adjudged the action did not lie: to which 'twas answered, that this is a trespass on the case, and an infant is chargeable for trespasses, though not for contracts. Kelynge and Wyndham held, that the action did not lie, because the affirmation being by an infant was void; and it is not like to trespass, felony, &c. for there is a fact done. Twysden doubted, for that infants are chargeable for trespasses, Dyer 105, and so if he cheat with false dice, &c. But 'twas adjourned.

But see 1 Keb. 905, 913. Judgment arrested.

LOE against BORDMORE.

Case does not lie for indicting one of a rescue. S. C. 1 Sid. 261. 1 Keb. 881, 915. Raym. 135.

Case for falsly and maliciously indicting one of a rescue, where he acknowledged he was not present at the rescue: after verdict for the plaintiff 'twas moved in arrest of judgment that the action did not lie for such an indictment which does not sound in scandal, but only in trespass; and if it should, it would be too great a discouragement to persons to prosecute for the King; but where the indictment sounds in scandal, as felony, &c. there it would lie: and Wyndham and Twysden Justices, being only in Court held, that the action did not lie, and stay'd the judgment. But Twysden said, that if the action had been laid more specially, viz. that the defendant knowing it to be false, did it purposely to vex him and to draw him into trouble, and to cause him to expend his money, perhaps the action had been maintainable.

[170] JEMMOT against COOLY.

A rent granted in fee, with a proviso that the grantee may enter and retain till satisfied out of the profits, he may make a lease to try title in an ejectment. S. C. Raym. 135, 158. 1 Sid. 223, 262, 344. 1 Saund. 112. 1 Keb. 784, 915. 2 Keb. 20, 184, 270, 295. 2 Bac. Abr. 172. 4 Bac. Abr. 362.

Ejectment, and on not guilty a special verdict was, that Drake seized of lands in fee granted a rent to Bovy in fee, with condition, that if the rent be arrear by twenty days after any day of payment, he or his heirs might enter and take the profits till he be thereof satisfied; the rent being arrear, he enters and demises to the plaintiff, and the sole question was, whether by the entry he had gained such an estate as thereof he might make a lease? And the case was argued at the Bar three times, viz. this term by Jones for the plaintiff, and Thursby for the defendant; and afterwards in Easter term 18 Car. 2, Nudigate for the plaintiff, and North for the defendant (for in Michaelmas and Hillary terms, nothing of moment was done because of the plague) and in Trinity 19 Car. 2, by Finch the King's Solicitor for the plaintiff, and

Maynard for the defendant: and at length the whole Court, viz. Moreton, Wyndham, Twysden and Kelynge then Chief Justice, delivered their opinions seriatim for the plaintiff. The objection for the defendant was, that the lessor by the entry gained only an estate at will, and so could not make a lease for years, and it could not be a freehold for want of livery, nor a term for years, for it is not for any term certain. And in an incertain interest of continuance whereof leases may be made, as the case of an elegit, or by will for payment of debts; but not by conveyances between the parties; and that it was neither a freehold nor a chattel, but a meer tenancy at will, and so determined by the entry of the defendant, were cited 37 H. 6, 26, and 4 Co. 30, as a case in point. See Bro. Leases, 67. 8 Co. 96. 1 Inst. 42 b. Plo. Com. 524. Fitz. Barr. 80, Done 200. But for the plaintiff it was argued, that it is not material what estate it is, for it is an interest in the land depending on the grant of the rent that makes it good and 'twas likened to Litt. sect. 327. A feoffment rendering rent, with condition on non-payment to re-enter and retain till satisfied is a good grant by intent of the parties; and yet there is no [171] livery by the feoffee to reconvey the land, nor no express grant, but only a condition to re-enter till he be satisfied, and 2 Cro. 510, Havergill and Hayes's case, a rent granted with clause of distress, and a fine levied to the use, that if it were arrear, the grantee should enter and retain till he be satisfied, but this was by way of use: and Trin. 14 Car. 2, in the Common Pleas, Edgar and Molins, a rent was granted with condition of entry upon non-payment, and to retain till satisfied as here; and in ejectment on a special verdict, adjudged, that a lease made by the party after entry, was good. But the counsel for the defendant said, that the case of Edgar and Molins was between father and son, and it might be good by way of use. But the plaintiff's counsel said, that Bridgman, Chief Justice, and the whole Court, except Browne, considered it only as a grant, and that it was as good in a grant as in the limitation of an use. And in Michaelmas the 19 Car. 2, the Court delivered their opinions. Moreton held, that by the entry the grantee gained an inheritance, which descended to his heir, and that a man might grant an inheritance (of an interest) in the land without livery; as vesturam terræ, 17 E. 2. 6 Hutt. 44. Fitz. Precipe 55, and Wyndham said, so he may grant the trees which are an inheritance (or inherent) in the land. But by Kelynge, Twysden, and Wyndham, the power of entry is an inheritance, and descends with the rent to the heir; but when entry is made, it is then no more than a chattel-interest in the land, which shall go with the arrears to the executors. And Twysden said, that if it was not for the words, and to retain till he be satisfied out of the profits, it would have been an inheritance in the land to remain in the heir as a penalty, but by reason of those words it is only a chattel, and shall go to the executors, who are the persons that are to be satisfied of these arrears: and they all agreed, that Havergill and Hayes's case, and Edgar and Molins's case cited by the plaintiff, did rule this case in point. And all the three justices held, that after entry they could not cut trees or commit waste, but only take the ordinary profits.

[172] NEWTON against SHAFTO.

A custom that if the father dies, leaving no sons, but two daughters, the eldest should have the estate for her life, &c. and that the wife should have it for life, a man dies, leaving a wife and two daughters, the elder dies in her mother's life, the second daughter shall have the estate for her life. S. C. 1 Sid. 267. 1 Keb. 925. 2 Keb. 111, &c. 2 Danv. 550, pl. 3.

In ejectment on not guilty, a special verdict found the lands to be customary, and held of the honour of Tinmouth; and that the custom of the manor was, that if the father died, leaving no son but two or more daughters, that the elder daughter should have it only for her life, and that after her death it should descend to the next heir male, who could derive thro' males; and for default of such it should escheat to the lord; and another custom, that if the tenant died leaving a wife, that she should have it for her life, and that the tenant here left a wife and two daughters, but no son; and that the wife entered, and the elder daughter died in the wife's life; and that afterwards the mother died, and that there was not any heir male deriving thro' males: and that the lord entered as in his escheat, on whom the second daughter entered, and leased to the plaintiff. And the case was argued at Bar this term; and two questions were made, 1st. Whether the custom were good? 2dly. If the second daughter not being the eldest daughter at the time of her father's death, could have the lands within the custom, altho' she was the only daughter at the time of her mother's death? And 'twas objected, that the custom was vain and unreasonable, to disinherit the heirs for want of heirs males, claiming by males; and they cited the custom of tanistry. But on the other side 'twas said, that all customs deviate from the common law, and such a custom might be good in those northern parts, to have males owners of land, in respect of the neighbourhood to Scotland: and they cited the custom of Taunton-Dean, that if the husband died seised in fee, his wife should have the inheritance, and might sell it. And if she married a second husband, he should have the inheritance. But it was said at the Bar, that that had been reputed to the custom, but was never adjudged and allowed. And afterwards in Hillary term, 18 & 19 Car. 2, Kelynge, Chief Justice, briefly delivered the opinion of the Court, that the custom, was good, and that the second daughter should have the land for her life within the custom, for altho' she was not the elder daughter at the death of the father, yet she was so at the time of the mother's death, and her estate made a continuance of the [173] husband's estate 'till her death, as in the case of free-bench: and they gave judgment for the plaintiff, being the lessee of the second daughter.

BAYLY against BUNNING.

Officer executes a writ on the goods of one who before that was a bankrupt.
S. C. 1 Sid. 173, 171. 1 Keb. 638, 930, 932. 2 Keb. 32.

In trover, on not guilty, a special verdict found, that J. S. did an act of bankruptcy the sixth of June; J. D. sued a fieri facias, tested the 4th of June, but really sued out the 11th of June; and by virtue thereof, the defendant, being a bailiff, took the goods, and afterwards a commission of bankruptcy was sued, and the goods were assigned by the commissioners to the plaintiff: and if the taking by the defendant was lawful, they find for the defendant, and if not, for the plaintiff. And two points were argued, 1st. That the goods were bound and subject to the commission by the act done, for the statute subjects all goods to their disposal, whereof no execution is sued and executed; and here the act of bankruptcy was done, not only before the execution executed, but even before the suing of the writ; and altho' by common law, the goods are said to be bound by the teste of the writ, yet that 'tis here in case of a statute, which gives the disposition of all goods, whereof no execution is sued and executed; and tho' in fiction of law, the writ is supposed to be sued at the time it bears teste; yet that shall not prevail against an Act of Parliament; but the word sued in the Act shall be understood actually sued. 2dly. The special conclusion here shall not hurt the plaintiff, but he shall maintain his action (notwithstanding;) for be it so, that the first taking by the bailiff was lawful, in respect that the writ shall be supposed sued according to the teste, which was before the act of bankruptcy done; yet the execution was afterwards, and therefore tho' the taking were legal, yet the detainer is illegal; and 'tis here found, that they were demanded of the bailiff and denied to be delivered, which makes the conversion; and trover will lie, altho' the party came lawfully to the goods at first, if he detains them afterwards; as Mo. 103, 2 Cro. 244, for the detaining of a pawn, and 1 Cro. Chapman against Allen for goods agisted; [174] so 3 Cro. 495, F. N. B. 169. Whereto 'twas answered for the defendant, that the teste of the writ is matter of record, and it cannot be said to be sued at any time after the teste. And suppose it might be said to be sued after, yet the bailiff shall be justified thereby, for he could not know what acts the bankrupt had done; and if he had known that, he could not know, whether any commission could be sued or not; and it is not any return for the sheriff to say, that the party is a bankrupt, and therefore he is to be justified by the writ. Wyndham said, that notwithstanding the suing of the writ, the goods are subject to the disposal of the commissioners. But he, Twysden, and Kelynge, all agreed, that the issue is found for the defendant, for the taking by him was lawful by virtue of the writ; and Twysden said, that the goods were bound by an act of bankruptcy committed, so that a sale in market-overt afterwards shall not bind the commissioners or their assignees. But he said, that whereas our books say, that the goods are bound from the teste of the writ, that is to be intended, when the writ is sued when it bears teste, and not if it be sued at any time afterwards; and by that means it shall avoid all sales made between the teste and the execution, as is often done at the end of a vacation, to sue out a writ tested the term before. And afterwards in Easter term, 18 Car. 2, judgment was given for the defendant, he being an officer, was obliged to execute the writ, who could not know of the acts of bankruptcy, or that any commission would ever be sued.

TRAVERSE against TWISTETON.

Arbitrators before their time expired, choose an umpire, and afterward they themselves make an award.

Debt on an obligation conditioned to perform an award, and upon demurrer, the case was, that they submitted to the award of A. and B. so that they made their award before the first of May; and if they did not agree, to the umpirage of such a one as they should elect, so that he made his umpirage before the said first of May: the arbitrators chose an umpire before the first of May, and afterwards the arbitrators themselves make the award in question before the first of May, and whether this was good, was the question: for 'twas objected, that by their choosing of an umpire they had determined their power, and put all matters in the power of the umpire. Twisden, Justice, inclined, that the award was [175] good, and cited Bernard and King's case, Style 306, Int. Pasch. 1751, Rot. 467, in this Court to be so adjudged: to which Jones of counsel for the defendant said, that this case is not like to that, because there the arbitrators and the umpire were both elected by the parties; but here the umpire is elected by the arbitrators, by which act they themselves have dismissed themselves from their authority. And Kelynge and Twysden being only in Court, 'twas adjourned.

THE KING against DUDENY.

Indictment at the sessions, not saying the King's sessions, quashed. S. C. 1 Vent. 39. 1 Sid. 247, 422.

An indictment was laid to be taken at the general sessions of the peace in London, and 'twas quashed, because not said at the session of the peace of the lord the King.

[176] TERM. SANCT. MICH. ANNO 17 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

Adjournment of the term, because of the plague. S. C. 1 Sid. 275. Vide post, 178.

Memorandum, That this term was adjourned from Westminster to Oxford, because of the plague viz. from the first return day, to octabis Martini, and so only the two last returns were held; and a proclamation issued, appointing all persons to keep their days then and there; and one Judge of each Court came the first day to Westminster, and there held the essoins and read the writ of adjournment, and adjourned the Courts to octabis Martini at Oxford; and at the essoin-day there, they only held the essoins, and did not sit in open Court till the quarto die post: and by the proclamation all judicial hearings in the Chancery, Exchequer and Dutchy, and all decrees were stayed; and in the King's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, no trials by jury, or judgments upon special verdicts or demurrer, were to be given.

ABBOT against WEEKLY, AT OXFORD.

[Followed, Hall v. Nottingham, 1875, 1 Ex. D. 3. Referred to, Mercer v. Denne [1904], 2 Ch. 552; [1905], 2 Ch. 538.]

Prescription for inhabitants to dance in another's ground at all times of the year.

Trespass for breaking his close; the defendant prescribes, that all the inhabitants of the vill, time out of memory, &c. had used to dance there at all times of the year at their free will, for their recreation, and so justifies to dance there: issue was on the prescription, and a verdict for the defendant, and to save his costs the plaintiff moved in arrest of judgment, that this prescription to dance in the freehold of another, and spoil his grass, was void, especially as it is laid, viz. at all times of the year, and not at seasonable times; and that 'twas also ill [177] laid in the inhabitants, who although they may prescribe in easements, as 6 Co. Gateward's case, and some other books are, yet they ought to be easements of necessity, as ways to a church, &c. and not for pleasure only, as this case is. Secondly, If it be good, it ought to have been laid by way of custom in the town, and not by prescription in the persons; and a case was cited, where 'twas so adjudged on a demurrer: but by the Court, this is a good custom, and it is necessary for inhabitants to have their recreation. And as to the second, that though perhaps it had been ill on a demurrer, yet issue being taken thereon and found for the defendant, 'tis good; and judgment was given for the defendant.

WALKER against HULL.

Executors bound by covenant of apprenticeship.

Covenant against an executor, on the covenant of the testator to teach an apprentice his trade: and after verdict for the plaintiff 'twas moved in arrest of judgment, that this covenant was personal to the testator, and did not oblige the executors, but only obliged the master during his life to teach the apprentice: but by the Court, it obliged the executors also; and they ought to see the apprentice taught his trade, and if they are not of the same trade, they ought to assign him to another who is of the trade, so that he may be taught according to the covenant: and they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

[178] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 17 & 18 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

Adjournment of the term, &c. writs, where tested. S. C. 1 Sid. 276. Vide ante 176.

Memorandum, That Hillary term was adjourned from Oxford to Westminster, and from thence to Windsor, because of the plague; and from Windsor it was adjourned to Westminster for the two last returns, the sickness being decreased at London: and note, all bills out of the King's Bench, commonly called bills of Middlesex, were directed to the Sheriff of Oxford instead of Middlesex; and all process bore teste at Oxford; although that at the end of Michaelmas term the writ of adjournment was read at Oxford, thereby adjourning the term to Westminster, from whence it was adjourned to Windsor; yet for that Oxford was the place where the Court last sate, the bills and writs were tested there, and the bills directed to the Sheriff of Oxford.

Note, Nothing was done this term worthy to be reported.

[179] TERMINO PASCHÆ, ANNO 18 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

SHEPPARD against PENROSE.

Prescription to pay less than a tenth part for tithes when good. S. C. 1 Sid. 278. 2 Keb. 2. 1 Rol. R. 419.

Prohibition for staying a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court for tithes of fish taken in the sea, and for tithes of corn, where the question was, whether the twentieth fish was payable in satisfaction of all fish there taken, and if the twelfth sheaf was payable in satisfaction of all sheaf-corn? And by the Court, tithes of fish are not due without custom, and therefore a custom to pay less than a tenth part may be good; but of corn the tenth part may be due of (common) right, and therefore a custom to pay nothing, is not good without other matter. But they granted the prohibition as to the whole nisi causa, with intent to hear what the other party had to say.

JOHN GROBHAM HOW against NORTON.

Assumpsit on a quantum meruit, if he permitted him to enjoy land. S. C. 1 Sid. 272, 150. 2 Keb. 8. 1 Danv. 29, 50, 22.

Assumpsit in consideration the plaintiff would permit the defendant to enjoy such lands, to pay him as much as he deserved, and that he permitted him to enjoy it three years, and that it was worth 10l. per annum. After verdict for the plaintiff, 'twas moved in arrest of judgment; 1. That it does not appear that the plaintiff had any title to the land. 2dly. If he had (title) that debt lies and not this action. But the Court held the contrary in both points, and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

[180] ROSSE against ROSSE.

Rent devised out of a term, if suable in the Spiritual Court. S. C. 1 Sid. 279. 2 Keb. 5. 3 Bac. Abr. 489. Cowp. 424. Ld. Raym. 86.

A prohibition was prayed to stay a suit in the Spiritual Court for rent devis'd out of a term; and rent devised out of lands, is not suable there, Dyer 151 b. 264. 2 Cro. 279. Hob. 265. Wyndham said, that the devise of the term itself is suable there; and for the same reason is the rent thereout. Kelynge and Twysden doubted, yet did not grant a prohibition, but ruled to stay proceedings till the other party be heard.

BROMWICH'S CASE.

A peer found guilty of manslaughter without reading. S. C. 1 Sid. 277. 2 Keb. 19.

The Lord Morly and Bromwich being indicted for the murther of Hastings, the Lord Morly was tried by his peers before the Lord High Steward, and found guilty of man-slaughter, and was dismissed without being put to his book, or burnt in the hand, according to the statute of 1 E. 6, c. 12. And now Bromwich being brought to his trial at the Bar of the King's Bench, the indictment was against the Lord Morly for the killing of Hastings, and against Bromwich for being present, aiding and assisting; and 'twas proved by one witness, that the Lord Morly killed Hastings, but that at the same time they were fighting, Bromwich made a thrust at Hastings, and thereupon the Lord Morly closed with him and killed him; and the depositions of two other witnesses taken before the coroner, which were now dead, were read to the same effect, as they were read before the lords on the trial of the Lord Morly, by the opinion of all the Judges of England. And it was proved, that when the quarrel was in the tavern, the Lord Morly said, If we fight at this time, I shall have the disadvantage from the heighth of the heels of my shoes, and that presently afterwards they went out into the fields, and Hastings was there killed; which was taken by the Court as a clear evidence of their intention to fight when they went out of the tavern; and the quarrel being only touching words, and they fighting within a little time after, it was held murther by the whole Court: for words cannot be [181] any excuse for the killing of a man, and there need not be the time of a night between the quarrel and the fighting to make it murther, but such time only as it may appear not to have been done on the first passion; and here it appears not to be done on the first passion, for the Lord Morly had considered the disadvantage of his shoes: and the Court directed the jury, that it was murther in Bromwich, being present and aiding, although the Lord Morly had been found by the Lords to be guilty only of manslaughter. But the jury acquitted him of the murther, and found him guilty only of manslaughter.

HATTON against MASCAL.

Two executors, whereof the one is an infant, the other of age, may sue alone.
S. C. 1 Keb. 150. 1 Raym. 98.

Error in the Exchequer-Chamber on a judgment in the King's Bench. The case was, a man having a judgment makes one of full age, and two infants his executors; he of full age proves the will, and he alone brings the scire facias, setting out the truth of the case, and has judgment; whereon error is brought and assigned, that all ought to have joined in the scire facias. But by all the justices, on advice with the civilians, it was no error, for the others cannot prove the will during their nonage; and the judgment was affirmed, for the execution of the judgment shall not be delayed till the infants come of full age.

And note, in Trinity term, the 31 Car. 2, B. R. Colborn against Right, the executor of full age alone, who had proved the will, brought an action of debt for arrears of rent, and this case being cited, judgment was for the plaintiff.

[182] GILPIN against COOKSON.

Dower of the 3d part of a mill, judgment to hold in severalty by metes and bounds, ill.

Error of a judgment in dower of the third part of a mill, of a kiln-house, and of two acres of land, where the judgment was to recover seisin of the third part of the aforesaid tenements in severalty by metes and bounds; and the error assigned was, that the judgment of the mill and kiln ought not to be by metes and bounds, Co. Lit. 32 a. and if it should be divided by metes and bounds, neither of the parties could use his part, but the whole must be used entirely, and the judgment ought to have been of the third part only, Co. Ent. 171, 175, 176, 181. Rast. Entr. 238 b. And afterwards the judgment was reversed.

[183] TERM. SANCT. TRIN. ANNO 18 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

WALSINGHAM against COMB.

Plea of non infregit conventionem ill upon demurer, tho' good after a verdict.
S. C. 1 Sid. 289. 2 Keb. 51.

Covenant on a conveyance of lands, where the vendor covenants, that he was seized in fee, and assigns a breach, that he was not seized in fee, and so had not performed his covenant. The defendant pleads, that he had not broken his covenant; and on the issue so joined, a verdict was for the plaintiff: and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that this was not any issue, it consisting only of two negatives, viz. that he was not seized in fee, and (so) had not performed his covenant on the plaintiff's part, and that he had not broken his covenant on the defendant's part: also, that the pleading is too general, and ought not to be allowed, for that he ought to answer particularly in covenant to the breach assigned: the Court at first doubted, but afterwards gave judgment for the plaintiff, for it is an issue argumentative and informal; for if he had not broken his covenant he was seized in fee, and if he was not seized in fee, he had broken his covenant, so that it is not wholly immaterial, and informal issues are cured by verdict, though immaterial issues are not.

See the case of Pitt against Russel in C. B. (3 Lev. 29) for the plea in covenant, where a breach was assigned in not repairing of houses and several other things: the defendant pleads he had not broken his covenant; the plaintiff demurs; and the plea was adjudged ill, because no good issue can be taken on two negatives; also this way of pleading is too general.

[184] POPHAM against WOOLCOTE.

Declaration good, tho' by the plea it appears no cause of action; yet being ill pleaded, judgment for the plaintiff. S. C. 1 Sid. 291. 2 Keb. 53.

Trespass for entering his close, and throwing down his hurdles fixed to his freehold: the defendant pleads that the place where, &c. is a common space (or open place) in such a town, and the place of a market there, and for that the hurdles were there fixed he threw them down; whereto the plaintiff demurs, and divers exceptions were taken to the plea; for which it was ruled to be ill: but then it was objected, that the action does not lie, because it appears that the place where is a common space, &c. and the erecting of hurdles there is a nuisance, which every man may throw down: but by the Court, this does not appear by the declaration, but by the plea which is ill; and the defendant has not pleaded it, and relied thereupon, but another matter which is not sufficiently pleaded; and they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

BROWNING against LITTON.

An executor defendant, pleads non assumpsit, and does not say who, yet good. S. C. 1 Sid. 292. 2 Keb. 57. Lex Testam. 409, 410.

Assumpsit against executors on a promise by the testator, who plead non assumpsit; whereon was a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff; and error was assigned, that it does not appear by the plea who did not assume, &c. for it is not pleaded that the testator did not assume, &c. The Court on the contrary said, it shall be intended the testator; for here is no charge of any assuming by the executor, but of the testator only: and Latch 125, Baker's case, was cited, where in debt against executors on the testator's bond, the plea of non est factum suum, it was adjudged, that suum shall be intended of the testator; and they affirmed the judgment.

[185] BOLLS against ATKINSON.

An abbot time out of mind held lands discharged of tithes, the alienee shall pay tithes, for it shall be taken as a personal prescription, and not a real composition. S. C. 1 Sid. 320. 1 Keb. 162. 2 Keb. 28, 60, 85, 162, 175.

Debt on the statute of E. 6 for tithes, and on nil debet a special verdict found, that the Abbot of Abingdon was seized in fee of lands, being a parcel of meadow in Oxford, in right of his house, and that he and all abbots, &c. his predecessors, time out of mind, held it discharged of tithes, and granted it to the College of All Souls in Oxford; and if the college should hold it discharged of tithes, as the abbot did, was the question. And it was argued for the plaintiff, that this prescription was personal, and that by the alienation it was determined; and that so it would be if he had aliened to another ecclesiastical person, tho' capable of the pernancy of tithes, as 25 H. 6, 56, 57, the case of the Hospitalers, and much more when aliened to a lay person not capable of tithes; and they also cited 1 Cro. Sidonne against Holms, Hob. 5, 296, 297, 248, 309. Co. 2 Rep. 46, 47. 2 Cro. 58, Cornwallis against Spurling, Bridgm. 32, 33. And here they shall not be intended to be discharged by any real composition, not being pleaded to be so. But on the contrary it was argued, that the land and the tithes might be granted to the abbot before the Council of Lateran, for before that council a man might grant his tithes to what ecclesiastical person he would. Selden's History of Tithes, 306, 307, 351. 7 E. 3, 5. 44 E. 3, and this abby was founded by King Ina before the Conquest, and he might have the lands and the tithes by purchase, and hold them by way of real composition, which differs from personal discharges by way of bull, order, &c. which are personal, 1 Cro. Morant against Commins; and a college is capable of an appropriation, and so is spiritual as to the taking of tithes, 7 E. 3. Quare Impedit 19. 5 Co. 10, of an union, 6 H. 7, 13. 10 H. 7, 19. 11 H. 4, Dyer 255 a. of which no lay corporation is capable. And it was argued twice, viz. this term, and in Hillary 18 & 19. In which term after the second argument, the Court took time till another day in the same term, when the opinion of the Court was delivered by the Chief Justice Kelynge alone, as a case wherein they clearly all agreed, that it cannot be intended a [186] discharge by a real composition, it not being pleaded nor found by the jury to be so; but was a meer prescription, and personal to the abbot, and did not run with the land. And judgment was given for the plaintiff.

OFFLEY against BEST.

Administration, if granted according to the statute, cannot be revoked without cause. S. C. 1 Sid. 293, 370. 2 Keb. 63, 72, 83, 208, 240, 392, 420. Ante 127. 2 Show.

A prohibition was prayed wherein the case was, a man died intestate, leaving a sister married to Offley, and a brother, viz. the defendant Best. Best enters a caveat, after which Offley, pending the caveat, it not being expired in point of time, procures administration to be granted to his wife without notice to Best, for which cause Best appeals, and Offley prays a prohibition, and the Court granted it, that the plaintiff should declare thereupon, so that upon a demurrer the matter might be solemnly argued, which was done, and is entered Mich. 18 Car. 2, Rot. 169, where all this matter appears upon the record; and afterwards in Easter term 19 Car. 2 it was first argued at the Bar, and afterwards in Trinity the 20th, by all the Judges, viz. Moreton, Wyndham, Twysden, and Kelynge Chief Justice. And three questions were moved at the Bar: First. Whether the Ordinary after administration committed according to the statute, might revoke it without any cause at his pleasure, or if not, whether he might for cause? Secondly, Whether the granting it pending the caveat, be a good cause to revoke it? Thirdly, If that be a cause or not, whether this Court ought to judge thereupon, or leave it to the delegates before whom the cause depends? And as to the first it was agreed by all the four Judges, that where the Ordinary has granted administration according to the statute, he cannot revoke it without cause, because the grantee has an interest in the goods by the statute, which the Ordinary cannot take from him without cause; but for a good cause they all seemed he might; as if the administrator becomes lunatick, &c. whereby he is disabled to administer. As to the second point Moreton, and Wyndham held, that the granting thereof pending the caveat, was a cause to revoke it; and they said, that the Ordinary had original power to dispose of intestates goods by the ecclesiastical law of the land, and it is not derived from the Crown by Act of Parliament; and denied that which is said to the contrary in 9 Co. Hensloe's case, but the Act of Parliament only directs to whom it shall be granted; but when it is granted, it is in its nature [187] revocable as before, but not without cause, by reason of the interest, which the grantee has therein. And as to the third point, they said, that the Judges Delegates are the proper Judges thereof, and of what validity the caveat shall be according to their law; and it seemed to them, that it is as a supersedeas in our law; and as a judgment given after that in our law is erroneous, so it is in their law after a caveat; but be it so or not, it is to be judged by the Delegates, who are proper judges of this manner of proceeding in their Courts touching a matter ecclesiastical, which belongs to their Courts, and not to this Court, which is not apprised of their forms and manner of proceedings; and therefore they held the prohibition to be ill grounded, and that a consultation should be granted. But Kelynge, Chief Justice, and Twysden, as to the second and third questions, were of a contrary opinion; and they denied that the Ordinary had original jurisdiction touching intestates goods, but that it was derived from the Crown, for they have no such jurisdiction in other countries where the canon laws are of more force than here. And whatever power they had touching the probate of testaments, yet it is certain they never had any power of granting administrations, but that which is given to them, is given them by the statute; for an administrator was never heard of before the statute of E. 3. And as the statutes appoint them to grant, so they ought to grant them as the statutes appoint; and if they will not, a mandamus lies out of this Court to compel them to grant them according to the statute; and it would be in vain to command them to grant them, if when they had so done they might repeal them again at their pleasure. And they said, that the caveat is of no force to hinder the grant of the administration, for it is not a judicial act of the Court, but only an entry of a memorandum by a clerk in Court, for the giving of a caution, and is not any record of the Court. And this Court are as well judges thereof as the Delegates, and so died the Court in Hutchins and Glover's case, 2 Cro. 463, and so they held that no consultation ought to be granted; and the Court being divided therein, and the prohibition being granted before, the delegates remainded prohibited as they were before.

[188] RUSSEL against HADDOCK.

Consideration that one who had a letter of attorney to receive a debt would forbear, good. S. C. 1 Sid. 294. 2 Keb. 75, 80. 1 Danv. 45, pl. 23 & 47, pl. 11. N. Lut. 280.

Assumpsit against an executor, that whereas J. S. had a judgment against the testator, and had made a letter of attorney to the plaintiff to recover and receive it to his own use; the defendant, in consideration that the plaintiff would forbear execution thereupon, promised to pay him. The defendant demurred on the declaration, supposing that it was no good consideration; for altho' the plaintiff, who was but attorney, did forbear, yet the plaintiff himself in the judgment might sue execution. To which it was answered, that the plaintiff having authority to receive it to his own use, it shall not be intended that the plaintiff in the judgment would sue execution, for it shall be intended that it was assigned to the plaintiff in satisfaction of a debt; and a case between Pitts and Bridgwater in Hillary 1650 was cited to be so adjudged; and so held the Court here, and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

HUSSY against PACY.

A servant knowingly made his master break his covenant. S. C. 1 Sid. 298.

Case, that whereas he had covenanted with J. S. not to import such goods; the defendant being his servant, knowing thereof imported the said goods, whereby he broke his covenant, and was sued thereupon by J. S. who recovered damages against him. After verdict for the plaintiff on not guilty, it was moved, that the declaration is not sufficient to maintain the action, seeing it is not said, that the servant did it with that intent to damnify the plaintiff. But by the Court, seeing that the servant knew the covenant, and did it deceitfully and maliciously, as the declaration is, and the plaintiff is thereby damnified, he shall recover, let the servant intend what he will; and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

[189] THE KING against GOFFE.

Amendment of an information of perjury. 1 Salk. 47, 50. 2 Burr. 758. 2 Hawk. P. C. 348.

It was moved to amend an information of perjury, and it was ruled, that they should give notice of the things to be amended to the defendant, and he to shew cause why it should not be amended; for the Court said it might be amended.

HAWES against CORNWALL.

Tithes of wood above twenty years and of pollards. S. C. 1 Sid. 300. 2 Keb. 90. 2 Danv. 592, pl. 12, 13.

By the whole Court, wood usually cut for firewood, though permitted to grow till twenty-five years or more, shall pay tithes; and by Wyndham, pollards of fifty years growth shall pay tithes when felled.

[190] TERM. SANCT. MICH. ANNO 18 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

COTES against WADE.

A que estate in a term pleaded in a stranger, and not in those by whom the party claims. S. C. 1 Sid. 297. 2 Keb. 87, 96. 3 Lev. 19.

Debt for rent, and counts, that A. being possessed of a term, granted him a rent out of it, which term by mesne conveyances is come to the defendant. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the plaintiff had not shewn how the term came to the defendant, and a man cannot plead a que estate of a term, because it cannot be gained by disseisin as a fee may, nor by occupancy, as a freehold may, but by mesne assignment (or conveyance) which ought to be shewn how, as 3 Cro. 22. But by the Court, one may plead a que estate of a term in a stranger (generally) because he cannot know his title, but not in himself, or in those under whom he claims: and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE against WRIGHT.

Discent as heir, not shewing how good on a general demurrer. S. C. 1 Keb. 110, 114.

In trespass, the defendant makes a title to J. S. and that he died seized, and that it descended to himself as heir, on which the plaintiff demurs generally; but by the whole Court (except Wyndham) it is only form, and it not being specially demurred on, it is amendable.

[191] BUTCHER against VANE.

Condition of an obligation to appear at the Court, and make appear that he had common; that he was prepared to make appear, but that the steward hindered him, is not sufficient. S. C. 1 Sid. 313. 2 Keb. 118. 2 Danv. 89, pl. 10. 5 Co. 23. Cro. El. 716, 864. Salk. 180.

Debt on obligation conditioned, that whereas the plaintiff had distrained the sheep of the defendant in such a place where the defendant claimed common, in consideration the plaintiff had delivered the sheep to the defendant, if the defendant did appear at the lord's court, at the next court to be held for the manor, and there make appear that he had common there, the obligation to be void. The defendant pleads that he did appear at the next court, and was there prepared, and did offer to make it appear, but that the steward refused to permit him to make it appear; upon which the plaintiff demurred, and had judgment; for the defendant had taken upon himself, not only to appear at the next court, but also to make it appear, and he is at his peril to procure the steward to admit him to make it appear, as 5 Co. Lamb's case; and the same day in a like case between Harding and Vane, the same judgment.

JONES against POPE.

The Statute of Limitations not pleadable for escapes or tithes. Debt for escape, not shewing the judgment, ill. Discontinuance after argument. S. C. 1 Sid. 305, 415. 2 Keb. 93.

In debt for an escape, the defendant pleads the Statute of Limitations, whereon the plaintiff demurs; for that statute is not pleadable in this case, it not being debt on any lending or contract, as the statute speaks, but is founded on a tort, as an action of debt for tithes, wherein it was said, the statute had been often times adjudged not to be pleadable: but then an incurable fault was espied in the declaration, which counts only on the writ and the escape, but omits the judgment; whereupon the plaintiff prayed leave to discontinue, which was granted, tho' after argument; for the sheriff shall not go unpunished or escape for a fault in the declaration.

[192] BENNET against PILKINS.

A traverse by et non, and a formal traverse afterward. S. C. 1 Saund. 20, 21, &c. 2 Keb. 94, 105.

Debt on an obligation, conditioned to appear on a bill of Middlesex, returnable die Sabbati prox post quinden' Pasch. The defendant pleads, that he was arrested on a bill returnable die Veneris, and pleads the statute of 32 H. 6, and that the bond was given for ease and favour: the plaintiff replies, that he was taken on a bill returnable die Sabbati, and not die Veneris. The defendant rejoins, that he was taken by virtue of a bill returnable die Veneris, absque hoc that he was taken by virtue of a bill returnable die Sabbati: the plaintiff demurs. And it was argued by Wylde and Pemberton, that the rejoinder was ill, and a traverse upon a traverse; for when the plaintiff replied that he was taken by a bill returnable die Sabbati & non die Veneris, the et non die Veneris was a traverse, whereon the defendant might have joined and taken issue. Jones and Saunders on the other side argued, that the et non, &c. was not any traverse, at least not a formal traverse, or such as the books mention that a traverse cannot be taken upon a traverse; and to have joined issue on the et non die Veneris, would have made an immaterial issue; for it matters not whether he were taken by virtue of a bill returnable die Veneris or not; for if he were not arrested on a bill returnable die Sabbati, the bond is void by the statute: but if he were taken on a bill returnable die Sabbati it is good, and for that only is traversable and triable; and so held the Court, and ruled judgment for the defendant nisi, &c. Whereupon the plaintiff prayed leave to discontinue, whereof the Court would consider: and afterwards for that the defendant would not agree to accept an issue on the traverse, nor put in bail on the original action, the Court gave leave to the plaintiff to discontinue, notwithstanding the demurrer had been argued.

[193] DRING against RESPASS.

An ill traverse, that the Court was held coram majore according to custom. S. C. 1 Sid. 229, 302. (2 Sid. 40.) 2 Keb. 107, 251, 122, 125, 152, 160.

Debt, and declares on a judgment obtained the first of May, in the 14th of the now King, before the Mayor and Bailiffs of Norwich, at a Court then held according to the custom of the city aforesaid. The defendant pleads, that the Court there according to the custom, &c. is held before the mayor, absque hoc that he recovered at the Court held the said first of May, before the mayor and bailiffs, according to the custom aforesaid: whereupon the plaintiff demurs, and it was argued for him, that the traverse was ill in traversing a matter of record, which is not to be tried per pais. And also in joining the matter of the custom with that which is matter triable per pais; but he might have pleaded nul tiel record, which would have made an end of all; or that there was not any such custom, and have tried it per pais: but on the other side were cited Hob. 244. Hutt. 20, 21, and issue and verdict, and judgment. But Kelynge, Twysden and Moreton, held it ill, it being on demurrer, otherwise if after verdict, as the cases cited are. But Wyndham held that it could not be good here, because by this traverse he had made the day parcel of the issue, and the other Judges agreed with him, that that was a fault. But as to an exception taken to the declaration, viz. that it was not good, because he declares as administrator on letters granted by the archdeacon, and does not say Ordinary of that place, nor that it belonged to him of right to grant it: the Court held it good in case of the archdeacon, as well as in the case of the bishop, for the archdeacon is oculus episcopi; and by Twysden, the declaration is good, without saying Ordinary of that place, because he produces the letters of administration; otherwise in a bar.

[194] CUTLER AND PASTE against SOUTHERN AND HALKER, IN THE EXCHEQUER-CHAMBER.

S. C. 1 Saund. 116. Nelson Lutw. 129.

Debt on an obligation dated the 8th of March, 16 Car. 2, conditioned, that whereas the plaintiffs at the request of the defendants, were obliged with them for the payment of 100l. to Thomas Cook, on the first of May next following; to save the plaintiffs harmless: the defendants plead, that they saved the plaintiffs harmless: the plaintiffs reply, that before the sealing of this bond, viz. the first of October, 16 Car. 2, they became bound to Cooke with the defendants for payment of 100l. at a day now past; and for that the 100l. was not paid at the day, Cooke sued them at law on the said bond, and endeavoured to arrest them, viz. 12 Feb. 18 Car. 2, at London, in the parish of Bow, so that they could not go about their business: the defendants rejoin, that they had no notice thereof, and that if they had had notice, they would have saved him harmless; whereupon the plaintiffs demur. And now it was first objected for the plaintiffs, that the plea of saving harmless, not saying how, was not good; otherwise if they had pleaded non dampnificatus, which was agreed to be no good plea if it had been specially demurred upon: but by the Court, it seems good on a general demurrer, but that is now vain by the replication over. But then three exceptions were taken to the replication. First, That it is not positively said that the money was not paid, but only eo quod, or for that it was not paid; but this exception was overruled by the Court, for eo quod it was not paid, is as affirmative as et quia the rent was arrear in avowries, Co. Entr. 122 b. In debt for rent, et quia the rent was arrear, the action accrued; so the word licet in The Bishop of Sarum's case, and in all assumpsits on collateral promises to pay on request, licet such a day and place he requested, is an affirmation and traversable: a second exception to the replication was, that it is, that before the making of the said writing obligatory, viz. the said first of October, 16 Car. 2, the plaintiffs were obliged for the defendants, and that they were sued for the non-payment of the 100l. due on this bond; where the first of October 16 Car. is after the eighth of March 16 Car. for he began his reign the thirtieth of January, and so the breach is assigned [195] for suing on an obligation made after the counterbond, and that the counterbond cannot extend to any thing that was not in esse at the time of the making of the counterbond: but to this it was answered, and on deliberation after divers arguments resolved by the Court, that the words ante confectionem scripti obligatorii, were sufficient, and the scilicet repugnant and void, and that as well in case of a demurrer as after verdict; and for this were cited 5 Ass. 6. 20 H. 6, 14, 5, which were before any of the statutes which cure jeofails by verdict, the first whereof was the statute of H. 8, and 3 Cro. 368, on demurrer after the Statute of Jeofails. A third exception to the replication was, that it is not shewn in what Court, or how it was shewn, and this is matter of record, and therefore the proceedings ought to be shewn, whereto nul tiel record might be pleaded. Whereto it was answered and resolved, that well and true it is that so it ought to be; but the intent thereof is to have it triable, and in this case there needs no trial, for by the rejoinder it is admitted as for a plea, that he had no notice thereof, which admits that he was so sued; but that he had not notice thereof, which is as strong as if he had said, that well and true it is that he was sued, and that if he had had notice thereof, he would have saved him harmless. And a difference was taken, where the plaintiff makes title by his replication, and it thereby appears that he has no title, no rejoinder can by any admittance or implication make it good; but where he makes title, tho' he does not plead it in such a manner as he ought, especially in point of the trial, the rejoinder admitting this matter, and tendering an issue of another matter, makes it good, and to prove the first part of the difference were cited 8 Co. 120 b. 133 b. 7 E. 4, 31. 2 Cro. 133. 3 Co. Bridgman's case, 5 Nicholl's case, 6 H. 7, 10 b. And to prove the first part of the difference were cited 22 E. 4, 2, 3. 3 Cro. 320, 708, 903, 917. And the plaintiffs had afterwards their judgment by the whole Court, and the defendants paid the money without more ado. Levinz for the plaintiffs, and Saunders for the defendants.

[196] CHEALDLE against MILLER.

Want of levant and couchant, ill on a general demurrer, but cured by verdict. S. C. 1 Sid. 313. 2 Keb. 12, 108, 120.

In replevin, an avowry was for damage feasant: the plaintiff in bar prescribes for common to two acres of land, and that for using thereof he put in his beasts. The defendant demurs generally, and the bar was adjudged ill, because not said, that the cattle were levant and couchant; and it was said to be so adjudged between The Lord Say and Young, 14 Car. 1, altho' it was doubted in Stone and Musselton's case, if it were not good without a special demurrer: and the Court held here, that it was ill without a special demurrer; but they agreed it was cured by verdict.

COURTNY against PHILPS.

The Court cannot take notice of return-days in moveable terms as to the days of the month. S. C. 1 Sid. 196. 2 Keb. 108, 109, 122. V. 2 Mod. 60.

Debt on obligation, dated 14 June, 17 Car. 2, conditioned to appear die Veneris in tres Trin. ad respondend' Edwardo Prideaux: the defendant pleads the stat. 23 H. 6, and that the party was arrested the 13th of June, and detained in prison till the 19th of June, and that dies Mercurii in tres Trin' was that year on the 14th of June; and that after the 14th of June, viz. the 19th of June, he made the obligation; absque hoc that he made it the 14th of June, or at any time before the 19th of June, on which the plaintiff demurs, and the traverse was adjudged ill; for it ought to have been, absque hoc that it was made before the day of the writ; for of the day of the month on which the return of the moveable terms is, the Court is not obliged to take notice.

HALL against PLANNER.

Churchwardens may take the hat off the head of one who sits there covered during divine service.

Trespass for a battery: the defendant justifies as churchwarden, for that the plaintiff being in the church in the time of divine service, and sitting there with his hat on his head, and refusing to take it off his head, upon request; the defendant took it off his head, which is the same taking, &c. whereon the plaintiff demurs; and it was adjudged that the justification [197] was good; for although the churchwardens may present this in the Ecclesiastical Court, yet they are not bound in the meantime to permit such irreverence and indecency in the church.

MIDDLETON against SHELLY.

A statute without a defeasance, good, if money proved to be paid.

Thomas Shelly 43 Eliz. entered into a stat. of 100l. to Rose Langworth; and afterwards 43 Eliz. he entered into another stat. to Middleton; which was for an assurance of the manor of D. to him for money by him paid: but no defeasance was of this stat. Thos. Shelly being indebted to Sir John Shelly, mortgaged the manor of D. to Sir John Shelly. And Rose Landworth 43 Eliz. extended her statute, and thereby continued possession for a long time, till it was satisfied, but kept on foot by assignments. Middleton preferred his bill to be let in after Rose Longworth's statute, and before Sir John Shelly's; which bill was then dismissed. Three or four years afterwards, Sir John Shelly purchases the equity of redemption of Thomas Shelly: and Middleton now brings another bill to be let in upon Sir John Shelly: and though it appears, that Sir John at the time of the purchase of the equity of redemption had notice of Middleton's statute; yet the whole Court denied to relieve him on this bill. And resolved, 1st. That although there was not any defeasance on the statute to Middleton, who had made a statute, not to find any relief in Chancery, and was decreed in Foster and Peacock's case, in the time of the Lord Keeper Coventry; yet it here appearing that the money was paid, that supplies a defeasance, and so it was an agreement to have the manor conveyed to him for the money; and so Bonham Norton's case, was decreed in the time of the same Lord Keeper Coventry; and also that after a decree before execution, the parties making an agreement in writing, which one of them afterwards would not stand to; the Court would not permit him to take advantage of the decree, which he had waved by the agreement but set aside the decree, and compelled him to perform the agreement. And it was agreed by all the Barons, that although Middleton had once extended his statute on an infant, which was void; yet the extent being void, he was relievable in this Court: and [198] it was in like manner agreed, that though for a great part of the time there was infancy in this case, so that he could not extend the statute, yet he might have sued in equity, during the infancy, to have relief, although he could not have extended the statute at common law. But seeing he had done it, but had sate still near fifty years without seeking relief in equity, by reason of the antiquity of the statute, and long forbearance, they would not relieve, but dismiss this bill. And they said, that in some cases the conusee of the statute should be relieved against a purchaser, by taking in prior incumbrances, and in some cases not: and the difference did depend on the circumstances, as in this case.

JOHNSON against ASTELL.

Assumpsit to pay that which is before due, without any other consideration, is good. S. C. 1 Keb. 155, 156. 1 Danv. 67, 68.

Assumpsit, on issue non assumpsit, and a special verdict, the case was, Astell being an officer of the Custom-House at Newcastle, and Johnston and Fell merchants, and that the custom to be paid for rye, when the price does not extend beyond 32s. per quarter, is 4s. And that Fell and Johnston had imported several quantities of rye, and a question being between the plaintiff and defendant, what the custom did amount to, and what sum Fell had paid, the defendant in consideration that the plaintiff would pay to the defendant 100l. which was less than in truth the customs did amount to, did assume, that if Fell had not paid more, the plaintiff should pay no more, and that Fell had paid no more than 100l. yet the defendant had caused the plaintiff to be disturbed by the commissioners to pay more, and that he was by them compelled to pay more. And now it was argued by Weston, that here is not any consideration for the promise, for he had not paid more than he ought, and which was due; and a promise in consideration to pay that which is due, and which he is compellable to pay, is not any consideration for raising an assumpsit. 2*dly*, The consideration for paying less than what was due, and that he should cheat the King as Fell had done, and that by agreement with the King's officer, was a void contract and agreement. But by the Court, as to the first payment without suit, [199] or trouble of that which is due, is a good consideration. Secondly, Acceptance by the officer of less than is due, and agreement by the officer, that the merchant shall not pay more, is a good contract between the officer and the merchant; for the officer shall answer to the King for the residue out of his own purse.

Quære of this point.

[200] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 18 & 19 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

Executor confesses judgment in debt on simple contracts, and then pleads them in bar of assumpsits. S. C. 1. Sid. 332. Vaugh. 100. 2 Keb. 110, 120, &c. to 217.

Indebitatus assumpsit against an executor, for divers wares and merchandizes sold and delivered to the testator; the defendant pleads several judgments in actions of debt, specified due by the testator on simple contract, recovered against himself by non sum informatus prout patet per seperalia recorda inde, which are yet in force; and that he has not assets beyond such a sum, which is not sufficient to satisfy the judgments, and that he remains charged with them: on which the plaintiff demurs, and the case was argued at the Bar in Michaelmas term, and also in this term, and the Court took time till Easter next, and then judgment was given by the whole Court for the plaintiff. And two exceptions were taken to the pleading. First. The conclusion prout patet per seperalia recorda inde the said several judgments, where he ought to have concluded so to each severally; but as it is pleaded it makes a complicated issue: but by the Court, it is well enough, and it shall be taken as relating to each severally, and the plaintiff might have replied nul tiel record to each severally. Secondly, It is not said that the judgments were had pro veris & justis debitis, as is usual, and as especially in this case it ought to be, because the judgments here are by non sum informat' in actions of debt, which lies not against executors, and so has the appearance of collusion. But by the Court, it is well enough, for it shall come by plea from the other side, for if it were not pro veris debitis, the plaintiff [201] might plead it and put the defendant to prove the truth of them, or he might plead fraud and covin, and put the defendant to prove the consideration. Thirdly, It was strongly argued for the defendant, that actions of debt do not, lie against executors on a simple contract by the testator; and therefore they who admitted judgments against them in such actions, should not have the advantage of pleading those judgments which they might reverse when they pleased, and which no other could avoid or reverse, in bar of just debts; for by such means when they barred the plaintiff of his debt, they might afterwards reverse those judgments, and so either relinquish or take back again the money to their own use. And to this opinion did Kelynge the Chief Justice incline upon the first argument in Michaelmas term: but afterwards in Easter term following, he and Twysden and Wyndham, and Moreton, all agreed, that judgment should be given for the defendant; for though they might have abated the actions, yet if they had so done the plaintiffs might have charged them in other actions on assumpsit, and so put themselves to a double charge, which they are not to be obliged to do when the debts are true and just, and in their conscience ought to be paid; and if they were not such, the plaintiff might by pleading have put them to prove the truth of the debts, either by pleading the fraud or traversing the truth of the debts, wherein if they failed the plaintiff should recover his debt; and so there is no room for the suspicion, that the plaintiff should reverse the judgments and retain the money: and the old books which held, that actions of debt did not lie against executors on simple contract, held also, that there was no other remedy: but the law is now otherwise, viz. that although debt on simple contract cannot be recovered against an executor by action of debt, yet it may by assumpsit. Jones and Levinz for the plaintiff, and Baldwin and Raymond for the defendant.

[202] GEARY against BEARECROFT.

[See S. C. Carter, 57.]

Tenant for another's life, makes a lease for years in trust for himself for life, and after in trust for his wife, and dies, who shall be the occupant, the lessee or the wife? S. C. 1 Sid. 346. 2 Keb. 148, 250, 285. Cart. 57. 3 Peer. Will. 262. 2 Bac. Ab. 272. Cruise on Fines 287.

Error of a judgment in ejectment in the Common Pleas, where the case upon a special verdict was, tenant for another's life makes a lease for years in trust for himself for his life, and after in trust for his wife for her life: the lessee for years actually enters, but permits the husband to enjoy it, he dies, his wife enters: and whether she or the lessee for years should be occupant, was the question. And it was adjudged in the Common Pleas against the opinion of Bridgman, that the wife should be the occupant. And thereupon error was brought and assigned in the very point, that the lessee should be the occupant; for the husband being but a cestuy que trust, was tenant at will to the lessee, and by his death the estate at will determined, and the estate actually revested in the lessee, who had once entered and been in the actual possession, so that he might maintain trespass before any actual re-entry, the law having cast the possession upon him by the death of the tenant at will; and 3 Cro. 182. Dyer 326 b. 2 Cro. 200, 554. Litt. sect. 71, & Co. Litt. 62 b. were cited. And to this opinion Kelynge and Moreton inclined upon the first argument. But on the other side were cited 2 Bulst. 11, Chamberlain and Ewen, Litt. sect. 82. Keilw. 159, 165. That the wife should be the occupant: and to that opinion Twysden and Wyndham inclined on the first argument. And afterwards in Michaelmas 19 Car. 2, Moreton changed his opinion, and by him, Wyndham and Twysden, (Kelynge being absent) it was ruled for affirming the judgment nisi. They agreed, that the lessee might maintain trespass before the entry, for by the death of the husband the tenancy at will was determined, and the estate revested in the lessee so as to maintain trespass before a re-entry by the possession, which the law casts upon him. But it is one kind of possession for bringing trespass, and another to make an occupancy, for none may be an occupant but he who occupies and has the possession in fact: and this case was put and agreed, if tenant for another's life makes a lease for years to begin from his death, and a stranger enters, although the stranger be occupant for the freehold, yet the lessee for years shall enter upon him, and [203] shall hold it for his term, and the lease shall bind the occupant. See 3 Cro. 182 according.

THE KING against WETWANG.

Indictment for taking certain fishes called carp fishes, not shewing the number, good. 2 Keb. 178. Burr. 336, 1233. Stra. 198, 1127. 6 Com. Dig. 355. Hawk. P. C. 332.

Indictment for taking out of his pond certain fishes called carp fishes, being of the goods and chattels of J. S. And an exception was taken thereto, that it is not said what number of fishes he took, which is ill in indictments, as well as in actions, 5 Co. Playter's case; 'tis ill in actions, and indictments ought to be more certain than actions, or at least as certain, that so the defendant may know to what he is to answer. But Kelynge and Wyndham over-ruled the exception (and said,) In actions, damages are to be recovered, not in indictments, but the party is to be fined at the discretion of the Court, be it one fish or more, according to the circumstances of the fact, and not according to the number of the fishes. Twysden to the contrary, that indictments ought to be as certain as actions. But (Moreton being silent) the other two ruled the party to plead to the indictment.

FELTHAM against THE EXECUTORS OF HARLSTON IN CHANCERY.

Lands devised to be sold for payment of debts, goods in the hands of executors shall not be contributory, otherwise of administrators. 1 Chan. Rep. 16, 129, 249. 2 Chan. Rep. 167, 155. 1 Chan. Rep. 199, 277.

In this case 'twas said by Serjeant Fountain to have been resolved in this Court, and now admitted by the Master of the Rolls, he being only in Court, to be reasonable, that if a man devises lands for payment of his debts, and makes an executor, and leaves a personal estate, that no part of the personal estate shall go to the payment of the debts, because by the making of an executor, the testator's intent appears, that the executor should have the goods, for that the testator had made another provision for the payment of his debts. But if a man disposes of lands for the payment of his debts, and after dies intestate, the personal estate shall be chargeable in the administrator's hand to the payment of the debts, for thereby either the most part of the land remains unsold for the benefit of the heir, or the most part of the money for which the land was sold, shall remain to the heir, and no intent appears that the administrator shall have any thing.

[204] GARDNER against FULFORDE.

A quantum meruit among other things for four gilt pellices for pelles. 2 Keb. 154, 172.

Assumpsit, that whereas the plaintiff being an upholsterer, had made for the defendant, amongst other things, a pair of hangings, and had provided for him inter alia quatuor pictas pellices Anglice gilt skins the defendant promised to pay so much as he should deserve, and had not done it. After verdict for the plaintiff, 'twas moved in arrest of judgment, that a pair of hangings is uncertain, not shewing what kind of hangings, silk, tapestry, or what, and Webb and Washburn's case was cited in Michaelmas 1655, in Style's Reports. But the Court over-ruled this exception, because the action here is only for the making of them, and not trover to recover the value in damages. 2dly, That quatuor pictas pellices, is four painted whores, (and pelles is the word for skins;) and the providing of them for the defendant is unlawful. And for this cause, the damages being entire, the judgment was staid on Levinz's motion for the defendant.

CHAPMAN against SOUTHWICKE.

Promise if he would permit him to enjoy a house as Lodge did, to become his tenant as he was, a good promise to pay the rent. S. C. 1 Sid. 323. 2 Keb. 182.

Assumpsit, that where the plaintiff's husband was seised in fee of such a messuage, and had made a lease thereof to Lodge, and afterwards devised the reversion to the plaintiff; and that Lodge dying, the house was empty and locked up. And the defendant pretending a title thereto under Lodge, promised to the plaintiff, that if he would consent, that he should enjoy it as Lodge had it, that he would become his tenant as Lodge was, and pay the arrears; and that he consented, and the defendant enjoyed, and had not paid so much due for rent, part before the promise, and part afterwards. After verdict for the plaintiff, 'twas moved in arrest of judgment, 1st. That here is not any consideration; for it does not appear that the plaintiff had the possession whereof to permit the defendant to have the enjoyment; nor that the defendant had any title, but that he so pretended. 2dly, That the promise to become his tenant as Lodge was, was not any promise to pay the growing rent; and for that he ought to have declared in debt on the lease, as assignee of [205] Lodge. But by the Court, as to the first, the permitting him to enjoy it by the devisee of the reversion was a good consideration, whether he had a title under Lodge or not; and if he had no title, it is the stronger consideration. 2dly. The promise to become his tenant as Lodge was, extends to pay the growing rent, as Lodge ought to have done, and the action will lie on this express promise, notwithstanding there be a lease.

LYMBE versus HOCKLY.

He got the pox of a yellow-haired wench, actionable.

Case for saying of the plaintiff, He has got the pox of a yellow-haired wench in Moorfields. After verdict for the plaintiff, 'twas moved in arrest of judgment, that saying, one has got the pox, is not actionable, because not scandalous, it being intended the small-pox, 4 Co. 17. But 3 Cro. 214, laid of the pox is actionable; and so is rotted of the pox, 3 Cro. 648, because intended the French pox. But by the Court, it being here said, that he had got them of a yellow-haired wench, 'tis actionable; for wench in common speech is taken for a whore, and therefore it shall be intended the French-pox. And Twysden and Moreton held, that so it would be, if the words had been, that he had got them of a yellow-haired woman.

JENKINS against DE LA GRANGE.

Court of Marches in Wales, where they may hold plea of damages under 50l. or not. S. C. 1 Sid. 323. 2 Keb. 183.

A prohibition was prayed to the Court of Marches in Wales, to stay a suit there by bill for words, and tho' the damages are laid to be under 50l. and they have power by their instructions to hold plea, where the damages are under 50l. yet that is to be intended in such actions, wherein they have used to hold plea; and not in actions whereof they have not used to hold plea; and it was said, that no precedent could be produced where they ever held plea in the time of Queen Eliz. King Jac. 1, or Cha. 1, in any case where the whole was to be recovered in damages uncertain; for that would be to make a new jurisdiction, for the Court there to be the Judges of the damages by bill, answer, and proofs of witnesses without a jury; and so held the Court: but if any precedents could be produced in time of E. 6, or H. 1, Eliz. or Jac. 1. That they had held such pleas, that was to be allowed as by usage on the statute of H. 8, and their instructions; and gave time to search for precedents till Trinity term; and then the Court not being satisfied on their moving of it again, the Court held their former opinion, and said further, that they could not hold (plea of) actions in covenant or assumpsit, where the whole damages is uncertain; but in covenant or assumpsit to pay a certain sum, they may hold plea under 50l. And day was given over till Michaelmas term to search precedents, and then being not satisfied, they ordered the plaintiff to declare, so that it might be determined on a demurrer.

[207] STIRKE against BATES.

A matter shall be tried in the county where the issue arises on the new statute. and not where the action is laid. S. C. 1 Sid. 325. 2 Keb. 187, 212, 216, 1 Danv. 456.

Debt on obligation, and lays the action in London; the defendant demands oyer of the condition, which was to perform covenants in an indenture, which was, that where the Earl of Northampton had granted to Bates, Shrob-walk, in the forest of Whittlewood in this county, and the soil and ground of the said walk, and all fees, &c. Bates by the said indenture granted it to Stirke, and appointed him keeper and covenants, that he should enjoy it; and the defendant having so set out the indenture, pleads performance of all covenants generally: the plaintiff replies, that the Earl of Northampton having title by virtue of a grant to him made before the title of the defendant, entered upon him and ousted him: the defendant rejoins by protestation, that the earl did not enter, for plea says, that the earl had no title: the plaintiff surrejoins, that the earl had title, and so issue is joyned and tried by a venire facias from Shrob-walk, and verdict for the plaintiff. And now 'twas moved in arrest of judgment, that a walk in a forest is not such a thing of which a venue may be taken; 'tis not certain what it is, and it cannot be intended a vill, it being only collaterally alledged in the record as a thing granted, and not as a place wherein a thing is to be done; and in truth is no more than a liberty or office within a forest; and the venue ought to have been either of the forest or of the body of the county. And held by Kelynge, Twysden, and Moreton: First, That a walk in a forest is only a liberty or office whereof no venue can arise. But hereof Wyndham doubted if it had been alledged as a place where a fact was done; but being only alledged as a thing granted, and not a place where a fact is supposed to be done, 'tis not; whereto the other Judges agreed. But secondly, It was held by the Court, except Twysden, that it being tried by a jury of the county where the matter in issue arose, it is within the new Stat. 16 & 17 Car. 2, of Jeofails, which although it says, that it shall be good if it be tried by the county where the action is laid, yet it is to be understood within [208] the county where the matter in issue arose; for it would be to destroy the whole law touching juries, to try it in a county foreign to the issue, which cannot know any thing thereof; and the rather, for that the statute says further, that in such and other like cases, &c. And (therefore) here, although the action is laid in London, yet it is well tried in the county of Northampton, where the thing in issue is. But Twysden to the contrary, it is not within the words, and the statute being a new law, is not to be taken by intent contrary to the words: but by the opinion of the other three, judgment was given for the plaintiff; on which the defendant immediately brought a writ of error, but afterwards the parties agreed, and the defendant gave the plaintiff satisfaction for the breach of the covenant. Levinz for the plaintiff, and Serjeant Wylde for the defendant.

PIGGE against GARDNER.

The Court of Ely is as a Superior Court. 1 Sid. 331.

Errors were assigned of a judgment in Ely Court, First, For that in the style of the Court it is not shewn whether it be held by charter or prescription. Secondly, The judgment is consideratum est, and not said per Cur.: Thirdly, The writ of inquiry of damages is, per sacramentum duodecim, &c. and not said proborum & legalium hominum: but all the exceptions were over-ruled, for it being a Royal franchise, it is not as in case of Inferior Courts: and afterwards this same term in another case between Peacock and Bell, in error of a judgment in assumpsit in Ely Court, it was assigned, that it was not said, that the goods for which the action was brought, were sold and delivered within the jurisdiction of the Court; and yet the judgment was affirmed, because it is not as in case of Inferior Courts.

[209] NORFOLKE against ELLIOTT IN THE EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

The serjeant at arms of the House of Commons not within the statute 23 H. 6. S. C. Raym. 62. Hard. 464. 1 Sid. 384. Post, 254. Ante, 86. 2 Lev. 103. 1 Saund. 61, 318. 1 Vent. 237. 1 Sid. 838.

Debt on an obligation of 500l. dated 18th July 13 Car. 2, conditioned, that if Wogan, now prisoner in Tenby, renders himself prisoner to the plaintiff, serjeant at arms to the House of Commons in Parliament, according to the resolves of the House of Commons, to be void. The defendant pleads the statute 23 H. 6, and that Wogan was one of the regicides guilty of the murther of the late King Charles I. And that the House of Commons being informed thereof, and that he rendered himself to the said House of Commons, according to an order by them before made, they resolved: that he should be taken into custody by their said serjeant; and that the plaintiff being serjeant, took him into custody the 27th of July; and that afterwards, the said 28th of July, the obligation was made for ease and favour for delivering him out of custody. On which the plaintiff demurs, and on argument it was resolved by Hale and the whole Court, that the serjeant at arms to the House of Commons is not an officer within the statute of 23 H. 6, which extends only to officers who have execution and return of the ordinary process of law, and therefore the serjeant to the council of the marches was not within it, as 1 Cro. Car. 309, Johns and Stratford's case. But 2dly. It was resolved, that although it is not within the statute, yet he being in custody for treason, and that appearing upon the record, the obligation taken for his enlargement, was void by common law. See F. N. B. 66. That no homine replegiando lies in such a case. 2 Inst. 42, 43, it is not bailable except in B. R. 4 Inst. 179. Bailing of one not bailable, is a negligent escape. Dy. 324. A bond for ease and favour to one in execution, is void at common law. Hob. 14. 2 H. 4, 9. A bond to deliver goods taken in withernam, is void; and Plowd. and 2 Leon. 107, the statute pleaded, and the bond adjudged void by the common law: and judgment was given for the plaintiff. Levinz for the plaintiff, and Turnour for the defendant.

[210] CANNON against ABBOT.

Want of an original not cured, where in an action against three, the verdict is against the plaintiff as to one, and judgment by default against the other two. Three join in an action, and judgment against the plaintiff as to one, and for him against the others, they may bring error.

Error of a judgment in trespass, where the action being brought against three, one pleads not guilty, and thereupon issue and verdict for the defendant; and judgment by default, and a writ of inquiry and damages against the other two, and on the judgment for the first defendant, and the judgment for the plaintiff against the other two, they only bring a writ of error, and assign the want of an original; and which although there be a verdict in the case, is not cured by the statute, the verdict being for the first defendant, &c. and so set out the case; and so it is as if the action had been brought only against the other two. But if the verdict had been for the plaintiff against the first defendant, this had been aided by the statute; for the want of an original as to all the parties is cured when any verdict is for the plaintiff: and although the writ of error be brought by two without the third, it was argued to be good because he cannot be joined, for he being acquitted, and the judgment for him, he cannot say that the judgment is to his damage; and so held the whole Court, except Twysden, who held, that the writ of error ought to have been brought by all three.

BUTLER against HEDGES.

Trespass for taking goods 1 Aprilis, with a continuando till 1 Junii. S. C. 1 Sid. 319.

Error of a judgment in trespass in the Common Pleas, where the plaintiff laid the trespass the first of April, of the taking of ten loads of wheat, ten loads of barley, ten loads of oats; with a continuando of the said trespass, from the said first of April to the first day of June. And the error was assigned in this, that the trespass being laid that he took them the first of April, and so all at one day, the continuando was ill; for what was done the first of April, cannot be done at another day afterwards. But he ought to have declared of so many loads taken and carried at one day, and so many at another, &c. and divers authorities were cited to this purpose; and among others the case of Whitchcote and Elliot in this Court, Mich. 16 Car. 2. In trespass for laying logs of wood in his land the first of April, continuando till the first of May, and for this judgment was arrested. But (notwithstanding) [211] upon view of the book, 21 H. 6, 20, the judgment was affirmed; and it was said, that even in the case of Whitchcote, judgment was afterward given for the plaintiff: but it was agreed, that for the doing of a single act, which is to be done all at one time, as killing a horse, &c. there the continuando is ill. But of divers things which may be done at divers times, as here, although that the trespass be at first laid to be done on the first day, the continuando shall make a distribution thereof, that part was done at one day, and part at another within the time (declared of); and the judgment was affirmed.

ALANSON against BUTLER.

A comittitur is to be pleaded prout patet per record', otherwise of writs. S. C. 1 Sid. 330. Nels. Lutw. 402, 405. 2 Jon. 21. 2 Keb. 189, 206. The sheriff permits a voluntary escape, the plaintiff may have a new execution.

A scire facias for execution of a judgment: the defendant pleads, that he was taken on an execution on this judgment, and brought to the Bar, and acknowledged to be in execution, and afterwards was voluntarily permitted by the sheriff to escape. On which the plaintiff demurred and had judgment: 1. For that he did not conclude the committitur prout patet per recordum, for it is matter of record, and ought to be so pleaded: but writs need not to be so pleaded, though they are matters of record, because they may be amiss, and perhaps were never returned. 2dly. That a voluntary escape by the goaler without the plaintiff's assent, shall not prejudice the plaintiff, but that he may bring a new execution; as 1 Cro. Mounson against Clayton, and Robinson against Clayton; and so it was adjudged in this Court, Mich. 19 Car. 2, between Simpson and Hunt: but Trin. 21 between Crane and King, it was doubted, and the Court divided in that case, which see entered, Pasch. 20 Car. 2, in the Common Pleas, Rot. 865.

Devise of part of the lands to A. for life, and another part to B. for years, and then devises all his lands not devised, the reversion passes. S. C. 1 Saund. 180. 2 Keb. 206, 207, 224. Cro. Ejectment, and a special verdict; Robert Keepe seized of Spains-Hall, settles part thereof on his daughter for life; and afterwards by will devises the house to his wife for a year after his death; and then devises all his lands, not settled or devised, to Thomas Keepe, habend' to him and his heirs, after a year after his death, and after the death of his daughter; and dies: the year after his death is expired, and the daughter is yet alive, and she brought the ejectment for the house, and whether it lies during the daughter's life, was the sole question argued at the Bar; for it was admitted, that although the devise be of the lands not devised or settled, and no of the estate not devised or settled, yet the reversion will pass by the devise of the land, although the land itself was settled and devised before; and it shall be taken for the residue of the estate in the land. And it was resolved, that the estate of the house should pass immediately after the year after the (daughter's) death ended, and should not tarry till both parts of the copulative are determined, viz. till after the year, and after the death of the daughter, but shall be taken distributively, viz. that the house should pass immediately after the year ended, and the residue after the death of the daughter; and Gilbert and Wittie's case, in 2 Cro. 655. 3 Cro. 199, and Wyndham's case in 5 Co. were cited.

PEMBLE against STERNE.

Bishops lands not demised for the most part of the last 21 years, if they may be demised afterward. S. C. 1 Sid. 316, 416. Raym. 165. 2 Keb. 213, &c. 1 Danv. 752, pl. 5, 754, pl. 8.

Ejectment, and special verdict: the Archbishop of York seised in 1604, made a lease rendering the ancient rent; in 1630 this lease was surrendered, and the land remained unlet till 1662, when the archbishop made a lease thereof to the lessor of the plaintiff, rendering the same rent which had used to be reserved thentofore, when it was demised in 1604, and dies; the now Archb. Sterne enters, and makes a lease to the defendant [213] his daughter, against whom the plaintiff brought ejectment. And the only question argued at the Bar this term was, whether the lease made in 1662, the lands not having been demised before, since 1630, was good within the statute 32 H. 8, it not having been demised nor any rent reserved for the greater part of twenty years before the making thereof? And afterwards in Hillary 19 & 20 Car. 2, it was argued at the Bench by all the Judges, and Kelynge and Twysden held the lease good; for the intent of the statute was to preserve the revenue only, which shall not be diminished against the successor after the statute, and here the most ancient that could be known is reserved, and probably the very rent which was reserved at the time of the statute, or more: and if it be not demisable, when it has been undemised for eleven years, it would be in the power of the predecessor to do a prejudice to the successor by retaining the land in his hands for eleven years; and so enforcing the successors for ever after to keep the lands in their own manuring, which would be a great inconvenience: also for these last twenty years, during the war and the King's expulsion, great part of the bishops lands have been unletten, and by this means they would never be demisable again, if the law should be so: but Wyndham and Moreton held the contrary, that it not having been demised for eleven years (the greater part of the twenty-one years before) it is now demisable again; and cited Co. Litt. and 3 Cro. 707. Mallett against Mallett; and Harper's Reports, Sir John Manning's case. And if it be a mischief, it ought to be remedied by Act of Parliament, and not by the Court here. But afterwards Hillary 20 & 21 Car. 2, Wyndham being dead, Kelynge and Twysden gave the rule for judgment for the plaintiff (the record not being transmitted to the Exchequer-Chamber, as was intended and directed) nisi. And afterwards it was shewn in order to stay judgment; 1. That the ejectment is among other things de pannagio, whereof an ejectment does not lie, for pannagium is but a privilege of taking pannage. And 2dly. It is of the fourth part of a meadow, not shewing the number of the acres the meadow contains. And thereupon the judgment was staid.

Return of a rescue, where it is to be out of the sheriff's custody, and where out of the bailiff's. S. C. Raym. 161. 1 Sid. 332. 2 Keb. 217.

Exception taken to the return of a rescue, because it is, that they rescued the prisoner out of the hands of his bailiffs, where it ought to be, out of my custody, where the arrest is made by the sheriff's bailiff; otherwise where it is from the custody of a bailiff of a liberty, who has the return of writs, for there it ought to be extra custodiam ballivi libertat' who has the return of all writs, &c. And for this were cited Sty. 417. 3 Cro. 781. Dy. 241. Latch, 184, and of this opinion was Kelynge, Chief Justice: but Twysden and Wyndham on the contrary, said, there is veritas facti, & veritas legis; and here the return is of the verity of the fact, which is as well as the verity of the law, viz. his own custody; and each of those ways is good. 2dy. It is not returned, that they rescued themselves, or, who rescued them? 3ly, It is not expresly said, that they were in the bailiff's custody, but only by implication, viz. that they were rescued out of the bailiff's custody; and for these two the Judges agreed, that it should be quashed, and so it was.

[215] TERM. SANCT. TRIN. ANNO 19 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

KEIGHTLY against BUCKLY.

An assignee assigns over. Q. If discharged from paying the rent without the lessor's acceptance? S. C. 1 Sid. 338. Raym. 162. 2 Keb. 260, 277. 2 Lev. 295.

Debt was against an assignee for rent for three years, due at Lady Day, 1664. The defendant pleads, that before Lady Day, 1664, viz. the first of June, 1661, he assigned over the term: the plaintiff demurs, whereupon the question intended was, whether an assignee by assigning over be discharged from the payment of the rent, without acceptance of the rent, as the lessee himself is not? But two exceptions were taken to the plea, as to the manner of it. First, That no certain time is alledged of the assignment, but only before Lady Day, 1664, and that may be for a year or two after the rent was arrear; and that which comes after the scilicet 1 Junii 1661, is not traversable; but he ought to have pleaded, that he assigned before any rent (due) viz. such a day. Secondly, It is not pleaded that he had given notice of the assignment to the lessor; and till notice and tender of the arrears, he cannot by assignment discharge himself of the rent, no more than in the case of lord and tenant. Twysden held the first exception good, but the contrary of the second; for the assignee is not chargeable but in respect of the privity of the estate, which by the assignment is gone, whether there be notice or not: and so differs from the case of a lessee, who notwithstanding the assignment, remains chargeable on the privity of contract, till by acceptance of another tenant he be discharged. Kelynge and [216] Wyndham held both exceptions to be good: and judgment was given for the plaintiff by all the three.

LOW against KING.

Traverse the whole time, before he was sheriff or after.

Trespass and imprisonment laid the first of May 17 Car. 2. The defendant justifies as Sheriff of Coventry, to arrest him for a breach of the peace made upon him in the execution of his office; for which he arrested him and carried him before the mayor, and traversed all the time before he was sheriff, or afterwards; and the traverse was adjudged good, though it was objected to be too large.

WRIGHT against WRAINSCOTT.

Justifies the killing of a mastiff, because he bit the defendant's dog. S. C. 1 Sid. 336. 1 Saund. 84. 2 Keb. 237. Nelson's Lutw. 481.

Trespass for killing the defendant's mastiff dog: the defendant pleads, that the plaintiff's dog fell upon and bit the defendant's dog, which he kept for the defence of his house, wherefore in defence of his own dog, he killed the plaintiff's dog; on which the plaintiff demurred, and the plea was adjudged ill; for that he does not say that he could not otherwise save his own dog without killing the plaintiff's dog, and a mastiff is valuable. Secondly, It does not appear that the plaintiff's dog was used to bite, nor that the defendant's dog was a mastiff.

WHITFIELD against HOLMES AND HIS WIFE.

A feme covert discharged, the husband finding bail for her. 1 Vent. 49. 1 Mod. 8. 1 Sid. 21. 2 Cro. 445. 1 Roll. 983. Litt. Rep. 18. 6 Mod. 301. 1 Mod. 8. 3 Wilson, 124. Ld. Raym. 73. Str. 1167, 1237, 1272. 3 Bac. Abr. 751. 2 Blac. Rep. 720. 1 Term Rep. 486.

The feme whilst sole entered into an obligation to the plaintiff, and afterwards married the defendant, and debt being brought against her, and she being in prison and the plaintiff afterwards knowing of the marriage, brought another writ against the husband and wife, and took the husband also; and both being in custody of the [217] marshal, he declared against both. But the Court on motion discharged the wife for the husband only is to be imprisoned, but before he be discharged, he shall find bail both for himself and his wife.

THOMAS against SORREL.

King James the First granted to the Vintners of London, liberty to sell wines without licence; this does not determine by his death. S. C. Vaugh. 330. Hard. 443, 464. 2 Keb. 245, 280, 322, &c. to 790. 3 Keb. 76, 119, 143, 155, 184, 223, 264.

Debt for 450l. on the statute of 12 Car. 2, for selling wines without licence, and demanded the 450l. For that the defendant at fifty several times, sold wine in his house, being a tavern, not being licensed according to the statute of 12 Car. 2, for which he forfeited 5l. for each time; and on nil debet pleaded by the defendant, a special verdict found the statute of 7 E. 6 touching the selling of wines, that none should sell without licence according to the said Act: then they found the patent 9 Jac. 1, whereby the King incorporates the Vintners of London, and grants for himself, his heirs and successors, that it should be lawful to the Master, Wardens and Freemen of the Commonalty of Vintners, (that being the name of the corporation) and their successors, and all who should be free of the said company, to sell wine. First, Within London, and three miles thereof. Secondly, In all cities and port-towns in England. Thirdly, In all other cities and thoroughfare towns on the road, between London and Dover, and London and Berwick, where any of the company should inhabit, and to keep taverns and sell wines by retail, notwithstanding the statute of E. 6, or any other statute made or to be made. Then they found the statute of 12 Car. 2, c. 25, whereby it is enacted, That no person shall sell wines by retail, except he be enabled according to that statute; and directs how the King shall nominate commissioners for granting licences, and thereupon reserves a revenue to the King; Provided that this Act shall not be prejudicial to the Master, Wardens, Freemen and Commonalty of the Vintners of London, but that they may use and enjoy such liberties, as they have heretofore lawfully used. And (they found) that the defendant was a Freeman of the Vintners Company, and kept a tavern at Stepney, within three miles of London, and sold wine by retail at the said [218] times. And if he were indebted for the said times, they found for the plaintiff 50l. and if not, &c. then for the defendant for the whole. This case after divers arguments in the King's Bench, was for the weight and difficulty of the case adjourned into the Exchequer-Chamber, and it was there twice argued at the Bar; first, by North the King's Solicitor for the plaintiff, and Levinz for the defendant, and at another day by Finch the King's Attorney; and (a new Judge being made) by Levinz again for the defendant; and for the plaintiff three points were principally made. First, That the patent of King James I. with the non obstante, was never good in its creation. Secondly, If it ever was good, yet it was determined by that King's death. Thirdly, That the proviso in the statute of 12 Car. 2 does not enable the defendant to sell without a licence: and upon the first point they objected, that the patent was never good, First, In respect of the persons to whom, viz. a corporation which was not subject to a use, and therefore not capable of such a trust as for making whom they pleased free of their company: or to make them exempt from the law, and in effect to give to them a delegative power, for exempting whom they would from the law, and by this means delegate an exemption to any other person whom they should make free of their company; which the King himself could not do. See 7 Co. the case of Penal Laws, and Co. Entr. 370. Secondly, For that the grant was for ever, and so not good in point of time. Thirdly, That it was void in respect of the places, extending over a great part of the realm; also a dispensation is a provident relaxation of the law, by reason of some weighty necessity. See 11 Co. 88 a. 7 Co. 37. As to the second point, they said, First, That this is only a licence to do a thing contrary to a penal law; and all licences, commissions, &c. determine with the death of the donor, and cited Latch 170, 171, and Dyer 190. Secondly, It was said to this point, that those dispensations are prerogatives of the King, which he cannot grant so as to bind his successor; for they ought not to be granted, but for some weighty or urgent necessity, and the predecessor King cannot know what shall be necessary or prudent for the successor to do. And to the third point they said, First, That the non obstante in the patent of King James, cannot dispense with the statute of Car. 2 made since, notwithstanding those words, any statute made or to be made; which was agreed. And secondly, [219] That the proviso in the statute of 12 Car. 2 shall not enable them to sell wine without licence, for it saves to them only such liberties as they before lawfully used. And the patent of King James does not make their selling of wines lawful, but only excuses them from the penalty and forfeiture, which they would incur by the statute of 7 Ed. 6. For the Act of Ed. 6 makes the thing illegal by the restraint, and punishable; and the patent of King James dispenses only with the penalty and forfeiture, and does not make the thing legal against the body of the statute of Ed. 6, and altho' the keeping of taverns was a trade before the statute of E. 6, yet it was considered as a trade that introduced irregularities and disorders, and the statutes of Ed. 6 and Car. 2 were made for the common good to prevent those disorders, as divers laws before had endeavoured to do. See old Magna Charta 24, 25, 115, 151. It was one of the articles in eyre to enquire of false measures in taverns, and the judgment of the pillory, statute 4 E. 3, c. 12. 27 Ass. 24, and divers statutes were made for redress of disorders in taverns, as 5 R. 2, 7. 6 R. 2, 7. 3 H. 8, 8. 22 H. 8, 7. 28 H. 8. 14 & 18 E. 2 of the view of frank pledge. But on the other side, it was said as to the first point, that the patent was good in its creation; and to the first objection, that the grantees being a corporation, were incapable of such a corporation, were incapable of such a trust, it was answered, that they are the more capable of such a trust by being a corporation: corporations are intrusted with the government of places where they are, as mayors and commonalties; and the statute of Ed. 6 puts the power of licensing taverns in the corporations of several towns. Also corporations aggregate never die or change, as natural men do, and therefore the prudence of entrusting them is always the same (i.e. unchangeable). And this is no more a delegation of a power than when the King makes a corporation, and grants, that the elder aldermen shall be justices of peace (which he does every day) is a grant of a delegative power to make a justice of peace; but it is included in the grant itself; as a grant to a man and his heirs, the heir is not in by delegation of the ancestor, but included in the grant. The King cannot grant to a corporation a power to make justices of peace. But when the King grants to a corporation that their aldermen shall be justices of peace, they are so by virtue of the grant itself, when they become aldermen, and not by the delegation of [220] those who elected them aldermen, 20 H. 7, 6. 1 H. 4, 5. Stat. 27 H. 8, 24. 21 E. 4, 56. Yelv. 13. And as to the time of its enduring, it is more than for life, viz. for ever; so are all grants to corporations to purchase in mortmain perpetual, and do not determine by the King's death, nor are they restrained to any time. And in Bridgman's Reports, Allen against Newton, a licence was granted on this same statute to one for life, remainder to another for life. And so in Hillary 1659, B. R. Young against Wright, a licence was to the father and his assigns, remainder to the son and his assigns for life, and held good; for by the dispensation, there passes not only an authority, but also an interest by way of restitution to that which was their right before the statute made. And the grantees of wine-licences have always aliened and assigned them from one to another, with their houses wherein the taverns are kept. And as to the second point, it was argued (agreed), that commissions, authorities and patents, which are no more than licences, do determine with the King's death. But in this case, the grant and the non obstante do not operate only as a licence, but as the restitution of an interest, F. N. B. 223 G. A licence to alien in mortmain, does not determine by the death of the King, the grantor, Plowd. 457 b. and 2 R. 3, 4. The King grants to an abbot, that he shall not be a collector of the tenths; (a tax) it shall bind the successor, because it operates as a discharge executed, and not as a licence executory. See Dyer 54. A licence on this statute to one and his assigns; and Bridgman 113, and the case of Young and Wright, 3 Cro. 77, before cited, and in Trinity term 2 Jac. 1, in the Common Pleas, Norris against Mason and Hill. 2 Jac. 1, in the King's Bench, Might against Norton, in an information on the statute of Ed. 6, such a patent was made by Queen Elizabeth, and confirmed by King James; and upon a demurrer, judgment was for the defendant, which shews that the patent did not determine by Queen Elizabeth's death; for if so, the confirmation by King James of a patent, which was become void, had been also void: which cases were the same year, viz. the second of King James, as the case of penal statutes, which is the same case with Sir Walter Raleigh's, and Co. Entr. 370 proves, that the Court took a diversity between this patent and the patent to Sir Walter Raleigh to dispense with penal laws. And as to the third point, when the saving in the statute saves to the Vintners [221] of London all the liberties which they had lawfully used, it saved to them the liberty of selling wines without licence, for when they by the patent of King James (were exempted from the penalties of) the statute of Ed. 6 they sold wines lawfully, and there is nothing else to be saved to them. And of this opinion, as to this (last) point, were all the Judges, except Baron Thurland, who held, that the patent of King James saved them only from the penalties and forfeitures given by the statute of Ed. 6, but did not make the selling of wines lawful. And the case having been argued at the Bench several days in Easter and Michaelmas terms, 26 Car. 2, viz. two Judges on each day, judgment was ruled to be given for the defendant. And on the first point, Baron Thurland, and Wyndham, and Ellis, Judges in the Common Pleas, and Turner, Chief Baron, held, that the patent of King James was not good, and grounded themselves much upon the reasons before alledged. But all the other Judges, Hale and Vaughan, Chief Justices, Twysden, Wylde and Rainsford, Judges of the King's Bench, Atkyns of the Common Pleas, and Turner and Littleton, Barons of the Exchequer, hold, that the patent was good in its creation. And as to the second point, Wyndham and Ellis held, that if the patent was ever good, it did not determine by K. James's death; and with them agreed Hale, Ch. Justice of B. R. and Vaughan, Ch. Justice of C. B. and Twysden, Rainsford, Wylde, Atkyns, Baron Turner and Littleton; but the Chief Baron Turner and Thurland held, that tho' it had been good in its creation, it was notwithstanding determined by the King's death. And as to the third point, they all as before, except Thurland, agreed, that the proviso in the statute of 12 Car. 2 exempted the Vintners of London out of the statute, because it was a privilege lawfully used by them before the statute: and thereupon the record was sent back into the King's Bench, and there, on the motion of Levinz, judgment was entered accordingly.

[222] DOWNS against BECK.

Consideration to forbear suing one as administratrix, good. Ut an affirmative, and not similitudinary. S. C. 1 Sid. 337. 2 Keb. 249, 253.

Assumpsit, in consideration that the plaintiff would forbear to sue the defendant as administratrix of J. S. who died indebted to him, till he the defendant had married such a woman to pay him, and says, that he had forborn, and that the defendant had married the woman. After verdict, it was moved, that it is not alledged that the defendant was administratrix, and so the forbearance of suing her is no consideration, for ut (as) is no affirmative, but only similitudinary, and Jones cited Pasch. 1653, B. R. Rot. 196 in Style's Reports 405 to be so adjudged, whereupon the judgment was staid: but afterwards on a second motion, it was adjudged for the plaintiff, for ut (as) is an affirmative, as a discent to one as son and heir, is an affirmative that he is son and heir.

PIT against KNIGHT.

In debt on an obligation in the Court of Bristol, a judgment in B. R. on the same obligation pleaded. S. C. 1 Sid. 329. 1 Saund. 97. 2 Keb. 205, 249, 278. 1 Danv. 789, pl. 5. A replication demands judgment and his debt, but not damages, yet the Court gave damages.

Debt on an obligation in Bristol, where the defendant pleaded in bar a judgment on the same obligation, in B. R. and this he is ready to verify by that record remaining in B. R. The plaintiff replies, no such record, and thereof demands judgment, and his debt aforesaid to be adjudged to him: the defendant rejoins, that there is such a record, and this he is ready to verify by that record; but pleads further, that he cannot have the record out of the K. B. and thereupon demands judgment, whether the Court at Bristol would further proceed: and the Court there gave judgment against the defendant for failing of the record; and now two errors were assigned viz. 1st. That the plaintiff in his replication did not demand any damages, but only his debt, and yet the Court there had given him damages also. But by the Court, the demand of the judgment is sufficient, for when the Court gave him judgment, they ought to have given him damages also, as incident thereto. 2dly. That the Court there ought not to have given him judgment on the failer of the record, at least, not without a demurrer on the plea, but the Court affirmed the judgment.

[223] Note this, for hereby it seems that the record might have been removed out of B. R. by certiorari, and then sent by mittimus to this Inferior Court. (Quere.)

VERNI QUI TAM against ——— IN THE EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

A tales without warrant in informations, but not indictments. Bull. N. P. 305.

Debt on the statute of King James I. touching leather, and upon an issue tried at the Guild-Hall, the jury not being full a tales was prayed: but it was objected for the defendant, that it cannot be without a special warrant by the Attorney General. But by Hale, It may well be in this case without warrant, by reason of the interest which the prosecutor has; otherwise in indictments, &c. which are the suits of the King himself.

COMBERS against WATTON.

Debt against the heir in the detinet, cured by verdict. S. C. 1 Sid. 342. 2 Keb. 259, 290, 302.

Debt against the heir on an obligation of his ancestor, in the detinet only: and after verdict it was moved, that it ought to be in the debet and detinet; and so held the Court at first, but it was afterwards resolved to be cured by the Oxford Act of Jeofails, being after verdict; and though not by the particular words in the statute, yet it is by those general words, and other like cases. 2nd Exception. That the defendant appeared by guardian, and it does not appear that he was within the age of twenty-one years, nor is the guardian said to be admitted by the Court; and thereupon it was stayed: but it was said by the Court, that if the guardian-piece could be found, and it is entered so there, the Court would amend the declaration thereby.

DETHICKE against CARAVAN.

A devise of lands to be sold by executors. Q. If the money be assets in their hands at common law. Lex Testament' 478, 479. 2 Brownl. 100. Goldsb. 2. Dyer 219, 177, 371. Co. Litt. 112 b. 113 b. Keil. 43, 107. Cro. El. 524. 1 Chan. Rep. 32, 35, 176, 248, 275. Vide post, 304. Pow. on Dev. 292, 297. Cow. 464.

It was moved to have writings brought in for the defendant to have a special verdict at the Assizes drawn up, where the case would be; that a man devised his lands to his executors, to be sold for payment of his debts: the lands are sold, and the question was, if the money in their hands would be assets at common law to charge them in debt? The writings were ruled to be brought in, and Justice Twisden said, he had known it to be adjudged, that they are assets at common law, without going into Chancery.

[225] BOLTON against BOLTON.

A bishop's remission from his Court may be shewn on motion without pleading it. S. C. 2 Keb. 265.

A prohibition was prayed for citing out of the diocess of Worcester, to the Arches, in a case between a husband and wife, for a divorce by reason of cruelty; and day given to shew cause, on which they shew a remission from his Court by the Bishop of Worcester; whereupon it was objected, that this ought not to be upon motion, but it ought to be pleaded; for the statute of 23 H. 8, in the exception of cases, says, Where the bishop of the diocess does request it, and the canon and civil law admits of the examination of such request; and it is properly to be argued and shewn to the Court by the civilians, whether their law admits it in this case: but the Court allowed the shewing of the bishop's remission upon motion, and denied the prohibition; and the same case between the same parties being afterwards moved in the Exchequer, the prohibition was their denied by Hale and the whole Court, on shewing the remission, upon motion, without putting the party to plead it. Levinz for the plaintiff in the prohibition.

GEE AND HIS WIFE against SIR FRANCIS FANE.

A recognizance of bail joint and several, a scire facias joint, and so the judgment, yet the execution several. S. C. 1 Sid. 339.

Gee and his wife brought an action against Burrel; and Sir Francis Fane, and Barker became bail for him, wherein they and each of them were bound in a recognizance, that if he was condemned, to bring him in, or that he should answer the condemnation, or otherwise the debt to be levied of their lands and chattels, as the course is in the King's Bench; judgment was had against Burrel, and a capias ad satisfaciend' sued against him, and returned non est inventus, but was not filed, and two scire facias's against Fane and Barker; and upon default judgment was, that the plaintiff should have execution against them according to the form of the recognizance aforesaid; and thereupon the plaintiff takes a capias ad satisfaciend' against Fane only, and levies the debt upon him alone, by imprisoning him 'till he had paid it: and now it was moved for a supersedeas and restitution, because the writ erroneously issued. First, For that the capias against the principal not being filed, no scire facias ought to have issued against the bail. But it was said by the Court, that the writ being sued and returned, it is [226] sufficient, and it may be filed at any time afterwards, and ordered it to be now done. Secondly, The judgment in the scire facias being joint, the execution by the capias ought to have been so also, viz. against both the bail, and not against Fane only. 1 H. 5, 4, 5, 13 a. 11 H. 4, 6. 3 Cro. 185. And although that the recognizance was joint and several, so that they might have had a scire facias against one only, yet having elected to take it against both, the ca. sa. ought to be against both also; see 20 H. 7, 3 b. a sci. fa. on a recognizance in this Court against two, one whereof is returned warned, no proceedings may be against him till the other is warned, and has made default: but by the Court. This is not a judgment to recover, but to have execution, and that is to be according to the recognizance, either joint or several; but where the judgment is joint, so ought to be the execution: but the recognizance upon which this scire facias issued, as upon a judgment, being joint and several, although the scire facias was joint yet the executione may be several, as the record is upon which it issues; and therefore the execution in this case was ruled to stand good. And note, though the recognizance be to levy it de terris & catallis, yet execution by the body is good by the law and usage of this Court. Levinz for the defendant.

HEYMAN against GERARD.

Obligation to account and pay all moneys that came to his hands; plea, no money came to his hands: replication, that moneys did come, &c. 'tis ill, not saying that he had not accounted, or paid. S. C. 1 Sid. 340. 1 Saund. 99, 102. 2 Keb. 258, 275.

Debt on obligation, conditioned for giving an account of all such moneys as should come to his hands, and to pay the same to the plaintiff: the defendant pleads, that no moneys came to his hands; the plaintiff replies, that such a sum came to his hands; whereupon the defendant demurs. 1. For that it is not said that he refused to account for it, and it is not the receipt, but the refusing to account which was the breach of the condition. 3 Cro. 320, 899. Yelv. 20. Whereto it was answered by Jones, that by the plea it is admitted, that he did not give any account, nor (indeed) could he give any, if no goods came to his hands; therefore it would be in vain to say, that he refused to give an account of what he says he never received: but by the Court, the replication [227] is sufficient in not assigning a breach, that he refused to accompt. And it is not like the case of a release, &c. pleaded in debt upon an obligation to perform an award, where it is sufficient to answer to the release, being a foreign matter, and out of the condition, without assigning a breach; but here the plea is of a matter within the condition, and therefore it is not sufficient to answer thereto, without assigning a breach: for perhaps he had paid it, and therefore ought to have said, that the money came to his hands, and that he had not accounted or paid it; and the whole Court ruled judgment to be given against the plaintiff. But he then prayed leave to discontinue, which was granted, except the parties would submit the truth of the matter to their counsel, to be determined by them.

HAMOND against JONES.

A freeman of London devises who shall be survivor of the customary part of his children.

Covenant was brought on a covenant to pay to the plaintiff's wife so much as should be due to her on the death of her brother John, by the will of her father and the death of her said brother; and on the evidence at the trial at Guildhall, after the end of Easter term, it appeared, that the father was a freeman of London, and devised, that his third part should make the customary part of his children 500l. a piece, if their customary parts did not amount to so much, and that if any one of them died before twenty-one, his part to be divided among all the others: all the children died before twenty-one, except the plaintiff's wife, John the brother being the last that died, and the plaintiff had received out of the father's part, so much as would make his said wife's part 500l. And the question was, if she should be entitled by the father's will to have the customary part of John? For it was objected by Jones and Levinz, that the customary part was not due by the will, but by the custom, and to entitle her thereto, she ought to take letters of administration to the brother, but is not entitled thereto by the father's will, for he had no power to appoint a survivorship thereof: but by Kelynge, Chief Justice, though the father had not power to dispose of the customary part from his children, yet he had power to appoint a survivorship thereof among the children [228] themselves by his will. And so Wylde, Recorder of London and King's Serjeant, said, it had been lately resolved in Chancery, in a case wherein he was of counsel; and so Kelynge now directed the jury, who accordingly gave a verdict for the plaintiff for the whole.

Quære of this matter.

FREEMANTLE against THE COMPANY OF SILK-THROWSTERS.

A by-law, that no silk-throwster shall make more than so many spindles a week, good. S. C. 2 Keb. 309, 310.

This case was referred by the Privy Council to be tried, whether a by-law made by the Company of Silk-Throwsters, that none of the company should have above such a number of spindles in one week, be a good by-law or not? And after verdict for the plaintiff, on a trial of the fact, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that it being a by-law in restraint of trade, and founded on their charter of incorporation, with power to make by-laws, and not on any custom, was a monopoly, and void. To which it was answered and resolved by the whole Court, that this is not a monopoly, but a restraint of a monopoly, that none might engross the whole trade; being rather to provide for an equality of trade, according to what is convenient, and good: and they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

[230] PARKER'S CASE.

Court of Honour and Arms before the Earl Marshall only.

A return on an habeas corpus was, that he was committed by commissioners deputed for exercising the office of Earl Marshal (he being a lunatick) before whom Sir Edward Walker, Garter, had complained, that Parker had painted escutcheons, trophies, and other ensigns for the funeral of the Lord Gerrard, and ordered and marshalled it without licence of the commissioners, Judges of the Court of Honour, and that for this cause, they had committed him till further order; whereto exceptions were taken, 1st. That no Court could be held before the Earl Marshal, or commissioners to execute his office, but the Court is to be held before the constable and marshal: but it was not allowed, or of matters touching arms and honour, the Court is held before the Earl Marshal only, but touching matters of ordinary justice, which concern life or member, before the constable and marshal. 2dy. That the commitment till further order, was not good, that it ought to be till he be delivered by course of law; and to this purpose were cited 1 Cro. Selce's case, and Brice's case ibid. and Burkham's case ibid. and 1 Cro. Wolnough's case, and Freeman's case ibid. the same, and 3 Cro. Adie's case. But on consideration of all those cases, the Court held the return good in that point; they agreed, that a commitment till further order by the persons committing was not good, but till further order generally, as here, is all one as by further order of law. (Q.) 3ly. It was excepted, that the Court of Honour cannot commit for painting of arms, for it is a trade, which any man educated therein may lawfully use. But to that it was answered and resolved, that painter-stainers, as Parker here is, and not a herald-painter, though they may paint arms for ordinary uses, yet they cannot do it for great solemnities or funerals, without a licence; much less marshal or order the ceremonies of funerals, as here, without a licence; but therein they ought to be directed by the heralds; as for all noblemen by garter king of arms; for all gentlemen on this side Trent by Clarenceux, and beyond Trent by Norroy. Whereupon Parker [231] seeing the opinion of the Court against him, submitted himself to Sir Edward Walker, Garter, and compounded with him for the misfeasance, and thereupon being brought up again at another day, he was discharged.

HAYWARD against CUNNINGTON.

Prescription for so many turfs as two men could dig in a day, as appurtenant to his house. S. C. 2 Keb. 290, 311. 1 Sid. 354.

Trespass for digging turfs, the defendant pleads that he is seized of an ancient house, and prescribes to have so many turfs every year as two men could dig in a day, as belonging to his messuage: the plaintiff demurs, for that it is not shewn that the turfs were to be burnt in his house, and all estovers are to be used in the house, and as it is laid here, they may be sold although he claims them as appurtenant to his house; and a case was cited, that a prescription for digging clay in another's soil to make pots, is void, which Kelynge Chief Justice remembered: but it was answered and resolved, that when the thing is uncertain as estovers, it ought to be applied to the house to ascertain it, but here it is certain enough in itself, viz. so much as two men could dig in a day; and for authorities were cited Rastal's Entries, 539, and 3 Cro. Spooner against Day. And judgment was given for the plaintiff.

WHEATLY against LANE.

[See S. C. 1 Wms. Saund. 216.]

Debt on a judgment against executors in the detinet, not shewing whether the judgment was of his own goods or the testator's. S. C. 1 Sid. 397. 1 Saund. 216. 2 Sid. 102. 2 Keb. 443, 431, 455. Post, 255. Vide 6 Mod. 125. 1 Mod. 188. 2 Lev. 40, 189.

Debt in the detinet, and declares on a judgment had by himself against the defendant, as administrator of Lane for 27*l.* damages in assumpsit, and 8*l.* costs, and does not shew how, i.e. if the damages or the costs were de bonis propriis, but generally quod cum recuperasset 27*l.* for damages, and 8*l.* for costs; whereupon the defendant demurred generally, and pretended that the declaration was insufficient; for if it was de bonis suis propriis, as it might be for the damages on ne unque administrator [232] or executor, then it ought to be in the debet, or if the costs are de bonis propriis, as they ought to be if he has not assets; for them it ought to be in the debet: but at the day the defendant did not appear to maintain his demurrer, whereupon judgment was given for the plaintiff. See 2 Cro. 545, 546, that it is good in the detinet, because it shall be assets when recovered, be it one way or the other. Levinz for the plaintiff.

BOIS against ROSWELL AND DICKINS IN CHANCERY.

A deed of trust to pay the profits to three in equal manner, and to convey the inheritance to them in like sort, makes a tenancy in common of the whole, so as in a will.

Dickins seized in fee, infeoffed Roswell in trust for himself for life, and afterwards to pay the profits to John, Robert and Nicholas Dickins, in ratable and equal manner; and also when they should come to the age of twenty-one years, in like sort to convey the premises to them and their heirs: John dies, leaving Susan, his sister and heir, in the life of the feoffor; Susan marries Bois, and has issue the plaintiff Bois, and dies: Nicholas dies without issue, leaving Robert his brother and heir; Bois exhibits his bill to have an account of the third part of the profits, and also to have the third part of the inheritance conveyed to him: Robert Dickins the defendant claims the whole: and the only question was, if this trust was a jointenancy, and so should survive wholly to Robert, or a tenancy in common, so that the third part should go to the heirs of John? And it was decreed by Bridgman Lord Keeper, assisted by the Judges Rainsford and Moreton, that it was a tenancy in common; and that as well for the inheritance as for the profits, and as well in case of a deed of trust, as in a will; in both which the intent is to be considered, and the inheritance here was to be conveyed in like sort as the profits, and that was in a ratable and equal manner, which in a will would make a tenancy in common.

Ecclesiastical Court cannot bind an administrator to a distribution. S. C. Cart. 125. Raym. 499. Cro. Car. 101. Jo. 228. 1 Sid. 179. 3 Mod. 58. 1 Show. 25. Q. Stat. 22. 23 Car. 2, c. 10.

Prohibition on a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court, for obliging an administrator to a distribution; and upon long and solemn arguments, and hearing of civilians at large, it was resolved, that the Ecclesiastical Court could not oblige an administrator to a distribution, and that their bonds taken to that intent are void.

SIR WALTER FANE'S CASE.

Captain of the King's Guards not exempted from bearing the office of reeve. S. C. 1 Sid. 355. 2 Keb. 309.

He being a captain of the King's Guards, and being elected reeve in the lord's court of the manor of Rowton, to collect the lord's rents, &c. prayed a writ of privilege for his discharge; which Justice Twysden held, he ought to have in respect of the dignity of his office and his attendance upon the King; and that he could not make a deputy, no more than could a constable; and cited Hillary 9 Jac. 1, Rot. 249, B. R. Phips and Winchcombe, to be resolved, that a constable could not make a deputy, and 1 Cro. Prowse's case, an attorney shall be discharged from taking the office of constable, and much more a captain of the King's Guards: but the other justices to the contrary, a constable may appoint another to execute his place; and Justice Wyndham said, that he himself did so when he was elected constable of Taunton; where the custom is to elect constables by the houses, which custom he and Moreton held good, contrary to the opinion in Prowse's case: and the writ was denied; for this office is only a new office, and not time out of mind as an attorney is, and obliged to attend the Courts of Justice.

[234] FOOTE against BERKLY.

A term misrecited, and a new deed at the end thereof, to commence presently, though the whole latter term incurs during the first, and so of no effect, and the rent payable presently. S. C. 1 Sid. 460. 1 Vent. 83, 88. 2 Keb. 654, 611, 514, 480, 673.

Error of a judgment in the Common Pleas, where in an ejectment and special verdict the case was, the Prior of Bedenham seized in fee, demised the lands in question the 11th of October, 29 H. 1, to Monday for ninety-six years, and that it came to H. 1 by dissolution, and from him to Queen Elizabeth by discent, and that she the 22d of April, 32 Eliz. demised it to Monday for thirty years, from the end of the first term; and that the reversion descended to King Charles I. who settled it in jointure on his Queen Mary, and that she the 12th of May, 14 Car. 1, reciting, that Queen Elizabeth by letters patents, dated 22 April, 42 Eliz. had demised it to Monday for thirty years, she granted it to the defendant for twenty-one years from the end or determination of the estate granted to Monday by the said letters patents; and that afterwards she also granted it to the plaintiff, who brought the ejectment in the Common Pleas, and there had judgment to recover, by reason of a mistake in the recital of the lease to Monday, 22 April, 32 Eliz. for that being so mistaken, the lease of 12 May, 14 Car. 1, commenced presently upon the sealing and delivery, according to Co. Litt. 46 b. and Miller and Johns against Manwaring, 1 Cro. and Dyer 116. And of the same opinion were the whole Court here, after divers arguments by Jones,

Maynard and young Mr. Kelynge for the plaintiff in error, the land being of great value. And afterwards in Trinity 22 Car. 2, for till then it depended, the judgment was affirmed by the whole Court, being restrained by the words in the habend' of the end of the term granted to Monday, by the letters patents aforesaid, although the persons, the land, &c. are certain enough; and although the term granted to the defendant by this means is altogether void, for that it expired before the term to Monday, and so the whole would be otherwise fruitless and ineffectual, and yet he was obliged to pay his whole rent of [235] 60l. per annum for his whole term of twenty-one years, though he could never have the possession by virtue thereof: Monday's term continuing till beyond the said twenty-one years; and yet by the restrictive words concessi per literas patentes præd', it is to commence from the sealing and delivery. But by Kelynge and Twisden, if he had misrecited Monday's lease, as he did, and then had granted the land, habend' for twenty-one years, after Monday's interest determined, it had been good for twenty-one years after Monday's lease ended, notwithstanding the foregoing misrecital.

Obligation to A. to the use of B. B. cannot sue or release it.

Debt on a single bill made to A. to the use of him and B. The defendant pleads a release made to him by B. On which the plaintiff demurs; and without difficulty, it was adjudged for the plaintiff, for B. is no party to the deed, and therefore can neither sue nor release it; but it is an equitable trust for him, and suable in the Chancery, if A. will not let him have part of the money; and the book of E. 4 cited, that he might release in such a case, denied to be law.

JONE NOELL against WELLS.

In what cases evidence may be given against the seal of the Ordinary.
S. C. 1 Sid. 359. 2 Keb. 357. Raym. 405.

Debt by the plaintiff, as executrix to her husband: the defendant pleads never executrix: and on a trial the plaintiff produced the probate of the will in evidence: the defendant said, that the will was not a true, but a forged will. And the Chief Justice, before whom it was tried, was of opinion, that he could not give such evidence directly contrary to the seal of the Ordinary in a matter within his jurisdiction, whereupon a case was made for the opinion of the Court, and a verdict taken for the plaintiff: but judgment to be staid, if the Court should be of opinion, that such evidence [236] might be given; and upon motion the whole Court held, that it could not be given. But evidence may be given, that the seal was forged or repealed, or that there were bona notabilia; for those confess and avoid the seal. But he cannot give in evidence that another was executor; or that the testator was non compos mentis, for those falsify the proceedings of the Ordinary in cases of which he is Judge. But those are to be remedied by appeal.

EDMUNDS against BROWN AND TILLARD.

A corporation seal a bond, and particular persons sign it, the corporation is dissolved, the particular persons not chargeable. 1 Stra. 434. Show. 174. 3 Wils. 269.

Debt on an obligation of 500l. The defendant pleads non est factum, and on the evidence it appears, that the defendants were two of the principal of the Company of Woodmongers lately dissolved; and that the money was borrowed in the name of the company, and the obligation sealed in the company's name, and with their seal; and the defendants, as was usual, set their names to the obligation, but the obligation was, noverint universi per præsentes nos Magistrum & Guardinos, &c. del Company de Woodmongers teneri, &c. And the obligation was endorsed with sigillat' & deliberat' in præsentia, &c. and attested. And now the company being dissolved, the plaintiff brought the action against the defendants, intending to charge them in their own right. But it was ruled by the Chief Justice at Nisi Prius at Guild-hall, that he could not so do, it being ut supra; whereupon the plaintiff was nonsuit.

JENKINS against KEYMES IN CHANCERY.

A consideration paid on one marriage, extends to the issue on another marriage. 1 Lev. 150, 237, 64. Ch. Cas. 103. 2 Wms. 599, ante 256. Vide ante 150, 151. Hard. 395.

Sir Nicholas Keymes being tenant for life, the remainder to his son Sir Charles in tail; they about the year 1641, in consideration of a marriage to be had between Sir Charles and Blanch Mansel, and 2500l. portion paid, levied a fine to the use of Sir Nicholas for life, the remainder to Sir Charles [238] and Blanch for their lives, the remainder to the heirs of the body of Sir Nicholas (Sir Charles) of the said Blanch begotten, the remainder to the heirs of the body of Sir Charles, with power for Sir Nicholas to charge the premisses with 2000l. Sir Nicholas and Sir Charles about the year 1642 joined in a lease and release to David Jenkins, the Welsh Judge, and his heirs, for 2000l. on condition of payment of 2000l. with interest some years after, to be void, and covenants, on default of payment, to make further assurance. And about the year 1643, by indenture, between Sir Nicholas of one part, and Sir John Awbry of the other part, Sir Nicholas reciting the power, it is said, in the indenture, that he charged the premisses with 2000l. for the payment of his debts; but it is not said, that he granted anything to Sir John Awbry, nor that he charged the lands to Sir John Awbry, or to any other person, but (only) that he charged them. Blanch afterwards dies without issue, Sir Charles marries another wife, by whom he had issue Sir Charles the defendant, and dies: David Jenkins dies, and leaves David Jenkins the plaintiff his heir and executor, who brought an ejectment in the Exchequer-Chamber; and on a special verdict it was adjudged, as before appears, that the lease and release was no good execution of the power at common law; and now he brought his bill in equity on these grounds, viz. 1st. That the consideration of the marriage of Blanch, and the 2500l. paid with her did not extend to the defendant, being an issue by the second venter, and so the estate in remainder, whereby he claimed, was voluntary. 2dly. That the father, tenant in tail, joining in the conveyance (who might by fine have barred the defendant) if his issue could not be obliged by his covenant for further assurance, to make that assurance good which his father had made. 3dly. If not, then though the power be not well executed as to the intent, yet whether it shall not be made good in equity as to the 2000l. And upon the bill and answer with this further, that Sir John Awbry having 500l. due to him, and suing here for relief, his bill was dismissed, Sir Nicholas only having sealed the deed, and no proof that Sir Charles assented thereto, which was now made appear; (Q.) and it also appeared that the defendant had paid other debts of Sir Nicholas due by bond to the value of 2000l. And now on the said points it was declared by the Lord Keeper Bridgman as to the first, The consideration of 2500l. [239] paid on the first marriage, should extend to the issue by the second venter; and as to the second, That the issue in tail was not bound by the covenant of his father to make that assurance good, which his father might have made good by a fine, although it was said, that it had been so done formerly, and that the Lord Chancellor Hyde was of that opinion: and as to the third, The Lord Keeper held, that Sir Nicholas and Sir Charles joining in the conveyance to Jenkins, and covenanting on default of payment to make further assurance, cannot be taken to be an execution of the power at all, but as a common mortgage; and although that the deed to Awbry was not a legal execution of the power, for default of a person to whom it should be charged, yet it being intended for an execution of the power, it shall be aided in equity before that to Jenkins, and that the defendants having, (tho' not executors) paid to the value of 2000l. in debts, may apply it in execution of the power to the discharge of the lands, being tertenants.

[See S. C. 1 Wms. Saund. 120, 131.]

Printing and delivering copies of a petition to the Parliament, is no libel, though it tends to scandal. S. C. 1 Sid. 414. 1 Saund. 131. 2 Keb. 361, 462, 496, 649, 664, 801, 832. 1 Mod. 58. Hard. 470. 1 Danv. 196.

Case for printing a libel of him, and publishing and dispersing thereof to several persons, charging him with extortion in his office of vicar general to the Bishop of Lincoln; and the defendant pleads, that the plaintiff extorsively took of A. B. and C. and of other persons, several sums of money; whereupon he printed and preferred the petition to the Committee of Parliament for examination of grievances, and distributed printed copies thereof to several members of the committee, as he lawfully might, which is the same printing, &c. On which the plaintiff demurred, and took divers exceptions, viz. First, That he does not name all the persons of whom he took the money, but only of A. B. and C. and divers others: to which it was answered and resolved by Kelynge and Twysden only in Court, that the taking of the money is not made use of but only for inducing the justification of printing and publishing the petition, and so it need not mention all the persons of whom he took the money. Secondly, That the delivery of such a number of copies is an unnecessary publication of a scandal, and not justifiable: to which it was answered and resolved, that the delivery to several members of the committee who have the examination of such matters is justifiable, and is the common usage in such cases for information of the members of the committee. Thirdly, It was objected, that the quæ est eadem (which is the same, &c.) was not good without a traverse that he [241] delivered it to any others; to which it was answered and resolved, that the charge being general, to divers persons, and he justifying the delivery to the members of the committee, who are several persons, it is sufficient; but if the action had been for delivering of them to divers persons by name, and he justified the delivery to any (of them) by name, he ought to have traversed the rest. Fourthly, It was objected, that he could not justify the printing, for by that means the matter is published to printers and composers, which ought not to be, for the reading of a scandalous letter to another is a publication thereof; and so is the writing of a copy thereof. 9 Co. 59 b. Lamb's case; whereto it was answered and at length resolved, that the printing thereof with intent to deliver the copies to members of the committee is justifiable, but if he had delivered them to others, it would be otherwise; and the printing of them is not so great a publication as it would be to have so many of the copies transcribed by several clerks. A fifth objection was, that the publication is laid to be the first of November, and the justification is the second of November which is not good without traversing the first of November: and the whole matter being transitory, and the day not material, he ought to have justified on the same day, or to have traversed the first of November: to which it was answered, and at last resolved, that the plea (the day not being material) is good: and afterwards in Trinity 22 Car. 2, the matter was again argued at the Bar, and then Kelynge and Moreton inclined, that the printing was not justifiable, and that the committee ought not to be informed by printing or copies, but (only) viva voce: but afterwards in Michaelmas term following judgment was given for the defendant.

KING against STANDISH.

The Chancery by vacating a judgment given at Common Law, q. if within the Statute of Præmunire of 27 E. 3. S. C. 1 Sid. 263, 463, &c. 1 Mod. 59. Raym. 227. Hard. 120. 2 Keb. 662, 402.

Action on the statute 27 E. 3 of Præmunire, and declares, that in Easter term 18 Car. 2 he recovered 200l. debt in this Court against the defendant, and that afterwards the defendant exhibited his bill in Chancery, and obtained a decree for vacating of the judgment: the defendant demurs; and now it was argued by Bigland for the defendant, that a suit in Chancery after a judgment is not within the statute. 1*st*, The [242] Chancery by English bill was not then in esse. Lambard's Jurisdiction of Courts. Anciently the King heard causes of equity on petition to himself, and sometimes by reference to the Chancellor; and the first statute which gave countenance to this Court, was the statute of 36 E. 3, 9, and such cases of equity were rarely in use till the time of E. 4, when they increased by occasion of uses. Secondly, That the Chancery is the King's Court, and therefore the King is not (by the statute) disinherited from suits there; but from foreign suits to foreign Courts he was. Thirdly, The statute appoints, that the offender shall appear before the King and his Council, or in the Chancery, and it is impertinent to put the party to appear in Chancery for suing in the Chancery; and the reason of making this and the other statutes against provisors, was to prevent the Pope from drawing the people to Rome; and where the statute says, To Rome or other Courts, that ought to be intended of Courts of like nature as Rome, as the Legantine Court of the Pope here. 29 E. 3, 20, The Archbishop of York's case. 5 E. 4, 6, alibi intended the Bishop's Court. See Twysden's Antiquities of the Church, that the reason of this statute was to disable the then Pope, being a French man, and the King having then war with France; and from this time the Peter-Pence were denied: and as to the opposite authorities, 2 Cro. 344, 345. Moor 838. 5 E. 4. 22 E. 4, 37. Co. Litt. Præmunire, Throgmorton, and Finche's cases, constant practice has been to the contrary ever since, throughout the whole reigns of Jac. 1, Car. 1, and Car. 2, and in 14 Jac. 1, this matter was referred by the King to all the Judges and his Council, and by them agreed, that the Chancery was not within the statute; and this is inrolled in the Chancery. Saunders on the other side cited for authorities to the contrary, the Parliament Roll, 13 R. 2, No. 30. 4 Inst. 82. Stat. 4 H. 4, c. 23, that judgments in the King's Court shall not be avoided, except by error or attaint. Stat. 31 H. 6, c. 2, in Rastal's Statutes at large, but not in Poulton, 22 E. 3, 37, Finch and Throgmorton's case, 4 Inst. 2 Cro. supra. 4 Inst. 20, the Articles against Cardinal Wolsey, 2 Inst. Articuli Cleri, c. 2. That the Ecclesiastical Courts are the King's Courts, and yet are within the statute; and although the Chancery was not (then) in the same use as now, yet now it is of equal mischief, and is another (kind of) Court than that where the judgment is given, 1 Roll. 381, and Dr. and Stud. lib. 1, c. 8. The Court [243] said little but inclined to adjourn it into the said Exchequer-Chamber; however it depended here till Trinity term, 22 Car. 2, when it was moved again, and Hale being then Chief Justice held, that this case was not within the statute, and so he said it would appear by the petition whereon the statute was founded. And so nothing further was done thereupon.

Prohibition, a man who had letters of mark in the late war with the Dutch, took an Ostender instead of a Dutch ship, and brought it into harbour, and libelled against her to have it condemned as a prize, and there is a sentence, that it was no prize; and now the Ostender libels in the Admiralty against the captor for damages, sustained by a hurt that the ship received in the port; and a prohibition was prayed, for that this suit was for a damage done in the port, for which an action lies at common law. But the prohibition was denied (after it had been twice moved and debated) because the original being a caption at sea, and the bringing into port, in order to have it condemned as prize, but a consequent thereof, not only the original, but also the consequents shall be tried there. Upholsterer, barber and tailor are trades within statute 5 Eliz.
S. C. 1 Sid. 367. 2 Keb. 366.

Error of a judgment upon an indictment before the justices at the Quarter-Sessions for using the trade of an upholsterer, and assigned, that it was not a trade within the statute, and cited 2 Bulst. 186, the opinion of three Judges, and Calthrop's Courts and Customs of London, 48, 59. But the Court, viz. Kelynge, Twysden and Wyndham, held it a trade within the statute, and affirmed the judgment; and they said, that so had a barber and a tailor been resolved traders within the statute.

A watch and 100l. upon ticket won at play at the same time, and a bond given for the 100l. It is void, q. S. C. 1 Sid. 394.

Assumpsit in a feigned action directed out of Chancery, whether an obligation of 200l. for payment of 100l. won at play, was void or not; and on a special verdict found before Kelynge Chief Justice, the case was this; Danvers and Thistlethwayte played at dice, and Thistlethwayte won of Danvers a watch of 10l. value, which was presently delivered; and also 100l. for which the obligation in question was given: and whether the obligation was void by the statute of 16 Car. 2, c. 7, which says, that if any person shall play and lose any sum of money, or other thing exceeding 100*l. at one meeting, upon ticket or credit, or otherwise, and shall not then pay it; the party losing the money or other thing beyond the sum of* 100*l. shall not be compelled to make good the same; and that all obligations, &c. made for securing it shall be void*, was the question: and it was argued by Kelynge junior, that the obligation was good, for the statute does not restrain the playing for ready money, be the sum ever so great, but such gaming only as brings men into debt, and here is no more than 100l. lost in debt or on tickets, and the watch was as ready money; and if a man lose 500l. in ready money, and 100l. more upon tick, an obligation given for securing the 100l. is not void by the statute; and so held Kelynge Chief Justice, before that the verdict was found: but Jones argued to the contrary, that if above 100l. be lost at play, and part paid presently, and a bond given for the residue, the bond is void; and it is the same, where goods are so lost and delivered immediately, and 100l. more upon tick, for which bond is given, the bond is void: and to that Twysden and Wyndham inclined, and that this statute being made for suppressing of gaming and vice, should be taken as largely as might be; but it was adjourned: but afterwards in Hillary 20 & 21, it was moved again, and then judgment was given for the plaintiff by Kelynge and Twysden, being then of his opinion, Wyndham being dead, and Moreton holding to the contrary.

Executor charged in devastavit shall find bail, executor found bail in an Inferior Court, and if the cause be removed, in the Superior Court also. S. C. 1 Sid. 368. 1 Keb. 295, 371. Post, 268, contr.

A scire facias against the defendant an administrator on a devastavit alledged, and judgment of his proper goods, on which he brought error: and by the whole Court he shall find bail, for he being here charged in his proper goods, it is not as in the case where an administrator is charged in the testator's goods; but here it is as in his own right, and not like to Mildmay's case in 2 Cro. nor to Goldsmith and Platt's case in 2 Cro. And by Twysden, an executor charged in an action as administrator on a devastavit, shall find bail, and so he said it had been adjudged; and if an executor finds bail in an Inferior Court, and is removed by habeas corpus, he shall find bail in the Superior Court: but note, the contrary was afterwards done in the case of Castle and Willy, hereafter, Trin. 23 Car. 2.

SKINNER against ANDREWS.

Debt on obligation, defendant pleads no award; plaintiff replies, that before exhibiting of the bill, viz. such a day, they made an award good. On issue no such award, proof may be that it is void. S. C. 1 Sid. 370. 2 Keb. 361, 388. 1 Saund. 169. Ante 241. 1 Saund. 118, 169, 170, 286, 287.

Debt on obligation conditioned to perform an award so that it be made before the 25th of March; the defendant pleads no award. The plaintiff replies, that before the exhibiting of the bill, viz. the 24th of March, the arbitrators made the award, and assigns a breach: on which the defendant demurs, for he ought to have pleaded, that before the 25th of March, viz. the 24th of March, he made the award; for the award might be made after the 25th of March, and yet before the exhibiting of the bill and the day is not traversable, for the award made any time after the submission before the 25th of March, was good, and nothing is here traversable but the 24th of March, and it also comes after the viz. which is never traversable; but if he had said, that before the 25th of March they had made the award, that had been traversable: and of that opinion was Kelynge, Chief Justice, and that the replication was therefore ill. The rest on the contrary held, that after the defendant has pleaded no award, he cannot have any plea which admits the award made, but that it was void in law, nor any other thing, but that they made no such award; and if on the evidence it does not [246] appear to be made before the 25th of March, the verdict shall be against the plaintiff. And they gave judgment for the plaintiff.

ALLEN against CUTLER.

Writs in B. R. are returnable on return-days, bills on a day certain. A scire facias on bail, not shewing the condition, is as a writ, but shewing the condition, is as a bill. S. C. 1 Keb. 396, 397.

A scire facias on a recognizance in bail on a writ of error, conditioned, if judgment be affirmed to pay the money, &c. The defendant pleads payment, but does not set forth any place where; on which the plaintiff demurred, and ruled for judgment for him for default of the venue. But then it was moved, that the writ being not returnable at a return-day, but a day certain, and not being grounded on any bill, or thing in nature of a bill, it ought to have been returnable at a return day. But if the scire facias had set forth the condition of the recognizance, then it had been in nature of a bill, and might be made returnable at a day certain; but here it is made use of wholly as a writ, and therefore it ought to be made returnable at a return-day; and so, as all the clerks said, was the constant usage, whereto the whole Court agreed, and stayed the judgment.

Case against the husband, for that the wife affirming her self to be sole, procured the plaintiff to marry her. S. C. 1 Sid. 375. 2 Keb. 399.

Case against the husband and wife, for that she being covert, affirmed her self to be sole, and requested the plaintiff to marry her, and lays it to be done maliciously, with intent to deceive him; whereupon he married her, whereby he was disturbed in conscience, and put to great charge by the husband. After a verdict for the plaintiff on (the issue) not guilty, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the action does not lie; for the wife cannot by any contract or agreement charge the husband, and if he should be charged here, it would be by the wife's contract with the plaintiff to marry him; but for trespass or words she might charge the husband, for that she may do without assent of the husband or any other; and if damage ensue thereupon, it ought to be recompensed by some body, and no other can do that but the husband. But this marriage could not be made without the assent and contract of the plaintiff (himself) and therefore it shall not charge the husband, and so held the Court, and gave judgment for the defendant: they also said, that this was felony in the wife, and Twysden said, that an action did not lie for the master for beating of his servant to death, for that he lost his service; for the party ought to be indicted for it, as is Yelv. 90. But see Latch 144, Markham against Cobb, Style 346, 347. Dawes against Coveneigh, that trespass lies for a felonious taking money after [248] the party has been convicted and burnt in the hand: also it was here said, that the wife had been pardoned of the felony, but that did not appear upon the record; and if she had, yet the fact sounding in contract, it seems that the action does not lie. Weston for the defendant.

He has a bastard, spoken of a minister whereby he lost a chaplainship.
S. C. 1 Sid. 376. 2 Keb. 400. Nelson's Lutw. 334.

Case, for that the plaintiff being a minister free from unchastity, and agreed to be retained chaplain to the Duke of Ormond, the defendant did falsly and maliciously say of him, He has a bastard on the other side the river, and it is so indubitable that I fear not to divulge it, and if I am troubled for it, I can justfy it, whereby he lost the chaplainship to the Duke of Ormond; after verdict it was moved, that the chaplainship is spiritual: but the Court to the contrary, his preferment is temporal, like as a parsonage; and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

A. indebted to the plaintiff, writes a note to the defendant to pay it, who in consideration the plaintiff would forbear a fortnight, promised to pay him. S. C. 1 Sid. 396. 1 Saund. 210. 1 Vent 9, 154. 1 Mod. 12.

Assumpsit, that whereas A. was indebted to the plaintiff, and wrote a note to the defendant to pay it to the plaintiff; the defendant on receipt of the note, promised to the plaintiff, that if he would accept of his promise for a fortnight, that he would pay it, and avers, that he tarried a fortnight; after verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment, that it was no consideration, for the defendant is not the debtor, nor was the said A. obliged to stay a fortnight, whereto Twysden on the first motion inclined: but Kelynge and Moreton on the contrary held, that it did amount to an agreement generally to forbear, not only for the plaintiff, but also for A. for a fortnight: but afterwards in Hillary following it being moved again, and a case between Newcomb and Lee in Easter term 1650, Rot. 62, in B. R. being cited to be the very case in point, the whole Court held it to be no consideration, and gave judgment for the defendant.

[249] BARNS against HUGHS.

Debt lies at Westminster on a penal statute, but an indictment or information in the proper county only. S. C. 1 Vent. 8, 364. 2 Keb. 401, 424, 447, 458.

Debt on the statute of 5 Eliz. brought in the King's Bench, for using the trade of a grocer at Salisbury, and sent and tried by Nisi Prius at Salisbury: and after verdict for the plaintiff on nil debet, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the action did not lie in this Court, but ought to have been brought and tried wholly in the proper county, by the statute 23 Car. 1. And for this were cited Hillary 23 Car. 1, B. R. Rot. 611. Mich. 13 Car. 1, B. R. Brethurgle against Hascall, & Mich. 1654, Child against Bull, and Trin. 1652, Rot. 1377, Bunton against Shalate. But on the other side it was said, that the action of debt did not lie at the sessions or Assizes in the country; and the stat. 5 Eliz. gives the recovery by action of debt, as well by indictment or information; and the statute 21 Jac. 1 does not concern the statute of 5 Eliz. in any part; and therefore the statute of 21 Jac. 1 is to be taken by referring particulars to particulars, viz. by indictment or information (which will lie there) in the proper county, but for actions of debt (which will not lie in the proper county) in the Superior Courts, where it will lie; and for this were cited 1 Cro. Farrington against Keymer, and ibid. Green against Gray, Latch 192. 1 Roll. Abr. 537, Trin. 1653, B. R. Hodges's case. And if it should not be so, there might be a failure of justice; as if the party offends against the statute in one county, and goes and lives in another county, and the information or indictment is laid in the proper county, for there the party cannot be brought in to plead: but for debt in the Superior Court he may be brought in hither out of any county, and the issue is to be tried by Nisi Prius in the proper county. And of that opinion were all the Judges, viz. Kelynge Twysden and Moreton, Wyndham being dead; and after the case had been twice argued at the Bar, they gave judgment for the plaintiff in Hillary term next following; and they said, that the statute of 21 Jac. 1 was not made to oust actions of debt on penal statutes, but to give such remedies for them in the proper county as may be had there: but afterwards in Mich. 29 Car. 2 the [250] contrary opinion was held in the King's Bench, between Clapp and Edgecombe, which you may see hereafter.

You commit sacrilege every day, not actionable. S. C. 1 Sid. 376. 2 Keb. 400, 430.

Case for these words, You are a sacrilegious person, and commit sacrilege every day: after verdict upon not guilty, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the words are not actionable, for sacrilege may be either by a felonious stealing of goods of the Church, which is felony, or by detaining of tithes, obligations, or other Ecclesiastical duties, which is not felony; and it being said to be done every day, it must be intended to be spoken in the last sense, for it shall not be intended that a man commits felony every day, and so, after two motions, held the Court, and gave judgment for the defendant, although the words were laid to be spoken maliciously, and to cause him to be brought in question for his life.

FREVIN AND HIS WIFE against PAYNTON.

Administrator shall sue the lessee in possession in the detinet only, for the rent. S. C. 1 Sid. 224, 379. 2 Keb. 407. But an administrator shall be sued in the debet & detinet.

Debt as administrator against the defendant lessee for years, for rent, and counts of a lease made to the intestate, and that he being possessed, demised to the defendant rendering rent, and brought the action in the debet & detinet; the defendant pleads; that the intestate before the lease to him had assigned his term; and traverses, that the intestate was possessed when he demised to the defendant; issue thereupon, and verdict for the plaintiff: and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the declaration by the administrator in the debet & detinet does not lie; for although in debt against the administrator he shall be charged in the debet & detinet; as Hargrave's case, 5 Co. 31 [251] is, in respect of his possession; yet in debt by the administrator, of one who had a term, and made a lease, and the reversion comes to the administrator he shall sue debt for the rent in the detinet only, because all that he recovers shall be assets.

But where an executor is sued, he in respect of the possession and profits of the land taken by himself shall be charged of his own goods, and so held the Court, that the declaration was not good; but it is cured after verdict, by the Statute of Jeofails made at Oxford. Levinz counsel with the defendant.

DALTON against SUDDE.

I am no traitor, I have seen you in rebellion. S. C. 1 Sid. 381. 2 Keb. 411.

Case for saying of him, being a burgess of Parliament, and a justice of peace, You are a scurvy fellow; I am no traitor, I have seen you in rebellion: after verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the words are not actionable; that I am no traitor are not, because negative, and not spoken of the plaintiff: and I have seen you in rebellion, are not, for rebel is not. Cro. Eliz. 621, 638, 878. For it may be understood of a commission of rebellion out of Chancery: also, they are spoken of times past, and perhaps a general pardon has been since he was in rebellion, if it shall be so intended. See Hob. Cuddington against Wilkins: but judgment was given for the plaintiff; for by the opposition of the words, I am no traytor, I have seen you in rebellion, it cannot be intended but of a traiterous rebellion; and tho' they are not spoken positively, that the plaintiff had been a traitor, or had been in a traiterous rebellion: yet by the connexion and intention of the words, the by-standers cannot intend any other thing, but that he supposed the plaintiff had been in a traiterous rebellion; and if any pardon had been afterwards, the defendant ought to have shewn it in pleading, as was done in Cuddington and Wilkins's case, else the Court will not intend it. Levinz for the defendant, Bigland for the plaintiff.

[252] CRISPE against MAYOR AND COMMONALTY OF BERWICK UPON TWEED.

Covenant to repair a house in Berwick, tried in Northumberland.

Covenant, on a covenant supposed by the declaration to be made at York, for enjoyment of lands in Berwick, and issue, that he did enjoy. The plaintiff suggests, that Berwick is in Scotland, and that Belford in Northumberland is the next English vill; and prayed a venire facias from Belford, and had it, and the issue was tried in Northumberland, of the neighbourhood of Belford, and a verdict for the plaintiff. And now it was moved in arrest of judgment, that Berwick is in Scotland, and ruled by the laws of Scotland; and facts done there are not triable by the laws of England, whereto it was answered, if it should not be so tried, there would be a failure of justice: for, 1. The Mayor and Commonalty of Berwick cannot be sued in Berwick, for then they would be Judges and parties. 2. A fact done in England shall be tried in and by the laws of England, and not by the laws of Scotland. They also cited 19 H. 6, 12, that so it was of things in Wales, before the union of Wales to England by the stat. H. 8, and that the case Hill. 41 Eliz. Rot. 630, between Shepherdson and Chambers did not pass sub silentio, as was objected: but to this was objected, that there the deed was laid to be made at Belford, and the trial was of Belford. Whereupon the Court inclined, that if it might be tried in England, it ought to be tried at York, where the deed is laid to be made, and not at Belford; and it was adjourned. And afterwards in Hill. 21 & 22 the case was argued again, and 3 Cro. 465 was cited, that so it was of Wales and Ireland at the common law; and Mr. Livesay, the Secondary said, that he remembered such a case of Berwick so adjudged and affirmed in error; but it was further objected, that one of the plaintiffs was dead after the verdict, and before the day in Bank; to which it was answered, that no continuances being entered, the judgment may now be entered as at the day in Bank, without any continuances; and Livesay, the Secondary said, that so it had been frequently done, as well in case of the death of the plaintiff, as of the defendant, [253] and so the Court inclined to do; but it was further adjourned, and afterwards, as I heard, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

BISHOP against CORBET.

Debt for tithes, if it lies in the County Court. No prohibition to Inferior Courts without a suggestion.

A prohibition was prayed to the County-Court, for staying a suit there, in debt for tithes on a justicies, for that it is not debitum ex contractu, but ex delicto, founded on a statute, whereof the sheriff has no power to hold plea; and the justicies does not enlarge his jurisdiction to other actions, but only enables him to hold pleas of greater sums than by his ordinary jurisdiction he could: and it was further moved, that the prohibition in this case is grantable, without a suggestion entered, because it is in nature of a supersedeas; which the Court denied; but they held this to be a case very considerable, and therefore directed a suggestion and a declaration thereupon, that the defendant might plead or demur thereto, so that the case might come judicially before the Court.

SIR HENRY NORTH against COX, COM' BANCO.

Prescription to have the sole pasture of a close the whole year.

Trespass by the lord of a manor: the defendant prescribes as tenant to have the sole pasture of a close, omni tempore anni; and the Court was divided in opinion, whether this prescription, to have the sole pasture of a close of the lord omni tempore anni, was good? Wylde and Archer held it good. Vaughan, Chief Justice, and Tyrrel to the contrary; and it was intended to be adjourned into the Exchequer-Chamber, but it was not. See the case in Vaughan's Rep. 251. And afterwards the same case was brought in the King's Bench, and the prescription there adjudged good.

[254] SIR JOHN LENTHALL against COOKE.

Marshal of the King's Bench is within the stat. 23 H. 6, yet may take an obligation for better security, and traverse the ease and favour. S. C. 1 Sid. 389. 1 Saund. 161. 1 Vent. 237. 1 Keb. 422.

Debt on obligation of 3000l. conditioned, that if Algernon Payton, a prisoner in the King's Bench, remains a true prisoner, without making any escape, that the obligation should be void; the defendant pleads the stat. 23 H. 6, and that Payton was a prisoner in execution, and the obligation made for ease and favour; on which the defendant demurs; and it was argued, that prisoners in execution ought to be kept in safe and streight custody, and an obligation for giving them liberty is void at the common law, Plowd. 64 b. and 10 Co. Beaufage's case; also, the marshal of the King's Bench is within the stat. 9 Co. 104 b. And the traversing of the ease and favour was immaterial, for it cannot be intended to be taken for any other thing, and the traverse ought to be, that he took it colore officii: but to this it was answered and resolved, that the traverse of the ease and favour is the most material thing, and it may well be intended to be taken for the better security of his imprisonment. For the prisoners of the King's Bench are so numerous, that the house cannot hold them, but they are permitted to lodge within the rules, and therefore there is good reason to take security for their true imprisonment, and constant usage has been to take such obligations; and Hill. 19 Jac. 1, B. R. Rot. 1202, was produced in Court, where in the like case an issue was taken on a traverse of the ease and favour; and thereupon verdict and judgment for the plaintiff: but by the demurrer here, the defendant had confessed the traverse, and (admitted) that it was not for ease and favour; and therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[255] SUAGTER AND HIS WIFE against DAVIES.

Witch, I will hang you for it, is actionable. S. C. 1 Sid. 386. 2 Keb. 430. Vide 3 Lev. 166, 394, 395, &c. ibid.

Case for saying of the plaintiff's wife, You are a witch, and I will swear it; and if you cross me too much, I will hang you for it: after verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment, that witch is not actionable, without saying that she had bewitched some person; for else it is not felony by the statute. But by the Court, although that the word witch alone is not actionable for the reason aforesaid; yet when it is further said, and I will hang you for it, that shews what witch he intends, viz. such a one as had by her witchcraft committed felony. And judgment was for the plaintiff.

SHEAPE against CULPEPER.

In replevin, the jury not inquiring of the value of the rent arrear, it cannot be supplied by a writ of inquiry. S. C. 1 Sid. 380. 1 Vent. 40. Raym. 170. 2 Keb. 409, 431, 536. Bull. N. P. 58.

In replevin, an avowry was for rent granted by J. S. On issue non concessit, the jury inquire of the value of the cattle, but do not inquire what rent was arrear, so as the beasts may be sold to satisfy it according to the new statute. Car. 2, cap. And now it was moved to have it supplied by a writ of inquiry, as was done in Specott's case in 5 Co. in a quare impedit. (But by) the Court, he may have his judgment (there) according to the common law; but the words of the statute in this case being, That it shall be inquired by the same jury which tries the issue, they doubted if it might be supplied by a writ of inquiry, but it being a new case they would advise. And afterwards in Trinity term 21 Car. 2 it was resolved after several debates, that it cannot be supplied by a writ of inquiry.

WHEATELY against LANE.

Executor charged in debet & detinet on a devastavit. S. C. 1 Saund. 216. 1 Sid. 397. 2 Keb. 544, &c. Ante 231, 232.

Debt in the debet & detinet, on a judgment against an executor, and counts, that he had wasted divers goods to the value of the debt, but does not shew the certainty of the goods [256] wasted. The defendant demurs on the declaration, and it was argued, that this action lies not in the debet, for if so, he shall, (may) charge the executor of an executor, which cannot be, because it is only a personal tort; and 9 H. 6, 9. 3 Cro. 530. 11 H. 4, 56, were cited as authorities for the defendant: to which it was answered, that this is more than a personal tort, for he is charged here with the having of goods and converting them to his own use: the executors of a sheriff shall not be charged for an escape; but if the sheriff levies the money and detains it, his executors shall be charged for it. 1 Cro. Parkinson against Guildford, and as to the case 11 H. 4 there is no devastavit laid. But to maintain this action were cited 11 H. 6, 7, 8, 16, 17, 18, where on a devastavit the executor is chargeable in the debet & detinet, held by Strange, Paston and Rabington. And in Mich. 1655, B. R. Rot. 711, between Cory and Thinne it was so adjudged; and so, as was said, had been Medgly's case in the Common Pleas before that adjudged; and Harewell and Ellis's case in B. R. Rot. 546, Pasch. 15 Car. 2. And of such opinion were the whole Court, and gave judgment for the plaintiff, Pemberton for the defendant.

ANONYMOUS.

Execution to Chester, out of the King's Bench. Post. 291.

It was moved to have restitution of goods, levied by a fieri facias out of this Court in the County-Palatine of Chester, on a judgment originally had in this Court; for that on such a judgment here no fieri facias lies to a County-Palatine, 21 H. 8, 35.

But where a judgment is removed hither for error, and here affirmed, execution may issue out of this Court. But the Court denied the motion, and held, that execution may well issue out of this Court to the County-Palatine, on a judgment originally given in this Court.

[257] BOLTON against FENNE.

Assumpsit by a treasurer of the Navy's clerk, that if he would not trouble his master for the payment of tickets, &c. (whereof the plaintiff was possessed) that he would pay them, a good consideration. S. C. 1 Sid. 392. 2 Keb. 437. 1 Danv. 61.

Assumpsit and declares, that whereas the plaintiff was possessed of several tickets for seamens wages due to them, and had solicited Sir George Carteret, Treasurer of the Navy for the payment of them, who had ordered the defendant his clerk to pay them; the defendant on the plaintiff's requesting him to pay them, in consideration that the plaintiff would no further trouble Sir George Carteret for the payment of them, did assume (i.e.) promise to pay them to the plaintiff. After verdict for the plaintiff on non assumpsit, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that here is not any consideration. First, For that it does not appear, that the plaintiff had any interest in the money, nor authority to receive it; for he does not shew any assignment of the bills, nor letter of attorney or other authority for the plaintiff to receive it. Secondly, That though she would no further trouble Sir George, yet the owners of the money may do it. But by the Court, after a verdict it shall be intended, that the plaintiff either had an interest in the bills by assignment, or authority from the seamen to receive the money, and that the defendant was ordered by Sir George to pay them; and that the intent of this promise and forbearance was no other but that the plaintiff should go no more to Sir George for the money, and thereby discover that the defendant had not paid it according to Sir George's order.

THE KING against TWISLETON AND OTHERS.

Information for seducing an heiress to marry him. S. C. 1 Sid. 387. 2 Keb. 432, 438.

Information, for that the defendants using to come and to be entertained at the house of another, Twisleton seduced his daughter, being his heir apparent to a great estate, to marry him; and that the defendants Twisleton, and the others, without the father's assent, carried the daughter from her father's house, and the defendant Twisleton married her: and on a trial at Bar it appeared in evidence, that the defendant Twisleton being a remote kinsman, and of small fortune, and being frequently entertained at the father's house, made love to the daughter; but [258] no proof was of any seducements, but common compliments among young people; and it was offered in evidence, that the encouragement to this affair proceeded from the daughter, whom the father intended to marry to another kinsman of his own name, of a more considerable estate, whom the daughter did not love so well: and that the daughter by agreement between her and the defendants, went from her father's house to a place appointed, and there met the defendants, and was married to the defendant Twisleton; whereupon the Court directed the jury, that the daughter being of tender years, viz. about sixteen, and a great fortune, this was an offence in the defendants within the information, and that they ought to find them guilty, which they indeed did, but it seemed with some doubt: and afterwards, before any fine imposed, the parties agreed.

[259] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 20 & 21 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

THURSBY against PLANT.

[See S. C. 1 Wms. Saund. 230, 237.]

Assignee of a reversion shall have covenant against the lessee where the lease was made, otherwise of debt. S. C. 1 Sid. 401. 1 Saund. 230, 237. 1 Vent. 10. 2 Keb. 439, 448, 463. 2 Danv. 241, 242.

Covenant, and declares, that the Earl of Lincoln was seized of lands in Lincolnshire; and at London made a lease rendering rent, and that the tenant covenanted to pay the rent, and that afterwards the earl granted the reversion to the plaintiff, and for non-payment of the rent the action was brought and laid in London. The defendant pleads a surrender, on which issue was, and a verdict for the plaintiff; and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the action being brought by the assignee of the reversion ought to be laid in Lincolnshire, where the land lies, (upon the privity of the estate and not at London, upon the privity of contract) where the lease was made, and cited 1 Cro. Board against Cudmore; debt for rent ought to be brought by the assignee in the county where the land lies, on the privity of estate: to which it was answered and resolved by the whole Court, that debt is maintainable only upon the privity of estate, and goes with the reversion at common law, and that an assignee could maintain it before the statute upon the privity of estate, and perception of the profits; but covenant did not go to the assignee before the statute, because it lies only on the privity of contract; and though now by the statute the covenant passes to the assignee, yet the nature thereof is not altered by the statute, but it is assignable only as a contract, and therefore ought to be brought where the [260] contract was made; and there is a great difference between debt for the rent which arises out of the profits of the land, and covenant which is a collateral thing, on which only damages are to be recovered. 2 Cro. Batchellor against Gage. Covenant lies against the lessee after assignment of the term, and acceptance of the rent from the assignee; but debt does not lie. 2 Cro. Brett against Cumberland, and Hill. 15 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 1258. That covenant lies on the privity of contract after assignment; whereupon judgment was given here for the plaintiff by the whole Court, on which the defendant brought a writ of error. But as I heard the parties agreed. Jones for the plaintiff, Sanders for the defendant.

SIR THEOPHILUS BIDDOLPH against TEMPLE.

Debt on a judgment in covenant for the damages recovered, and judgment, and in error on the judgment in debt, bail, on the stat. 3 Jac. 12. Ante 245, 255. Post, 268.

Debt on an obligation for performance of covenants, and a breach assigned, issue, and damages, and judgment for the plaintiff, and debt brought on that judgment, and judgment by default; and error being brought of this last judgment, the question was, whether the plaintiff in the error should find bail on the stat. 3 Jac. 1? For it was agreed, not to be within the stat. of 13 Car. 2. And it was objected, that the original of this action being founded upon covenant, was not within any of the words of the stat. of 3 Jac. 1, which mentions actions of debt for payment of money only, or for rent or contract for money, and that this is none of them; and hereto Twysden inclined. But by Kelynge and Moreton, this last action on which the error is brought was for money only recovered by the first judgment, and within the words, contracts for money; and ruled, that bail should be found. See Mich. 29 Car. 2, B. R. Taylor against Baker, judgment in debt on an obligation for payment of money, and debt brought upon that judgment, and another judgment thereupon; and in error on the latter judgment it was doubted, whether bail should be found.

[261] BARNES against BRUDDEL.

She had a child, whereby she lost the favour of her parents, not actionable. S. C. 1 Vent. 4. 2 Keb. 451. 1 Sid. 396.

Case for saying of her, being a virgin of good fame, She was with child by Simons; whereby she was in her parents displeasure, and in danger of being put out of their house; afterwards judgment was stayed, for that the words are not actionable, there being no loss of marriage, which was the sole reason of Anne Davies's case: and the case in 1 Roll. 35. An action for saying, She was with child, whereby she lost the society of her neighbours, held not to be law; but that 3 Cro. 639, She had a child, and if she have not a child she has made it away, may be law, because it imports felony.

But note, in that case loss of marriage is laid also.

PARKER against AMYS, &c.

Debt against two executors, they plead a judgment against one as administrator, and well. S. C. 1 Sid. 404.

Debt against two as executors; they plead a judgment against one of them as administrator: the plaintiff demurs; and it was objected, 1. Because the action and judgment is against him as administrator, which he could have avoided by pleading in abatement, that he was executor. 2. That was only against one, which does not lie without the others; to which it was answered and resolved, that the judgment is well pleadable in bar; and as to the first was cited 3 Cro. 646, adjudged in point, and the case of Wheatly and Lane in this Court, ant. 231, 255. And as to the 2d point, 3 Cro. 437. And although the action was not well brought, yet the defendant was not obliged to plead in abatement, and put himself to greater charge, for as much as there was a true debt due, and a recovery had upon the right of the debt.

[262] WILMOTT against NIXON.

Case against a foreigner, for using a trade in a market-town, whereby the plaintiff, a freeman, had less trade. S. C. 2 Keb. 464. Cro. Eliz. 392. N. Lutw. 528.

Case, that whereas in Derby there is a custom, that every butcher in Derby having served an apprenticeship for seven years, might use that trade without damages of another, or from another; that the defendant not being a freeman nor having served an apprenticeship, sold flesh in Derby such a day, not being a market-day, whereby the plaintiff could not sell so much as otherwise he might, to his damage, &c. The defendant demurs: 1st. Because the custom is not laid positively in fact, that he did use; but only potentially, that he might use 22 E. 4. 2dly. There is no by-law to restrain foreigners from selling; and without a custom or by-law, any foreigner may sell in market-towns, except on the market-days. 3dly. That he sold flesh, is not sufficient; for it may be a horse, or a dog: and upon these exceptions judgment was given for the defendant.

FORTH against STANTON.

[See S. C. 1 Wms. Saund. 210.]

A stranger promises a creditor, if he will accept him for his debtor, to pay, &c. S. C. 2 Keb. 465. 1 Saund. 210. 1 Jo. 87.

Assumpsit, for that the defendant's testator being indebted to a stranger, who assigned the debt to the plaintiff, and authorised him to receive it; the defendant being the executor, promised the plaintiff, that in consideration he would accept him for his debtor, to pay it to the plaintiff: and upon demurrer it was adjudged for the defendant. For here is no consideration of forbearance, but to accept him for his debtor, which he is not; for he is still debtor to the first creditor: and the authority to receive it is determined by the death of the testator, and differenced it from Russel and Haddock's case ante, where he who had the authority to receive the debt before.

[263] JORY against PAWLY.

A copyholder convicted of felony has clergy. Q. If a forfeiture of the copyhold. S. C. 2 Keb. 451, 466. Vide ante 63.

Ejectment, and on not guilty and a special verdict the case was: a copyholder of inheritance is convicted of felony, and has clergy allowed before attainder; and if this be a forfeiture of his estate, so that the lord may enter without a special custom: and it was argued, that it is, for it is a determination of the will. 5 Co. Oland's case, 4 Co. Brown's case. 1 Leon. 1. A copyhold is forfeited by the committing of felony, 1 Bulst. 13. A copyholder convicted of felony is disabled to be of a jury, and so he cannot do his service to the lord. But on the other side it was said, that a conviction does not disable from serving on a jury; and so inclined the Court; and as to the case in 1 Leon. there is a custom found, which is not so here; and the Court inclined strongly, that it is not any forfeiture without a special custom: but on the importunity of counsel it was appointed to be argued again at Bar the next term.

SALMON against SMITH.

Debt on a lease of four acres; the defendant pleads that the lease was of five acres, and an entry in the fifth, he ought to traverse the lease of the four acres only. S. C. 2 Keb. 467. 1 Saund. 206. 1 Sid. 405. Raym. 175.

Debt for rent, and declares on a lease of four acres of land, at 5l. rent, and for rent arrear he brought the action: the defendant pleads to part nil debet, and to the residue he pleads, that the lease was of the said four acres, and of one acre more; and that before the rent was arrear the plaintiff entered into the fifth acre: on which the plaintiff demurs; and the reason shewn on the argument was, for that he did not traverse, that he demised the four acres only: but on the other side it was said for the defendant, that the traverse ought to have come on the plaintiff's part, viz. he ought in his replication to have maintained the lease in the declaration, and have traversed, that he demised the fifth acre to [264] which it was answered, that that would be a departure from his declaration, and therefore the traverse ought to be on the defendant's part; for when he pleads another lease than that upon which the plaintiff declared, he ought to traverse the lease on which the plaintiff declared, viz. to plead the lease of the fifth acre, absque hoc that he demised the four acres only: and so held the Court, and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

MAN against COOPER.

Act of Parliament to continue three years and to the end of the next sessions, shall continue till the end of the next session which begins after the three years. S. C. 2 Keb. 495.

Assumpsit for money received to his use, and verdict and judgment for the plaintiff; and thereupon error brought, and it was moved to have it allowed without bail, for the statute 17 Car. 2, which appoints bail in this case, was only to endure for three years, and to the end of the next session of Parliament; and that the next session after the three years, ended the first of March, 21 Car. 2. But by the Court, although that this last session ended the first of March, 21 Car. 2, and that was after the three years, yet that sessions commenced within the three years, and the statute is to be intended of a session which commenced after the three years ended afterwards; and not of a sessions which commenced within the three years, and ended after the three years. And so it was resolved in the Common Pleas this very term, as Lockhaut the Prothonotary informed me.

STONE'S CASE.

Attorney. Copyholder, privileged from being reeve by custom. S. C. 1 Ven. 16, 29. 2 Keb. 486, 491, 508. Kaym. 179. Vide ante 233.

A writ of privilege was granted for exempting him from being reeve to the lord of the manor of Harrow on the Hill, to collect the lord's rents there, he being an attorney of this Court; and though it was objected, that [266] he was a copyholder, and was by custom to serve, as a thing incident to his estate, created by the same custom, and also said, that he may execute it by deputy; yet the Court granted the writ: for as to the first it was said, that the privilege of this Court is as ancient as the custom of any manor; and as to the second, he is responsible for his deputy.

[267] TERM. SANCT. TRIN. ANNO 21 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

JURADO against GREGORY.

Suit here for executing a sentence in the Admiralty of Spain, for a thing done upon the land. S. C. 1 Vent. 32. 1 Sid. 418. 2 Keb. 511, 610.

A prohibition was prayed to the Admiralty on a suggestion, that the contract was made on land at Malaga in Spain, to receive merchandizes on board a ship there, and to carry them to another place: to which it was said, that though the contract was so made, yet there was a sentence on a suit in the Admiralty in Spain, and the suit here is no more than to execute that sentence here, and in such a case no prohibition lies; and cited 1 Roll. Abr. tit. Courts, sect. Admiralty, to be in point; and to that the Court inclined: but then it was said, that the sentence there was not peremptory and final to pay any thing for the non-performance, but only interlocutory, that he should receive and carry the goods according to the agreement; but here the suit is for damages for not receiving and carrying, for which an action on the case lies: whereupon it was ruled, that the plaintiff should declare on the suggestion, so that on pleading the matter might come judicially in question.

[268] CASTLE against WILLER EXECUTOR OF WILLER.

An executor finds bail in Inferior Court, the cause being removed he shall not find bail above: see the contrary held by Twysden, ante 245, Fitz-Williams against More. S. C. 1 Sid. 418. 2 Keb. 512.

The defendant was sued in the Palace-Court as executor, and was there compelled to find bail according to the course of that Court; he removes the cause by habeas corpus, and now the question was, whether he should find special bail here? And resolved, he should not: for tho' it be generally used, that when a cause is removed by habeas corpus to find bail in all cases where bail is found in the Inferior Court, yet this shall not extend to the case of an executor, where the cause did not require special bail by the course of the Court, except in the case of a devastavit. But in other cases where special bail is found below it shall be found here, altho' the cause of action be of a less sum, than, by the course of this Court, special bail is to be found.

Prescription for the sole pasture for all the year. S. C. ante, 253. 1 Vent. 383. 1 Saund. 350. 2 Keb. 513, 517. Vaugh. 251. Cart. 199.

In replevin the defendant makes conuzance as bailiff of Sir Henry North, for damage feasant in his freehold in Delf, parcel of a great farm within his manor of D. The plaintiff in bar of the conusance said, that there are divers freeehold and copyhold tenements within the manor, and that he is seized of a freehold tenement there; and that he, and the other freeholders, and all those whose estates they have, time out of mind, &c. together with the copyholders, have had solam & separalem pasturam of the said place, omni anno omni tempore anni; and then he pleads a custom, that the copyholders, together with the freeholders, time whereof, &c. have had solam & separalem pasturam omni anno omni tempore anni, &c. on which plea in bar the plaintiff demurs generally: and first, Exceptions were taken to the pleading, viz. 1. The prescription in himself, and all the freeholders, is not good, for each ought to prescribe for himself, and not for himself, and all the other freeholders. 2. [269] He prescribes for himself, and all the freeholders, together with the copy-holders; and yet he lays a custom for the copyholders, together with the freeholders, and so mixes a prescription and a custom together, which cannot be; for the one is laid in the person, and the other in the place. But he ought to have said, that he, and all those whose estate he has, together with the freeholders, and copyholders, time out of mind, &c. have had, &c. But the Court over-ruled the exceptions, on a case between Kettleborough and Wells, Trin. 1654, Rot. 549, where such pleading was adjudged good. And (then) as to the matter, it was argued, that the prescription to have solam pasturam, and exclude the lord, is not good; for which purpose were cited Fitz. Prescription 51. Hut. 45. Co. Lit. 122. Yelv. 129. 2 Cro. 208. Yelv. 187. 2 Cro. 256, from whence they inferred, that the tenants might prescribe to have part of the profits for part of the year; but here it is to exclude the lord from all the profits, and is like a custom, to have all the common, and exclude the lord. But to this it was answered, and resolved, that this is not to exclude the lord from all the profits, for he shall have the mines, the trees, &c. and it is not like a prescription to have the whole common, and to exclude the lord, for that is repugnant; for in all cases of common the lord is to inter-common with the tenants, in the nature of commoner, and therefore to exclude the lord is repugnant to the essence of common; and judgment was given for the defendant. See Vaugh. Rep. 251, where the Court was divided in a like case, in Communi Banco, viz. Vaughan and Tirrel against the custom, and Archer and Wylde for it. And see hereafter in Easter term, 22 Car. 2, B. R. between Hopkins and Robinson, such a custom admitted to be good.

[270] FREEMAN against BARNES.

Lease for 100 years in trust for him in reversion: he in reversion leases for 54 years, and levies a fine to corroborate for 100 years, he is barred thereby. S. C. 1 Sid. 349, 458. 1 Vent. 55, 80, 88. 2 Keb. 521, 650, 597. Cart. 161, 195. Hard. 400, 401, &c.

Error of a judgment in ejectment in the Common Pleas, where on a special verdict the case was this. The Marquess of Winchester being seised in fee, made a lease for 100 years to attend the reversion, the lessee actually enters and makes a lease for 54 years to the defendant in the ejectment, and for confirmation of the term of 54 years, levies a fine sur conuzance de droit; the lessee for 54 years enters, and the lessee for 100 years being out of possession, assigns his term to the plaintiff in ejectment, against whom judgment was given in the Common Pleas, whereupon he brought error, and two points were twice argued at the Bar in this term, and Michaelmas following, by Jones and Levinz for the plaintiff in error, and by Winnington and Finch, the King's Solicitor, for the defendant; and two questions were made, 1st, If the fine, and five years possession barred the lease for 100 years? 2dly, If the assignment by the lessee for 100 years, the lessee for 54 years being in, and he out of possession, be good? And as to the first, it was argued for the plaintiff in the error, that the marquess, by his entry on the lessee for 100 years, was not a disseisor, the reversion being in himself, but was tenant at will to the lessee for 100 years. Lit. sect. 462, 463. 2dly, That the marquess by making the lease for 54 years, cannot be a disseisor for the same reason. And the lessee for years, or at will of a stranger, making a lease for years, is not a disseisor without an intent, or at most at the election of the party. Co. Lit. 153 b. Cro. Car. Blunden against Baugh. 2 Cro. Powsly against Blackman. 3dly, That the fine is no bar, because the lease for 100 years was not displaced (divested) either before, or by the fine. 5 Co. Rep. Saffin's case. 9 Co. Podger's case. The conuzor being tenant at will, it was not such an estate as would pass by the fine; for if tenant at will levies a fine, that the parties had nothing, &c. may be pleaded thereto. But (here) the conuzor had also the reversion in fee which passed by and satisfied the fine, but did not touch the lease at will, or for years; and as to the opinion in the case of Isham and Morris to the contrary, that was but a sudden ([271] opinion) and (only) on evidence; and it would be very inconvenient if a fine should bar terms for years (settled) in trust to attend the inheritance; for in all purchases, precedent mortgages and incumbrances are kept on foot for securing the estate; and if those should be barred by fines levied by the owners of the inheritance, it would destroy their own titles; and Founds and Salisbury's case in the Exchequer, 16 Car. 2, was held contrary to Isham and Morris's case, on a special verdict. Also leases in trust are not barred by fines, for they attend the estates passed by the fines, and therefore no need to bar them: Bridgman Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, was of opinion, that the lease in the case at Bar for 100 years, was no bar; but he was removed into Chancery before the judgment given. And as to the second point they argued, that the lease for 100 years not being barred, the lessee may assign it over without entry into the land, for the possession of cestuy que trust, and all claiming under him, is the possession of the lessee for 100 years. Latch. 75, Fisher's case, tenant for years, lets at will, tenant at will lets for years, the reversion of the first lessee for years is not displaced, but is assignable over. See also 2 Cro. Powsly against Blackman. But on the other side it was argued, that leases for years are as well barred by fines as freeholds. 5 Co. Saffin's case; and Cro. Car. Isham against Morris, is a case in point; and they also cited Founds and Salisbury's case; as for them; see that case now in print in Serjeant Hardres's Reports, fo. 400. And the mischief would be great if leases for years should not be barred by fines, for if they should not, they may arise as incumbrances on the lands many years after purchases or marriage-settlements. And as to the second point they said, it is not material whether the fine be a bar or not; if it be a divesting of the estate it is not assignable without entry, and the lease for 100 years is divested by the making of the term for fifty-four years, and the fine. Tenant at will ought to be at the will of both the parties, and when a tenant at will grants a term, he thereby determines his will, and passes a new estate, which divests the reversion of the first term; and there may be a divesting of an estate without a disseisin or bar. Hob. 332. Also, there may be a disseisin or divesting at election; but who shall have the election? Not the lessee for 100 years by the marquess, but the marquess (himself) shall have the election, and here he has done that by the levying [272] of the fine for corroborating the new term of fifty-four years. And afterwards in Easter term, 22 Car. 2, the Court delivered their opinion, and they all, viz. Kelynge, Twysden, and Moreton, held, that the term for 100 years, was divested by the making of the lease for fifty-four years; and that the marquess shall have the election, whether it shall be divested or not, and not the lessee, who is only a trustee for the marquess, and that the marquess had made his election by levying of the fine to corroborate the term of fifty-four years; and they all agreed, that the lease for 100 years was barred by the fine, because it was turned to a right by the making of the lease for fifty-four years before the fine: and it was said by the Chief Justice, and not denied, that incumbrances kept on foot by purchasers should not be barred by fines: and also, that where a mortgagor retains the possession and pays the interest, yet the fine by a mortgagor so holding the possession, shall not bar the mortgagee; and the judgment in the Common Pleas was affirmed.

STOKES against STOKES.

Obligee in trust for others, releases to the obligor all demands on his own account, it does not release the obligation. S. C. 2 Keb. 530, 613. 1 Vent. 35.

Debt on obligation; the defendant pleads a release, and it is entered, reciting, that whereas J. S. had arrested the defendant in the name of the plaintiff, without his knowledge, he thereby released to the defendant all demands on his own account; and it appeared, that this obligation was taken by J. S. in the plaintiff's name, in trust for the children of J. S. and that thereupon J. S. caused the defendant to be arrested in the plaintiff's name, and thereupon the release was given; and it was adjudged, that the obligation was not released thereby; for although it was taken in the name of the plaintiff, yet it was not on the plaintiff's account, but on account of the children of J. S. and those words, on his own account, were put in to some purpose, and to no other purpose could it be, but to distinguish demands which he had in his own right, from such things (or demands) which he had in right or in trust for others.

[273] WELLS, EXECUTOR OF WELLS against WELLS.

Release of an equitable interest, a good consideration in an assumpsit. S. C. 1 Keb. 531. 1 Vent. 40.

Assumpsit, whereas the defendant and the plaintiff's testator had contracted to make a certain quantity of bricks for Potter, at a certain price; the defendant in consideration the plaintiff would relinquish his interest in the bargain, promised to pay him 10l. After verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment, that there is no consideration, for the interest of the partnership survives to the defendant, and the plaintiff had no interest to relinquish: but judgment was given for the plaintiff, for he might have an equitable interest by the bringing in of materials, on which the defendant might be charged by a bill in equity.

HODGSON against HARRIS.

Statute of Limitations doe not extend to debt upon an award, or a copyhold fine. S. C. 1 Sid. 415. 2 Keb. 462, 497, 533. 2 Saund. 64, 60. Ld. Raym. 248. Com. Dig. 260. Cowp. 375.

Debt on an award; the defendant pleads the Statute of Limitations: on which the plaintiff demurs, because by Saunders it is not a debt upon a contract or lending within the words of the statute: to which it was answered by Jones, that the submission to the award is a contract to pay the sum awarded: and cited 3 Cro. 600, Bowyer against Garland. The Court inclined to the opinion, that it was not within the statute: and Twysden said, that debt for a copyhold fine had been adjudged not to be within the statute; whereupon Jones offered to waive the demurrer and go to issue, which Saunders refused; and it was adjourned.

THE LADY BROUGHTON against HOLTE.

Petit judicium omitting damages, ill on a special demurrer. S. C. 2 Keb. 514. Raym. 182. Vide ante.

Trespass for taking his cattle; the defendant makes a special justification; the plaintiff replied and averred the justification, and concluded et hoc paratus, &c. unde petit judicium si ab actione præcludi debet: the defendant demurred specially, because it is not concluded petit judicium & dampna sua sibi adjudicari; whereupon the plaintiff by rule of Court, upon payment of costs, had liberty to amend.

PORDAGE against COLE.

[See S. C. 1 Wms. Saund. 319.]

Agreement to pay 70l. for a house, for, does not make a condition precedent, but it is a mutual agreement. S. C. 1 Vent. 183. 1 Sid. 423. 1 Saund. 319. Raym. 183. Roll. 14. 2 Keb. 542. 2 Danv. 229, pl. 1.

Debt on an obligation for 70l. The defendant demands oyer of it, which is entered thus; Memorandum, That such a day it is agreed between the plaintiff and defendant, that the defendant the first of October next, pay the plaintiff 70l. for such a house; in witness whereof we have hereto mutually set our hands and seals: on which the defendant demurred; and it was now objected for the defendant, that the declaration was ill, it not having averred that the plaintiff had conveyed the house to the defendant, and that pro (for) is a condition precedent, 7 Co. Ughtred's case; and if it be not a condition precedent the defendant has no remedy for the house; for though that both sealed, yet it is not an indenture of two parts, nor like to the case in 3, Hoe against Taylor, it is agreed between the parties lessee to repair, lessor to find great timber; where it is a mutual covenant. To which it was answered, It ought to be intended that the house was conveyed before, for it is not to pay 70l. for the conveyance of the house, but for the house itself; and the Court held it a mutual covenant: and if the house was not conveyed before, as it may be intended it was, the defendant may have an action of covenant for the house, for it is to be intended, that the plaintiff sealed to the defendant another part, by these words, have mutually set their hands and seals; and upon the first [275] argument, they gave judgment for the plaintiff, on which the defendant brought a writ of error, and the judgment was affirmed in the Exchequer-Chamber.

DOWSE against SWAYNE.

Action for causing him to be arrested for 500l. to hinder him of bail, where only 200l. was due. S. C. 1 Sid. 424. Raym. 176. 1 Mod. 4. 2 Keb. 546. 1 Salk. 14, 15.

Case, and declares, that the defendant having no cause of action beyond the value of 40l. did falsly and maliciously bring an action against him by bill of privilege in the Common Pleas, where no sum is expressed in the writ, and caused the sheriff to arrest him for 500l. and to hold him to such bail as he could not find, whereby he was forced to lie in prison such a time. The defendant pleads, that he had cause of action to the value of 200l. absque hoc, that he informed the sheriff that he had cause of action for 500l. and after verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that there was a just cause of action, as appears as well by the declaration, as by the plea, and the enlarging of the sum is not any crime; for a man may not certainly know his proper cause of action, or what is due to him. (But) the Court to the contrary. It is laid, that he did falsly and maliciously charge him with a greater sum than is due, to hinder him of bail, and it is so found by the jury, and thereby he was forced to lie in prison; wherefore the action well lies; and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

STRIBLER against JONES AND WATERS.

Case for falsly procuring him to be arrested for 500l. where the plaintiff had no cause of action, or at least not so great a cause.

Case, and declares, that the defendant falsly and maliciously devising to dampnify him, and to hinder him from going about his affairs, sued a latitat against him out of the King's Bench in trespass, with ac etiam assumpsit for 500l. and caused him to be arrested and imprisoned for such a time, whereas in truth he had not any cause of action, vel saltem non tantum causam actionis. After verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that it is not positively said, that he had not cause of action; but none, or at least not so great; and it is not so great if it fails but of 1s. of so much. But the Court to the contrary, it is found to be done maliciously, wherefore judgment was ruled for the plaintiff. But for that [276] the teste and return of the lat' was not certainly shewn, the Court would advise upon this execution.

SEAMONE against MORE.

Inchanter, and madest a bullock run mad, &c. not actionable. S. C. 1 Sid. 424. 2 Keb. 548.

Case for these words, Thou art an inchanter, and inchantedest a bullock, and madest him run mad about the common. After verdict judgment was stayed; for an inchanter is no more than a cheat, who deals in charms to cheat, and is not a witch; and to make a bullock run mad about the common may be by chasing and chasing him.

DRAKE against HILL.

He is fled and gone (of a merchant) and I shall lose my money. S. C. 1 Sid. 424. Raym. 184. 2 Keb. 549.

Case for saying of the plaintiff, being a merchant, He is fled and gone; and I shall lose my money; and at another day, He is a beggarly fellow, not worth a groat; nor able to pay his debts. After verdict, and entire damages, it was moved, that the last words are not actionable, and the damages being intire, no judgment could be. Beggarly fellow is not, nor is not worth a groat, and cited Moone and Monham's case to be so adjudged; and not able to pay his debts, is not; for a man of a great ability may have his estate so out of his hands that he cannot pay his debts; but the Court were of opinion, that the last words were as actionable as the first; but on the importunity of Serjeant Maynard, who moved it, the judgment was stayed for a fortnight.

[277] EARL OF PETERBOROUGH against SIR JOHN MORDANT.

Scandalum magnatum for saying I met my lord's servant, who I know not, but my lord sent to take my purse. S. C. 1 Vent. 59. 1 Sid. 434. 2 Keb. 537, 559, 605. I heard a bird sing, or I dreamed J. S. stole a horse.

Scandalum magnatum, for that the defendant said to J. S. servant of the earl, I met J. D., (another servant of the earl) whom I do not know, but my lord sent after me to take my purse, judgment by default, and before a writ of inquiry executed, the judgment was stayed on Jones's motion; for that it is not positively said, that my lord sent him to take my purse, but I do not know but he did. Also it is not said, that he sent to rob him, but to take his purse, which might be by way of trespass: but now it was answered by North, that though the words are not positive and affirmative, that the earl sent him, yet they are tantamount in the understanding of the common people; and such oblique words have been adjudged actionable in the case of a commoner, and much more in the case of a peer. As, I heard a bird sing, that you have committed felony; or I dreamed so: and although it is not here said, feloniously to take the purse, which might be a good exception in the case of a common person, yet it is otherwise in the case of a peer. Crompt. Jurisdiction of Courts, 13 Leon. 336. And of that opinion was the Court after several motions, and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

BURNET against HOLDEN, EXECUTOR OF GREENHILL.

Judgment in assumpsit had after the defendant's death, and before the day in Bank. S. C. 1 Mod. 6. Raym. 210.

A scire facias against the defendant as executor on a judgment in assumpsit against the testator: the defendant demands oyer of the judgment, on which it appeared, that the testator died after the verdict had for the plaintiff on non assumpsit; and before the day in Bank (leaving the defendant his executor) and the judgment on which the plaintiff brought the scire facias, was entered the next term, on the new statute made at Oxford, and the defendant pleads a debt due to him [278] by obligation of the testator for 100l. and a judgment by the testator to the Lord Arlington; and that he had not assets beyond 40l. which he retained to satisfy himself, and the Lord Arlington: on which the plaintiff demurs, and now the principal question was, If this judgment to the plaintiff shall so relate as to be to all intents as a judgment had against the testator in his life? And the case was argued at the Bar three several times, viz. in Mich. 21 Car. 2, and in Hillary following, and afterwards in Trin. 23 Car. 2, when Hale was Chief Justice, by Coleman, and twice by Saunders for the plaintiff, and by Jones, Winnington, and Levinz for the defendant. And for the plaintiff it was argued, that by the aid of the statute, this judgment is now made a judgment against the testator, although he was dead before; and is unavoidable, and so is payable before debts on obligations: also, that the judgment had by the Lord

Arlington, whereon no scire facias is sued, is not pleadable against this judgment on which a scire facias is sued. But for the defendant it was argued, that the intent of the statute was solely to make the judgment good, and not voidable by error; for the statute says, for avoiding suits and delays, be it enacted, that the death of the defendant after verdict, and before the day in Bank, shall not be assigned, so that it be entered within such a time afterward. Q. But it does not say, that the judgment shall be good and effectual as if he had been living; for after the death of the testator, a retainer to satisfy himself (his own debt) before the judgment, had been a good administration; and now by the judgment afterwards it shall be a mal administration, and a devastavit, by satisfying a debt on an obligation, before a debt on simple contract, (with such judgment). And also shall make a judgment, which was good, without a scire facias sued thereon, not pleadable, nor satisfiable by that scire facias entered on this judgment on simple contract, which at the time of the testator's death was not payable 'till (after) both the debts on the judgment, and the obligation, and (all) this by relation, which is but a fiction in law. And suppose he had devised his lands, though the devise was good at his death, yet should the land be chargeable by this judgment had after his death. In Mich. 21 Car. 2, Twysden and Moreton held against the plaintiff, but Kelynge and Rainsford for the plaintiff. But in Trin. 23 judgment was given for the plaintiff by Hale and Moreton, Twysden continuing of the contrary opinion, and Rainsford saying nothing.

[279] SMITH against WHEELER.

A settlement with a proviso, that if he be minded to revoke, and declare his mind by writing under his hand and seal, that he may revoke, is personal and not forfeited by treason. 1 Hales P. C. 248. 1 Wils. 176. 3 Com. Dig. 382. 5 Com. Dig. 655. 1 Bl. Rep. 459. S. C. 1 Vent. 128. 1 Mod. 16, 38. 2 Keb. 564, 608, 644, 763, 772.

Error of a judgment in ejectment in the Common Pleas, where on a special verdict the case was, Anthony Mayne possessed of a long term, assigned it in trust for himself for life, with a power for him to make leases; and after his death in trust to raise several sums of money for several of his kindred; the residue of the trust for one of his sisters; provided, that if he left issue for his wife enseint, that he might dispose of it to his issue: and another proviso, that if he shall be minded to dispose it otherwise, and declare his mind so by writing under his hand and seal, that he might do so: he was attained of treason for the murther of King Charles I. And if the term was forfeited for the King? was the question. And adjudged in the Common Pleas, that it was not forfeited: and now it was argued by Pemberton for the plaintiff in the error, who was also plaintiff in the Common Pleas, (and judgment there given against him, being the King's patentee) and Coleman for the defendant. And afterwards in Easter term it was argued by Jones for the plaintiff, and by Winnington for the defendant. And for the plaintiff it was said, that it was fraud apparent, of which the Court might judge, for the trust was for himself, and he took the profits, he had power to make leases, and he had power to revoke; and it appears by the verdict, that the trustees did not know of the trust or estate, Lane's Rep. 42, and Twine's case, and Pauncefoot's case in 3 Cro. were cited. But on the other side it was said, that the Court could not judge of fraud, and the jury have not found any, 10 Co. Chancellor of Oxford's case, and the proviso to revoke is personal to himself, if he be minded to revoke, and do revoke by writing under his hand and seal, Duke of Norfolk's case cited in Englefield's case. Kelynge when he was Chief Justice, and Twysden, inclined that it was forfeited. But afterwards in Easter term, 23 Car. 2, Hale being Chief Justice, the case was argued by the whole Court seriatim, and it was adjudged, that the term was not forfeited, and the judgment in the [280] Common Pleas was affirmed; and they all held it a case directly within The Duke of Norfolk's case, and not a trust forfeitable to the King, according to Sir J. Duncomb's case, in 2 Cro. 512.

Assumpsit, in consideration that he would provide medicines, and would employ his endeavour, and would cure J. S. to pay him so much as he deserved; and avers, that he found medicines and employed his endeavour, and that it was of the value of 10l. And also in consideration that he had provided medicines, and employed his labour and pains, and had cured J. S. After verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest, &c. That it is not averred in the first assumpsit, that he had cured; and it is part of the consideration that he would cure J. S. and that the damages being intire, the plaintiff could not have judgment, but by the Court, it is certain upon the whole matter that J. S. is cured; for it shall be intended after verdict, that it is the same person, the same malady, and the same cure; and they gave judgment for the plaintiff, for it is but the same cause of action laid several ways, as is usual in assumpsit.— See hereafter p. 298.

SIR JOHN CARN against OSGOOD.

He is a forsworn justice of peace, actionable though no colloquium. S. C. 1 Vent. 50. 1 Sid. 432. 1 Mod. 22. 2 Keb. 548, 579. Nelson's Lutw. 409, actionable. Tide Style 22, 210. 1 Mod. 23, & ante 52. Stra. 618, 696, 1169. 4 Bac. Abr. 504, 513, 514.

Case, for saying of him being a justice of peace (but does not lay any colloquium of his office of justice of peace) He is a forsworn justice, and not fit to sit upon a Bench. After verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment, that there is not any colloquium of his office of justice. But by the Court, there needs not, for by the words themselves, it appears they were spoken of him in respect of his office.

[281] JEFFERIES against DEE, ADMINISTRATOR OF EVERARD.

An executor pleads several judgments, &c. the plaintiff may reply to all, or to as many of them as he pleases. Vid. 2 Saund. 48, 49. 1 Mod. 3. 2 Keb. 591. Ante 132, 200, 201, 255, 256, 261.

Assumpsit upon a promise of the testator for 1000l. The defendant pleads a recognizance in Chancery for 2000l. and several judgments against himself, after the exhibiting of the bill, and pleads payment of them severally, and pleads several obligations to several persons, and payment of them after the exhibiting of the bill; and that he had fully administered, and that he has not, nor at any time after the bill had any goods, except goods to the value of the several sums paid on the said several judgments and obligations, and except goods to the value of 5l. which are chargeable, and not sufficient to satisfy the recognizance; the plaintiff replies by protestation, that the judgments were had by fraud and covin, for plea he says, that the defendant did not pay the money on the said judgment to A. nor on the said judgment to B. &c. and so of the rest; and in like manner he pleads non-payment severally of the said several sums on the said several obligations, but omitting some of them; and for this puts himself on his country; and as to the recognizance says, it was satisfied, but kept on foot by fraud and covin: whereupon the defendant demurs; and now he excepted to the replication. First, For that it was double and manifold by putting all the particulars in issue, where the non-payment of one would have made an end of all: but it was not allowed, for the plaintiff has election to traverse one thing only, or every one, for he may be mistaken in one; and therefore it is good to traverse as many of the matters as he pleases; and so it was done in Tresham's case, and in Turner's case in Coke's Reports, and all the precedents are so. Secondly, It was held, that the pleading non solvit to one (thing) and not to another, &c. and then concluding et de hoc ponit se, &c. was good, for there are several issues included under the et de hoc ponit se, &c. and that it is not a multifarious issue as was objected. Thirdly, That the omission of pleading to any of the sums paid on the obligations shall not hurt, for he may plead to as many of them as he pleases, and omit the others. Fourthly, Although he mistake some of the sums, to which he pleaded non solvit, it shall not hurt; for it is no more than if he had said nothing to them: and judgment was given for the plaintiff, I myself being of councel with the defendant.

WILBRAHAM against SNOW.

[See S. C. 2 Wms. Saunders 47.]

A sheriff shall have trover for goods levied in execution taken from him. S. C. 1 Sid. 438. 1 Vent. 52. 1 Mod. 12, 30. 2 Saund. 47, 345. 2 Keb. 588. 1 Danv. 20, 4 & 5. 1 Bulst. 68. 2 Bulst. 135. 2 Mod. 245. 6 Mod. 212, 291. 2 Bac. Abr. 370. 5 Bac. Abr. 267. Cowp. 406. 2 Hawk. 67, 418. 1 Term Rep. 730.

Trover, and on not guilty a special verdict, viz. the sheriff took goods by a fi. fa. a stranger takes them from him; and whether trover lies for the sheriff was the question? It was argued by Sympson for the plaintiff, and Winnington for the defendant: and for the plaintiff it was compared to the case of a carrier, 1 Roll. Abr. 5, for whom it lies by reason of the special property which he has, seeing he is responsible for them: to which it was answered, it is not like that case, for the absolute property remains in the owner after the seizure; as Dyer 98, 99. Yelv. 44, and that the sheriff might have trespass, but not this action. But the whole Court to the contrary, the sheriff has a special property sufficient to maintain this action; and they gave judgment for the plaintiff. And by Kelynge Chief Justice, the property is altered from the owner and given to the party, at whose suit. Quære of this.

JONES against TRESILIAN.

In battery, plaintiff replies, he softly assaulted the defendant in defence of his own person. S. C. 1 Sid. 441. 1 Mod. 36. 2 Keb. 397.

Battery, the defendant pleads son assault demesne: the plaintiff replies, that he was standing in his gate, and that the defendant being on his horse, offered to ride over him, whereupon [283] he molliter assaulted the plaintiff in defence of his person, which is the same assault in the bar. The defendant demurs, and the replication was adjudged ill, for thereby he has now confessed he first assaulted; but he ought to have said, molliter manus imposuit on the plaintiff, to hinder him from riding over him: and judgment was given for the defendant.

LEECH against MIDGLY.

In trespass, that which comes under the ita quod for aggravation of damages, need not be traversed. Q. S. C. 1 Vent. 54. Raym. 185. 2 Keb. 590, 601.

Trespass for chasing 40 of the plaintiff's sheep, so that by that chasing they were much damnified, and one of them died. The defendant justified for damage feasant in his freehold. The plaintiff replies, and claims common in the place where, &c. The defendant rejoins, and justifies by inclosing, leaving sufficient common for all beasts levant and couchant on the plaintiff's tenement. The defendant demurs, and now by Weston and Levinz, (it was argued) the bar was ill, in not answering to the death of one of the sheep, and he ought to have traversed the driving, on which he died, and cited 3 Cro. 384, Hill against Prideaux. Jones to the contrary argued, that it need not, it coming only under the ita quod, which is but for aggravation of damages. And Kelynge Chief Justice held the bar good, for the reason given by Jones; and yet in that case in 3 Cro. it came under the ita quod, as here. The other three held it was cured, at least by the replication over; and judgment was given for the defendant.

JEFFERSON against DAWSON.

Issue for part, and demurrer in Chancery for other part, and both sent hither. Judgment here on both. S. C. 1 Sid. 436. 1 Mod. 29. 2 Saund. 13, 27. 2 Keb. 387, 621. 1 Danv. 776.

A scire facias in the Petty-Bag in Chancery, and there as to part issue was joined, and a demurrer joined as to the other part, and the record sent hither to try the issue, which being done, and a verdict given, they also argued the demurrer here, and gave judgment on both. To which it was objected, that the issue was sent hither, because the Chancery could not try it; but that the judgment ought to be given, and the demurrer argued there. But upon argument it was resolved, that the judgment was well given upon both [284] here; although that the Chancery might have given judgment upon the demurrer, before it came hither.

THE KING against NEWMAN IN CHANCERY.

Devise of lands to a college, notwithstanding the Statute of Mortmain. Vide 4 Co. Adams v. Lambert. Moore Char. Uses 79, 82, 83. Moore's Rep. 640, 888, 822, 890. Hob. 136.

Information, that Stephen Newman seized of lands, devised them to Trinity College in Cambridge; for the maintenance of a scholar there; and in the will was this clause, that if any by cavil shall hinder this devise, or that the same cannot go to the college by reason of the Statute of Mortmain, then I devise them to Robert Newman, and his heirs. And under this pretence, that by the Statute of Mortmain the college cannot have them, Robert Newman entered, and kept the possession of the lands, for which the Attorney-General brought this information to have the land established to the college: and this whole matter appearing on the bill and answer, and it being a charity, it was held by the Lord Keeper Bridgman, that it ought to be established to the college, by virtue of the stat. 43 Eliz. notwithstanding the Statute of Mortmain, and notwithstanding the clause in the will; and so it was decreed. And the Lord Keeper said, that it did not differ from Lloyd's case, in Hob. 136.

[285] TERMINO PASCHÆ, ANNO 22 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

COPPING against HARRIARD.

Arbitrators and umpire, both named by the parties, have the same day; the umpire cannot make any award. S. C. 1 Sid. 428. 2 Saund. 129 to 133. Raym. 187. 1 Mod. 15, 274. 2 Keb. 562. 2 Vent. 116. Vide ante 174. Post, 302.

Debt on obligation, conditioned to perform an award, so that it be made at or before the Feast of St. Michael; and if they made none, then to perform the umpirage of J. S. so that it be made at or before the same Feast of St. Michael. The defendant pleads, that the arbitration made no award, and that the umpire made no umpirage. The plaintiff replies, that the arbitrators made no award, but that the umpire made an umpirage; and sets it forth, and assigns a breach. The defendant demurs; and now for the plaintiff it was argued, that the submission to the umpire, although he had the same day (as the arbitrators) was not void, and cited Dyer 347. Rol. Abr. 261. And Justice Moreton doubted: but by Kelynge, Twysden, and Rainsford, the submission to the umpire was void; but if the submission had been to arbitrators, and if they had made none, then to such an umpire as they should name, it might have been good; for by their election of an umpire, they had waved the submission to themselves. But as this case is, if the arbitrators had made one award, and the umpire another, which of them should have been performed? And Twysden cited a case between Bernard and King, where the umpirage in such a case was adjudged void. But the reason thereof was, as he said, because it was not pleaded, that the arbitrators had refused to make any award, so as here. And judgment was given for the defendant.

[286] HORSELY against POTTEN.

A horse hired to ride from Norfolk into Suffolk, action not shewn where the hard riding was. S. C. Raym. 187. 1 Sid. 457. 2 Keb. 620, 647.

Case, that where the plaintiff let to the defendant a horse to ride from Swaffam in Norfolk, to Ipswich in Suffolk, the defendant did in that journey so immoderately labour (or ride) the said horse, that he died: after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, by Holt, that no place is laid where the immoderate labour was, and the journey is in two counties, and the cause of the action is the immoderate labour; and the judgment was stayed for the present; but it was afterwards given for the plaintiff, as Holt told me. See 2 Rol. Abr. 615. Litt. C. Num. 2. That in such a case all shall be tried where the action is laid.

NOELL against NELSON.

On plene administravit pleaded, judgment prayed presently. S. C. 1 Sid. 448. 1 Vent. 94. 2 Saund. 226. 2 Keb. 606, 621, 631, 666, 671. 1 Danv. 461. 2 Lev. 22. 3 Lev. 29.

Debt on an obligation, against an administrator, who pleads plene administravit, on which the plaintiff prays judgment according to Shipley's case in 8 Co. and after brought a scire facias for assets, which happened afterwards, and had judgment in the Common Pleas, on which error was brought here and assigned in the first judgment, viz. that it ought not to have been given on the plea of plene administravit, and for that Dorchester and Webb's case in 1 Cro. Hutton 128, and Rast. Ent. 223 & 329 were cited. But on the contrary were cited Shipley's case, and Trin. 13 Jac. 1, Rot. 1104, and Mich. 13 Jac. 1, Rot. 206. Both which cases were adjudged in this Court. And Kelynge, Rainsford, and Moreton held, that the judgment ought to be affirmed according to Shipley's case. Twysden doubted, and took an exception, for that the defendant is put in misericordia, though the plaintiff was not delayed; for the plea is a confession of the action. But the others said, it was not a direct confession, but quasi an admittance of the debt; besides, it is after imparlance. And they affirmed the judgment.

[287] WEBBER against TYRRELL.

The Statute of Limitations does not extend to accounts stated between merchants, but to current accounts. S. C. 2 Saund. 124. 1 Vent. 90. 2 Keb. 622, 634. Vide 1 Mod. 71, 268. 2 Mod. 311. Post, 298.

An indebitatus assumpsit for 1000l. in money had and received, and also on an insimul computasset, on which account 1000l. was due: the defendant pleads the Statute of Limitations; the plaintiff replies that he is a merchant, and sets forth the proviso for merchants accounts. But by Twysden, Rainsford, and Moreton, (in Kelynge's absence) stated accounts between merchants are not within the proviso, but only accounts current; and Jones at the Bar said, so was the constant practice; but it was adjourned.

WILSON against ARMORER.

Feoffment of a manor excepting and reserving Black-Acre to himself for life only. Habend' (except before excepted) to the use of A. in tail. Black-Acre does not pass at all. S. C. 1 Vent. 78, 87, 106. Raym. 207. 2 Keb. 642, 643, 667, 719. Borr. 2159. Daug. 478.

Debt on an obligation against the defendant as heir, and on riens per discent and a special verdict the case was, William Armorer, the father of the defendant, being seised, made a feoffment of the lands in question, by the name of the manor of Preston, and all lands thereto appertaining, except and reserving Black and White Acre, to himself for his life only, habend' (except before excepted) to the use of the defendant on his marriage, and the heirs male of his body, with remainder to his right heirs: and whether Black and White Acres were assets by discent to the defendant being the heir, was the question. And it was twice argued at the Bar in two several terms, and two questions were made: First, If by the exception the two acres are totally excepted out of the conveyance? (for a man cannot reserve an estate to himself for life upon a feoffment) or if the exception be totally void? Secondly, If the acres pass by the feoffment, yet the limitation of the use does not come till after the habend', and the habend' is of the premises except before excepted; and then no use is limited of those acres, and then the use of them results and descends to the defendant the heir, and so they are assets in his hands. [288] And on the second argument Kelynge, Moreton, and Rainsford inclined, that the exception was not void, but that the words, to himself for life, were void, and that the exception generally excepted the two acres out of the conveyance: and as to the second they held, that if the two acres passed by the conveyance, yet no use was declared of them. But Twysden on the contrary held, that the exception was totally void: but secondly, That no use was declared of those two acres, and so that they descended. But it was adjourned, and afterwards, viz. after Kelynge's death, and before Hale was Chief Justice, Twisden delivered the opinion of the Court, and said, that they were not all agreed, that the exception excepted the two acres totally out of the conveyance; but they all agreed, that there was no limitation of the use of those two acres, so that they resulted and descended: and they gave judgment for the plaintiff. Levinz for the plaintiff, and Serjeant Turner for the defendant.

THE KING against SMITH AND OTHERS COMMISSIONERS OF SEWERS.

A certiorari lies to commissioners of sewers, and they are fineable for proceeding afterwards. S. C. 1 Vent. 66, 67. Raym. 186. Mod. 44. 2 Keb. 635. Vide 1 Salk. 201.

The commissioners of sewers made a tax for the reparation of Wapping-Wall; the inquisition on which the rule was made was removed by certiorari into B. R. The commissioners made a new rule, and fined the inhabitants for not collecting it, on which issued another certiorari, and afterwards a third; and then an attachment against the commissioners, whereon they being brought into Court, it was moved for them, that by the statute 13 Eliz. c. 9, the commissioners of sewers are not obliged to obey certiorari's out of this Court, nor to remove their orders; and so no contempt. But by all the Court, the statute does not extend to returns on certioraris, but excuses them from certifying their orders into Chancery, as by the statute H. 8 they before were obliged, with intent to have the Royal assent; whereupon they were fined each of them 40l. and committed for the contempt.

[289] BERNARD against BERNARD.

Process awarded secundum consuetudinem Curiæ, is all one with secundum cursum Curiæ. S. C. 1 Vent. 72. 2 Keb. 626, 635, 646, 550, &c.

Error of a judgment in Hull, in assumpsit to deliver the possession of a house in a certain place called Hull-Bridge. First, For that the Court is said to be held by letters patents secundum consuetudinem Curiæ; and a custom cannot be since the time of H. 1, and Long and Nethercote's case in 1 Cro. was cited for this; but it was not allowed, for it is not said, that the process was awarded secundum Curiæ, time out of mind, &c. and then secundum consuetud. consuetudinem Curiæ, is no more than secundum cursum Cur'. Secondly, The breach is alledged, that he did not deliver the possession licet sæpius requisit', which is not sufficient, for he ought to have shewn a special request, but this was not allowed; for it being to deliver it before a certain day, he had taken upon himself to do it, and then he is bound to do it before the day at his peril without any request. Thirdly, It is not alledged, that Hull-Bridge was within the jurisdiction of the Court, and it may be without, and then this Inferior Court had no authority to enquire thereof, and it is the very cause of the action: to which it was answered, that it being after verdict it shall be intended within, otherwise the defendant might have demurred on the evidence, and if it had not been within, the Court there would have directed the jury against the plaintiff; and the defendant having admitted it then, shall not now assign it for error, when he might have had a prohibition, and (cited) Cousin and Nieuson's case in this Court, Pasch. 16 Car. 2, Rot. 278, where in case, for that he was collector of the customs in the port of Exeter, the defendant caused him to be put out of his office, and the action was brought in the Court of Exeter, and judgment for the plaintiff; and thereon error assigned, because it did not appear that the port of Exeter was within the jurisdiction of the Court of Exeter; and yet the judgment was affirmed after it had depended here two or three years; and Kelynge and Moreton held, that Hull-Bridge shall after a verdict be intended in Hull, and within the jurisdiction of the Court of Hull: but Twysden with his whole force to the contrary. [290] That quidam locus vocat' Hull-Bridge, shall not be intended a bridge in Hull, for then it should be said The Bridge of Hull, but it shall be intended the name of another place; and after the case had been debated three or four times in this term and in Trinity term following, and Twysden continuing earnest in his opinion, and divers cases having been adjudged according to his opinion formerly in the Marshalsea and other Inferior Courts, I persuaded my client for his expedition to consent to a reversal, and to bring a new action; which was done accordingly.

LOVE against WINDHAM.

[See Doe d. Cadogan v. Ewart, 1838, 7 Ad. & E. 649; 3 N. & P. 208; 1 W. W. & H. 250.]

Devise of a term to one for life, and if he dies without issue, to another. S. C. 1 Vent. 79. 1 Sid. 450. 1 Mod. 50, 114. 2 Keb. 637. 2 Chan. Cases, 14, 15. 2 Danv. 523, 526.

A man possessed of a term for years devises it to his wife for life, remainder to his first son for life, and if he died without issue, to his second son: the first son died without issue, and if the remainder to the second son was good? was the question on a special verdict; for it was objected, that here it is not to him and his issue; in which case it was agreed, it should go to him and his executors, and the remainder over be void: but here it is devised to him for his life, and if he die without issue, the remainder to the second brother; so that hereby he had only an estate for life, with an executory devise to the second son on the contingency, that he had no issue when he died; and cited 2 Roll. Abr. 406. No. 8, 9. Devise of a term to one so long as he has issue, remainder over, is good: but after divers arguments it was adjudged, that the remainder to the second son was void, and that a devise to one and his issue, with a remainder over, is all one with a devise to one for life, and if he dies without issue, to another; for a remainder of a term shall not depend on a possibility so remote as the dying without issue.

[291] TERM. SANCT. TRIN. ANNO 22 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

DRAPER against BLANY.

Scire facias, if it lies from the King's Bench into Wales. S. C. Raym. 171, 206. 2 Mod. 10. 2 Saund. 193. Vaugh. 395, &c. 2 Keb. 649, 657, 724. 3 Keb. 170, 401.

Judgment in the King's Bench for a debt, and a fieri facias to the sheriff, who returns nulla bona; but on a testatum fuit, that he had lands in Denbighshire, another scire facias issued to the Sheriff of Denbigh, who returns quod breve domini Regis non currit in Wallia. And Kelynge Chief Justice, on the first motion held, that the writ lies; the others said nothing, but ordered the sheriff to make such a return as he would stand by, and the sheriff stood to his return: and afterwards in Mich. 22 Car. 2, it was argued by Saunders, that the writ lies, and he cited Hetl. Rep. 20. 2 Cro. 484, Carew's case, 2 Bulst. 156. Bedo against Piper; & ibid. 54, Hall against Rotheram. And by Williams for the defendant it was said, that in Newman's case, Hill. 1657, such a return was adjudged good. And Twysden doubting whether the writ lay, it was adjourned.

THE KING against THE MAYOR, &C. OF STRATFORD UPON AVON.

A town-clerk durante beneplacito, is removable without cause. S. C. 1 Vent. 77, 82, 342. Raym. 188. 3 Keb. 641, 656.

A mandamus was to restore him to the place of town-clerk there. They return their charter, whereby they are enabled to chuse a town-clerk durante beneplacito, and that they had removed him; but do not return any cause, nor summons to answer. Wherefore it was moved by Jones, that the return was ill. But by Kelynge, [292] Twysden and Rainsford, the return is good; for it is to no purpose to summon him to answer, whom they may remove without a crime.

MORRIS AND OTHERS against CREACH.

Obligation barred by an award. S. C. Keb. 623, 659. Q. 1 Mod. 36.

Debt on an obligation by three executors: the defendant pleads, that there were divers controversies between the defendant and one of the plaintiffs; whereupon they submitted themselves to the award, which awarded, that the defendant should be quit of the obligation. The plaintiff demurs, and on argument it was held by the Court, that an obligation by itself is not submittable, because it is a debt certain, otherwise it is as here, where it is submitted among other things: and Kelynge and Twysden held the plea good, notwithstanding the controversies were only between one of the plaintiffs and the defendant; but Moreton doubted, not only for the said reason, but also for that an arbitrament is not of so high a nature as an obligation, and therefore cannot be a bar. But see 45 Ed. 3, 16, an opinion, that an award by deed is pleadable in bar of an obligation. But 1 Roll. 270 is an opinion to the contrary: and it was adjourned.

HOSKINS against MATTHEWS AND CLARKE.

Case for excommunicating the defendant without cause. S. C. 1 Vent. 86. 1 Sid. 463. 2 Keb. 636, 663. Post, 297.

Case, for that the defendant falsly and maliciously, without any reasonable cause, cited and excommunicated him in the Ecclesiastical Court. After verdict, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that it does not appear for what cause the suit there was. But per Cur', it is said and found to be falsly, and without any cause; and the action lies, and judgment was for the plaintiff.

[293] BEANY against TURNER.

Agreement to surrender a copyhold, if a surrender into the hands of two copyholders be sufficient. S. C. 1 Mod. 61. 2 Keb. 666.

Error of a judgment in the Common Pleas, where the plaintiff declares, that it was agreed between him and the defendant, that the plaintiff should surrender to the defendant certain copyhold lands, and that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff so much; and in consideration, that the plaintiff had assumed to perform the agreement on his part, the defendant had assumed to perform the agreement on his part: and avers, that he had surrendered into the hands of two copyholders, according to the custom, to the use of the defendant, and that the defendant had not paid: on which the defendant demurs, and judgment was given in the Common Pleas for the plaintiff. And now the error assigned was, that the surrender into the hands of two copyholders, was not a good performance on the plaintiff's part. And cited 1 Cro. Sims against La. Smith. Agreement to surrender generally, he is not obliged to make a letter of attorney to surrender. And Hill. 12 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 1735, Burges's case Styl. 107, and 1 Cro. Devered against Ratcliffe. (Q.) To which it was answered, that on an agreement to surrender generally, a surrender by any way is sufficient. But Twysden held, that this surrender was no performance. And Kelynge Chief Justice, held the contrary. But by the whole Court, here being mutual promises, there needs no averment at all of the performance, and therefore an ill averment of that which needs no averment, shall not hurt; and thereupon they all affirmed the judgment.

SIMPSON against QUINEY.

Custom, that lands shall descend to the elder daughter for life only. S. C. 1 Vent. 88. 2 Keb. 672, 679. 2 Danv. 550, pl. 3.

The custom of Newcastle upon Tyne, that the land shall descend to the elder daughter only for her life, was adjudged good, without argument: for the Court said, that they had adjudged it so before; which you may see in the case of Newton and Shafto. Ante 172.

[294] GRELL AND OTHERS against RICHARDS.

8 defendants appear by attorney, where two are infants, judgment reversed against all. Post. 299, 300, &c. ib. Stra. 783.

Error of a judgment in the Common Pleas, in trespass against eight defendants, on which they brought error, and say in the writ, that the judgment was ad dampnum ipsorum. The defendant appears on the scire facias, and pleads, in nullo est erratum, where the error assigned, was nonage of two of the defendants; and yet that all appeared by attorney. And afterwards in Mich. 23 Car. 2, Hale being then Chief Justice, the judgment was reversed in toto. Because 1st. The pleading of in nullo, &c. is a confession of this error in fact, it being a demurrer, and no way is left by the demurrer to try it; they ought to have pleaded to the infancy, so that issue might be taken thereon. 2dly. Although it is said, ad dampnum ipsorum, it is good; for it was to the damage of all to have judgment given against them; although by Hale they might have said, to the damage of the two infants.

Lease for 40 years, then a lease for 99 years from the end of the first term, rendering a heriot on the death of each tenant. No heriot payable till the first term ended. S. C. 1 Sid. 437. 1 Saund. 165, 166, 167. 1 Vent. 91. 2 Keb. 588, 505, 572, 577.

Ejectment, and on not guilty and special verdict, the case was: A man demises lands for forty years rendering rent; and then makes another lease for ninety-nine years, to commence after the said term of 40 years, rendering rent from the time that the second term commences, and not before; and then in another reddendum reserves capons. And then it follows, And also yielding and paying at the death of every tenant 3*l. in the name of a heriot.* The tenant of the second lease dies during the continuance of the first lease, and if the heriot be due, was the question. And Kelynge Chief Justice, held it due by the express [295] words, though he could not have any benefit of the land during the first term. But Twysden, Rainsford, and Moreton to the contrary, that the intent could not be to have him pay who could not have any profit of the land; and this appears by the words. And also, &c. which shews, that the heriot shall not be payable but when the rent shall be payable; and so it was adjudged by those three.

The Court ex officio ought to take notice of the beginning and end of prorogations and sessions of Parliament. S. C. 2 Keb. 686. Raym. 191.

Information on the statute 13 Car. 2, against the Norwich weavers, for having more than two apprentices; and after a verdict on not guilty for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the commencement of the Parliament was mistaken: to which it was answered, that it being a Private Act, the Court could not take notice thereof by any matter dehors, but if they would have advantage thereof, they ought to have pleaded nul tiel record. But per Cur' the Court is obliged to take notice of the commencement of Parliaments, and also of prorogations and sessions, and they ought to take notice, that there cannot be any such Act. Case for erecting a market to the damage of the plaintiff's market. S. C. 2 Saund. 172. Raym. 195. 1 Mod. 69. 1 Vent. 98. 2 Keb. 689, 706.

Case, for that he being seised of a market, the defendant without any lawful warrant erected another market within seven miles, to the damage of his market: after a verdict for the plaintiff on not guilty, it was moved in arrest of judgment, First, That it is not shewn that it is another market which is held on the same day, and then no action lies, 2 Roll. 140. 22 H. 6, 14. 11 H. 4, 5 b. Regist. 107 a. b. Also secondly, That this is seven miles distant, and there never was an action maintained if it was not within five miles. But per Cur', it being laid and found to [297] be without any lawful warrant, and to the damage of the plaintiff's market, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

POWELL against JONES.

He cannot read a declaration, spoken of an attorney, without averment that he could. S. C. Ray. 196. 1 Vent. 98, contr. 2 Keb. 710.

Error of a judgment in the Common Pleas for words, where the plaintiff declared, that he being an attorney, the defendant having a colloquium of him and his profession, said, that he could not read a declaration, whereby he lost one Scott his client; and on a verdict the plaintiff had judgment there: and now the error assigned was, that it is not averred, that he could read a declaration; and Twysden at first held, that the action did not lie for want of the averment: but afterwards, it being laid to be falso, and so found, the judgment was affirmed.

CATTEREL against MARSHALL.

Promise to give an obligation with sufficient sureties, where he ought to shew the penalty and the sufficiency of the sureties or not. S. C. 1 Vent. 99. 1 Mod. 70. 2 Keb. 692. Vide 1 Sid. 270.

Error of a judgment in assumpsit in the Common Pleas, where the plaintiff declared, that in consideration of 30l. paid by the plaintiff to the defendant, and that the plaintiff had taken upon him to give the defendant bond with sufficient sureties to save him harmless from such a suit, the defendant promised, &c. and says, that he gave him bond with sufficient sureties to save him harmless from the said suit; and on a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff there, it was now assigned for error, that it is not shewn of what penalty the obligation was, nor what the sureties were; and cited for this Hob. 69, 77, Jervis's case: but per Cur', when the obligation is to be given for the payment of money, it ought to be shewn what the penalty is, and of what sufficiency the sureties are, so that the Court may judge of the sufficiency of the penalty and the sureties: but here it being to save (harmless) against uncertain damages and costs of suit, so that the Court cannot judge of the sufficiency, he need not shew it in the declaration, but it ought to come on the evidence on (the issue) non assumpsit, and the Court that tries the cause shall judge of the sufficiency of the penalty and the sureties; wherefore they affirmed the judgment.

[298] BROWN against LONDON.

Assumpsit on the custom of merchants, &c. and a general indebitatus joined, and intire damages. S. C. 1 Vent. 152. 1 Mod. 285. 2 Keb. 695, 713, 758, 822. Hard. 485. 1 Danv. 27, 5.

Assumpsit, and declares on the custom of merchants and others trading in England, that if a man draws a bill on another, who accepts it, he is obliged to pay it; and that J. S. drew a bill on the defendant to pay to the plaintiff, that he had accepted it and not paid it: and also, whereas the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff on another bill of exchange, that he had promised and had not paid: after a general verdict on both promises, and intire damages given, judgment was stayed; for that no custom is laid to warrant the second promise, and without a custom the action upon a bill (of exchange) is not maintainable; and the custom laid in the first part does not extend to the second part (or count).

MARTIN against DELBOE.

Statute of Limitations not pleadable on accounts stated between merchants. Discontinuance after argument. S. C. 1 Sid. 465. 1 Mod. 70. 1 Vent. 89. 2 Keb. 674, 696, 717. 2 Saun. 125. Vide ante 287.

Assumpsit for money due on account stated between merchants; the defendant pleads the Statute of Limitations; and on agreement it was doubted, whether it appeared sufficiently on the declaration that the account was stated: and afterwards the plaintiff prayed leave to discontinue, and had it, though it was after argument.

[299] THE KING against LESINGHAM.

Common disturber of the peace, &c. too general. S. C. Raym. 193, 205. 1 Mod. 71, 288. 2 Keb. 687, 697. 1 Ven. 97, 104.

Information, for that the defendant being lord of the manor of D. took unreasonable distresses on divers tenants of the manor, and was a disturber of the peace, and a common oppressor: and after verdict, judgment was stayed; for the taking of unreasonable distresses is to be punished by action on the Statute of Marlbridge, cap. 4. Disturber of the peace, and common oppressor are too general. 1 Mod. Rep. 451, Cornwallis's case.

HAMILTON against VERE.

Case for loss of service for the whole term, though not yet expired. S. C. 2 Saund. 169. Raym. 200. 2 Keb. 693, 697. Vide 6 Mod. 1 Mod. 271.

Case, whereas the 1st of May, 1665, he had retained one A. to serve him for 9 years as apprentice, the defendant seduced him from his service such a day, whereby he lost his service for the residue of the term: and after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the term is not expired, and yet he had declared and recovered for the loss of service for the whole residue of the term, and A. may yet return and serve him; but he ought to have declared of the loss of the service from the time of the departure, until the exhibiting of the bill: and of this opinion were Twysden and Rainsford; and in the absence of the other Judges they stayed the judgment on the argument of Saunders for the defendant, and Winnington for the plaintiff.

FOXWIST against TREMAYNE.

An infant and one of full age executors, join and sue by attorney. S. C. 1 Mod. 47, 72, 296. 1 Sid. 442. 1 Vent. 102. 2 Saund. 212. Raym. 198. 2 Keb. 633.

Debt brought by three executors by attorney, one of them being within age: the defendant pleads, that he is within the age of 17 years: on which the plaintiff demurs, and two points were argued at the Bar. 1st. Where an infant, and others executors, of full age, join in an action, if the infant ought to sue by guardian? 2dly. If the infant ought to be omitted, and the suit only [300] in the name of those of full age? And now the Court, viz. Twysden, Rainsford, and Moreton, (Kelynge being absent and sick) delivered their opinions. And as to the 1st. it was held by Rainsford and Moreton, that an infant and another executor may sue by attorney; but if they are defendants, the infant ought to be by guardian; as 2 Cro. Westcot against Cotton, 1 Roll. Abr. 288, sect. 3. And as to the 2nd they held, that all ought to be joined in the action, and that there shall not be any administration granted to another durante minoritate, where one of them is of age. Twysden, as to the 2d held, that they may join, and all the plaintiffs; as Yelv. 130, Smith against Smith, and 5 Co. Prince's case: but as to the first he held, that the infant ought to be by prochein amie, where he is plaintiff, as well as by guardian, where he is defendant; and in no case by attorney: for 1st he cannot make a warrant of attorney, for the warrant made by him is void. 2dly. If there should be a nonsuit, the infant would be in misericordia, which an infant cannot be. But upon the opinion of the other two judgment was given, that the defendant should answer over.

REEVES against GIBSON.

No bail in account till after judgment, quod computet. S. C. 1 Vent. 105. 2 Keb. 713.

In account, the plaintiff insisted upon special bail, because the defendant would go beyond sea; but it was denied by the Court: for in account no special bail is to be found until judgment quod computet; and so it was ruled Hill. 14 & 15 Car. 2, in this Court, between Lewis and Bayly, and Noy 28.

ROBERTS against MARRIOTT.

Plea, no award, and rejoinder not tendered, is a departure. S. C. 1 Mod. 42, 289. Raym. 94. 2 Keb. 614, 618, 702. 2 Saund. 73, 188, 189. Ante, 133. 2 Saund. 53, 188.

Debt on obligation conditioned to perform an award, so that it be made and tendered at the house of J. S. such a day. The defendant pleads an award: the plaintiff replies, and shews an award, and assigns a breach. The defendant rejoins, that it was not tendered at the day. The plaintiff demurs; and for the defendant it was argued, that this was no departure; for it not being tendered, and [301] the submission being conditional, with an ita quod (that it be) it is no award. To which it was answered, that the plea of no award is intended of no award at all either in fact or in law: but the rejoinder admits an award in fact, but that it is void in law for want of tender, and so it is a departure. 2 Roll. Abr. 692, pl. 10. And of this opinion were the whole Court, viz. Twysden, Rainsford, and Moreton, and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

WEST against DAVIES.

Trover of three ricks of hay, good. S. C. 2 Keb. 703. 1 Mod. 289. 1 Danv. 24, 26.

Trover de tribus struibus fœni Anglice ricks of hay: after verdict it was moved, that struibus is uncertain, and ought to be de tantis carectatis. But the Court on the contrary held it certain enough, and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

WOOTEN against HALE.

Covenant lies on a warranty upon a fine sur concessit, by a feme covert. S. C. 1 Sid. 466. 2 Saund. 177, 181. 2 Keb. 684, &c. 1 Mod. 66, 101, 290. 2 Danv. 50, 14.

Covenant, and declares, that John Hall, and Elizabeth his wife, levied a fine sur concessit with warranty of lands to the plaintiff, and the husband died, and that J. S. having a lawful title, entered and expelled the plaintiff by due process of law. The defendant by protestation, that J. S. had no lawful title for plea, says, that he did not enter and expel the plaintiff modo & forma as the plaintiff had declared; and on this issue verdict was for the plaintiff. And now it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the having a lawful title, is not sufficient: for it may be, that he had a lawful title under the plaintiff himself; as 2 Cro. 325, Kirby against Hansake, and so held the Court, viz. Twysden, Rainsford, and Moreton. 2. It was objected, that an action of covenant does not lie on this warranty in the fine sur concessit, by the feme covert. But the Court on the contrary held, that covenant lies on the warranty in this fine, as well as voucher, or a warrantia chartæ, on a fine by a feme covert, or a fine levied of lands in fee. But for the first exception judgment was stayed.

[302] DONAVAN against MASCALL.

Arbitrators and umpire have the same day. S. C. 1 Mod. 274. 1 Sid. 456. 2 Keb. 714. Raym. 205.

Debt on obligation, conditioned to perform an award, so that it be made at or before the 19th of February, and if they did not make any, (then) to the umpirage of such a person as the administrators should name, so that it were at or before the 20th of February. The defendant pleads no award, &c. The plaintiff replies, that the arbitrators did not make any award; but that the 19th of February they elected such a one umpire, who made his umpirage, and shewed what it was, and assigned a breach; on which the defendant demurs, and now it was argued for the defendant, that the umpirage was void, it being made before the power of the arbitrators was determined. But on the contrary it was said, that their power was determined by the election of the umpire, the umpire being elected by themselves; otherwise where the umpire is appointed by the parties submitting, and he makes his umpirage before the time limited for the arbitrators is expired. But now Twysden and Moreton strongly inclined, that the umpirage was void, and the arbitrators power not absolutely determined by the election of an umpire, they not having absolutely refused to make any award. Rainsford seemed of a contrary opinion, and it was adjourned. See Copping and Harriard's case, ante 285, and Traverse and Twisleton's case, ante fol. 174.

[303] ARCHDEACON OF ROCHESTER'S CASE.

Privilege for excusing an archdeacon from being expenditor of a farm. S. C. 1 Vent. 105. 1 Mod. 282. 2 Keb. 693.

A writ of privilege was prayed to excuse him from the office of expenditor in the level of Romney Marsh in Kent: First, Because he being an ecclesiastical person ought not to be put in such an office. Secondly, For that all the land he has in the level, is in lease for ninety-nine years; and the writ was granted by Rainsford and Moreton, they only being in Court; Moreton for the first cause, and Rainsford for the second.

JENNY against NORRIS.

Trover de quadam parcella fili. S. C. 1 Vent. 105. 1 Mod. 295. 2 Keb. 715. Vide ante, 301. 1 Vent. 71, 105. 1 Sid. 445. 1 Mod. 46, 294. Style 360, 358, 419. 2 Saund. 74. 6 Mod. 87.

A quantum meruit was in the Common Pleas, among other things de quadam parcella fili, and verdict and judgment for the plaintiff there; and thereupon error was brought here, and it was assigned, that a parcel of thread is altogether uncertain in a quantum meruit: but by the Court, it is certain enough in this action or in trover, where damages only are to be recovered, and not the thing itself, as in replevin and indebitatus assumpsit, or a quantum meruit pro diversis mercimoniis sibi venditis & deliberatis is as uncertain as parcella fili, and yet that is good, and they affirmed the judgment.

WIMBLETON against HOLDRIP.

Obligation conditioned to do divers particular things, performavit omnia is not good without answering the particulars. S. C. 2 Keb. 710.

Debt on obligation continued to do divers particular things in the condition mentioned: the defendant pleads performavit omnia, &c. and upon demurrer it was adjudged an ill plea, for the particulars being expressed in the condition, he ought to plead to each particularly by itself: but where the condition is to perform all the covenants in an indenture, there he may plead performavit omnia generally if they are all in the affirmative, without answering particularly to every particular.

PITS against PELHAM, IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

Devise, that lands shall be sold, and not said by whom. S. C. 2 Jo. 25. 2 Chan. Cases, 205. 1 Chan. Cases 35, 179, 180.

A man devises lands to his wife for her life, and that after her death the reversion shall be sold, and the money arising thereby, distributed between his heir and three nephews; the heir refuses to sell or to join with the wife in the sale; and on a bill exhibited in Chancery against him, to compel him to join in the sale, the bill was dismissed by the Lord Keeper Bridgman, who held the will to be void as to the sale of the reversion, it not being said who shall sell: but in the House of Peers, they on advice with the Judges reversed the dismission, and decreed, that the heir should sell; for when no person is appointed to sell, it ought to be intended that he shall sell who has the estate, which is the heir. See 5 H. 7, 12 b. by Hide, Fenwick and Fineux; a devise that lands should be sold and not said by whom, they shall be sold by the executors; and to the same intent when they are to be sold for payment of debts.

RAVENSCROFT against RAVENSCROFT.

Administration granted according to the statute repealed, when granted inverso ordine, or by a Court which has not jurisdiction. S. C. 2 Keb. 726. Ante 159.

Ravenscroft died intestate, leaving Thomas his eldest son, and Ralph his second son, and divers other sons and daughters; Thomas the elder is made administrator, and Ralph the second son appeals to have it repealed and granted to him, and alledges in the delegates, that it was agreed between the sons and daughters, that Ralph should be administrator in trust for all the younger children; and that Thomas had 1000l. per annum, and all the younger children nothing; whereupon Thomas prays a prohibition, for that the administration being granted according to the statute, could not be repealed; and he had it except cause were shewn contra at another day; at which day it was shewn, that there were other allegations besides those beforementioned, viz. that there were bona notabilia; and so the administration not grantable by the bishop of the diocess, and that it was granted, not citing such parties as ought of right to be cited, and thereupon the first rule was discharged; for when administration is granted where it is not grantable, or if they proceed inverso ordine or irregularly, there the administration may be repealed by the delegates notwithstanding the statute.

[306] HORSEY against TURGES, &c.

Executors submit to an award, the sum awarded is not attachable, not being due to the testator at the time of his death. S. C. 1 Vent. 111, &c. 2 Keb. 716, 731, 741.

Debt on obligation conditioned to perform an award, and on demurrer the case was this; the plaintiff as executor, and the defendants submit all controversies, &c. The arbitrators award, that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 300l. and a creditor of the testator attaches this in the hands of the defendants as the testator's debt, and whether it was attachable as a debt of the testator? was the question. For it was agreed it should be assets in the hands of the plaintiff when he recovered it, the submission of the plaintiff being only as executor. And it was argued for the plaintiff, that this was not a debt due to the testator, and the custom is to attach debts due to the testator at the time of his death, which this was not, but only a debt due to the executor; although perhaps arising on a cause of action, which was in the testator, as a breach of covenant or the like, which sounds only in damage, which damage is now discharged by the new sum awarded: and if this debt be attachable in the hands of the creditor, by the same reason may the debt due on the obligation of submission, be attached in the hands of the executor himself; and to this opinion, that the sum awarded was not attachable in the hands of the defendants, Twysden and Rainsford strongly inclined; Moreton doubting upon the first argument: and afterwards judgment was accordingly given for the plaintiff, and that the sum awarded was not attachable.

THE KING against THE PRESIDENT AND COUNSEL OF THE MARCHES.

A mandamus to restore a deputy.

A mandamus, shewing, that Henry Wynn, was debito modo constitut' secretary of the Courts of the Marches, by letters patents to be exercised by himself or deputy; and that the President and Counsel had put out Luke Clapham his deputy, being duly constituted; they return, that at the time [307] of the delivery of the writ of mandamus, Luke Clapham was not constituted deputy. Per Cur'. Tho. a mandamus does not lie for a deputy, yet it lies for him who deputes him, either to have him admitted or restored; for otherwise he may be deprived of his power to make a deputy. And this return is ill, that at the time of the writ delivered he was not constituted deputy; for perhaps they had put him out of his place before the writ came to them; and therefore a peremptory writ of restitution was awarded.

TAYLOR against BECKET.

Venue not changed in covenant. Vide 2 Salk. 668, 670, &c.

Covenant against an apprentice on his indentures, for speaking words to his master's damage. The defendant moved to change the venue, for the matter of action is the words, for which an action on the case lies; and the action is brought by the plaintiff only to elect his county for the trial, and to oust the defendant of his privilege to change the venue, as he might have done had it been an action on the case. But per Cur', this action is (properly) covenant in which the venue is not changeable.

WHITE against STUBBS.

Replication, de injuria sua propria, where the bar contained an ill title. S. C. 2 Keb. 712, 735. 2 Saund. 294.

Trespass for entering his close, and taking his goods, 9th of October, 20 Car. 2. The defendant pleads, that Ratcliff was seized in fee, and 23 July, 20 Car. 2, demised the place where to the defendant; and that he the 26th of July demised to the plaintiff for a quarter of a year, which ended the 26th of October, 20 Car. 2, and for that the goods were there after the quarter of the year ended, he took them damage feasant; absque hoc, that he took them the 9th of October, or at any time within the quarter of the year. The plaintiff replies, de injuria sua propria absque tali causa; on which the defendant demurs. And first it was resolved, that the replication de injuria, &c. absque tali causa was ill, for that the plea in bar contained title. And 2. That the traverse of the plea was ill; for it may be [308] that he took them before the quarter of the year, and before the demise to the defendant by Ratcliff; wherefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. And it seems the traverse ought to have been absque hoc, the 9th of October, or any time before the 23d of July, or during the quarter of the year.

THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF WINDSOR against GOWER.

Lease of tithes for 4 years, rendering 50l. per annum, the defendant assigns the term. Q. If the lesse be chargeable, &c. Tid. 1 Saund. 22, 23, 209, 268, 269. 3 Lev. 227. Nels. Lutw. 299.

Debt on a lease of four years of tithes, rendering a rent of 50l. The defendant pleads, that he assigned his term to J. S. and that the plaintiff accepted him for his tenant, and received the rent reserved, 6d. de reddit. prædict'. The plaintiff demurs, and three questions were made and argued: 1. It was said, that it was not a rent, but a sum in gross, and in contract; for a rent cannot issue out of tithes. Co. Lit. 47, and then the assignment and the acceptance signify nothing in the case. 2. The pleading acceptance of the rent, 6 denar. de reddit. prædict. is senseless. 3. That the acceptance by the dean and chapter cannot be pleaded without deed, which is not done here. As to the 1st. it was said, that the privity of the contract shall go with the estate. 3 Cro. 636, Buffkin against Edmunds, the same case. To the 2nd, that a receipt of any part is an acceptance, and receipt of the whole. And to the 3d, that it may be paid in the chapter-house. The Court said nothing as to the 1st and 3d, but gave judgment for the plaintiff on the 2nd for the insensibility.

MANNINGTON against GUILLIMS.

Plea, bargain and sale of rent without consideration, issue non concessit, a verdict cures the want of consideration. S. C. 1 Vent. 108. Raym. 200. 2 Keb. 693, 739.

Replevin, avowry for rent charge for that J. S. seized of rent bargained and sold it to the avowant: issue thereon, that J. S. did not grant, and verdict for the avowant, that he did grant; and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that here is a bargain and sale, and no consideration shewn, and so it is void: but per Cur', after a verdict, the consideration shall be intended to have been proved on the trial, the issue being non concessit; for else the jury could not have found for the avowant, [309] if no consideration had been proved; and the bargain and sale was void. Hutt. 54. Cro. 165, 259. Wherefore judgment was given for the avowant.

COLE against GREEN.

Converting brew-houses, &c. into tenements of greater value, is waste.
S. C. 2 Saund. 352, to 259. 1 Mod. 94. 1 Danv. 311.

Waste in the Hustings London, on a lease for years of a brew-house in London. The defendant pleads no waste, and issue thereon; and on the evidence it appeared, that the defendant took down the brew-house, and erected several houses in the place, and improved the rent from 120l. to 200l. per annum; and by the direction of Howel Deputy Recorder, before whom the cause was tried; for that thereby the nature of the thing, and the evidence thereof was altered, the jury found it waste, and gave single damages 200l. which were trebled to 600l. But then judgment was arrested, on motion before Sir William Wilde, the recorder himself, for the insufficiency of the verdict; because the writ of the count are quod fecit vastum venditionem & destructionem; and the jury found fecit vastum, venditionem & destructionem, scil. in pulling down the brew-house, and taking away the coppers, and the other particulars, &c. but did not find any sale of any of the particulars, upon the book-case in Long 5 E. 4, 100. In waste for felling and selling of trees, the defendant pleads, that he felled them and employed in repairs; and the plea adjudged ill, because it did not traverse the sale. And although to this it was answered, that though in a plea the sale is material, because if he sold them it is waste, although he repurchase them and imploy them in repairs; and therefore the sale is there traversable, so that it may appear to the Court, whether the employing them in repairs be waste or not; yet when in a verdict the waste is found, it is sufficient whether they are sold, or not: but (notwithstanding) the verdict for the said exception ruled to be insufficient, and a rule made for a new trial; whereupon the jury, in respect of the melioration, or improvement, by the direction of Sir William Wylde, before whom the new trial was, gave a verdict for the defendant, and judgment was thereupon given for the defendant.

On which judgment Cole brought a writ of error before Vaughan Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, Hale Chief Baron, Turner, and Rainsford, and Moreton Justices, assigned at [310] St. Martins le Grand; and upon hearing of counsel before Howel Deputy Recorder, the judgment, and both the verdicts, and the rule for the new trial (which was quia videtur Cur' quod verdict prædict. est vitiosum & erroneum, ideo cassetur, & habeatur nova triatio) were all certified. And before the said justices assigned, four points were argued and adjudged, viz. 1st. That the first verdict was sufficient for the reason before alledged. Rast. Entr. 695 b. 696 a. 689. Pasch. 7 Eliz. 3, pl. 1. 2ly, That both the verdicts and the rule were well certified at first on the writ of error, because the Hustings being an Inferior Court, no diminution can be aledged of certifying more than is certified at first; and if the first verdict be not certified, and the rule, &c. the erroneousness of the proceedings in the Hustings cannot appear, and so no remedy be on the writ of error; and for this were cited 8 Co. 65, Loveday's case, Co. Entr. 252, Donal's case. 3dly, That the Court here ought to reverse the judgment, because the Court below erred in setting aside the first verdict as insufficient, where it was sufficient. 4thly, That the Court here ought to give the same judgment here for the plaintiff on the first verdict, as the Court below ought to have given; and this by virtue of the words in the writ of error, et ulterius facturi quod ad justiciam pertinet secundum leges regni & consuetudinem civitatis prædict', and though no precedent was produced of such a thing done before in this case, yet they said they would presume the customs of London to be according to the common law, if no precedent be shewn to the contrary; and upon this all the Judges agreed, and reversed the judgment, and gave judgment for the plaintiff on the first verdict.

On which judgment of reversal the defendant brought a writ of error in the House of Peers, and assigned error, that the jury did not come from the four next wards, which by the custom of London they ought; whereupon the defendant in the error pleads, in nullo est erratum, and on argument there, the Lords, with advice of the Judges, resolved these points. 1. That it was not assignable for error, being contrary to the record, because the award of the venire facias is de quatuor proximis wardis, and the writ is returned served accordingly, and is not like to the case 3 Cro. 320, nor 1 Roll. Abr. 761, M. 3, which are from more Inferior Courts, where it was assigned, that one named alderman was not an [311] alderman, and one named steward of St. Catherine's was not steward: but the Courts and customs of the City of London are confirmed by Act of Parliament, and are like the Grand Sessions of Wales, or the Place Court; and 1 Roll. Abr. 758, No. 4, is: it cannot be assigned, that the deputy of the Grand Sessions before whom the Court was tried, was not deputy; and Molins and Nesby's case, Trin. 14 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 1091, and King and Allen's case in the same Court, it cannot be assigned, that the Judge of the Marshalsea was not Judge or present in Court. Secondly, That in nullo est errat' is a demurrer, but though there is an error in fact, it is not confessed by the demurrer, it not being assignable; but the demurrer is thereupon in point of law because not assignable; on which the judgment was affirmed, and remanded to St. Martins to be executed; and there it was objected, that they could not execute it, because they had no seal to seal the execution; but for that a precedent was produced, dated 11 Junii 22 Eliz. between Crowther and Gee, where in the like cases, the justices sealed the writ of execution with their particular hands and seals, and so the Court resolved to have done here: but before it was done, Green the plaintiff in the error died, not having any goods in London, and Forth, alderman of London, claiming by a lease under Green, had preferred his bill in Chancery to be relieved, &c. and prayed an injunction thereby, this waste being a melioration: but he to have an injunction was ordered by the Court to enter into a recognizance to answer for Green, being an ancient man; and on hearing of the cause there, in regard there had been one verdict for the plaintiff, and another for the defendant, the Lord Keeper Bridgman, after all those proceedings, directed a new trial at the King's Bench Bar, to try in a feigned issue, whether waste or not? and on the trial before Hale, then Chief Justice, it was resolved to be waste notwithstanding the melioration, by reason of the alteration of the nature of the thing, and of the evidence thereof; and the jury gave their verdict accordingly, and 100 marks single damages, which trebled, amounted to 200l. which the Chancery compelled Cole to take.

Cole to have execution of the place wasted, had the record transmitted by certiorari immediately from the justices at St. Martins, into the King's Bench, (without having it certified into Chancery; and sent from thence by [312] mittimus into the King's Bench) and from thence issued a scire facias against the administrator of Green, and against Forth and others, surmising that they had entered into the place wasted, and still held it, and they come in and demur upon the writ thus, viz. for that the plaintiff ought not to have seisin, because non constat', that Forth entered on a title under Green. Secondly, For that the record is not legally removed into this Court to be executed, unde petit judicium de breve & quod breve prædict' cassetur. And now four questions were resolved by the whole Court, viz. First, That the record was lawfully removed immediately into this Court by the certiorari, without any mittimus from the Chancery, on the precedents Reg. 209. F. N. B. 242, 246 B. 190 F. Reg. 160, 285, & F. N. B. 243. Secondly, That it being in this Court, this Court may execute it notwithstanding Hutt. 117, Risham against Goodwin, that this Court cannot execute the judgments of Inferior Courts; and this resolution was grounded on Pasch. 22 H. 7, Rot. 369. Rastal's Entr. 531. Ashton's Placita Rediviva 145. Mich. 3 Jac. 1, B. R. Rot. 2311. Hill. 3 Jac. 1, Co. B. Rot. 1819. Pasch. 4 Jac. 1, B. R. Rot. 337. Bre. Judicialia 130. Hill. 9 H. 4, Rot. 130. Thesaures Brevium 40, 41, 42. Rast. Entr. 169, 192. Co. Entr. 180, 342. Reg. 170. F. N. B. 242, 243. Thirdly, That the scire facias was good, without shewing by what title Forth entered; and this was grounded on Rast. Entr. 236. Moyle 160. 2 Bro. 110. Bre. Judicialia 155, 253. Rast. Entr. 279, 452. Reg. Judic. 20, 50. And generally in recoveries in real actions the scire facias is against such and such who entered, &c. Fourthly, It was resolved by all the justices, that the plaintiff should have judgment to have execution, and not respondeas ouster, because although the conclusion of the demurrer is in abatement, yet the commencement being in bar, the judgment shall be peremptory. Mich. 15 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 703, and so it was; and the plaintiff had execution accordingly. Norton and Levinz were for the plaintiff Cole throughout this whole cause, and Finch, Jones and others for the defendant.

So where matter in abatement is pleaded in bar, and concluded in bar, judgment shall be final. 6 Mod. 102.

FELLOWS against KINGSTON.

Debt for tithes in D. and S. not shewing how much in D. and how much in S. good. S. C. 1 Vent. 126. 2 Keb. 756.

Debt upon the statute of E. 6 for tithes, and declares that he is rector of the churches of Dale and Sale, and the defendant being occupier of 400 acres of land in D. and S. had sown the same, and carried off the corn untithed: after verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that he ought to have shewn which part of the lands lay in D. and which in S. that the defendant might know how to answer particularly to each parcel severally, for he might have a good title to one church and not to the other. But by Hale and the Court, 'tis good, for this action is in nature of a trespass founded upon the tort; so the exception disallowed, and judgment given for the plaintiff. Vide Poph. 208.

[2] HOPKINS versus ROBINSON.

Prescription pro sola pastura is levant and couchant, S. C. 1 Vent. 123, 163. 2 Saund. 324. 1 Mod. 74. 2 Keb. 758, 842.

Replevin, and avows damage feasant in his freehold; the plaintiff in bar pleads a custom for the copyholders of the manor, to have solam pasturam omni anno omni tempore anni, and that he by licence of a copyholder put in his beasts; upon issue no such custom, and verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment. First, That the custom being to have solam pasturam and to exclude the lord was not good. Secondly, It is not averred that the beasts were levant and couchant upon the copyhold.

Thirdly, Commoners ought to eat the grass by the mouths of their own cattle, and not by the mouths of strangers cattle, 2 Cro. Monk against Butler. Fourthly, If he may licence another, yet such licence cannot be without deed; to which it was answered, First, That the custom is good, Co. Litt. a. for this is not common but pasture, and he does not exclude the lord from all the profits, but the pasture only, and the lord shall have the mines, coals, trees, timber, &c. Secondly, Here needs no levancy and couchancy, for the copyholders are to have the whole pasture, and not to have common only, for such cattle as are levant and couchant upon their own tenements, which is the measure of their common. To the 4th, A licence pro hac vice tantum is good by parol, not if it were for a time certain; for that would amount to a lease of a thing in grant, which cannot be without deed. And to the 3d, This being a right of pasture and not of common, the herbage may be eaten by the beasts of strangers, though otherwise perhaps if it were common; which is not resolved to the contrary in Monk and Butler's case. To all which Hale Chief Justice inclined. Sed adjournatur. But after, as I was informed, for I was not there present, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

[3] DAVIS against REYNER.

Assumpsit in consideration of forbearance of a legacy, good, tho' no assets. S. C. 1 Vent. 120. Raym. 211, 212. 2 Reb. 744, 758. 1 Danv. 53, pl. 33.

Assumpsit, and declares, that J. S. devised a legacy to the plaintiff, and made the defendant executor; and the plaintiff intending to sue him for the legacy, the defendant in consideration of forbearance, promised to pay him. The defendant pleaded divers bonds and judgments, and nul assets ultra, upon which the plaintiff demurred, and had judgment without argument; for it is not material whether he had assets, or no, for he is charged upon his own promise in consideration of forbearance, and a forbearance of suit for a legacy, is a sufficient consideration.

PINKENY against BULLOCK.

Award that one pay 10l. and the other the expences of the award, and upon performance general releases if the award be good for the releases, or all void. Vide 1 Vent. 121. 3 Lev. 414. 2 Keb. 761, 759, 832. 2 Danv. 532, 19. Vide post, 235.

Debt upon an obligation, conditioned to perform an award: defendant pleads no award. The plaintiff replies, and sets forth an award, that the defendant should pay the plaintiff 10l. and the plaintiff should pay the defendant the expences in making the award, and that upon performance of all, each should release generally to the other, and assigns for breach non-payment of the 10l. The defendant demurs. And now Jones argued, that this award was void being not mutual, for nothing is awarded to the defendant but the release, and that is not to be made till all the rest be performed, which can't be; for the award of expences in making the award is void, being matter subsequent to, and out of the submission. But Hale Chief Justice inclined, that the release ought to be made upon the performance of what is well awarded, and not be delayed till the performance of that part which is void, and so the award will be good; but it was adjourned.

Note. Afterwards the 7th of W. & M. in a case between Bargrave and Atkins, but entered, Hill. 5 Com. Banc. Rot. It was adjudged upon an award like this, where the aforesaid objection was made by Levinz, that upon performance of what is well awarded the release ought to be made, and that the award is good.

[4] HULME against SAUNDERS.

Rent reserve annually 1 Sept. by equal portions action for a year and halfs rent. S. C. 2 Keb. 743, 804. Vide post, 99. 3 Mod. 41, 70. 2 Vent. 129. 2 Danv. 508.

Error of a judgment in B. R. in Ireland, in debt for rent, where the plaintiff declared of a lease, paying the 1st of September annually 74l. by equal portions, and demands 100l. for a year and half's rent; and upon nil debet verdict and judgment for the plaintiff: and now it was assigned for error, 1st. That the rent is a duty payable annually the 1st of September, and the words by even portions vain and idle, and no half-year's rent can be due. 2d. The rent for a year and half is 111l. and he demands but 100l. which is less than is due; and yet 'tis not shewn how the rest was discharged. The Court held, that judgment ought to be reversed for both causes; but this being the first time of argument, and no one there for the defendant, it was adjourned.

METHIN against THE HUNDRED OF ISTLEWORTH.

Inhabitants finding the robber in the presence of a justice of peace, and charging him, shall excuse the hundred. S. C. 1 Vent. 118, 225, 235. Raym. 221. 2 Keb. 760. 3 Keb. 115.

Action upon the Statute of Winton: the defendants plead a hue and cry levied, and that within forty days they took one of the robbers; and on issue, that they did not take any of the robbers, a special verdict found, that Sir Joseph Ash, one of the inhabitants, finding Dudly, one of the robbers, in the presence of Sir Philip Howard, a justice of the peace, he desired him to commit Dudly; and Howard undertook that he should appear next sessions, and he accordingly did appear, & si, &c. And now it was argued, that this was no caption by pursuit within the statute to excuse the hundred, but a casual finding him in the company of a justice of peace, and a request to commit him: but on the other side it was argued, that here is found to be a hue and cry, and pursuit, and charging him in the presence of a justice of peace, who had him in his power at that time, and this is sufficient; to which Hale [5] Chief Justice inclined: sed adjournatur. But afterwards Hill. 24 & 25 it was so adjudged, Jones for the defendant, Saunders for the plaintiff.

VERE against SMITH.

Pleads, that he accounted, rejoinder, that he was robbed, whereof he gave notice. S. C. 2 Keb. 761, 779, 830. 1 Vent. 121. Vide 6 Mod. 139.

Debt upon an obligation, by the plaintiff a brewer, against the defendant his clerk, conditioned to perform covenants, to account for all sums of money he should receive. Defendant pleads, covenants performed. The plaintiff replies, that such a day 26l. came to his hands, for which he has not accounted. The defendant rejoined, that he accounted modo sequente, viz. that certain malefactors broke into his counting-house and stole it, wherewith he acquainted the plaintiff, et hoc paratus est verificare; upon which the plaintiff demurred: and now it was argued, 1st. That the rejoinder is a departure, for fulfilling a covenant to account, can't be intended but by actual accounting; whereas the rejoinder does not shew an account, but an excuse for not accounting. 2. The rejoinder ought to conclude al Pais, being an express affirmative, that he accounted, in contradiction to what was denied in the replication, that he did not account. Cur' contra. To the 1st, this is an account, and no departure; to the 2d, it was better to conclude as here, than to the country; for now the plaintiff hath liberty to traverse the robbery. Adjournatur. But after in Trinity term the demurrer was waved, and issue taken upon the robbery.

DENNIS against DENNIS.

Tenant in dower may try an error in fact, assigned the first Assizes without proviso. S. C. 1 Saun. 335. 2 Keb. 76.

Error in fact assigned in a judgment in dower, viz. that the tenant was an ideot, and appeared by attorney. Issue being taken upon the ideocy, the plaintiff gave notice of trial next Assizes, and after countermanded it; nevertheless the defendant in error carried it down to trial the same [6] Assizes without a proviso; and held good per Curiam, for he was an actor in the first suit, and is the party delayed by this means; and the issue was found for the defendant in error, and the judgment affirmed; and a precedent was cited, wherein it was so done in a writ of error out of Ireland.

COKE against WHORWOOD.

Award, that one shall be bound with surety, good as to the party, void as to the surety. S. C. 2 Saund. 337. 2 Keb. 767.

Assumpsit to perform an award by which the arbitrators awarded, the defendant should be bound with sufficient surety to the plaintiff for the payment of a certain sum of money; and for breach assigns, that the defendant did not become bound to the plaintiff modo & forma as was awarded; and upon demurrer it was adjudged, that though the award was void as to the finding of surety, it was good as to the defendant himself, and the breach well assigned, that he did not become bound; and the modo & forma only shall relate to himself, and not to the surety.

POLIXFEN against POLIXFEN.

Appellant dies, appeal abates not. S. C. 1 Vent. 133. 2 Keb. 768, 778, 779.

Sentence being given in the Ecclesiastical Court upon a will, the defendant appealed, and hanging that, died; and now the defendant his brother, came in and prosecuted the appeal in lieu of the first appellant; upon which the plaintiff prayed a prohibition; for by the appellant's death the appeal is abated, and the commission determined: but a prohibition was determined for the delegates are the proper Judges, whether or no the appeal be abated by their law; and though it be abated according to the rules of our law, yet it may be otherwise in their law; the matter is wholly of their conusance, and the commission is not determined by the death of the appellant.

[7] WATTON against WEDDINGTON.

Pleas in the words of the condition, good, and the Court to expound. 2 Salk. 520. 1 Saund. 316.

Debt on a bond conditioned, if a ship going such a voyage return, the perils of the sea excepted, the defendant shall pay so much, but if the ship be lost, nothing, and the obligation to be void: the defendant pleaded that the ship proceeded in her voyage such a day, and in her return was lost: upon which the plaintiff demurred, because it was not said the ship was lost per pericula maris, according to the words in the first part of the condition, for it might be lost by the party's own negligence: but per Cur', the plea being in the words of the latter part of the condition, which makes the obligation void, as well in case the ship be lost, as if it return, perils of the sea excepted, and the defendant pay; the plea is good, and judgment was given for the defendant. Jones for the plaintiff.

THE KING against DRURY.

Not usury to accept a lease for 300l. per annum, conditioned to be void if he be paid his 300l. at the end of four years, for it is but an annuity determinable by the grantor, when he pleases. 3 Wils. 393. 2 Bl. Rep. 861. Cowp. 112, 770, 793.

Indictment upon the Statute of Usury, for taking 7l. 10s. for the use of 300l. for a quarter of a year, upon non cul' it was tried by Nisi Prius before Hale Chief Justice at Guild-Hall, where upon evidence the case fell out thus: Brown had a lease from the Earl of Suffolk, of a house for forty years, at the rent of 5l. per annum, Brown agreed with Drue to assign the term to him for 300l. but Drue having not the money, Drury by agreement with Drue, paid the 300l. and took the assignment to himself, and then Drury let the house to Drue, for thirty-nine years and three quarters of a year, after the rent of 35l. per annum, of which 5l. was to be paid to the Earl of Suffolk, and the remaining 30l. to Drury for his own use. Drue covenanted to pay the rent, and with other covenants which are usual in leases, as for repairs, &c. and Drury covenanted, that if at the end of four years Drue paid the 300l. then the rent should cease, and he would convey the residue of the term to Drue. Per Hale Chief Justice This is not usury within the statute, for Drue was not obliged to pay [8] the 300l. to Drury, but is at his election to pay it if he will, and determine the rent by that means and have the term; so that it is no more in effect than a bargain for an annuity of 30l. yearly for thirty-nine years and three quarters, for 300l. to be secured in this manner, determinable sooner if the grantor pleases; but the grantee hath no remedy for his 300l. and cannot recover it, unless the grantee thinks fit to pay it back at the end of the four years, and so the acceptance of the 7l. 10s. is not usury.

But if Drury had took security for re-payment of the 300l. or it had been by any collateral agreement to be repaid, and all this method of bargaining a contrivance to avoid the statute, this had been usury; but as it is, it is no more than the purchase of 30l. Annuity for thirty-nine years and three quarters, for the sum of 300l. determinable by the grantor at the end of four years if he pleases; and accordingly the jury found the defendant not guilty.

[9] TERM. SANCT. TRIN. ANNO 23 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

1933. 1 Ch. 882.

CROSSING against SCUDAMORE.

Bargain and sale without money, operates as a covenant to stand seised. S. C. 1 Vent. 137, 138. 1 Mod. 175, 176. Cart. 137, 138. Post, 213. 3 Lev. 372.

Trespass for breaking his close; the defendant justifies as done in the freehold of Hooke, plaintiff replies it is his freehold, absque hoc that it is the freehold of Hooke; upon which an issue and special verdict, that Nicholas Hooke, whose heir the defendant is, was seised in fee, and 16 Decemb. 1640, in consideration of affection to his daughter under whom the plaintiff claims, made a deed to his daughter, inrolled within six months, whereby in consideration of affection, and for her portion and preferment, and other valuable considerations, he bargained, sold, aliened, infeoffed and confirmed to the said daughter, the lands in question, with a clause of warranty, and a covenant for farther assurance; and that the indenture was made for the consideration aforesaid, and no other. (No money was found to be paid) et si pro querente pro querent': et si non for the defendant. And if this indenture should inure as a covenant to stand seised? was the sole question. It was argued for the plaintiff, that it should operate as a covenant to stand seised; and for this was cited Co. Litt. 49, the intent of parties is to be fulfilled where it can by any rules of law 2 Roll. 598. There are several cases of this nature, though the words be improper. 8 Co. 94, a demise and grant amounts to a bargain and sale. 11 Co. 24, 25. A marriage-covenant to stand [10] seised to the use of his daughter, inrolled, allowed to operate as a bargain and sale. 2 Roll. 789, pl. 30. 7 Co. 40. 2 Roll. 785, pl. 25. And as to Co. Litt. 49 a. where it is held, that when a warrant of attorney is in the deed, it shall not inure by way of use against the parties manifest intent to have it inure as at common law; the contrary hath been adjudged; and as to Pitfield and Pierce's case, 2 Roll. 789, the deed was void in the very frame of it; and in the case cited Hill. 13 & 14 of this King, in this Court, the deed was no more than articles for making a future deed of settlement: and in Osborne and Juge's case, 2 Cro. 217, the reason the Court would not adjudge it to inure by way of use was, because they found out another way to make it good, by making it operate as a confirmation, the party being in possession; and so the deed good. Lastly, They relied upon the case of Tebb against Popplethwaite, 2 Roll. 786, 787, as a case in point.

On the other side was cited Co. Litt. ut supra 49 a. That as the party's intent plainly appearing by the letter of attorney in the deed to pass it at common law, it shall not pass by way of use; so here the warranty in the deed shews the party's intent was to pass it at common law; for otherwise the warranty will be of no effect, and every conveyance which in its self is void, shall not be made good by converting it into a use; for this will introduce the utmost incertainty and barbarity. 3 Cro. 856. Dyer 69, 302. 3 Cro. 394. 2 Roll. 786, and Pitfield and Pierce's case, Foster and Foster's case before cited; and as to the case of Tebb and Popplethwaite in 2 Roll. 786, it was said, judgment was given contrary to the opinion reported. Hale Chief Justice, and Twysden held clearly upon the first argument, that this deed might operate by way of covenant to stand seised; and with the consent of Rainsford and Moreton, gave judgment for the plaintiff: upon which the defendant immediately brought a writ of error in the Exchequer-Chamber, where the judgment was affirmed; so that it is now the judgment of all the Judges of England; Winnington for the plaintiff in B. R. and Finch Attorney General for the defendant.

[11] COLEMAN AND OTHERS against BARD AND NELMS.

Trover de viginti mensuris & duodenis hamarum, naught.

Trover inter alia de viginti mensuris, without an Anglice, or specifying what measures: et de viginti duodenis Anglice gross, hamaram Anglice hooks, not saying what hooks; moreover duodenis being an adverb, which signifies twelve times, 'tis here insensible; but duodenis duodecim is Latin for a gross, scilicet, twelve times twelve, and so it is in the dictionary; and for these faults judgment was stayed upon the motion of Levinz, and the plaintiff for expedition, and to commence a new action, prayed a nil capiat per billam; which accordingly was entered.

HOLBECH against BENNET.

Day and place made parcel of the issue. S. C. 2 Saund. 317. 2 Keb. 750, 769, 789, 825.

Error of a judgment in replevin in Communi Banco, wherein Bennet was plaintiff, for taking his beasts in Fillingly-Field in Fillingly; and Holbech avowed for that the mayor and commonalty, and divers other particular persons by name were thereof seised, and by their indenture dated the 11th of March 1647, testatum sit, that they demised to Bennet for twenty-one years; and by indenture the first of May, 11 Regis nunc testatum sit, that he assigned to Holbech, and that 1° Octobris 11° Regis, Holbech at Fillingly aforesaid, demised to Bennet, rendering rent, and for rent arrear he avowed: the plaintiff Bennet, in bar said, that Holbech did not demise the said first of October at Fillingly aforesaid, modo & forma prout, upon which issue and verdict for the plaintiff quod non dimisit primo die Octob. apud Fillingly modo & forma prout, &c. upon which judgment for the plaintiff: and now it was assigned for error, that this was an immaterial issue, making the day and place of demise parcel of the issue; for a demise at any other time and place had sufficed to maintain this avowry, they being inserted only for conformity in [12] pleading, but that the plea should have been general, non demisit modo & forma prout, and the time and place omitted in the traverse, because they are not traversable; and then the avowant might have given in evidence a demise at another time and place, which had been sufficient to maintain his avowry for the rent; of which benefit he is now deprived by the plaintiff's ill bar, and the Court cannot know for whom to give judgment according to the right of the matter; wherefore this case is not remedied by the new statute, (though the contrary was urged for the plaintiff) the statute being only to cure faults when the right of the matter is tried: and of this opinion was the Court after the matter had been twice debated: but then the Court fell into a doubt what they should do in this case, for per Hale Chief Justice, the Court cannot at this day award a repleader upon a writ of error, if they reverse the judgment, as was used anciently, for which he cited Trin. 8 E. 2, Rot. 59. Trin. 11 E. 3, 75. Trin. 27 E. 3, Rot. 21. Hill. 33 E. 3, Rot. 79, where this Court awarded a repleader upon a writ of error after reversing the judgment, as the Court of Common Pleas ought to have done before judgment: but he said, this course had been disused for above these hundred years and could not be practised now. Upon which it was moved for the avowant to reverse the judgment and set the matter at large: but then Hale Chief Justice took two exceptions to the avowry. First, 'Tis said the mayor and commonalty and the feoffees were seised, which must be intended a joint seisin; whereas a corporation and a person natural cannot be seised jointly.

Secondly, The assignments are not pleaded positively, but by a testatum existit, and then if they reverse this judgment, perhaps they may give judgment for the plaintiff upon his declaration, for the faults in the avowry. Adjournatur. Saunders for the plaintiff, Levinz for the avowant.

[13] TATLOW OR CASTLE against BATEMENT.

Declaration in B. R. refers not to the first day of the term, but the filing of the bail. S. C. 1 Vent. 135. Vide post, 141, 176.

Trover; and upon non cul', verdict for the plaintiff; and it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the action is brought before the cause of action accrued; for the conversion is laid at a day in Easter term, and the declaration is generally as of Easter term, and not at a day certain (as by memorand' quod tali, &c. it may be) and then this must relate to the first day of the term: but per Cur', 'Tis well enough if the bail was filed after the cause of action accrued, for here no action can be depending, nor declaration delivered, until the defendant be in custodia marescalli, and that is never till bail filed, which filing is at a day certain: upon which it was referred to Livesay, the Secondary, to examine when the bail was filed. Saunders for the defendant.

SACHEVERAL against FROGAT.

Ancestor leases, rendering rent to him and his executors, the heir may bring debt for this rent. S. C. 2 Saund. 367. 1 Vent. 148, 161. Raym. 218. 2 Keb. 798, 819, 833, 839.

Debt for rent by the heir, upon a lease from his ancestor, rendering rent to him, his executors and assigns, during the term; and upon demurrer the question was, if the heir may maintain an action of debt upon this lease? It was argued for the defendant, that the action lay not for the heir, being not mentioned in the reservation, and that by the death of the lessor, the rent determined; for which they cited Owen 9, Richmon against Butler, Latch 44, 255, 264, Sury against Cole. But on the other side for the plaintiff were cited, Pasch. 22 Jac. Rot. 62, Sury against Cole, & Hill. 20 Jac. Rot. 177, Sury against Brown, and both adjudged that the rent continues; contrary to what opinion is reported by Rolle and Latch in those very cases. Hale Chief Justice, The rent being reserved to him, his executors and assigns, the rent must continue after the death of the lessor, and go to his heir, upon his apparent intent to have the rent continue after his own death, for otherwise it cannot go to his executors, and this without the words during the term, otherwise where the reservation is to [14] him, or to him and his assigns. Afterwards at another day the case having been twice argued by Jones and Hunt for the plaintiff, and by Bigland and Winnington for the defendant, judgment was given for the plaintiff.

THE KING against NEW-COLLEGE IN OXFORD.

Mandamus lies not for a fellow of a college, where the founder hath appointed one to visit, and no other. S. C. 1 Keb. 2, 6, 14, 103, 234, 289, 833. 2 Keb. 64, 65, 102, 165, 259, 272, 799.

A mandamus was granted to restore a fellow of the college, and upon the return the Court would consider, whether or no the writ lay, and after Hillary 23 & 24, upon the return, the case was argued by Jones for the plaintiff, and Coleman for the defendant; the return set forth their foundation, by which they are obliged to study so many years, and then take orders, and that the master and scholars for enormous crimes, scandalous and dangerous to the college, may expel any fellow, and that the Bishop of Winchester shall be visitor, and in case of difference, that all appeals shall be to him and no other; and that this fellow having committed an offence enormous, scandalous and dangerous to the college, and being summoned and convicted thereof by the master, and expelled according to the statutes of the college, appealed to the Bishop of Winchester, who affirmed the first sentence. Jones took these exceptions to the return. First, 'Tis not returned what the offence was, so as the Court may judge whether it deserved expulsion, Co. 5, Specot's case, and they are not impowered to expel for any cause, but for offences scandalous and dangerous to the college, of which this Court is judge; as was adjudged in this Court, 1655, inter Box and Woolleston. Secondly, They have no power to expel but for enormous crimes; and this return is, that he was convict de criminibus eormibus, for enormibus without a dash, and omitting the letter n, and eormibus without the n, signifies nothing: and as to the matter he argued the mandamus well lay in this case, and cited 11 Co. 68, this Court hath power to give remedy by this writ, where there is no other remedy for the thing itself by assise or action; and here there is no other remedy for the thing itself, nothing but an action upon the case for damages: the head of a college may have an assize, a fellow cannot, unless the other fellows will join with him; now here the fellows are those who have injured and expelled him, and therefore will not join with him for relief. [15] And a college is not a spiritual corporation, and so no remedy that way by appeal to the Ordinary, and although the founder has given an appeal to the Bishop of Winchester, and to no other, this must not oust the party injured of his appeal to the King's Courts for justice. Litt. sect. 212. A custom that if goods be distrained, they shall not be replevied, is void: the same of a grant: and so if a man by his will appoint, that all differences between executors and legatees, shall be referred to, and determined by J. S. and no other person whatsoever: yet this will not oust the parties of their right to sue in the King's Court; as for precedents they cited Dr. Widdrington's case, and Dr. Patrick's case in this Court, which see before. Coleman contra, Suppose the return bad upon the exceptions taken to it, yet if it appear to the Court that the writ lies not, the plaintiff cannot have restitution; and if it appears that the sentence of the visitor is conclusive for the foundation. The founder may impose what terms or conditions he will upon a creature of his own making; and if they will accept the thing, they must accept it upon those conditions which he imposed and obliged it with at its creation; so it differs from the cases put of a replevin, &c. for there was a law in being directing what should be done in those cases before the grant, will, &c.——2. This is a private society, that has no influence upon the public government of the realm: Bagge's case he said was the first precedent of a mandamus of this kind; and the instances there given are all of them touching offices that concern the public; and the mandamus's mentioned in Ryly's Placita Parliamentaria, are no more than letters commendatory; and it does not appear by Bagge's case; that a mandamus was ever granted for restitution to private estates; if so, it may as well be granted to restore a man to his land or inheritance. 3. Colleges are foundations of bounty and charity, and every man may dispose his bounty or charity as he pleases.

Hale and Twysden, Colleges are not spiritual foundations, but private societies like inns of Court: here, per Hale, the bishop is appointed visitor and no other. He hath given sentence in this matter; what has this Court to do with it? This will cure all the faults in the return. The Spiritual Court deprives a man by sentence in a case whereof they have jurisdiction; the cause of this cannot be questioned by [16] assise or otherwise in any Temporal Court, so long as the sentence remains in force, but the Temporal Courts are bound by it: an officer in any Temporal Court subordinate to this Court, is by trial and judgment there deprived of his office; this Court cannot relieve him by mandamus so long as that judgment remains in force. This college is a creature made by the founder, and therefore it would be very hard to allow of appeals farther than he has appointed them. A mandamus lies to the college, but upon the return the Court is to judge whether they have power to meddle in the case or not; and now upon this return it appears that we have no power: to all which Twysden and Moreton seemed to agree, Rainsford being silent. But the opinion of the Court appearing ut ante, Jones desired no farther arguments, though asked that question by the Court.

CALVERLY against PLUMMER.

Husband not chargeable for provision for his wife taken without his consent.

Assumpsit against the defendant for diet and lodging for his wife; and upon non assumpsit at a trial before Hale, in Middlesex, the case was: The husband left his wife in the country, and came and lived in London twenty years, and here married another, for which he was indicted, and his wife came to London to prosecute; upon that he caused her to be arrested, and she was committed to the plaintiff the gaoler; who now sued the husband for her diet and lodging during the time she was in prison. Hale Chief Justice, The husband is not chargeable without some evidence of his assent; as that he visited his wife in prison, or by any other act approved of this provision by the gaoler. But here the contrary appears, for she came to prosecute him, and he was convicted, and had his clergy upon her prosecution; if the husband would not allow her necessaries, she ought to have complained in due course of law for her maintenance: upon which the plaintiff seeing the opinion of the Court, was nonsuit.

[17] FREAKE against CLARKE.

A promise to save the sheriff harmless from all escapes, if he would suffer one taken per ca. sa. to stay three days at his house. S. C. 1 Danv. 45, pl. 22. 1 Lev. 98, simile. 1 Roll. Rep. 20, pl. 11. Vide 1 Lev. 98, 188, &c. ibid.

Assumpsit, and declares that he was a bailiff, and had taken one J. S. in execution, by virtue of a warrant upon a ca. sa. and that the defendant in consideration the plaintiff would permit J. S. to remain at the house of J. D. in Hammersmith, till Friday next following, that he would save him harmless from all rescous and escapes, and that he permitted him to abide there till Thursday evening, when he was rescued, and the plaintiff compelled thereupon to pay the debt: after verdict for the plaintiff upon non assumpsit, 'twas moved in arrest of judgment by Levinz, that this consideration was unlawful, being for ease and favour to one in execution, that ought to be in salva & arcta custodia, 2 Bulst. 213, where a promise in consideration the other would suffer an escape, is void, and this here is to give him means and opportunity to escape; hereupon the Court at first stayed the judgment: but after on the last day of the term, judgment was given for the plaintiff, Hale saying, he expected he should have been attended with precedents: but I apprehended upon the first motion he said only, he would consider the matter himself; but being the last day of the term, and a long vacation to follow, he said, he would not delay the judgment longer, but bid us bring our writ of error if we thought fit.

[18] TERM. SANCT. MICH. ANNO 23 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

THE KING against CHURCHWARDENS OF KINGSCLEERE.

A mandamus for a sexton, steward of a court-baron, &c. 1 Vent. 143, 153. 1 Keb. 286. 2 Keb. 802.

A mandamus was moved for, the last day of the term by George Stroud, to restore the sexton of the parish, and day was given till the first day of this term to shew cause to the contrary. And now 'twas moved by Levinz, that this office did not concern the public, and this Court therefore cannot take notice of it, as they might of a constable, who is an officer concerned in the peace, or of a church-warden, who has the ordering of the goods of the church, or of the parish clerks, who are to keep the ornaments of the church, and to register the baptisms and funerals: but the sexton is only to ring the bells and dig the graves, and is only an officer at will, as the cowherd or swineherd of a village; and Trin. 1655, 'twas doubted if it lay for a schoolmaster, because private, and not concerning the public; for then 'twas held, that a mandamus lay only for officers which concern the public, as for a steward of a leet, not for the steward of a court-baron. But Hale Chief Justice said, that it lay for the steward of a court-baron, if he be not at will only, because he is an officer of justice; and now a certificate being brought from the minister of the parish, and divers of the parishioners, that the sexton was an officer for life, and received two-pence a house yearly as wages, the mandamus was granted; and the same term [19] 'twas granted for another sexton of a parish without such certificate.

Note, These cases were before the resolution in New-College case before reported, but resolved after; although in New-College case the writ was granted before, to be considered of upon the return, which was after these cases.

BARNES against GLADMAN IN THE PETTY BAG IN CHANCERY.

Replication petit judicium & damna, omitting debitum, good. Vide 1 Lev. 222. Cro. Car. 297. 1 Saund. 98, 99. 4 Inst. 73.

Debt upon an obligation, conditioned to perform covenants in an indenture of apprenticeship: defendant pleads performance. The plaintiff replies and assigns a breach & hoc, &c. unde petit judicium & damna sua sibi adjudicari. Defendant demurs, quia minus rite conclusit; for he ought to have said, petit judicium & debitum, & damna sua sibi adjudicari; and so are all the precedents in Co. & Rast. Entries, except two in Coke's Entries, and those were after verdict; but this being here specially demurred upon, 'twas much insisted to be ill for this cause. But by Bridgman Lord Keeper, although it be form, yet 'tis but unnecessary form, for by the praying of judgment all is included; because when the Court gives judgment, of consequence they give judgment for the debt and damages.

JONES against GREENE.

Sheriff makes a warrant before the writ comes to his hands, well. S. C. 2 Saund. 298, 299. 2 Keb. 607, 838, 844. Vide Prox. Pag. & 3 Lev. 57, 58, 93.

Trespass for battery and imprisonment: the defendant justifies by a writ out of the King's Bench directed to the sheriff, and a warrant thereupon made to him. The plaintiff demurs specially, because it is not pleaded, that the writ was delivered to the sheriff according to the common form. To which it was answered, that it was not necessary to be so pleaded; for if in truth a writ be sued out, and he made a warrant before the writ come to his hands, 'tis well, and the precedents are both ways, as [20] Dr. Bonham's case, 8 Co. Rep. and other cases; and of this opinion was Hale, and the whole Court, and gave judgment for the defendant. Levinz counsel for the defendant.

DUNWELL AND HIS WIFE against MARSHALL.

Trespass for taking goods from him, and does not say whose. 2 Keb. 813.

Trespass for battery of his wife, and for taking from her an apron and a pinner. After verdict for the plaintiff, 'twas moved in arrest of judgment; 1st. That it is not alledged in whom was the property of the apron and pinner, and it can't be in the wife, it may be in a stranger, and then neither the husband nor the wife has a cause of action as to them. 2 Cro. 46, Burser against Martin. Trespass quare equam cepit a persona, held ill. 2d. If they were the goods of the husband, the wife ought not join with the husband for them, but the husband alone shall have the action. In the 16th of this reign 'twas so adjudged between Stanton and his Wife, &c. against Hobard: they brought trespass for beating the wife, and tearing a coat upon the body of the wife; and so held the Court now, and stayed the judgment. Levinz for the defendant.

DAVISON against HESLOP.

Bailiff promises his master's creditor to pay him out of the rent, if he will forbear a month. S. C. Raym. 211, 212. 2 Keb. 813. 1 Danv. 31, 11, 53, 33.

Assumpsit, that whereas Fenwicke was indebted to the plaintiff for arrears of an annuity of 117l. and appointed the defendant, then his receiver, to pay it out of the rents due at Martlemas next ensuing; and that the plaintiff and defendant accounted, and thereupon it appeared, that 117l. was due to him. The defendant promised, that if the plaintiff would forbear, he would pay it within a month after. For the plaintiff 'twas moved in arrest of judgment, that it does not appear that the defendant received any rent at Michaelmas, and the appointment was to pay it only out of the rents due at Martlemas; but to this 'twas answered, that it should be so intended now, the defendant having promised to pay it upon forbearance; and so held the Court, and gave judgment for the plaintiff. Weston [21] of counsel for the defendant, Levinz for the plaintiff.

WILLIAMS against FRY.

Devise in tail & si &c. to an other, 'tis not a condition, but a conditional limitation. Vide Molloon v. Fitz Gerrald, 3 Mod. Rep. 20. S. C. 3 Keb. 19. Raym. 236, 237. 1 Mod. 86, 300. 1 Vent. 199. 2 Danv. 109.

Ejectment, and upon non cul' and special verdict, the case was this, the Earl of Newport being seised, and having three sons now living, and two daughters, one of which daughters had issue the wife of the defendant, devised the messuage in question, called Newport-House, in the parish of St. Martin's Westminster, to the wife of the defendant in tail: provided, that if she married without the consent of the Earl of Manchester, and others, or died without issue, then to the lessor of the plaintiff, being then and still an infant. She not having notice of the condition, and being of the age of fourteen, married without the consent of the Earl of Manchester, &c. to the defendant Fry: he entered, and the lessor brought an ejectment, and the case was argued this and Hilary term following by Jones and Finch Attorney General, for the plaintiff, and by Winnington and North Solicitor General, for the defendant, and three points were argued by the counsel. 1st. If this was a condition, or a conditional limitation; the plaintiff is not heir, and so hath no right to enter; otherwise if it be a conditional limitation. 2d. Be it the one or the other, if notice thereof ought to have been given to the devisee before the estate shall be determined? 3d. If notice were necessary, whether the infancy of both parties, (for the lessor as well as the devisee, wife of the defendant were both infants) will alter the case? and afterwards in Easter term following, all the Judges concurred in opinion, and gave judgment for the defendant. 1st. That in this case the proviso does not make a condition, but a conditional limitation, (although proviso, and the words & si be express words of condition) contrary to what is held 10 Co. Rep. 40 b. and that in respect of the remainder, which is here limited over not to the heir, but to a stranger; for it can't be a reasonable construction of the intent of the devisor, that if there be a breach by the wife of the defendant, it shall forfeit the estate of the lessor in remainder, [22] but only that it shall work a determination of her own estate, and for this were cited 1 Rol. 411. 3 Co. Wellock and Hamond's case cited in Boraston's case, ibid. 20 b. 2 Cro. 56. Hill. 1649, B. R. Rot. 758. Saunders's case, 3 Cro. 753. Dyer 317. Secondly, That the infancy in this case is not material, for the infant takes by purchase, and is not to have age; and this is a conditional limitation express, and infants are not privileged against conditions in deed. Co. Litt. 233. Plowd. 57, 375. Cro. Condition 114. Thirdly, No notice of the condition was necessary, and therefore want of notice will not excuse in this case, as it did in Corbet's case, 4 Co. 2, because the devise here is to a stranger, and not to the heir, and the devisee might as well take notice of the condition, as of the estate devised to him, otherwise where the devise is to the heir upon such conditional limitation, for the heir might enter upon his general title as heir, without notice of the will or condition; here the defendant had no title but by the will, and yet entered. And this difference was taken and agreed, where a devise is to one upon condition, and another is concerned, and more privy, he that is most privy shall give notice to the other; but where both are equally privy, and equally concerned, as the lessor and the defendant in this case, neither of them is obliged to give notice. 2 Cro. Molineux's case, 3 Leon. 95. Dyer 354. Poph. 10. 3 Co. 72. Westby's case, 1 Cro. Jean against Thornhill, 22 Ed. 4, 27, 28. 1 Rol. 409, Spring and Caser's case: and judgment was given for the plaintiff by the whole Court.

CHAPMAN against GALE.

General judgment against an executor, entered by mistake of the clerk, amended. Vide Lex Testam. 109. 1 Lev. 286. 2 Keb. 810.

Debt against an executor, who pleads plene administravit, and verdict and judgment for the plaintiff, which was entered generally, and thereupon error was brought, and 'twas assigned, that the judgment should have been, de bonis testatoris si, &c. But upon the affidavit of Astry the attorney, that he gave his clerk instructions to enter it up according to the plea, and that 'twas a mere mistake of the clerk, it was amended as a misprision of the clerk.

[23] OPY against PETERS.

Mutual agreements that the one should build and the other should pay, and declares that he offered to build, without saying the other hindered him. S. C. 2 Saund. 350. 1 Vent. 117, 214. 2 Keb. 811, 827. 3 Keb. 45.

Assumpsit upon two promises, the first of which was agreed to be good, but the second was that upon colloquium between the plaintiff and defendant, about the building of a house, 'twas agreed, that the plaintiff should build the defendant a house; and that the defendant should give him 8l. pro opere & labore suo in building it, and that in consideration the plaintiff promised to perform his part, the defendant promised to perform his part and that the plaintiff was always ready & obtulit to perform his part, and the defendant had not paid. After verdict for the plaintiff upon non assumpsit, and intire damages, 'twas moved in arrest of judgment, that the declaration was naught, for not having averred the defendant had hindered him, but only that he was ready & obtulit, and though here are mutual promises, yet the promises are only to perform the agreement, and that is conditional in its self, for in agreements executory pro makes a condition precedent, 8 Co. Ughtread's case, and this is not like 2 Cro. 44, Prance against Tringer, the bare omission of an averment; but this is a bad averment, by which it appears, that he hath not done the thing, and yet it doth not appear that the defendant hindered him, and the mutual promises do not oblige them to perform the agreement, other than according to the agreement, scil. that the defendant pay 8l. to the other if he built the house: and to this exception Hale strongly inclined, to which Rainsford seemed to agree. Twysden totis viribus contra, and that the mutual promises had cured all, and there needs no averment, and that which is here made is but surplusage; and the judgment was stayed, and so continued till Trinity term; and then being moved again that the obtulit after verdict supplies the want of an averment, that he was hindered, because if he had not been hindered by the defendant, the obtulit had been in vain, and the jury would not have found for the plaintiff, and have given him his damages; the whole Court agreed to it, and gave judgment for the plaintiff: Hale and [24] Twysden still continuing their different opinions as to the other matter. Pollexfen for the plaintiff, Saunders for the defendant.

FISHER against PATTEN.

Dutchy Court at Westminster, if it can hold plea by English bill of lands in the County Palatine. S. C. 2 Keb. 826. Constituting a Chancellor, does not constitute a Court of Equity. Vide 4 Inst. 199, 200. More Rep.

A prohibition was prayed to the Dutchy Court, because they held plea by English bill between party and party, of lands lying in the County Palatine, which ought only to be in the Court of Chancery of the County Palatine, and not here in the Dutchy Court at Westminster; which ought to hold plea only of lands parcel of the dutchy, lying out of the County Palatine; for which was cited Owen and Holt's case, Hob. 77. On the other side was cited 4 Inst. 212, and Rolle's Prohib. 314, and the several patents and statutes constituting the dutchy were examined: and Hale Chief Justice said, that the constituting of a Chancellor does not of its self constitute a Court of Equity; for there is a Chancellor of the Garter, and there was a Chancellor of Augmentations, and yet neither of them ever held any Court of Equity; and he said, that the Statute of Edward the Fourth, gave them no Court of Equity, but a Court of Revenue, and how their Court of Equity came to be held does not plainly appear, perhaps it began in the time of H. 5, before the statute of E. 4. But he and Twysden agreeing it might be inconvenient to examine their power after so long continuance and practice, as by the precedents now produced, it appears to be used without farther examination; after it had been two or three times spoke to in this Court, and partly by admission of the parties, a prohibition was denied. Levinz counsel for the plaintiff in the prohibition, and Weston for the defendant.

[25] RIDLY against EGGLESFIELD.

Goods taken by pirates condemned in Scotland, and being brought into England, and a suit for them in the Admiralty after the sale, this suit in the Admiralty here is not within the statute R. 2, or H. 4. S. C. 2 Saund. 259. 1 Vent. 173. 2 Keb. 828. 1 Danv. 269, 8, 265, 12.

Case for suing in the Admiralty, contrary to the Statutes of Richard the Second, and Henry the Fourth, and declares, that the plaintiff libelled there for a ship and goods, supposing them to be taken by pirates upon the high sea, and to come afterwards to the defendant's hands upon the high sea; whereas he purchased them upon the land; and upon non culp. the case coming to be tried before Hale Chief Justice at Nisi Prius, appeared to be, that the goods were contraband goods going to the Dutch, in the time of the late war between the English and them, and taken by a Scotch man of war; and at the suit of the now defendant, condemned as prize by the Admiralty of Scotland, and sold to one Butcher who brought them to land and sold them to the plaintiff in England: upon which Hale doubting, caused a juror to be drawn, and directed a trial at Bar. And now upon the evidence before Hale, Twysden and Rainsford, they unanimously agreed, that this case was not within the statute, for the original cause being piracy, belongs to the Admiralty, and though the goods were condemned in the Admiralty of Scotland, that alters not the case as to the jurisdiction of the Court, but that it was pleadable in the Admiralty of England, as a judgment; (and so 'twas done in this case, and the defendant there dismissed, he being plaintiff in the Admiralty here) but neither that nor the sale at land alters the jurisdiction, the original matter being piracy, all which comes in question again, the sale at land being only matter consequential, and dependant upon the piracy. And at last by mediation of the Court, and by consent of Jones, Winnington and Levinz, counsel for the plaintiff, a juror was withdrawn, and the jury paid by both parties, and no costs, and no farther prosecution to be in the case.

[26] LUCY against LEVINGTON.

Covenant with the vendee, his heirs and assigns, and yet the executor brings the action. S. C. 1 Vent. 175, 176. 2 Keb. 831. 2 Danv. 86, pl. 4, 235, p. 1.

Covenant and declares, that Levington sold to Luke Lucy the plaintiff's testator, certain lands, and covenanted with him, his heirs and assigns, that he should enjoy the same against him and Sir Peter Vanlore, their heirs and assigns, and all claiming under them; and assigns for breach, that Croke claiming under Vanlore, ejected him. The defendant pleaded, that at the time of the covenant he was seised of an indefeasible title, and that by a subsequent Act of Parliament, reciting, that Sir Peter Vanlore had settled this estate upon the Lady Mary Powell, and that certain persons had unduly procured her to levy a fine, 'twas enacted, that this fine should be void, and that all persons might enter as if no fine had been levied; and that by force of this fine & non aliter, the defendant was seised, and sold and made this covenant; and that after the Act Croke claiming by title derived from the Lady Mary Powell, by the settlement of Vanlore, by virtue of the said Act of Parliament, entered and ousted him, upon which the plaintiff demurred: and for the defendant 'twas argued. First, That the covenant was with Lucy, his heirs and assigns, touching an estate of inheritance; therefore the action ought to be brought by the heir or assignee, whose loss it is, and not by the executor. To which 'twas answered and resolved by the Court, that the eviction being to the testator, he cannot have an heir or assignee of this land; and so the damages belong to the executors, though not named in the covenant, for they represent the person of the testator. 2. 'Twas argued, that the title on the covenant being good at the time of the making, and the title upon which the evidence depends, created by subsequent Act of Parliament; here is no breach, 9 Co. Rep. 106, 107, Dame Gresham's case. To which 'twas answered and resolved by Hale and Rainsford, that the Act does not make a new title, but removes the obstruction that kept off the old title; and they said, that doubtless Sir Peter Vanlore was named in the covenant, for the purpose that they might be secured in case this fine thus unduly obtained should be avoided. But Twysden being of a [27] contrary opinion, a writ of error was brought immediately. Sed quid inde venit nescio. Levinz of counsel for the defendant, Weston for the plaintiff.

LITHEBURY AND OTHERS against CORITON.

Two join in an action for not grinding at their several mills. S. C. 1 Vent. 167. 2 Saund. 115. 2 Keb. 601, 803, 838, 856. 1 Danv. 5, 6. 2 Danv. 428.

Case, for that the one plaintiff was seised of a water corn-mill, and the others of another, within the same manor, which they have repaired; and that time out of mind, &c. all tenants of the manor, of which the defendant is one, molierunt & molire debent, all the grain spent in their houses, at these two mills, or one of them, and that the defendant, being a tenant, did grind corn, spent in his house, at another mill. Upon which the defendant demurred: 1. Because the plaintiffs having several interests can't join in the action. But by Hale, and the whole Court, they may join, for the damage is intire to both their mills, by the grinding at this strange mill, and at neither of their mills only. But then Hale Chief Justice, took this exception to the declaration, that it is not well laid that he ought to grind at these two mills, or one of them; for it may be, all ought to be ground at one of the mills, and nothing at the other; and then the plaintiffs cannot join; but it should be, that whatever corn is not ground at one mill, ought to be ground at the other. And Twysden took another exception, that the prescription ought to be for grinding all the grain which is ground and spent in their houses; for grain may be spent there which is not ground at all, as grain for horses, swine, poultry, &c. Upon which, for expedition, Saunders of counsel for the plaintiff, prayed a nil capiat per billam; & habuit.

[28] THE KING against CLAPHAM.

Rescous returned as done to the sheriff, or his bailiff. Vide 1 Lev. 218 & post, 144.

Upon a return of rescous, the exception was taken, that the rescous was returned to be made to the bailiff; whereas the warrant and the rescue being made to the bailiff of the sheriff, and not the bailiff of a franchise, the rescous should have been returned as done to the sheriff himself, and not to his bailiff; but by the Court, 'tis good either way.

HUDSON against BENSON AND BARON.

Gift to the use of A. in tail, and if he die without issue, to the use that B. shall have a rent: A. makes a lease for years, and after suffers a recovery, the contingent rent is barred, and shall not charge the lease. S. C. 1 Mod. 108, 109. 3 Keb. 274, 287, 292.

Error of a judgment given in the County Palatine of Lancaster, before Wylde Justice there, in a replevin, wherein the defendants made conusance as bailiffs to Anne Morely; for that Rowland Morely being seised 23 Jan. 1616, enfeoffed Davenport, and others, to the use of himself, and the heirs males of his body, remainder in tail to divers others, remainder to his own right heirs. Provided, that if Rowland and Edward his son, and the Lady Elizabeth Morely shall all happen to die, and no issue male of Rowland, that then the said Anne Morely shall have a rent-charge of 200l. until she receive 2000l. with all charges for recovering thereof out of the profits. The first payment to commence at the first day of payment which shall happen first after all the said contingents; and then shews, that the said contingents are all passed, by which she was seised for her life; and for rent arrear, they make conusance, scil. for 10l. part of the rent for half a year. The plaintiff in bar of the avowry pleads, that Edward Morely, the last issue male of Rowland, levied a fine, and suffered a recovery of the land. To which bar the defendant replied, that before the fine and recovery, the said Edward made a lease for 1000 years to B. and C. which yet continues; upon which the plaintiff demurs; and Wylde adjourned the case to be argued at his chamber at London; where 'twas argued before him by Finch Attorney General, and Pemberton for the plaintiff, and by North Solicitor General, and Levinz for [29] the defendant, and two points were made:—1. If this contingent were barred by the recovery?—2. If the lease for 1000 years remained liable to the rent, admitting it barred as to the remainders intailed upon the estate? And for the avowant 'twas said, that the recovery can't bar this contingent use, which was not in esse when the recovery was suffered, and therefore no recompence in value, the reason for which common recoveries do bar, can go to this.—3 Co. Cuppledike's case, and therefore it is not barrable. 3 Cro. Pell against Brown. Vide Mo. pl. 201, a power in executors to sell after an estate-tail determined; and 2 Cro. 127, 792, a rent reserved upon a gift in tail, is not barred by a recovery: as to Capell's case, 1 Co. Rep. the rent was barred, because it issued out of the remainder in tail, and that was barred by the recovery: but the rent here is as it were a rent-charge upon the land, created by him that had the whole fee in him, which is like Whitlock's case, 8 Co. Rep. where a charge or lease made by virtue of a power upon a settlement, covers all the estates, like a precedent grant. But to this 'twas answered and resolved by Wylde, 1. That the recovery bars this rent, because it has barred all the estates chargeable with the rent, though it be admitted to arise out of the seisin of the feoffees, according to Whitlock's case. But 'twas agreed, that if it had been created by a grant precedent to the feoffment, it had not been barred by the recovery: and 'twas said, that Capell's case ruled the case in question; and that all the objections are made in Capell's case, which can be made to this case: viz. 1. That the rent there was charged upon the remainders, as it is in this case. 2. That common recoveries would be to no purpose, if they do not bar rents issuing out of estates in tail, as well as the estates themselves. 3. The grantee of a rent-charge can't falsify a recovery of the land. 4. 'Twas objected in Capell's case, as 'tis here, that the recompence in value can't extend to the rent. To which 'twas answered, that the true reason of common recoveries is not the recompence in value, but that they were common conveyances. 9 Co. Rep. Beamond's case. Baron and feme tenants in tail, baron levies a fine and dies, the feme survives, and suffers common recovery, this is a good bar, and yet no recompence in value can go to the estate-tail, for that was disturbed by the fine before. And as to the second 'twas argued and resolved, that the land can't be chargeable during [30] the term for 1000 years, because 'tis only derived out of the estate-tail in Edward, which is spent and determined, and before the end and determination of the said estate this charge was not to arise. Note, No notice was taken that this fine and recovery were both of them before the use of the rent arose, by which perhaps the privity and estate being altered and destroyed before the contingent happened, the contingency could never arise, and so is barred. And after deliberation, the Judge gave judgment against the avowant; upon which this writ of error was brought, and postea Pasch. 26 Car. 2, B. R. the said points were argued again by Levinz for the plaintiff, in the writ of error, and by Heneage Finch the late Attorney General now Lord Keeper, and the judgment was affirmed by Hale, & Cur', who concurred in both points with the judgment of Wylde, and all agreed Capell's case, and the reasons of it. And Hale said, The recompence of the value is the reason of the bar by common recoveries, as to the issue in tail; but not the reason why it bars as to him in reversion or remainder; but the reason in this case is, because the recoveror in supposition of law is in of the estate tail, and that in judgment of law has still continuance: as at common law the donee post prolem suscitatam, might have aliened and barred the donor, and a common recovery is as it were a conveyance excepted out of the Statute de Donis, and the recoveror is in of the estate which the donee had, but the issue in tail is barred to claim it, in respect of a supposed recompence by the recovery; and so the estate-tail having in judgment of law continuance, no charge upon the reversion or remainder can take place, and that is the reason of Capell's case, why the charge of him in remainder can't take place after a recovery suffered by the tenant in tail. And he agreed White and Gerish's case, in 3 Cro. that a rent reserved upon a gift in tail is not barred, but remains as a collateral charge upon the land, distrainable of common right; but if in such case there be a condition of re-entry, that is barred. Twysden doubted, if the rent were not barred in Gerish's case; but Hale totis viribus held, that it was not barred; and Hale said, that about the 9th of Eliz. it was a doubt, whether if tenant in tail, remainder for years, and tenant in tail suffer a recovery, the lease for years be barred; because being a chattel, no recompence of value could go to it? But he said, that constant experience hath allowed, [31] that such lease is barred. Then two exceptions were taken to the pleading. First, Because it is quædam finalis concordia facto fuit, & postea concessum & concordatum; whereas the usual form is quidam finis se levavit, which includes all; but when they would plead by parts they ought to shew all, and perhaps no King's silver was paid. But this exception was over-ruled, for the ancient course of pleading was in this manner. Secondly, The recovery is pleaded, but no execution thereof, and then the estate-tail remains till it be barred by execution sued out. But this was also over-ruled, for if no execution be sued out, then the recovery is to the use of him against whom it was had, since no other use appears: but quære of this reason, for before execution, how can any use of the recovery arise?

[32] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 23 & 24 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

THE KING against HARWOOD.

Custom of London, for city orphans to be in the custody of the mayor, &c. S. C. 1 Mod. 77, & 79. 1 Vent. 178, 180. 1 Sid. 250. Raym. 116.

Upon a habeas corpus to the keeper of Newgate, the return was, that the Court of Aldermen in London, are by the custom of London, guardians of all city orphans; and that if any man marry a city orphan under the age of twenty-one, without their consent, they may punish him by fine and imprisonment; and that Harwood married Mrs. Offley, a city orphan, having a portion of 800l. without their consent, for which they fined him 40l. and because he refused to pay, committed him to Newgate. To which return exceptions are now taken by Weston and Offley; First, That it is not returned in what place he married her, and the custom cannot extend to places out of the city, neither can it be an offence to marry a city orphan out of the city, for in the country one cannot know a city orphan from another, nor know the customs of the city. Secondly, This is a power to fine and imprison, without excepting a reasonable excuse, which may be shewn to the contrary. Thirdly, It is said he married her without their consent; but it is not said he took her extra custodiam suam. Fourthly, It is not said he refused to pay the fine, not shewing a reasonable cause to the contrary. To which it was answered by Finch Attorney General, and resolved by Hale and the whole Court, that their power would be in vain, if the custom should not extend to marriages out of the city, for then it were but drawing a city orphan to Islington, and marrying her there, and so escape punishment; and that every one ought to take notice whom he marries, and he might have been informed by the orphan herself, though she were in the country, and besides no one was bound [33] to give him notice. And as to the second and forth exception, it shall be intended he could not shew a reasonable cause to the contrary. Thirdly, She continued in the custody of the aldermen, wheresoever she was, and then the marrying her without their consent was taking her extra custodiam suam.

THE MERCERS AND IRONMONGERS OF CHESTER against RADFORD.

The Court of Equity at Chester, grants a trial in the county at large.

They sued the defendant in the City-Court of Chester, for using the trade of a linen-draper there, which (as they alledged) no one ought but citizens and freemen: he exhibited his bill in the Exchequer-Court of Equity there to have the matter tried in an indifferent county, because the mayor and aldermen are both parties and Judges: the Exchequer hereupon granted an injunction and appointed the trial to be in the county of Chester at large. Upon this the mercers and ironmongers prayed a prohibition, which was denied; for the Chancery here directs trials for lands to be in indifferent counties; as in Mosely and Maynard's case, where upon a writ for land in Lancashire, the Chancery directed the trial to be by a jury of Hertford, at the Exchequer-Bar: and in Cole and Green's case, a trust for houses in London, 'twas tried at this Bar by a Middlesex jury.

WOOLNOUGH AND HIS WIFE against VIRDON.

Trin. 22, Rot. 844.

Assumpsit to convey his whole estate. S. C. 2 Keb. 708.

Assumpsit and declares, that in consideration that the plaintiff and his wife at the defendant's request, would convey to Charles Lucy, cousin and heir of Matthew Lucy, their estate in certain lands in Higham, (which were the lands of the said Matthew) in such manner as the said Charles should appoint, the defendant promised to pay them 50l. And that whereas the plaintiffs at the defendant's request, had promised to convey the said tenements to the said Charles, by such ways as he should appoint, the defendant promised to pay them another sum of 50l. and then alledges that they were always ready to convey, but Charles never [34] requested. The defendant pleads, that at that time the plaintiffs nor either of them had any estate in the said lands. Upon this the plaintiffs demurred; and entered a nolle prosequi as to the second promise, and had judgment for the first: hereupon error was brought and assigned, that there was no consideration; the plaintiffs having no estate, as is now confessed by the demurrer. But by all the Court, this is well, for the bargain was for such estate as they had, and they might have a right extinguishable by release, although they had no estate; and so they affirmed the judgment.

Nota, No notice was taken that the nolle prosequi was entered upon the one assumpsit before judgment was given upon the other; but that seems well enough upon the authority of 1 Cro. Walsh and Bishop.

PARSONS against PIERCE.

Feme sole makes a feoffment, deins view, and directs him to enter, they inter-marry, and then he enters. S. C. 1 Mod. 91. 1 Vent. 186. 2 Keb. 872, 882.

Ejectment; upon a special verdict the case was: A feme sole made a charter of feoffment to J. S. and within the view directed him to enter, without other livery. They intermarried before he entered, and after he entered: and if the livery was made good by this entry after marriage, or thereby countermanded? was the question. And it was adjudged that the feoffment was made good by this entry after marriage, and not countermanded by the marriage: and it is not like Force and Hemlock's case, 4 Co. Rep. 60, where a feme devises land to a man, and they intermarry, and then she dies, there indeed the marriage is a revocation of the devise; for otherwise the devise would be irrevocable, which is contrary to the nature of the thing: but this is like the case there cited, a feme sole grants a reversion and marries the grantee before attornment, yet the attornment by the tenant to the grantee after the marriage, is good, and not countermanded by the marriage, because 'tis for the benefit of the husband, and the grant shall be taken most strongly against the grantor. Otherwise perhaps in that case if she had married a stranger, and so perhaps here.

[35] ZOUCH against CLAYE.

A. and B. seal, &c. obligation to C. and after by consent D. is added, and he seals, &c. 1 Vent. 185. 2 Keb. 872.

In debt upon an obligation, the case was thus: A. and B. delivered the bond to C. and after, by the consent of the parties, the name and addition of D. was interlined, and he also sealed the obligation and delivered it. And if the obligation by this alteration was made void against A. and B. or not, was the question? But by Hale, and the whole Court adjudged, that it was not; and that 'tis the obligation of all three, and so is Moor. Rep. pl. 738, although 3 Cro. 626 was before adjudged contrary. But as the case is in 3 Cro. the obligation was altered only by consent of the obligors, in the absence of the obligee, and without his notice, though to his use. But here 'tis by consent of all parties.

LLOYD against BROCKING.

A right of entry will preserve a contingent remainder. S. C. 2 Saund. 382. 1 Mod. 92. 1 Vent. 188, 189. 2 Keb. 872, 881.

Thomas Bradshaw, tenant for life, remainder to Peter Bradshaw for life, remainder to the first and tenth sons of Peter in tail, the remainder to the right heirs of Edward Bradshaw. Peter had issue a son, and then Peter and Edward levied a fine to Thomas Bradshaw, (the son of Peter being then alive) Thomas then made a feoffment in fee, and after that Peter had issue a second son, and after the first son died; all which matter appeared upon a special verdict, in ejectment upon a will by which the settlement was made: and the single point in question was, whether by the feoffment of Thomas Bradshaw, the contingent remainder to the second son was destroyed, he being unborn at the time of the feoffment? And 'twas by Hale, and the whole Court adjudged, not destroyed, but preserved by the right of remainder, which was in the first son, till the birth of the second son.

[36] THE BISHOP OF EXETER against STARR.

the bishop for caution can take an obligation to himself, or to him and his commissary, or to the King. S. C. Raym. 225. 2 Keb. 814, 436, 848, 873. Vide 6 Mod. 71.

Debt upon an obligation taken for caution upon an excommunication and upon demurrer, if the obligation was good or bad, was the question? And 'twas argued by Jones for the defendant, and by Masters for the plaintiff. Three objections were made against the bond; 1. That no obligation omnino should be taken for caution, for it must go to the executors of the bishop. F. N. B. 65. Regist. 66, 67. But cautio pignoratitia is good, for the goods remain in trust to compel obedience to the church. 2. If the bishop can take obligations, yet they ought not to be taken to the bishop and his commissary, or chancellor, as this is, but to the bishop only. 1 Bulst. 125. 3. If any obligation may be taken, it must be taken in the name of the King, and not of the bishop, as all recognizances are taken in the King's Courts. On the other side 'twas said, that caution is a term of the canon law, and they know best what it means. That they have three sorts of cautions; 1. Juratory, by oath, which is in smaller offences, and when the party can't give other security, whereby the party makes oath to perform the sentence of the Court. 2. Fidejussory, by obligation and sureties. 3. Pignoratitia, the pledging of goods, plate, &c. All which are good: more especially this by obligation, being more for the ease of the party, and the making thereof is his own act. And as to that which is said, 1 Bulst. 122, 'tis but an obiter opinion, and no point in the case. Hale Chief Justice, doubted if the bond were good. Wylde held it to be good. And being moved again in Easter term following, the Court would not proceed farther in the case, because the excommunication and offence were pardoned by the general pardon. But then Hale Chief Justice said, that upon a writ de cautione admittenda, the bishop may take an obligation, because the writ enables him so to do; but otherwise he cannot. And now Wylde also held, that the bishop could not take the obligation in his own name, and so make the forfeiture due to himself, when it should be to the King. 1 Rol. Rep. 110.

[37] ENBRIN against MOMPESSON.

Administrator durante minore sues a sci. fa. against the bail, the infant being come of age.

Administrator de bonis durante minore J. S. obtains judgment, and in a scire facias against the bail 'twas pleaded, that J. S. is now of full age: whereupon the plaintiff demurred, and 'twas adjudged no plea, for the recognizance is to the plaintiff himself by name, though he be administrator durante minore ætate tantum, and the infant's coming of age does not hinder the plaintiff from suing a scire facias against the bail. But by Hale, If after the infant come of age he had sued out execution upon the principal judgment, it might have been a question, whether that ought to be sued out by him, or by the infant?

PROCTOR against NEWTON.

Execution by a stranger upon prior title, well pleaded without shewing what was the title. S. C. 1 Vent. 184. 2 Keb. 878. 3 Keb. 41. 2 Danv. 50, 14. 2 Saund. 178, 179.

Debt upon an obligation to perform covenants. The defendant pleaded the covenants, which were upon a sale of land to the plaintiff, that the plaintiff should enjoy the land against A. and B. and pleads performance generally. The plaintiff replies, that A. and B. habentes jus virtute tituli eis inde fact', before the conveyance and covenant, entered upon him and ousted him; upon which the defendant demurred, supposing the breach too general, not shewing by whom, and by what title they entered: but the plaintiff being a stranger to the title of A. and B. Hale held it to be well enough, dubitante Twysden, & adjournatur. But in Trinity term after, 'twas adjudged for the plaintiff. Levinz counsel for the plaintiff, Winnington for the defendant.

[38] BADDINGTON against FREEMAN.

Suit against baron and feme, being an infant, she must appear by guardian.

Assumpsit against baron and feme, upon a contract for wares, by the feme dum sola. Verdict and judgment was for the plaintiff upon issue non assumpsit in the Common Pleas; and thereupon in error here 'twas assigned, that the wife was within age, and appeared by attorney, whereas it should have been by guardian. The defendant pleaded in nullo est erratum, which is a demurrer, supposing that she joining with her husband, ought not to be sued by guardian, but by attorney, as it is. But Hale and Twysden held it to be error, and confessed by the demurrer, it being error in fact. But because this was only assigned for delay, the plaintiff was ruled to waive his demurrer, and take issue upon the nonage. Vide Townsend's Tables, 205. Two precedents, where the wife in such case appeared by guardian.

HOPKINS AND PRIOR against WEIGGLESWORTH.

Error in fact assigned in the Exchequer-Chamber, they affirm the judgment, because they cannot try errors in fact. S. C. 3 Keb.

Trespass, and judgment against the defendant, now plaintiff in error in the Exchequer Chamber, and assigns for error the death of one defendant before the first judgment. The defendant in error pleads in nullo est erratum, which confesses error in fact; but the Court affirmed the judgment, for the Court of Exchequer-Chamber hath nothing to do with errors in fact. For the Court of King's Bench had power to examine errors in fact in their own judgments before the statute, and therefore the statute does not extend to this case, but only to such cases, as had no other remedy but in Parliament. Whereupon the plaintiffs brought a writ of error, coram vobis resident' in Banco Regis, and assigned the same error, and entered it upon the same roll. And Hale Chief Justice held, this writ does not lie here, for this must be [39] brought upon and recite the whole proceedings in the Exchequer Chamber.

PUREFOY against ROGERS.

[See S. C. 2 Wms. Saund. 380.]

Feme covert tenant for life, remainder to her first son, she and her husband accept a fine of the fee before a son born, the remainder to the son is destroyed. S. C. 3 Keb. 11. 2 Saund. 380. 2 Danv. 520. s. 17.

Ejectment, and upon not guilty and special verdict. Feme tenant for life, remainder to her first son, she married, and before a son born, he in reversion in fee, conveyed the inheritance to baron and feme; after she had issue a son, and died. Et per Curiam, though if she had survived her husband, she might have avoided and waived the estate taken by the fine, yet the contingent remainder to the son is utterly destroyed, he being not in esse when the contingency happened. For the baron and feme took by intireties. Co. Litt. sect. 673, and therefore the estate for life of the feme was merged before the contingent happened, and the possibility which the feme had of waiving the inheritance, and reviving her estate for life, will not preserve it: for contingent estates, if the particular estate that supports them continue not in esse when the contingent happens, never can arise, be the determination thereof by surrender, merger, feoffment or any other way: and judgment was given accordingly for the defendant; for which were cited 1 Cro. Biggot against Smith, 2 Cro. Wood against Ingersole, More pl. 459. Finch, Co. Litt. 28 a. Saunders, (afterwards Chief Justice de B. R.) for the plaintiff, and Holt, also afterwards Chief Justice of the King's Bench, for the defendant.

SEAMAN against DEE, ADMINISTRATOR OF EVERAD.

Attorney sues by original, he must declare as others, and not upon privilege. S. C. 2 Keb. 860, 879. 3 Keb. 15. 1 Vent. 198, 199.

Assumpsit by the plaintiff as attorney of this Court, by original, and declares in propria persona upon his privilege secundum consuetudinem Curiæ. The defendant pleads a recognizance unsatisfied, and also a judgment in debt for five thousand pounds, upon a goldsmith's note, to be paid [40] with interest upon demand; and this not being paid till such a time, and the interest thereby amounting to 1700l. Judgment was thereupon had against him for 7600l. and that he had not assets ultra 40l. chargeable to this recognizance and judgment: and upon demurrer judgment was given for the plaintiff by Hale & totam Curiam. First, The declaration is naught, declaring in this manner by privilege upon original, for the privilege of attorneys is in suits by bill; but when they sue by original, they must declare as others do in common form. But this is only form, and cured by the general demurrer. Secondly, The plea is ill in pleading a judgment for interest, it is a devastavit to let that to grow arrear, and then suffer a judgment for it; and want of assets to pay the debt before interest incurred by the administrator, shall not now be intended, it not being expresly so pleaded.

NEWMAN against KINGERBY.

Prohibition to a suit for Fool, ass and goose of a parson. S. C. 3 Keb. 28.

A prohibition was prayed and granted upon a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court by a parson, for calling him fool, ass and goose, for these are only words of heat, and do not touch him in his profession.

PINFOLD against THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY, NORTHEY, J. S. AND WILLOUGHBY, BY ENGLISH BILL IN THE EXCHEQUER-CHAMBER.

Merchant having stock in the East-India Company, outlawed, the King assigns the stock to a creditor, the outlawry is reversed. He is again outlawed at another's suit, to whom the King grants the estate, &c. Q. Who shall have it.

Northey and J. S. severally sued Bateman to outlawry before judgment; and Bateman having 500l. stock in the East-India Company, and that found by inquisition, the King made seisure thereupon, and then granted it to Northey and J. S. in satisfaction for their debts, which were by obligation, with power to sue in their own names. The company refusing to transfer the stock to them, they brought a bill in the Exchequer against the company; upon which it was decreed, that the company should transfer the stock to Northey and J. S. which accordingly they did upon a writ of execution of this decree, and entered their names in their books, and struck out the name of Bateman. J. S. assigned his interest to Willoughby, and he was by the company entered in their books for his share. Afterwards Bateman reversed the outlawry, and Northey went on with his action against him, and obtained judgment, but no execution. The King granted to Bateman a restitution de omnibus quibus nobis non est responsum. [50] Then Pinfold having a debt due to him by Bateman upon obligation, sued him thereupon, and had judgment, and outlawed him after judgment. And then the King granted this 500l. stock to Pinfold, as he had before granted it to Northey and J. S. and the company refusing to admit him creditor, he brought his bill against the company, Northey, J. S. and Willoughby, by which and upon a cross bill, and by the answers and depositions, this whole matter was disclosed. And the Court held and decreed, First, That the stock was well transferred by the first grant which the King made to Northey and J. S. and was not restored by that grant which the King made de omnibus de quibus nobis non est responsum. For the King's grant was executed by the transfer of the stock; and so the King answered as to that. Secondly, They made no difference between outlawries before and after judgment. Thirdly, They made no difference between the case of Willoughby, who was assignee to the King's assignee, and Northey, who was the King's immediate assignee. Fourthly, Notwithstanding that, Northey after the reversal of the first outlawry, sued and obtained judgment against Bateman, yet they held no difference between his case and the case of Willoughby, but that both of them should retain the proportions at first assigned to Northey and J. S.

STARLING against TURNER.

Case for denying a poll in chusing a bridgmaster. S. C. 3 Keb. 26, 32. 1 Vent. 206. 2 Vent. 25.

Case, and declares that by the custom of London, the bridge-master is chose by plurality of voices of the freemen, and that if the electors are so divided, that the majority cannot be known by the view, that the mayor ought to grant a poll; and that Starling being mayor, where upon the election the majority could not be known, refused to grant a poll to Turner, a candidate at that election, by which he lost the office. After verdict and judgment for Turner, plaintiff in the Common Pleas, error was brought in B. R. and assigned for error, that the action lies not, because it is not shewn that he had been elected if a poll had been granted. Sed non allocatur. For the mayor did not do his duty, and 'tis said by that he lost the office, which after verdict is sufficient: and of that opinion were all the Judges of the Common Pleas, but Vaughan Chief Justice.

[51] Note, It was not a question in either of the two Courts, whether an action of the case would lie, for the bare denying or refusing of a poll, and returning another? But this seemed to be admitted by both Courts.

Pick-pocket, not actionable. S. C. 3 Keb. 34. Vide 2 Salk. 694, 695.

Case, for saying to the plaintiff, You are a pick-pocket, you picked my pocket, and took away my money, and I will justify it. The defendant justified for other words, and traversed the words as here laid: the plaintiff maintained the speaking of the words, as here laid, and issue thereupon, and verdict for the plaintiff. But by the Court judgment was stayed, because the words themselves are not actionable, and therefore the plaintiff cannot have judgment notwithstanding the justification.

[52] TERM. SANCT. TRIN. ANNO 24 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

WHALEY against TANKARD.

Tenant for 99 years, if he live so long, levies a fine and dies: he in reversion shall have five years after his death to avoid the fine. S. C. 1 Vent. 241. Raym. 219. 2 Vent. 334. 2 Keb. 37. 3 Keb. 30, 37, 110.

Ejectment, upon not guilty, and a long special verdict found at York Assizes, the case was, a settlement was made, by covenant to stand seized, after divers other uses, to the use of Charles Maynel for ninety-nine years, if he live so long, the remainder to two strangers for his life to preserve the contingent remainders; remainder to the first, and so on to the tenth son of Charles in tail, the remainder to Edmund Maynel, father of the lessor in tail, the remainder to the right heirs of the covenantor. All the precedent estates being spent, Charles the 14th of October, 1656, enfeoffed the defendant, and in Hill. 1656 levied a fine to him, Edmund father of the lessor being then alive, and of full age. Edmund, father of the lessor, died the 8th of March, 1661, leaving the lessor then, and still under the age of one and twenty. Charles died the 18th of August, 1664, without issue male, leaving a daughter still alive. And the lessor entered and demised to the plaintiff, and the defendant ejected him; and the question was, whether as this case is, the lessor shall have five years after the death of Charles to avoid the fine? For so the lessor being then and still an infant, the lessor is well in point of time to avoid the fine. Or, if the entry should not have been made within five years after the fine levied? For then the right of entry is within the five years attached in the father, and so the five years passed, and the sons barred. This case [53] was argued at Bar by Levinz for the plaintiff, and Weston for the defendant. And for the plaintiff it was said, that if Charles had been tenant for life, he in remainder would have had five years after the death of Charles the conusor, as is held in Moor, pl. 192. 3 Cro. 254, ibid. 219. 3 Cro. Salvin and Clark's case, 9 Co. Podger's case, 2 Co. Inst. 519. Though it is true, he might have entered for the forfeiture in the life of tenant for life, yet he is not bound to enter, but shall have five years de novo allowed him, after the death of tenant for life, within the second saving of the statute of 4 H. 7, which saves future rights; and the title which comes by the determination of the estate for life, is allowed to be a new right within this saving, which first accrues to him in remainder after the death of tenant for life. But Coke in Podger's case, and Catlin in Plowden's Comment. 374 a. say it is otherwise, where tenant for years levy the fine; but the entry must be within five years after the fine levied, for in that case, he in remainder hath a present right to maintain an assise for the disseisin, done unto him by levying the fine. And in this case it may be urged, as indeed it is true, that Charles is no more than tenant for years, determinable by his death. But to this it was argued for the plaintiff, that there are no words in the first or second saving of the statute to warrant this diversity, nor are there any mention there of freehold, or chattels; but the first saving of the statute saves present rights, and the second saving saves future rights, so as the entries be made within five years. Now when tenant for life levies a fine, he in reversion or remainder hath a present right to enter for the forfeiture, as well as if tenant for years levies a fine. And in this case he in remainder hath also a new right of entry when the estate determines, as much as in the case of tenant for life. If tenant for life be disseised, and a fine levied by the disseisor, it is true he in remainder cannot have an assise, because the right of freehold remains in the disseisee; but when the fine is levied by the tenant himself, there is difference between tenant for life, and tenant for years; in both cases it is a forfeiture, and he in remainder or reversion may enter, and bring his assise immediately. And the true reason why the reversion or remainder is not barred in both cases, is because they are dry estates, which yield no suit or service until the [54] determination of the particular estates, so that there is nothing to attract the attention of him in remainder or reversion, and make him regard the estate. And Farmer's case, 3 Co. though it had other ingredients in the case, as continual payment of the rent, and also a continuance of possession, yet in the principal matter 'tis a judgment in point for this case. For the payment of the rent there, when no rent was to be paid, can't make a difference; neither can the continuance of possession make a difference, for in the case as it is put 3 Cro. 254, there was a render in the fine to a stranger. But the better reason in Farmer's case, is the breach of trust and confidence between the lessor and lessee, and that the statute meant not to enable any one to levy fines that was not enabled at common law. And at common law it was a good plea to the fine of tenant for years, partes finis nihil habuerunt: 5 Co. 5, Saffin's case. And although the fine and the feoffment in this case were at several times, yet being both made to the same person, and to the same uses, they make only one conveyance, and one forfeiture. 1 Co. Cromwel's case, and 1 Cro. Salvin and Clark's case. It was also said and agreed by all, that the remainder to the two strangers for the life of Charles was void, they being not of blood to the covenantor, and so it was no forfeiture as to them: and lastly, that the warranty in the fine could be no bar, it being descended upon the son of the conusor. To which Weston answered, that the feoffment being made before, and the fine levied after, though both to the same person, takes off the exception of partes finis nihil habuerunt. And this Hale Chief Justice agreed, and said, that though in raising uses, and making conveyances, fines, feoffments, bargains, sales, &c. may be one conveyance, as in Cromwels case, yet in rei veritate, a freehold is conveyed to the feoffee immediately by the feoffment; and so partes finis nihil habuerunt can't be pleaded, for the freehold was in the conusee by the feoffment, though the conusor had nothing. Then Weston said, that this feoffment made by a lessee for years, who had no right to make livery, was a thing of notoriety, of which tenant in remainder ought to take notice: otherwise of tenant for, because he hath power to make livery, and hereupon would have maintained the difference of Coke in Podger's case, between a fine by tenant for life, and tenant for [55] years, relying also upon the feoffment, and the fines being made and levied at several times. But Hale said, this would not make a difference; for so it was in Farmer's case, and to this purpose, both are to be looked upon as one conveyance to defraud him in remainder: and he said there could be no difference between a fine levied by tenant for life and tenant for years, and the reason why in neither of these cases a fine shall bar is, for the trust and privity which is between the lessee and him in remainder, that no prejudice be done by such acts: and that the opinion of my Lord Coke was to be questioned; and the opinion of Catlin was, that it is the same both in case of tenant for life and tenant for years, which is contrary to all the books before cited: all which was agreed by Twysden, but upon the importunity of Weston, to be farther heard, adjournatur. Sed postea, no one appearing to argue it farther in Hilary term, judgment was given for the plaintiff by Hale, Rainsford and Wylde, absent Twysden.

And note, a writ of error was brought upon this judgment, but before it came to be argued, the deed made in the time of King James the First, and several times viewed heretofore, and now found in this special verdict as a true deed, was at last upon a trial at Bar in this Court, found to be a forged deed, as appears hereafter in Easter term 25 Car. 2, for another part of the same estate; upon which there was no farther proceeding upon the writ of error. And in truth, at the trial at York, the defendant stood not much upon proving the deed, being confident the matter of law was for him.

THOMPSON against BUTLER.

Administration granted to the next of kin, there being a residuary legatee, whether revocable? S. C. 2 Keb. 23, 27, 34, 55. 1 Vent. 217.

A man makes his will, and thereby gives 2000l. to his daughter, and the residue of his estate after debts and legacies paid, to his wife, and makes J. S. his executor, and dies; J. S. died intestate, and for six years after, no one sued administration. At last the daughter sued out administration de bonis non, &c. and so continued four years, and during that time obtained divers judgments and decrees as administratrix. And now the wife being residuary legatee, cited the daughter into [56] the Ecclesiastical Court to have this administration repealed and granted to her, which the Ecclesiastical Court being ready to do, the daughter prayed a prohibition, surmising, there was no residue. Hale Chief Justice said, the reason why administration granted to the next a-kin, was not revocable after the statute of H. 8, is, because it is intended that such administrator should have the whole residue to his own use; and upon this account the Ordinary could not grant distribution, nor oblige the administrator to distribute, till the law was altered by the late statute. But that has not altered the case yet, where there is a residuary legatee, for the residuary legatee being to have the whole surplusage by the appointment of the testator, and the administrator nothing; he held, that administration, though granted to the next of kin, might be revoked and granted to the residuary legatee. But it being here alledged that there is no residue, whether that takes away this power of revocation Curia advisare vult. And afterwards Dr. Waller argued and affirmed, that by their constant practice, where there is a residuary legatee, administration granted to the next of kin is revocable and grantable to the residuary legatee, though there be not at present any residue, because of the possibility that a residue may still happen; and cited The Countess of Peterborough's case, to be so sentenced. But Dr. Masters for the daughter, denied their practice to be so; and cited Button's case, as sentenced contrary, there being no residue at present. Afterwards the parties agreeing in Court, the case was not judicially determined.

BOLTON against LEE.

Covenant int' A. of one part, and B. and C. of the other, & quemlibet eorum; A. brings an action against B. only. S. C. 3 Keb. 39, 50.

Covenant upon a charter party, between Bolton owner, and Lee and Morgan merchants, freighters of a ship, by which Bolton lent them the ship to freight a voyage to Guinea, for 48l. per month: and it was mutually covenanted between the parties, & quemlibet eorum modo sequente, and then followed divers covenants concerning ship tackle, and performing the voyage, and then a covenant for [57] payment of freight, viz. when the ship arrives at Guinea, that the freight then due should be paid in England upon notice of the arrival, and when she arrives in England, that all which should be due from the time of the last payment, was to be paid. And sets forth, that at such a time the ship arrived at Guinea, and that six months and ten days were then passed, which came to so much, whereof notice was given. And that afterwards at such a time the ship arrived in England, and that then freight at the time of the last payment for six months, and the freight since, came to 287l. 4s. and that the defendant had not paid any of the sums. The defendant demurred; and took two exceptions to the declaration, 1. That the action is brought only against one of the merchants, and not against both; and the covenant between the parties is mutual; neither does the covenant for them & quemlibet eorum, make it disjunctive between the parties of both sides, but leaves it joint of the one part, and several of the other, as the duty itself is, which ought to be paid by both the defendants, each having an equal benefit; and the quemlibet eorum shall be referred to the plaintiff only, who is the sole party of the one side. Sed non allocatur; the covenant being between them & quemlibet eorum, is joint and several of both sides. 2. It appears by computation, that the plaintiff demands more than his due upon the first breach by 30s. and less than is due upon the second breach by 16s.: and though the first may perhaps be cured by the jury's finding less, or the plaintiff's release of the overplus; yet this demand of less than is due, is a fault incurable: so is 2 Cro. 247. Adderton against Dunton, in assumpsit, Poph. 209. Latch. 175. Style 214. Hob. 88. Latchlow against Tomlinson & ibidem 89. Baily against Goad, all in assumpsit, from which covenant cannot differ, for all is to be recovered in damages in both cases. And Clotworthie's case, 1 Cro. in annuity, and Baily and Offord's case, ibid. in debt, and Hill. 21 & 22 of this King inter Hulm and Saunders in debt. Of the other side for the plaintiff were cited 2 Cro. 498, 529, that it is good in other actions, nor in debt. Hale Chief Justice took a difference between this case of covenant and debt. And held, that after verdict it is unquestionably cured, though upon general demurrer it would be doubtful, but upon a special demurrer it is clearly naught, and [58] gave rule for judgment pro querente; saying the defendant might move it in arrest of judgment, after the writ of inquiry, if he thought good: but it was not moved, and so judgment passed absolutely for the plaintiff. Sir William Jones counsel for the plaintiff, Levinz for the defendant.

S. C. 1 Vent. 214, &c. 225. 3 Keb. 42, 52, 95.

Ejectment, and upon non culp. a special verdict, wherein the case was, Robert Melling seised in fee, devised to Bernard Melling for life; and after his death to the issue of his body by a second wife, (he having at the time of the devise another wife) and for default of such issue to John Melling, the lessor of the plaintiff; provided, that Bernard may make a jointure to his second wife for her life, and died. Bernard entered, and during the life of his first wife suffered a common recovery to the use of him and his heirs; his said wife died, and he afterwards married the defendant, his second wife; and covenanted to stand seised to the use of himself and his second wife for their lives; remainder to the heirs of their two bodies: remainder to the right heirs of the survivor of them, and died without issue, and the defendant his second wife entered; upon whom John Melling the remainder man in the will named, entered and demised to the plaintiff. This case was argued by Coleman for the plaintiff, and Levinz for the defendant, and three points were made. 1. If Bernard took an estate tail in possession, or only an estate for life, the remainder to his issue? 2. If he took only an estate for life, and that forfeited by the recovery, yet whether or not his power to make his wife a jointure, does still remain? 3. Admitting the said power to remain, whether it has been well executed? Coleman argued he took only an estate for life, by reason of the express words in the will, and cited Wilde's case, 6 Co. resolved by all the Judges of England: a devise to baron and feme for life, and after their decease to their children, they having at that time children, is only to them for life, remainder to their children for life. And it is there said, [59] that in a devise to a man for life, and after his death to his children, the children take by remainder:

and 4 Eliz. Benloe was cited, and 1 Rol. 837. Devise to one for life, remainder to the sons of his body, and if they alien, to his daughter, resolved the father takes only an estate for life: and 1 Co. Rep. Archer's case, a devise to Robert for life, and after his death to the next heir male of his body, and the heirs male of the body of such heir male, is adjudged an estate for life to Robert. 2. He argued, that the power to make a jointure was forfeited and extinguished by the recovery, being not a bare power, but a power coupled with an interest; like Albany's case, and Digg's case, 1 Co. Rep. 3. He urged, that this is not a good execution of the power, admitting it not to be extinguished: for 1st. The privity of estate, upon which the power depended, is tolled by the recovery: and 2d. He having nothing of the old estate left in him, out of which the use could arise, it must arise out of his new estate gained by the recovery, which is now avoided and destroyed by the entry of John in remainder. Levinz e contra; and 1st. he argued, that Bernard took an estate-tail executed in him, and the issue by the second wife could not make it a contingent estate. For a gift to a man, and the heirs of his body by the wife of another person, is not a contingent, but a present estate-tail in the donee. Co. Lit. 120 b. 184 a. Plowd. Com. 35 a. And as to Wild's case, where it is said, a devise to a man and his wife, and after their death to their children, they having then no children, that the children after-born may take by remainder; the point was not judicially before the Court, but an obiter dictum; and in Benloe, 4 Eliz. Pasch. 30, the case appears to be thus: a devise to William his son for his life, and after his death to his men-children, and yet adjudged an estate-tail; so that the case cited by my Lord Coke to maintain his opinion is contrary to his opinion. And the same case is reported 1 Anders. placit. 110, without making any difference, whether he has then men-children, or not. And as to the case 1 Rol. it there appeared the devisor's intent was, that the father should be only tenant for life, the estate-tail to the son, for that the clause to restrain alienation is added only to the estate of the son. And as for Archer's case, there the words, To the heirs males of the body of the heir, as there added, manifest his intent to exclude Robert the father from [60] having any estate of inheritance: he also cited 1 Rol. 839, s. 4, a devise to Rose for life, and if she marry after his death, and hath heirs of her body, that the heirs should have the estate: resolved, Rose takes an estate-tail; and 2 Rol. 253, a devise to A. for life, and after his death to the heir of his body, in the singular number; and yet resolved, an estate-tail in A. And the reason why the word issue in a will makes an estate-tail, is because issue in a will (made by men inops consilii) is constructively to be taken as of the same effort with the word heirs. And by the rules of law, when an estate is limited to the ancestor for life, the word heir coming afterwards, cannot be taken to be a word of purchase. 2. He argued and agreed, that a power coupled with an interest in the same person, is destroyed by his feoffment, fine, &c. for the power is to be executed upon his own estate, and with that he has departed: but in this case, the power is not to be executed upon the estate of Bernard, supposing his estate to be for life; but it is to make his wife a jointure, which is not to take place till after his death; and to charge the reversion only, and so merely collateral to his estate for life. And such collateral powers are not destroyed by feoffments, &c. 15 H. 7, a power to executors or trustees to sell to J. S. though they make a feoffment to J. D. yet they have power to sell to J. S. 3. He said, that Bernard in this case was no more than an instrument to convey a jointure to the wife, and when she is in, she is in by the devisor; and therefore if by virtue of such a power an executor sells a rent without deed, the sale is good, for the vendee is in by the will. And though he hath here made a greater estate than he ought to her, yet what he hath so made is good for so much as he was impowered to make, and void for the residue. Co. Lit. 258 a. Where one doth less than his authority, all is void: when more than he had authority, the act is good for so much as is within his power, but void for the rest. Hale Chief Justice upon this argument held, that Bernard took only for life; for it is only by construction in wills to answer the intent of the testator, that issues are taken as of the same import with heirs; and when the devise is by express words to the father for life, it cannot be a good construction so to construe the words, And after his death to his issues, so as to destroy the effect of the express words before: also he held, [61] that the power was destroyed by the recovery, or otherwise the execution might have done well enough. Twysden and Rainsford, being only in Court, inclined to Hale's opinion in the first point, but said nothing as to the others. Adjournatur. After, at another day, Hale, upon consideration of the books, changed his opinion, and held, that Bernard took an estate-tail; but Twysden and Rainsford held it only an estate for life: but all three agreed, that the power was extinct by the recovery, or otherwise the execution was well enough. But by the opinion of two against Hale, judgment was given for the plaintiff, whereupon error was brought immediately in the Exchequer-Chamber, where the judgment was reversed upon the point in law; for there all agreed, that Bernard took an estate-tail; and in Easter term, 27 Car. 2 in Camera Scaccarii the reversal was pronounced. Levinz for the plaintiff in error.

BAYLY against MUNDAY.

A parson makes a lease for years, which is confirmed, this does not determine by his death, as by non-residence. S. C. 1 Vent. 244, 245, 246. 3 Keb. 46, 107, 193. 3 Bac. Abr. 371, 396. Cowp. 129, 429. 2 Term Rep. 749.

Ejectment, and upon non culp. and a special verdict the case was, a vicar having made a lease for years, did after upon the 11th of September, the first lease being unexpired, make a new lease for twenty-one years, to commence at Michaelmas next, rendering the ancient rent, and more, payable at four days, or within twenty days after, which lease was confirmed by the bishop, being patron and Ordinary, and by the dean and chapter; the vicar died, his successor made a new lease to the lessor of the plaintiff, upon which this ejectment was brought, and the case was twice argued at Bar viz. this term by Thursby for the plaintiff, and Turner for the defendant; and Hill. 23 & 24 by Sir William Jones for the plaintiff, and Sir Richard Hardres for the defendant. And after in Trinity term judgment was given for the plaintiff by the whole Court, viz. Hale, Twysden, Rainsford and Wylde. In this case three points were argued, 1st. Whether the lease of a parson or vicar so confirmed be void by his death, according to what is said, to be adjudged in Mott and Hale's case, 3 Cro. upon the Statute of Non-residence, viz. if death [62] be a non-residence within this statute? And resolved by the whole Court, it is not: for a non-residence within the statute is a non-residence voluntary and punishable by the statute; but a dead man is not punishable: and non-residence may be excused by sickness. 6 Co. Butler and Goodale's case, and Moor. pl. 609, by the exhibition of the Ordinary. And in that case of Mott and Hale, though reported by Croke to be adjudged: Sir Francis Moore says in his report of it, the Court were divided in opinion in that point. 2. The whole Court agreed, that the reservation of this rent at four days, or within twenty days after, does not make the lease void, it being for the advantage of the successor: as suppose his predecessor dies after the four days, and within the twenty. 3. All agreed, that this lease made the 11th of September for twenty-one years, to commence at Michaelmas next, is a lease in reversion, and therefore void: but Hale said, The first lease being in esse does not make this a lease in reversion, but a concurrent lease, which a vicar may make, the former lease being to determine within three years; to which the rest said nothing, Twysden only seeming to disagree thereto.

REEVE against HOLGATE.

Of a malster, He has cheated all the farmers at E. without a colloquium of his trade, actionable. 3 Keb. 54.

Case, for saying of the plaintiff, being a malster, habens colloquium of him and his trade: Have a care of him, and do not deal with him: he is a cheat, and will cheat you; he has cheated all the farmers at Epping, and dares not shew his face there, and now he is come to cheat at Hatfield. A special verdict found all the words, but that there was no colloquium of his trade. Curia. The words themselves supply a colloquium, they appear to be spoke of his trade; judgment for the plaintiff.

[63] BETNIFF against PEPPLE.

Suit in the Spiritual Court for calling a woman whore. S. C. 3 Keb. 58. Vide Nelson's Lutw. & 1 Lev. 116. 2 Salk. 552, 692, &c.

A prohibition was prayed to the Spiritual Court, to stay a suit there for calling a woman whore; but denied upon consideration, having been twice debated both at Bar and Bench; for it is an ecclesiastical slander, and examinable and punishable in the Ecclesiastical Court, and it is not to be considered only as a saying of scolding and passion.

FAWCET against BEAVRES AND HIS WIFE.

Case for retaining his servant departed without licence. 3 Keb. 59. 6 Mod. 99, 182, 289. 1 Salk. 380.

Case, and declares that he retained A. to serve him a year, and that he went away without leave, and the defendants satis scientes & machinantes to deprive the plaintiff of the service of the said A. retinuerunt & custodiverunt the said A. licet sæpius requisitus to the contrary. Judgment was given in Communi Banco by default; whereupon error was brought and assigned, that the action lies not, for they did not intice the said servant to go away, and he of himself having deserted the service of the plaintiff, and being thereby at liberty, it was lawful for the defendants to receive him. Sed non allocatur, for the action lies without their incitement, they having notice that he was the hired servant of another; whereupon they affirmed the judgment.

Nota, No notice was taken of the action being brought against the husband and wife, and a feme covert cannot retain or contract. But perhaps the receiving and keeping him without contract, is a trespass of which a feme covert may be guilty, sufficient to maintain this action against her.

[64] WILLIAM JUXON against THE LORD BYRON.

Spiritual Court may proceed upon an Act or other temporal matter incident, as long as they proceed according to the rules of common law. S. C. 2 Salk. 537. 1 Lev. 164, 180. 2 Com. Dig. 513. 4 Bac. Abr. 261. 3 Bl. Com. 112.

Sir William Juxon prayed a prohibition to the Spiritual Court of Chester, shewing that the Archbishop of Canterbury being seized of the impropriate Rectory of Rachdale, in the county of Lancaster and diocess of Chester, demised the same to the Lord Byron for twenty-one years (about the year 1661) who afterwards mortgaged the same to Pery, who was indebted to Sir William, and went off to places unknown; whereupon it was enacted by a Private Act of Parliament, that this mortgage should be invested in Sir William Juxon, to all intents and purposes as it was in Pery: and that the Lord Byron libelled in the Ecclesiastical Court, against divers of the tenants for tithes due after the said Act: upon which Sir William Juxon came in pro interesse suo, and set forth all the said matter to the Court; yet they nevertheless proceeded and gave sentence against the tenants for the tithes, for which he prayed a prohibition, First, Because the said Court is not to meddle with the construction of Acts of Parliament. 2 Roll. 306, 307. Secondly, Admitting they may hold plea of a temporal matter incident in an ecclesiastical cause, according to 12 Co. 65, Fuller and Wiscard's case, yet this is no longer allowable than while they proceed according to the common law in that matter, for they shall not be suffered to proceed in an incident temporal matter contrary to the course of the common law. And here they have determined contrary to the course of the common law, that the rectory in effect was not well settled in Sir William by the Act of Parliament, because they have given the tithes due after the said Act, to the Lord Byron. But the prohibition was denied per Hale and the whole Court; they agreed, that the Spiritual Court, though they may try matters cognizable at common law, which fall in incidentally where the principal is ecclesiastical; yet they shall be prohibited if they proceed in the trial of such incident temporal matter otherwise than the common law would; but they have not done so here, for the Act vests the mortgage in Sir William Juxon, as it was in Pery, and Pery being but a mortgagee and out of possession, and Byron the mortgagor in possession, Pery could not at common law have recovered the tithes till he had gained [65] the possession of the rectory by ejectment; no more can Sir William Juxon. But till the rectory be recovered from the Lord Byron, the tithes belong to him. So that they have given the same judgment in their Court, as this Court would have given, and this being affirmed here to be the ground of their proceeding there, a prohibition was denied without putting the Lord Byron to plead to the suggestion.

[66] TERM. SANCT. MICH. ANNO 24 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

HENLOE against PETERS AND BUCK.

Solicitors in ejectment committed till they find a plaintiff able to pay the costs. Vide 4 Mod. 379. 1 Lil. 210, 211.

Ejectment upon the demise of the Duke of Richmond, and verdict and costs taxed for the defendant, the plaintiff being not to be found, and the duke a person privileged by Parliament, and also at this time ambassador beyond sea; so that no costs could be had against him, the Court ruled, that the duke's agents Wrenham and Tilson, who gave the name of the plaintiff to Hill the duke's attorney, should pay the costs, or produce a plaintiff able to pay them, and committed them till they did so.

TOSER AND HIS WIFE against DAVIS.

Suit in the Spiritual Court by baron and feme for calling the baron cuckold. Vide 2 Salk. 692, 693.

The plaintiffs sued Davis in the Ecclesiastical Court, for calling Toser, cuckold and cuckoldly knave, whereupon a prohibition was granted nisi causa tali die; at which day Levinz for cause shewed, that the baron and feme joining in this suit, no prohibition ought to go, aliter if he had sued sole, 2 Rolle 296, for these words charge the feme with incontinence, for which it is reasonable she should be allowed this suit in the Spiritual Court to punish a defamation, which subjects her to penance there; but if the husband had sued there solely, a prohibition would have lain, for he does not incur any danger of that nature by the speaking of these words. And of that opinion was the Court, and discharged the former rule for the prohibition, and next term [67] a prohibition was also denied in a like case int' Luchin & Lightbridge upon the motion of Pollexfen.

DANIEL against HANSLIP.

Common when alienable. Vide 1 Salk. 171, 366.

In this case Hale Chief Justice said, that if a man hath common appurtenant to a messuage and land for certain number of beasts, he may alien the same; aliter if it be common for all his beasts levant and couchant upon the land, he cannot by his alienation sever that from the land.

WOOD against KIRKHAM.

Departure in pleading. 1 Saund. 109, 268, 269. 2 Saund. 189, 190.

Debt upon obligation conditioned to perform covenants: the defendant pleaded the indenture, which was to return all the effects of goods sent to Barbadoes, and that he had performed all the covenants. The plaintiff replied, that such and such goods were sent to Barbadoes, of which he had returned no effects. The defendant rejoined, that he had no order to return the effects of them: to which it was demurred, and judgment for the plaintiff; for this is a departure, there being no mention of order in the covenants: but by Hale, had the covenant been that they should return upon order, the plea had been good. Quære hereof, for performance in a plea is understood actual performance, and want of order seems to be no more than an excuse of performance. Quære tamen, for the covenant in such case is not to be performed without order; and so performavit omnia may be taken, that he had performed all that he ought to perform, he not having orders.

[68] ELBOROUGH against GATES.

Award delivered to the parties at another day and place than appointed by the submission. S. C. 3 Keb. 89, 125.

Debt upon an obligation, conditioned to perform an award ita quod it be made ready to be delivered to the parties at such a day and place. The defendant pleaded no award: the plaintiff replied and set forth an award made and delivered to the parties before the day, and at another place; whereupon the defendant demurred: and Hale held the replication ill; for being but the execution of an authority, it ought to be done at the time and place appointed; cæteri contra, it being delivered to the parties themselves it is good, though at another day and place; and by them judgment was given for the plaintiff.

DAVENANT against THE BISHOP OF SARUM.

Covenant to pay all taxes, to what taxes it extends. S. C. 1 Vent. 223, 224. 2 Danv. 56, pl. 1. 3 Keb. 69.

Covenant, and declares that the bishop's predecessor was seised of these lands, and in 1635 let them, and covenanted that he and his successors should pay all taxes during the term; and for breach assigns, that such a tax was laid by Parliament for a Royal aid in 1665, and that the bishop had not paid it. The defendant demurred and had judgment: First, Because it is not alledged that the bishop was seised jure episcopatus, and in pleading seisin in all sole corporations, the pleading must shew in quo jure they were seised, otherwise of corporations aggregate. Secondly, This covenant is not good to bind the successor unless such covenants have usually been inserted in former leases which is not here shewn. Thirdly, If such covenants have been in former leases, yet this here cannot oblige him to pay this new tax created by Parliament, but must be understood of such taxes as were then in use, scilicet synodals, &c. and Hale cited a case formerly so adjudged.

Case against the master of a ship, for goods lost without his default. S. C. Raym. 220. 1 Mod. 85. 1 Vent. 190, 238. 3 Keb. 72, 112, 135. 1 Danv. 12. 1 Roll. Abr. 2, pl. 2, 3. Cro. Jac. 262, 330. 1 Sid. 36, 245.

Case against the master of a ship and declares upon the custom of the realm for masters of ships to keep safely goods delivered to them to carry, dangers of the sea excepted; and that the plaintiff delivered to the defendant, master of such a ship such and such goods, and he tam negligenter kept them that they were lost: and upon not guilty a special verdict found that A. B. and C. being owners of the ship, made the defendant master, and gave him so much pay by the month, and the plaintiff being a merchant, delivered the goods to the defendant to be transported, that he kept four men constantly in the ship to guard the same; and that this is the usual guard for such ship, but the goods were lost in port before the ship set sail: and whether the master shall be charged for this loss? was the question; the case was twice argued at Bar this term and the next; and for the defendant it was urged: First, That here is no cause of action against any man, for no neglect is found, the ship had the usual guard, and therefore the plaintiff himself must bear the loss, and has no action against any one for compensation. Secondly, If any action will lie in this case, it lies against the owners of the ship to whom plaintiff pays freight, and not to the master, who is no more than a servant to them at a certain salary; and this is not like the case of a hoy-man, Hob. 17, for in that case the hoy-man was paid by the plaintiff, and was himself owner of the boat. But in Hillary term following judgment was given for the plaintiff per Hale, who delivered the opinion of the whole Court, and held, that this case differs not from the case of the hoy-man.

[Distinguished, Butterfield v. Heath, 1852, 15 Beav. 414.]

A feme covert joins in an alienation of her jointure, and had another made the same day without precedent articles or agreement, not fraudulent quoad purchasors. S. C. 3 Keb. 82.

Ejectment upon a lease by Sir Nathaniel Hobart, and upon non culp. in a trial at Bar, the case upon the evidence was thus: Sir Robert Bell 8 Jac. 1, upon his marriage with the Lady Mary Cheek, settled the manor of Brandon, Broking and Bardolff-farm, to the use of himself for life, remainder to their first and tenth sons in tail, the remainder to his own right heirs, and the manor of Beaupre and other lands now in question, to the use of him and his heirs; and afterwards 3 Jan. 11 Jac. 1, he being then indebted 4000l. he and his wife by fine sold the jointure lands, (having then no issue) for payment of the debts; and the same day he covenanted to stand seised of the manor of Beaupre, and the other lands now in question, to the same uses as the manor of Brandon, &c. were settled before; the debts were paid, and about fifteen or sixteen years after he happened to contract new debts, for which Sir Nathaniel Hobart being bound with him, he for the security of Hobart, 13 Car. 1, made a lease for 1000 years of the manor of Beaupre, and other the lands now in question, to the said Sir Nathaniel Hobart, Hobart was forced to pay several of the debts, and therefore by virtue of the said lease for 1000 years, demised to the plaintiff, who brought this ejectment; the question was, whether the settlement of 11 Jac. was fraudulent and avoidable quoad this lease? It was objected, First, That there were no articles precedent to this second settlement, nor any precedent agreement that it should be done in consideration the wife levied the fine for the sale of her first jointure, and so it does not appear but that the fine and sale of the first jointure was the mere voluntary act of the wife, and the new settlement also voluntary. Secondly, The husband without the wife might have destroyed the contingent remainders limited to sons, no son being then born, nor any mean remainder limited to preserve them, so no consideration can be (pretended) but only the estate of the wife for her life, and she is now dead; and therefore all the remainders to the sons upon the new settlement were voluntary. [71] But by Hale & Curiam, the settlement 11 Jac. is not void as to the lease for 1000 years, for the old settlement being destroyed, and the new made the same day, an agreement by him to make the new settlement, in consideration the wife would pass the fine and bar the old settlement, shall be intended, and the consideration shall extend to all the uses of the new settlement; for it shall not be presumed that the wife would have parted with her estate by the old settlement, unless the baron would make the same provision for her and her issue by the new; and though it is true, he might have destroyed the limitation to sons without his wife's concurrence, yet that point was not so well known then as it is now; and no one then would have purchased under him if she had not joined; and if they would, it had been a hard and unhandsome thing in him to have destroyed the first settlement made in consideration of the marriage, without making any new settlement in recompence thereof: whereupon notwithstanding the lands in the new settlement 11 Jac. were almost of double value to those in the first settlement 8 Jac. yet by direction of Hale, and assent of the whole Court, the jury gave their verdict for the defendant, son of Sir Robert Bell, by the Lady Mary, Sir Robert himself being now dead; Levinz being of counsel for the defendant.

Gaoler for life commits a forfeiture, he in reversion in fee may take advantage. Vide 3 Lev. 288, 290.

Information against her, being keeper of the Gatehouse prison at Westminster, by virtue of a lease for years from the Dean and Chapter of Westminster, who have the inheritance of that prison; that she at divers times between the 2d of May, 22 Car. and the exhibiting this information the 24 June, 22 Car. 2, took several sums of money from several persons extortiously, and reckons twelve prisoners nominatim: after verdict for the King upon non culp. it was moved in arrest of judgment by Simpson, that this information in a criminal case, in saying at divers times between such a day and such a day, is too general, for every day and place ought to be particularly mentioned; sed non allocatur, whereupon the Court fined her 500l. seised the office, and put in another at the nomination of the dean and chapter; and though they say, that [72] in strictness this was a forfeiture of the whole office, yet the Court did as in the 39th of H. 6, upon a forfeiture by the marshal of this Court, who was put in for life by the Duke of Norfolk, owner of the inheritance of the office, the Court there did not seise the inheritance, but displaced the officer of the duke, and put in another at his nomination, ut hic.

EARL OF ATHOL IN SCOTLAND, against THE EARL OF DERBY.

Privilege of peers in Parliament. 2 Salk. 510, 512.

The Earl of Athol having a decree against the Earl of Derby for 7000l. the portion of his wife, who was sister to the Earl of Derby; upon a question touching the privilege of peers in Parliament, how long it lasted? the Lord Chancellor before he would grant a sequestration, sent to the Lord Hollis and other lords to be informed in this matter; who hereupon sent him two Orders of the House of Lords, the one dated the 28th of May, 1614, the other the 27th of Jan. 1628, entered in the Journal Book of the House of Lords; by which it appears that they declare their privilege commences from the teste of their writ of summons to Parliament; and that upon every session and prorogation their privilege is for twenty days before, and twenty days after each session, which the order says is time enough for them to come from all parts of the realm, and to return. Hereupon the Lord Chancellor ordered the sequestration to be delivered and executed immediately after the twenty days: but it is said the Commons never assented to this, but claim forty days after and before each sessions.

Nota, The sequestration was executed accordingly, but the Earl of Derby died in a small time afterwards, and his estate being intailed, the Earl of Athol lost the benefit of the sequestration.

Pleads matter of fact & hoc paratus est verificare prout Curia consideraverit. Raym. 218. 1 Sid. 422.

Error by four persons, upon a judgment had against them all, and assigned for error, that one of them fuit infra ætatem, and yet all appeared per attornat. & hoc parati sunt verificare prout Curia consideravit. The defendant pleads in nullo est erratum, and now it was objected by Buck, that the assignment of error is ill concluded, for this is error in fact, and triable per pais, and the conclusion prout Curia consideraverit, puts the trial upon the Court; he cited Yelv. 58, & 1 Bulst. 37. Hale seemed to think the conclusion well enough; and that the prout Curia consideravit, puts the trial upon the Court; he cited Yelv. 58, & 1 Bulst. 37. Hale seemed to think the conclusion well enough; and that the prout Curia consideraverit, is no more than putting it to the judgment of the Court to direct the trial of the matter, as they think it ought by law to be; be it by jury or by the Court itself. Sed adjournatur.

COCK against CROSS.

An obligor makes the obligee executor, he sues the other obligor.

A. and B. were obliged jointly and severally to C. and A. made D. his executor, and died; D. made C. the plaintiff, the obligee, his executor, and died. C. the obligee brought debt upon this obligation against B. who pleaded that A. made D. his executor, who made the plaintiff his executor; and that the plaintiff had administered the goods of A. not saying to the value of the debt, nor of what value, but generally, that he administered the goods of A.; hereupon the plaintiff demurred and had judgment, for the bond being joint and several, though one of the obligors be discharged in this manner, yet the obligee may still sue the other if he hath not received a full satisfaction by the administration.

[74] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 24 & 25 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

COOKER against CHILD.

Indenture of charter-party, not being inter parties, covenants to pay to a stranger to the deed. S. C. 3 Keb. 94, 115. Debt by indenture per testat. existit.

Debt upon a charter-party indented, concerning freight, by Bently the master and part-owner of a ship, whereby he with consent of Cooker the other part-owner, let the ship to the defendant for a voyage, and for which the defendant covenanted to pay Bently so much as master, and covenanted with the said Bently, necnon cum prædict' Cooker to pay Cooker 300l. the action is now brought: the defendant demanded oyer of the indenture, which was entered thus: This indenture charter-party witnesseth, that Bently master and part-owner of the ship, with the consent of Cooker the other part-owner, lets the ship, &c. and then follow the covenants ut supra. The defendant pleads, that only he and Bently were parties, and sealed and delivered the said charter-party, and that the plaintiff was no party; upon this the plaintiff demurred: and now it was argued by Sir William Jones for the plaintiff, that this is not an indenture between parties, but only as a deed-poll, whereby the party may covenant with a stranger; for this is not between Bently of the one part, and the defendant on the other part; in which case none that is not party can have an action upon the deed; but this here being in the nature of a deed-poll, the party may covenant with other persons to do several other acts, for which every one severally may bring his action. [75] According to Coke 2 Inst. 673, and of that opinion was the whole Court; who held the declaration per testat. existit. well enough, though it be in debt and not in covenant, and that the action was well, though brought by him only to whom the debt is due; and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

PYBUS against MITFORD.

[See S. C. 1 Ventr. 372.]

Covenant to stand seised to the use of the heirs males of his body by a second wife, omitting himself, yet he shall take by implication. S. C. 1 Vent. 372. Raym. 228, 318. 1 Mod. 98, 121, 159, 237. 2 Danv. 556. 3 Keb. 129, 239. 2 Mod. 207, 208, 209, 211. Co. Litt. 22 b. Hob. 30. 1 Roll. Abr. 616. Jac. 2. 1 Mod. 226, 237, 175. 2 Mod. 207. 1 Vent. 372.

Ejectment upon the demise of Edward Grey, of lands in Henton Norris in comitatu Northumbriæ; and upon non culp. and a special verdict the case was thus: Michael Mitford seised of the lands in question, and of other lands, 23 Jan. 21 Jac. covenanted to stand seised immediately after the date of that indenture, to the uses of the indenture, and to no other uses; and then limited the uses of the other lands not in question, to the use of himself for life, remainder to trustees till Ralph his son by his second wife Jane, came to the age of twenty one years; and then to Ralph and the heirs males of his body, with divers remainders over; and as to the lands in question, to the use of the heirs males of the body of the covenantor by the said Jane, the remainder to his own right heirs, proviso, that if Robert his son by a first venter, pay the sum of 1200l. to his trustees, after the death of Michael, and within five years after he attains his full age, for the use of his younger children, the said uses to cease. Michael died, leaving Robert his eldest son by a former venter, who entered, and by indenture and fine conveyed the lands in question to the use of himself and his wife, and their heirs, and died; the wife married the lessor Grey, and they levied a fine to the use of the lessor; she died 18 Car. 1. Ralph enters in 1644, and had issue the defendant and died and the jury concluded, that if any use arose to Ralph by the deed of covenant the 23d of Jan. 21 Jac. for the defendant; & si non, for the plaintiff. This case was argued this term by Sir William Jones for the plaintiff, and by Levinz for the defendant: and afterwards Trin. 26, by Holt junior, after Chief-Justice of this Court, for the plaintiff, and by Weston for the defendant. And afterwards the same term all the Judges, viz. Hale, Twysden, Rainsford and Wylde seriatim delivered their [76] opinions: and first it was argued for the plaintiff, that this covenant cannot inure to give an estate for life to Michael, so as to make the estate limited to the heirs of his body by Jane, an estate-tail in Michael himself; as if it had been limited to him for life, the remainder to the heirs males of his body; but this is merely a future covenant, that he will stand seised to the heirs males of his body, without any precedent use to support it like the cases 21 H. 7, 18, 19. Dyer 55. Covenants, that after his death his land shall remain and descend upon his son; and Hob. 313, Kibbet v. Lea, & 1 Co. 119. Winch. 61. Secondly, This cannot be good by way of future use to the heirs of the body of Michael, for they said, this is no more than a contract, and the contract of the ancestor cannot bind the heir to that which the ancestor himself was not bound to; and Michael the covenantor was not bound to raise any use to Ralph, for the use was not to arise till after the death of Michael; and as Michael was not bound with the use to Ralph, no more can Robert his son and heir be bound therewith; also it cannot be good to Ralph as a springing use by this limitation to the heirs males of the body of Ralph by Jane; for if he takes it as a springing use, then he must take it as a purchasor, and that he cannot do; for he that takes by purchase as heir male, ought to be heir and male, and so is not Ralph in this case, for Robert is his heir and not Ralph, and consequently Ralph cannot take it this way. Thirdly, It was urged for the plaintiff, that by the words of the covenant the use is to rise immediately after the date of the indenture, and therefore cannot arise after his death. Fourthly, They said, the words of the covenant are, to stand seised to the uses in the indenture mentioned, and no other uses; and no use is therein mentioned to Michael; and therefore no use shall arise to him for life by implication to make this an estate tail in him; but the deed as to the uses limited to the heirs males of his body by Jane, is void: to which it was answered by the counsel of the defendant, as to the first and fourth objection, that here is a good use raised by implication to Michael for his life; for of necessity all the use must be in some person, and it cannot be in any other, because no use is limited to any other person for the life of Michael, therefore it must necessarily be in Michael himself for life; and this is not like the case of a covenant, that [77] his lands shall descend or remain after his death, for there are no words to stand seised, the want of which is the reason of the law in those case, as in 2 Roll. 788, sect. 1. But here there are the words covenant to stand seised, which always operates by way of raising uses, and never to give actions of covenant thereon, as it does in the other cases; and to have uses rise by implication is not a new case, for Moor pl. 437 is so, so it was in Fenwick and Mitford's case, upon a feoffment, and Co. Litt. 22, and so it was in The Lord Paget's case, 1 Co. 154, and 1 And. pl. 270, the use limited to Farmer for the life of the Lord Paget, was void, because to a stranger, but good to the Lord Paget himself for his life by implication, and 1 Leon. 102, Allen against Palmer. A copyholder's surrender to the use of his heirs, good, and as for the words, and to no other uses, they are to be intended no other express uses, and not to prevent uses by implication, which are of necessity, where the express limitation of the use is not full and perfect. As if a man makes a feoffment, or covenant to stand seised to the use of J. S. for life, and to no other uses, yet still the residue of the use must be in himself by implication, for it cannot be in no body, Co. Litt. 23 a. If a man makes a feoffment, and declares the use for life or in tail, the residue of the use is to himself by result or implication: and as to the second and third objection, they answered, First, That this covenant binds the land immediately (by the making of the deed) in the life of the ancestor; and though the use does not arise till after his death, yet the land was bound with it immediately; and so it may be good as a future springing use after the death of the father, without any particular estate precedent to support it: as if a man covenant after his death to stand seised to the use of J. S. and his heirs, there being no transportation of possession; in such case the estate continues in himself during the mean time, 1 Co. 154 b. A feoffment to the use of A. for life, the remainder to B. if A. refuse, B. takes presently, but if this had been by way of covenant, B. should not take till after the death of A. but the estate shall rest in the covenantor, because he parted not with the possession, and therefore he shall have the use in the mean time; and the word immediately, although in strictness it excludes all mean times, yet to make good the deeds and intents of parties, it shall be construed such convenient time as is reasonably requisite for doing the thing; as the 18th of Edw. 1, 21, an award to [78] make an obligation immediately to J. S. (then absent) is intended such a convenient time as he can get to him; and 3 Co. Butler and Baker's case upon the statute of H. 8. That the ancestor shall leave a third part immediately to descend to the heir, the ancestor devised so much to his wife, that the third part did not descend to the heir; she refused, and yet Poph. 89, by five Judges, her refusal made this discent immediate; but for other reasons judgment was there given against those of this opinion; also in this case, the land is immediately charged with the use, though the heir is not to have it till after the death of the ancestor. And as to that objection, that Ralph is not heir to take by purchase, they answered, we are here in the case of a use, where the intent according to equity must govern, for till the statutes, all uses were determinable in Courts of Equity: and it appears here, that Michael intended that the son by his second wife, was the heir male of his body. And The Lord Cobham's case was also cited, he settled lands upon him, and the heirs males of his body, he was attainted of treason, and afterwards it was enacted by Parliament, that the heirs males of his body, should enjoy the land; in this case the eldest son was allowed to enjoy it by the intent of that Act, and yet he could not in law be heir to one attainted, the attainder being not avoided by the Act. Hale Chief Justice, upon the first argument held, that Michael took an estate for his own life by implication, so that this was an estate-tail executed in himself. But if this had been otherwise, whether Ralph could take by purchase as heir male, being not heir, he doubted; the rest said nothing. Et adjournatur: but afterwards it being argued again, Trin. 26, he and all the other Judges gave their judgment, and Hale, Rainsford and Wylde, held, that Michael took an estate for life by implication, and that this was an estate-tail executed in himself; as if the estate had been limited expresly to himself for life, and after his death to the heirs males of his body by Jane; and for that reason gave judgment for the defendant: they relied principally upon The Lord Paget's case, and upon Fenwick and Mitford's case, 1 Leon. 256, 257, Dyer 310. 2 Rolle 788. And they held the law so the rather in this case, because it is limited by way of use, wherein the intent is to be pursued; and by the proviso it appears plainly, that Robert the son and heir, shall not have the land till he first pay the 1200l. to the younger children by the second venter after the [79] death of Michael. And now Hale held, that suppose the estate had not been executed in the father, yet Ralph the son might take it by way of purchase, as heir male of the second venter, and this notwithstanding the rule in Shelley's case and other cases, that an heir generally to take by purchase as right heir, ought to be right heir in verity; for Michael here does in the same deed take notice, that he had another right heir, scilicet, Robert by the first venter, and yet therein limits the estate to a special heir, whom he takes notice is not his right heir. Therefore the special heir by this special limitation, may take as a special heir, and that such special heir was a person of whom the law took notice before the Statute de Donis, Fitz. Tail 23. 4 E. 3, 50. Litt. sect. 352, 353. A feoffment upon condition to make an estate-tail to baron and feme, and to the heirs males of their bodies, remainder to the right heirs of the baron; baron and feme died before the re-conveyance made, and the gift was made to the son and the heirs males of the father, and the mother procreate, and yet these words, and the heirs males of the body of the father and mother, make a purchase. But as to this the other Judges who agreed with him in the judgment, said nothing. But Twysden Justice, held the covenant void, and that no use arises thereupon, but that the deed was void in this particular, and that judgment ought to be given for the plaintiff. For first, Ralph cannot take by purchase, being not right heir: nor secondly, by discent, because the estate was not executed in the father; and he said, there could not be a use by implication, but where the remainder is so limited, that by possibility it may take effect; and that if there be incapacity in the party, or if he refuse, the use is void, as it was in Paget's case. Also he held, that estates by implication might be by will, but not by deed, as 13 H. 7. And as to the intent it appears here, he had no intent to take an estate to himself for life; for he covenants to stand seized to the uses there after mentioned, and to no others; and there is no mention afterwards of any use to himself for life. But by the opinion of the other three justices, judgment was given for the defendant. Upon which the plaintiff immediately brought a new ejectment; wherein Levinz was counsel for him again, and thereby recovered some part of the land, but upon [80] another title; but no writ of error was brought by him upon the first judgment, though he was dissatisfied therewith.

Lessee surrenders, rendering rent. S. C. Raym. 222. 3 Keb. 131, 137, 446, 488. 2 Danv. 501, pl. 13. 1 Vent. 242, 272. 2 Mod. 174.

The case was, tenant for life made a lease for years; the lessee for years by parol without deed, assigned his term to the tenant for life, rendering rent; and in debt for this rent the question was, whether the reservation be good? For by Bigland, this here is a surrender, and the reservation being without deed, is void. But if it had been by deed, it had been good by way of grant. 12 H. 4, 17. 9 H. 6, 43. 1 Cro. Peto against Pemberton, Dyer 251. 2 Rolle 491. To which it was answered by Leak, Although this be not good as a rent, because there is no reversion, yet it is good by way of contract as a sum in gross. To which Bigland replied, Then debt lies not till all the days are past. Et per Hale, Though this assignment by operation of law turns to a surrender, yet it is not an express surrender; and if it be not good by way of reservation, it is good by way of contract; and so by assent of the other justices, gave judgment for the plaintiff, though all the days were not past.

Debt for rent against an executor in the debet, must be brought where the land lies. 1 Vent. 238. 1 Sid. 240, 266. 1 Saund. 238.

Debt for rent, and lays the action in London, supposing the lease to be there made, of lands in Oxfordshire, and that the lessee entered and died; and the defendant entered as executor, and the action was brought in the debet and detinet; and upon demurrer to the declaration, judgment was given against the plaintiff, for though the defendant is sued as executor, he is charged as assignee in the debet and detinet upon the privity of estate, not upon the privity of contract; and therefore the action ought to be brought where the land lies. Levinz for the plaintiff, & postea Hill. 5 W. & M. was the like case, and the like judgment entered. Hill. 5 Rot. 31.

[81] ABBOT against CHAPMAN.

In assumpsit exoneravit must be pleaded, cannot be given in evidence.

Assumpsit for money promised upon the marriage of his daughter, and upon non assumpsit a trial at Guild-Hall before Hale. The defendant gave in evidence a discharge of the contract, but Hale said, he should have pleaded exoneravit, yet he allowed it in mitigation of damages.

DOE against PARMITER.

Judgment in an Inferior Court pleaded that a plaint was levied & taliter processum fuit. S. C. 3 Keb. 127, 128. Post. 93.

Trespass for taking his beasts: the defendant justified by virtue of a plaint levied in a Hundred-Court by the plaintiff against J. S. upon which taliter processum fuit, that the plaintiff was nonsuit, and costs taxed, and a precept to levy it; upon which he took the beasts, and traverses (absque hoc) that he was guilty ante deliberationem præcepti or after the return, upon this the plaintiff demurred. And now Holt junior argued, that this short way of pleading a judgment in Inferior Courts, is not allowable. Sed non allocatur, for this is well enough; setting forth that a plaint was levied, but in pleading it they ought not to begin at the judgment, scilicet quod considerat. fuit. Secondly, He objected, that the execution in the Hundred-Court was by distringas, and not by levari facias, and cited several books to this purpose; sed non allocatur, for these books where they speak of a distringas, must be understood of a levari facias, for a distringas & sic in infinit' would be endless in an execution. Thirdly, The traverse is not good, and therefore the issue thereupon makes a jeofail, for he hath taken execution before the precept delivered to him; had it been after the teste, it had been good, as was lately adjudged in this Court, therefore the traverse should have been before the teste, or after the return; sed non allocatur, for the traverse is in prejudice of the defendant himself, if it be taken more narrow than it need, and not to the prejudice of the plaintiff. Fourthly, There is no statute gives costs in this case, but 23 H. 8 and 4 Jac. and those are when the plaintiff is nonsuit after appearance; now here it does not appear there was any appearance. [82] Sed non allocatur. For advantage cannot be taken of this by pleading, but by writ of false judgment, and the judgment shall be intended good till it be avoided.

DACRES against DUNKIN.

Death of one plaintiff abates the writ in all cases, but death of one defendant in trespass does not abate. S. C. 3 Keb. 127. 1 Lev. 165.

Trover, the defendant pleaded in abatement, that the plaintiffs Hegham and Penrice brought another action for the same goods, which is still pending, the plaintiff replied, that Hegham and Penrice are dead, whereupon the defendant demurred; and now Raymond for the defendant said, that the death of one plaintiff in trover does not abate the writ, because the property of the goods survives, and to this purpose he cited 2 Bulst. 262, Spring against Barret, Curia contra: in all action the death of one plaintiff abates the writ, but in trespass the death of one defendant abates not the writ, and judgment that he should answer over. But Wylde made some doubt, if this replication were not double in assigning the death of two plaintiffs in abatement, when the death of one abates the writ as well as the death of two? But by Hale, this is not double.

THE KING against GREGORY.

Declar. quod dominus Rex venit coram domino Rege allowed. S. C. 3 Keb. 127.

Debt by the King thus: memorandum coram domino Rege venit dominus Rex, &c. & inde producit sectam, the defendant pleaded the King had no superior in his realm, thereupon it was demurred; and now Saunders urged, that the declaration should be in the name of the Attorney-General, & unde Attornat. General. pro. domino Rege dicit, &c. Sir William Jones for the King, cited Rast. Entr. 655 b. a case in point like this. And per Hale Chief Justice, this is but an unmannerly way of declaring for the King, & adjournatur. But afterwards in Hilary term the declaration was adjudged good.

Error of assumpsit in the Court of Lime Regis, First, That the award of the venire facias is per quos rei veritas melius scire poterit for sciri. Secondly, In the entry of the jury it is qui electi, triati & jurati dicunt super sacramentum suum, omitting ad veritatem de infra content. dicend. 1 Roll. 766, Lit. p. And for these reasons the judgment was reversed, upon the motion of Levinz for the plaintiff in error.

WHALEY against GREENFIELD.

Tenant in tail covenanted to stand seised to the use of himself for 99 years, if he so long liv'd, remainder over, and then levied a fine, the remainder is made good. Vide ante 55, 76, 77, &c. 2 Show. 4, 5. A deed found to be forged after it had been found specially, and unquestioned for 66 years. Vide 2 Show. 5.

Ejectment: upon evidence to a jury at Bar, the case was: tenant in tail covenanted to stand seised to the use of himself for ninety-nine years, if he so long lived, the remainder to his first son in tail, the remainder over; then he levied a fine to another: and whether this fine shall make good the estate-tail limited by the covenant, or shall inure to the conusee? was the question; for by Hale, the tenant in tail does not here limit the estate to himself for life, but for years; and therefore this is not like Blithman's case, 3 Cro. 279, nor Beddingfield's case, ibid. 895, where the first estate being to himself for life, is all the estate he had power to dispose of: but here by the first limitation he disposes to himself only an estate for years, so that the remainder to his son may well enough arise out of the residue of the estate-tail, which he during the rest of his life, has power to dispose of; so this is a remainder executed in the son, corroborated by the fine; like to Duncomb and Wingfield's case in Hob. where tenant in tail bargained and sold, and then levied a fine to another, the estate of the bargainee is hereby corroborated. This matter was designed to be found specially: but afterwards upon the evidence the deed appeared to be forged, being indeed the same upon which the special verdict between Whaly and Tankard, was before found. See before, pag. 55.

[85] GUNTER against CLEYTON, AT GUILD-HALL.

Case for escape upon arrest, must shew cause of action.

Case, that whereas he had good cause of action against A. and sued out a latitat against him, the defendant being sheriff, arrested him, and then suffered him to escape, and returned non est inventus; and upon the evidence before Hale, the plaintiff was nonsuit. First, Because he could not prove any cause of action against A. which Hale held necessary to be done; but if he had declared of a cause of action for 40s. and upon evidence had proved but 30s. that had been sufficient (quære tamen it being special).—Secondly, Because he declares upon a latitat in placito transgress. and the writ produced is in placito transgressionis ac etiam billæ 20l. which Hale held a fault incurable, & postea in the same term, and in the same Court, between Cuse and Mildmay, in debt upon a sheriff's bond, conditioned to appear and answer in placito debiti, judgment was given against the plaintiff upon demurrer, because the writ was in placito transgres. ac etiam billæ, for this writ is not de placito debiti tantum.

MILLER against GREEN.

Trover de duobus nodis & aliis parvis tæniolis.

Trover among other things de duobus albis nodis, Anglice white knots, & aliis parvis tæniolis, Anglice small ribbons: after verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arrest of judgment, that aliis parvis tæniolis is incertain, and therefore judgment was stayed, for it does not appear quanta vel quales fuerunt. Withens for the defendant, Levinz for the plaintiff.

DIVE against JENMAN.

Declares that he did not do according to the statute, and does not shew in fact what the statute required. S. C. 3 Keb. 142, 151.

Covenant, and says the defendant covenanted to build him a house, secundum regulas præscriptas per statutum pro rædificatione Londini; and assigns for breach, that the defendant did not cover the cantilivers with lead secundum regulas præscriptas per statutum prædictum, judgment by default, and a writ of enquiry, and 15l. damages. It was [86] moved in arrest of judgment, that the breach was not sufficiently assigned, for want of alledging in fact, that the cantilivers by the Act ought to be covered with lead; sed per Hale, It being said, that he did not cover them with lead, secundum regulas per prædictum statutum præscript. it is an averment that so the statute prescribed. Levinz for the defendant.

THE KING against THE CORPORATION OF WINCHELSEA.

Upon a certiorari to remove orders to the Cinque Ports, they returned breve domine Regis non currit, &c.

Certiorari was directed to the mayor and jurats and commonalty, to remove orders by them made against proprietors of lands for relief of the corporation. They returned, that time out of mind, &c. there have been five ancient vills, scilicet, Hastings, Dover, Sandwich, New-Romney and Hithe, called the Cinque Ports; and that time out of mind Rye and Winchelsea have been members thereof. And that time out of mind, &c. brevia domini Regis, &c. non current nec currere debent seu consueverunt, save only in matters touching the person of the King, felony, or appeals, and their return was adjudged insufficient; for this Court is to see that the subjects be not injured in their estates as well as in their persons, 2 Cro. Brown's case, habeas corpus or mandamus lies thither: and by these orders they have imposed levies upon the estates of the tenants; and if such orders be not examinable here, they would be equal to Acts of Parliament; and this case is not merely civil between party and party, but between the corporation and party. Also the return here was not positive, but under a cumque by way of recital of their privileges. Upon this the return was quashed, but no fine for contempt, because they submitted to make return of the fact. Levinz for the King.

SHAW against STOUGHTON.

Divers probats and administrations where goods are in several provinces or in several realms. S. C. 3 Keb. 163. Vide 1 Lev. 78. 1 Roll. Abr. 908, 909. Hard. 216. 2 Leon. 155. Cro. El. 283, 315. Went. 46. Swinb. 357.

It was said by Hale, and not denied, that if a man die, leaving goods in the several provinces of York and Canterbury, several administrations must be committed. And so it is of goods in England and Ireland.

[87] BROMFIELD against TEIGH.

Distress is incident to a drift of common. S. C. 3 Keb. 163.

Trespass for taking and detaining his beasts till five pounds paid for their deliverance. The defendant justified, for that he had a drift of common to see that the common was not surcharged, and that these beasts were a surcharge upon the common, for which he took them and detained them till the five pounds paid in satisfaction of the trespass. The plaintiff demurred, and by Sir William Jones, the prescription for a drift of common, does not of itself warrant a distress thereupon, unless he had also prescribed to distrain. Curia contra, It is a thing of common right for preservation of the common; and gave judgment for the defendant.

HANSLIP against COATER.

Indebitatus infra jurisdictionem for wares sold, and does not say sold infra jurisdictionem. S. C. 3 Keb. 164.

Error of a judgment in an Inferior Court, in an assumpsit for wares sold, because it only laid an indebitatus infra jurisdictionem for the wares, but did not say they were sold infra jurisdictionem; and upon the multitude of precedents so adjudged, the judgment in this case was reversed; but otherwise Hale and Wylde held it might be well enough.

RANDAL against WRITTLE.

Rent out of gavelkind shall descend as the land. S. C. 1 Mod. 96. 3 Keb. 165. 2 Danv. 549, pl. 5.

The question was, if a rent granted out of land gavelkind in Kent, should discend to all the males equally, as the land itself out of which the rent issued? And the Court held strongly, that it should. But upon the motion of Serjeant Hardres, to be farther heard to the contrary, it was adjourned; but in Michaelmas term following it was adjudged upon argument, that the rent is of the same nature with the land, and shall descend equally to all.

[88] DISDALE against ILES.

Lease at will, lessor makes a present lease to another, but agrees that he shall not enter till after the day the rent upon the first lease is due, the lease at will is determined. Raym. 224. 1 Vent. 247, 248. 3 Keb. 166, 207. Q. 1 Lev. 144. Ante 80.

Debt for rent against tenant at will; the case was, the plaintiff after he had made a lease at will, made a lease for years to commence presently; but it was agreed between the lessor and the lessee for years, that he should not enter till after the day, upon which the rent of the lease at will was due. And whether this lease and agreement determined the estate at will, so that the action lay not against the tenant at will? was the question; and after some argument the Court doubted, and adjourned the cause. Sed postea Mich. eodem anno it was adjudged, that the estate at will was determined, and that the action lies not against the tenant at will.

HARLOW against BRADNOX.

Want of averring life cured by those words, in aretro existen'. 3 Keb. 166. Vide ante 50. Nelson's Lutw. 386, 387.

Replevin, the defendant makes conusance as bailiff to baron and feme, he being seised in right of the feme, for rent in aretro existen' the plaintiff demurred specially, because it is not averred that the wife is alive. Hale: The in aretro existen' is quasi an averment of the life of the wife; which after verdict, or upon general demurrer, would questionless be good, but this being upon a special demurrer he doubted. Twysden and Wylde held it well enough, though upon a special demurrer; whereupon judgment was given for the avowant.

Inhabitants of a market may sell in another market, notwithstanding the Statute of P. & M.

[90] TERM. SANCT. MICH. ANNO 25 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

SEMINE against SEMINE.

Citation to repeal administration, but the grant affirmed, upon which an appeal was sued, and both sentences repealed. A lease made by the first administrator in the mean time, good. S. C. Raym. 224.

Administration was granted, and the administrator by virtue thereof being possessed of a term, made a lease of the land, and after was a citation to repeal the administration, but it was affirmed; upon which sentence of affirmation an appeal was sued, and the sentence of affirmation thereby repealed, and the first administration repealed, and administration granted to another. And by Hale and the whole Court, this new administrator shall not avoid the lease of the first administrator, for this is only a repeal of the sentence in the citation, and so is in the nature of a suit on the citation; and so it is all one as if the first administration had been avoided in a suit upon the citation, and not as if the appeal had originally been brought upon the first administration, which thereby had been totally annulled. 6 Co. Packman's case.

[91] WILSON against ROBINSON.

Devise of my tenant-right estate, the fee passes and not the land for life. S. C. 1 Mod. 100.

Ejectment of lands in Underbarrow in the county of Westmoreland, and in a special verdict upon not guilty, the case was, William Baldwinson seised in fee of tenant-right lands there, made his will in these words: I devise to my cousin William Baldwinson, all my tenant-right estate at Brigisend in Underbarrow, with all that I and my father took of Rowland Hubberty, of His Majesty's lands, and the marquesses fee, with all my lands at Beckside. Item, I give 30*s. per annum for ever to the parson, and* 20*s. per annum for ever to the poor of Underbarrow.* And what estate should pass by this devise of tenant-right estate, whether an estate for life or in fee? was the question: for it was objected that by the words tenant-right estate, not the estate in the lands, but the nature, quality, and particular kind of the lands was described and specified; as all my soccage, or all my capite lands; for tenant-right lands differ from the nature of fee-simple at common law, being of the nature of copyhold finable, and as copyhold pass by copy, so these pass by deed without livery; but upon every death or alienation, the tenant must be admitted as in the case of copyhold; also when he intends to pass a thing in fee, he adds the words for ever, as in the case of the parson and poor. 2. The subsequent words, with all that I and my father took of Hubberty, (what all?) not a fee simple; but all the King's lands and the marquesses fee; and the last words, with all my lands at Beckside, can pass but an estate for life. And all is one intire conjunctive clause, and therefore can pass no more than an estate for life in any part of it; otherwise were they several distinct clauses of devise, as in 1 Roll. 844. nu. 1, 2, and Moor. pl. 153. But the Court held that the fee of the tenant-right land passed in this case; but because it does not appear how many acres there are of the tenant-right lands, and how many of the other lands; so that the Court cannot be ascertained of the quantities, a venire facias de novo was awarded. —Levinz for the plaintiff, Weston for the defendant.

[92] WILDMAN against NORTH.

In replevin the defendant may traverse the property in bar or abatement. S. C. 1 Vent. 249.

Replevin, the defendant justified and pleaded in bar, that the beasts belonged to a stranger, absque hoc that they were the beasts of the plaintiff. Upon this the plaintiff demurred, because this is only matter in abatement, and not in bar; and also it amounts to the general issue. Curia, In trespass this would amount to the general issue; but not in replevin, and may be pleaded either in abatement or in bar. And there needs no avowry pro retorno habendo in this case, for the goods being not the plaintiff's, the avowant must have a return of them, 2 Cro. Sakild against Shelton; and judgment was given for the defendant.

LOUGHER against WILLIAMS IN SCACCAR.

Lessee covenants with the lessor and his executors, to repair, yet covenant lies for the heir. S. C. 2 Danv. 235, H. 5. Vide ante 13, 26. Post, 124. 3 Lev. 189.

Covenant as heir, upon the lease of his ancestor of lands in Glamorganshire, in the time of Queen Elizabeth, for 99 years; wherein the lessee covenanted with the lessor, his executors and administrators, to repair, and to leave the premisses in repair at the end of the term; and now the heir brought this action against the executors of the lessee; whereupon the defendant demurred. And now it was argued for the defendant, that the covenant being only with the lessor, his executors and administrators, the action lies not for the heir, Richmond's case, Owen's Reports. To which it was answered that this is a covenant which runs with the land, and goes to the heir without naming him; as Spencer's case, and The Dean and Chapter of Windsor's case, 5 Co. Also the intent of the parties appears to be, that the covenant should continue after the death of the lessor, it being with him and his executors, and therefore it does not determine by his death, Sacheverel and Frogat's case, Trin. the 23d of this King in B. R. upon which judgment was for the plaintiff. Seys, Serjeant, for the defendant, Levinz for the plaintiff.

[93] GOSTON against SEDGWICK.

Writ of error in Parliament, not determined by a prorogation of Parliament.

Error in Parliament of a judgment in B. R. was determined by a prorogation of the Parliament; and a second writ of error was brought which also determined by a prorogation in November this term, till the 7th of Jan. next. And now a third writ of error brought, and a supersedeas moved for to stay execution; and at last upon several debates and great search of precedents, it was granted, the prorogation here being to a day certain, and no term interposing. But by Hale, though the writs of error be abated by prorogation without default of the party, yet if a term had interposed between the teste and return of the writ of error, no supersedeas could be awarded without shewing some apparent error in the record. Though writs of error are abated by a prorogation without any default of the party. And Wylde held, that although a term did interpose between the teste and return of the first writ of error, yet a supersedeas lies in this case, because the writ of error is determined by the prorogation, without default of the party. But afterwards it was declared by the Lords, and so the law is taken to be at this day, that a writ of error does not determine by a prorogation of the Parliament.

ATKINSON against WOODBURN.

Judgment in Inferior Court pleadable in bar or abatement to an action in Superior Courts. Ante 81.

Trespass vi & armis in the County-Palatine Court of Lancaster. The defendant pleaded in bar a recovery for the same trespass in a court-baron; upon which the plaintiff demurred. And Wylde Chief Justice of Assise at Lancaster, upon an adjournment to his chamber at Serjeant's-Inn; held it pleadable in bar, 40 E. 3, 27 a. 7 H. 4, 15 a. 3 H. 4, 11, 12, 20. Bro. Judgment 16. Sed 6 Co. 45 a. contra, and 5 Co. 62 a. that it is not pleadable in abatement. But after judgment was given for the plaintiff: for trespass vi & armis lies not in Inferior Courts; and therefore the judgment there when the action is vi & armis, is void; and if it be not vi & armis (in this case) it is not the same trespass. But he held ut supra, that [94] judgment in an Inferior Court may be pleaded in bar to an action brought in a Superior Court, and he also held it pleadable in abatement when it is for the same cause. Levinz for the plaintiff, Weston for the defendant.

EDGEBURY against ROSINDALE.

Covenant to run for 100l. at one time, and for 200l. more at another time; is within the Stat. of Gaming. Vide 4 Mod. 409. 5 Mod. 1, 4. 1 Lutw. 484. 1 Salk. 344. 2 Mod. 54, 279. Q. 1 Sid. 394.

Debt upon articles, whereby the plaintiff and defendant agreed to run a horse-race at D. tali die for 100l. and that they ran, and the plaintiff won. The defendant pleaded the covenants, whereby it was farther agreed, that at the defendant's request the plaintiff should bring the same horse to run with the other horse at another day and place for 200l. more. And then pleaded the Statute of King Charles the Second against gaming, that if one lose more at one time than 100l. upon tick, all securities given for the money shall be void. The plaintiff replied, that the defendant did not request him to run again at the other day and place: upon which the defendant demurred. And judgment was given for the defendant. For first, That the first 100l. was not lost, and then a new security afterwards given to run a second match for more, as it was objected was the intent of that statute, which allows the losing of 100l. upon tick: and secondly, Though the first 100l. and no more was lost in this case; yet here because the contract was for more than 100l. to be won or lost upon tick or credit, the whole bargain was void ab initio, and not made good by the event subsequent, whereby it happens that no more is lost in toto than 100l. and the statute being made to suppress the use of excessive gaming, shall be construed in the most extensive manner that can be to answer that end.

Condition to make such release as shall satisfy the plaintiff's council, defendant must tender. S. C. 1 Mod. 104. Raym. 282. 1 Vent. 255. 2 Danv. 39, pl. 33. Vide 2 Cro. 661. 1 Roll. Abr. 465, pl. 29. Moor 595, 596. 3 Mod. 191, 192.

Debt upon an obligation conditioned, to seal and execute such a release as shall satisfy the plaintiff's counsel: the defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff did not tender him any release to seal; whereupon the plaintiff demurred: and now upon hearing Sir William Jones for the plaintiff, judgment was given for the plaintiff: for the defendant in this case was to tender the release to the plaintiff's counsel, to see if he approved and was satisfied with it; and the defendant hath undertaken to do it. And this is not like to Lamb's case, 5 Co. 22 a. 23 b. where the condition is to seal such a release as the plaintiff's counsel shall advise; for in that case the plaintiff is to procure his counsel to draw the release, and then tender it to the defendant to seal.

Prescription to repair a key, and to have toll of all goods brought within the river, naught, aliter of all goods landed within the manor. S. C. 1 Mod. 104. Raym. 232. 3 Lev. 425. 2 Danv. 429.

Replevin for taking the plaintiff's sail: the defendant avowed as seised of the manor of Padstow in the county of Cornwal, and that between Wadebridge in the parish of Brecock and Slipper-point, in the parish of Padstow, time out of mind has been a key for lading and unlading of merchandize; which key he and all lords of this manor time out of mind, repaired, and there kept a bushel for measuring salt and other merchandize there, & ratione inde have had a bushel of salt (computing to the bushel 24 gallons) of every ship bringing salt between the said Wadebridge and Slipper-point, to sell, &c. as belonging to the said manor, and then lays a custom to distrain for it any reasonable part of the tackle of such ship; and that a ship of the plaintiff's laden with salt to be sold, came there, and for not paying the duty he distrained the sails; the plaintiff protestando that the lords of the manor had no such duty, & protestando, no prescription to distrain for it: he by his plea confesses the defendant is lord of the manor, and that between Wadebridge and Slipper-point, time out of mind there hath been a key as aforesaid, and the lords of the manor have repaired it: but farther he says, that the river of Padstow is ten miles long, and the manor of Padstow, a small manor of the extent of half a [97] mile and no more upon the said river, within which manor the said key is; and that the ship was brought to Nude, a place upon the said river longe distans a mole prædict', viz. the space of seven miles. And traverses absque hoc that the ship was brought to the said key, or any other place within the manor; hereupon the defendant demurred, and judgment was given for the plaintiff; for the having and repairing of a key within the manor, cannot intitle him to toll out of the manor for goods not brought to the key, nor within the manor, but to a place so far distant from the manor and from the key; nor will the repair of the key and the keeping of the bushels support the prescription of toll for goods brought to another place, though upon the same river: but if this had been a port, Hale said, such prescription within the port, might be good; as it is in 21 H. 7, 16 a. and in the port of London, and divers other ports, where the owners of the ports have such prescriptions: but Trin. 7 W. 3 in Communi Banco, sed intratur Hill. 5 W. & M. inter Crispe & Belwood, quod vide postea. A prescription for the lord of a manor to keep and repair a wharf within the manor, and by reason thereof to have toll of all goods landed within the manor, though not at the wharf, was adjudged good; for originally the lord was owner of all the lands of the manor; and therefore this prescription was held good in respect of the easement in landing the goods upon his soil which is in nature of a toll-traverse; whereas this here is only in the nature of a toll through for passing in the river, which is the King's common highway, and that without having a port or other interest in the river, or any place where the goods come. And though this case of Prideaux and Warne was cited as an authority in the case of Crispe and Belwood, in opposition to the judgment there given; yet the difference between them is manifest, and the case of Crispe and Belwood was adjudged ut supra by the whole Court of Common Pleas. Blenco and Levinz for the prescription in the case of Crisp and Belwood; and Wright and Lutwyche Serjeant contra. And in the case of Warne and Prideaux supra. Courtney for the plaintiff and Pollexfen, after Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, for the defendant.

[98] THE KING against BALLOW AND NORMAN.

For clipping and coining, the judgment is drawn and hanged. S. C. 3 Keb. 278.

They were found guilty of clipping and coining, and the question was, what judgment should be given against them? And it was resolved by all the Judges in England, except Vaughan Chief Justice de Com. Banc. that in both cases the judgment must be; to be drawn and hanged without quartering, according to Coke, 3 Inst. 17 b. as to coining; but contrary to him there as to clipping. No plea of franktenement without writ. 3 Keb. 277.

Error of a judgment in dower in the Town Court of Newcastle upon Tine, was assigned by Levinz, because the plea was held upon plaint only, without writ, and pleas of freehold cannot be held without writ, 2 Cro. 101, no not by custom, F. N. B. 47.

Yet here no such custom is alledged for it. Co. 2 Inst. 3, 1, a plea of detinue de charters cannot be held without writ, Britt. 128 b. Co. Entr. 129, Dower in London, per breve. And as to fines they cannot be levied in Inferior Courts without the King's writ. 44 Edw. 3, 28, 37. 50 Ass. 9. 3 Cro. 314. Owen 93, for thereby the King would lose his silver. But in ancient demesne fines have been allowed good, because these Courts were anciently the King's Courts. No body being ready of the other side; it was adjourned: but afterwards Hill. 26 & 27, the judgment was reversed.

VANASTON against MACKARLY.

Covenant to pay 8l. a year quarternatim.

Covenant in B. R. in Ireland, where the plaintiff declared, that he covenanted to serve the defendant five years, and the defendant covenanted to pay the plaintiff 83l. every year quarternatim, viz. 20l. 15s. at Michaelmas, 20l. at Lady Day, 20l. 15s. at Midsummer, and 20l. 15s. at Christmas, and assigns for breach non-payment of the whole. The defendant demanded oyer of the indenture, which was entered as aforesaid, saving that under the viz. it was 20l. at Michaelmas, and 20l. 15s. at Lady-Day. And issue was taken that the plaintiff did not serve the defendant; and in the continuance of the issue and trial and postea the entry was made thus: Nisi Capitalis Justiciarius prius venerit die Lunæ, &c. inter horas secundam & tertiam post meridiem, and the postea was, die & loco infracontent' venerunt partes, &c. and verdict and judgment was given for the plaintiff, whereupon error was here brought, and two errors assigned. First, The variance between the sums in the declaration and the indenture; and also that all the particulars do not amount to 83l. but come 15s. short, and without the particulars as set forth under the viz. it will not appear how much was to be paid at one day, and how much at another; nor is it shewn what the quarter days are, and the word quarternatim cannot supply that; neither is it said quarternatim per æquales portiones.—Secondly, The postea ought to have been tempore & loco infra content' and not die & loco. [100] But the Court answered and resolved, that quarternatim supplies all this after verdict, and that the variance under the viz. does no harm; for quarternatim shall be intended the usual quarter days, and that the payments were to be by equal portions; and though 83l. is not due, but the duty is less by 15s. yet the jury having given no more than is due, the demand of more will not vitiate, though in some cases the demand of less will hurt: and as to the second it appears the cause was tried and no default, and therefore it shall be intended the parties came at the time and place, judgment affirmed. Administrator of a term for 100 years, made a lease for five years, rendering rent, his executor shall have the rent, and the administrator de bonis non the reversion. S. C. 1 Vent. 259, 275. 3 Keb. 298, 427, 475. Lex Testam. 247, 248.

Debt upon an obligation to perform covenants, and upon special pleading and demurrer the case was thus: One possessed of a term for one hundred years as administrator, made a lease for five years, rendering rent to him, his executors and assigns, and made the plaintiff his executor and died; and now in an action brought upon this obligation, and breach assigned for non payment of the rent, the question was, whether the executor of the administrator, or the administrator de bonis non to the first intestate, shall have the rent? By Pollexfen it was argued for the defendant, that the administrator de bonis non shall have it as incident to the reversion which he has without controversy; and it is not like to Co. Litt. 46 b. where the husband possessed of a term in right of his wife, makes a lease for part of the term, rendering rent, in which case the executors of the husband shall have the rent, although the wife hath the reversion, for that is, because the wife is not party to the lease, which is the sole reason of that case. And the covenant here runs along with the rent.

Gould contra, he cited Latch 266, 267, a case cited to be so adjudged, which being there marvelled at, Jones Justice then said, Yes, faith, it was so adjudged. And Gould said, that this case is all one with the case of Co. Litt. for there the wife is in paramount the lease [101] by survivor, and so here the administrator de bonis non is in paramount the lease of the first administrator, as hath been often resolved, for which reason he cannot have a scire facias upon a judgment obtained by the first administrator; which the whole Court agreed. And Hale said, the executor of the administrator shall have this rent, but it shall be assets in his hands liable to the debts of the intestate, for which he shall be charged as executor de son tort; whereupon judgment was given for the plaintiff.

And note, in Michaelmas term following in another case between the same parties, the same point happened again, and the Court in Hale's absence doubted; and being moved again in Trinity term, Hale himself then doubted, but after, as I was informed, that case was adjudged (as here) for the plaintiff.

S. C. 5 Keb. 264, 276, 296, 302, 335. Bull. N. P. 50.

Error of a judgment in Com. Banco, where the plaintiff in an action joined assumpsit and trover by several declarations; and verdict and judgment was for the plaintiff in the assumpsit, and for the defendant in the trover. And it was argued and held by Hale, that though by the verdict the causes are now become several, yet in as much as no such action lay, the declaration is naught ab initio, and the judgment void: but Twysden doubted, if the severance by the verdict does not make it good, though it was bad at first. Adjournatur.

Where the assault only is proved, no more costs than damages.
S. C. 3 Keb. 283, 292, 303, 335.

Assault and battery upon non culp. was tried before Hale Chief Justice at Guildhall; the jury found the defendant guilty of the assault only, and not guilty of the battery. And Hale Chief Justice certified accordingly, to have the opinion of the Court upon the new statute: and whether the plaintiff should have full costs, or no more costs than damages, which were small? was the question; and upon the first debate it was adjourned. But resolved afterwards (as I heard) that he shall not have more costs than damages, for the battery is not certified to be fully proved, but the assault only.

Custom to repair a chapel, and to be discharged from repair of the parish-church. Vide post, 163, 164, 186, 187. 3 Burr. 1689. 3 Term Rep. 107.

Prohibition to the Ecclesiastical Court of Durham, suggesting that they are a parochial chapel within another parish of Northumberland, and that the inhabitants of the chapelry have time out of mind had a parochial chapel and divine service, sacraments, &c. and have used to be exempt from the repair of the parochial church, bells, &c. in consideration of their being charged to the repair of their own chapel, and that they have usually repaired the same; and yet that the defendant, churchwarden of the parish-church, sued them to repair the said church, the parish-bells, &c. And the prohibition was granted. And at [103] another day afterwards a consultation was moved for, for that this whole matter was pleaded there, and sentence given; and the case of Chapel Brimidge, Hob. 66, was cited, wherein such a case a consultation was granted upon motion. To which it was answered, that in the case of Chapel Brimidge sepulture was still reserved to the parish church, which was a reservation of the ancient right, which is not in this case. Also upon examination by the Court, the suggestion there was found false; and though it was decreed there against the plaintiff in the prohibition upon pleading the custom, yet it was to try a matter there not within their jurisdiction, for they could not try customs; their law and ours differing as to the nature of customs, Latch. 48. If a custom be alledged in the Ecclesiastical Court, and denied, a prohibition lies, Latch 200, a modus is sueable there; but if denied, a prohibition lies: the bounds of a parish are not triable there, 3 Cro. 228 adjudged, and Hetley 133, and 3 Bulst. 241, a modus was sued for there, and another modus pleaded, and a prohibition granted. At last the Court ruled the prohibition should stand, which having before been granted absolutely, a consultation cannot be upon bare motion without plea; and Hale and the Court ruled the plaintiff should declare upon the prohibition, and the defendant should plead as he thought fit. Upon which he traversed the custom which was tried at Newcastle Assizes, and the jury found no such custom; upon which a consultation was granted. Levinz counsel for the plaintiff in the prohibition, Weston for the defendant. Vide Trin. 28 & 29, B. R. a prohibition granted in a like case, and 2 Roll. Rep. 265.

[105] TERM. SANCT. TRIN. ANNO 26 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

WHITE against STRINGER. COMMONLY CALLED LORD TENHAM'S CASE.

Covenant in consideration of the marriage of his first son, to settle to him in tail, remainder to the second son, the consideration extends to the second son, and is not voluntary, nor void quoad purchasors. S. C. 3 Keb. 322.

In ejectment upon not guilty, a trial was at Bar; and upon evidence the case was: one seised in fee in consideration of marriage between his first son and A. and of a marriage-portion to be paid, which was afterwards paid, made a settlement to the first son and the heirs of his body upon A. begotten, remainder to his own right heirs; the father was then indebted. Three years after the father sold the lands for valuable consideration, and died: the first son and A. died without issue. And whether the remainder limited to the second son be fraudulent and void quoad a purchasor, he having notice of the settlement, and a covenant in his deed of purchase against all incumbrances, save this remainder to the second son, against which he had taken a collateral security? was the question. Serjeant Maynard for the plaintiff urged, that this was void as to the purchasor. For first, the consideration of the marriage, and the portion, extends not to the second son, no more than if the father upon the marriage and for the marriage-portion, had settled it to the first son and the heirs of his body; and after on the same day had settled the reversion upon the second son in tail, the remainder to his right heirs; this second settlement had been voluntary and void as to purchasors. 2dly, Though [106] there be notice of the settlement, and though it be excepted out of the covenant, &c. in the deed of purchase; that will not alter the case, for one that hath notice of a fraudulent deed, may falsely purchase, knowing that cannot hurt him. But Hale Chief Justice, and Wylde held clearly, to which also Rainsford agreed, dubitante Twysden; that though one and the same deed may be upon good consideration as to one, and voluntary as to another in some cases, yet not in this. First, It cannot be imagined that he intended to deceive a purchasor after the determination of an estate-tail, which might endure for ever, when the consideration of the purchase, as well as the remainder itself, by reason of the first estate-tail, was of so small a value. Secondly, The purchasor is not deceived in this case, for he not only had notice, but also collateral security against this remainder. Accordingly the jury gave their verdict, that the remainder was not void, but good against the purchasor.

MAYOR AND COMMONALTY OF LONDON against DEPUTEE.

In debt for scavage ley gager lies not. S. C. 2 Salk. 683, 684. 1 Show. 75. 3 Keb. 337. Post, 142, 174. 1 Lev. 15.

Debt, and declares that the mayor and commonalty time out, &c. have had scavage of all ships that come into their port, and that all their customs are confirmed by Act of Parliament, Rich. 2, and that the defendant in a ship brought into port so many deal-boards, for which he ought to pay so much for custom as scavage: the defendant waged his law, whereupon the the plaintiff demurred: and upon the first argument the Court gave judgment for the plaintiff: the action being founded upon a debt arising upon custom confirmed by Act of Parliament, though Co. Ent. 118 was cited contra. In debt for an amercement in a court-baron, founded upon a prescription to amerce, ley-gager lies: so Benl. 39 in debt upon a by-law, founded upon a custom to make by-laws. And the statute though it confirms their customs, does not alter the debt, but leaves that as it was before, still due upon the custom, as 2 Cro. Bradshaw's case, debts upon simple contracts assigned to creditors by virtue of the Statute of Bankrupts, though in debt for them the defendant may wage his law. But the Court said, in the cases cited by amerciaments upon by-laws, the debt is not immediately founded upon the custom, but upon the [107] amerciament, by the by-laws, &c. which by custom are warranted. But in this case the debt itself is immediately founded upon the custom confirmed by Act of Parliament. Simpson for the plaintiff, Levinz for the defendant.

BLACKBORNE AND HIS WIFE, AND ANNE HAIGH, against GREAVES AND OTHERS.

Baron and feme join, the trover being before marriage, the conversion after. S. C. 3 Keb. 62, 263, 329.

Trover for 200 load of wood, and declares, that the wives of the two plaintiffs dum solæ lost the wood; and that after Blackborn and his wife married, and the defendants afterwards converted: upon non culp. a special verdict found, that John Haigh was seised of copyhold land where the wood grew, and had issue three daughters the defendants, by his first wife; and the two plaintiffs his daughters, and John his son by a second wife; and that he surrendered to the issue of the said three daughters for eleven years, remainder to his two daughters for five years, the remainder to the three daughters by his first wife, remainder to his right heirs. The father died, the three daughters were admitted, John the brother died, the years expired, the three daughters entered and cut the trees, and the jury concluded, that if the admittance of the defendants was the admittance of him in remainder, for the plaintiffs; if not, for the defendants. And judgment was given for the plaintiffs, that the admittance of the three daughters was the admittance of John the brother in remainder as right heir, and so an actual seisin in him to make a possessio fratris, which makes the land discend from him to the two plaintiffs, his sisters of the whole blood, and not to all his sisters as heirs to their father; the authorities relied upon were 4 Co. 23 a. 3 Cro. 504. But then the trover being laid before the marriage, and the conversion after, it was objected, that baron and feme could not join, but the baron ought to sue without the wife, for the conversion is the cause of action. But the Court held it well with or without the wife; for the inception of the cause of action was in the wife by the trover, though not consummate till the conversion afterwards. Levinz for the plaintiffs, Weston for the defendants.

[108] Nota, In a case between Powes and his Wife against Marshal, the trover was before marriage, and the conversion after; and the Court was divided upon it, whether the wife could join with the husband. Twysden and Wyndham held she ought to join. Hyde Chief Justice, and Kelynge contra, which case is now reported 1 Sid. 172. But now all the Court agreed she might join in this case, or he might sue alone, for the reason aforesaid.

CRAGG against NORFOLK.

Assise arraigned, and day given to plead to the writ. S. C. Post, 120.

Assise for the office of Serjeant at Mace to the House of Commons, the assise was arraigned, and day given to plead; at the day the tenant took exceptions to the writ. First, Because it was audiend' for ad audiend'; sed non allocatur, it may be audiend' as well as ad audiend'. Secondly, The return of the writ was coram nobis apud Westmonasterium, whereas it should be ubicunque fuerimus in Anglia; for if the Court should remove from Westminster, the tenant is not bound to appear. Sed non allocatur. So it was when this Court followed the King. Then the day was appointed for the trial; whereupon the plaintiff made title by a patent from King James I. reciting a former grant to another, and this to commence from the determination thereof: per Curiam resolved, this recital is not evidence, whereupon he was forced to go to the Rolls, and procure the Master of the Rolls to let the roll be brought into Court, which was done accordingly. Then being put to prove seisin, he proved only, that he went to the House of Commons and demanded his place, but received no fees. But that in an action of the case for disturbance, he received 300l. damages, and this was held a sufficient seisin by some of the Judges, the damages being recovered in satisfaction of the fees while he was out of possession of the office: but others were of a contrary opinion, and so the matter was intended to be found specially: but afterwards the plaintiff would not stand to that, but became nonsuit.

Nota, 1 W. & M. in Communi Banco, in an assise for the office of Master of the Wardrobe, which King Charles II. gave to the Lord Mountague, but after turned him out, and granted it to the Lord Preston; whereupon the Lord Mountague [109] brought an assize: it was held by the whole Court, that the grant being in reversion as here, and reciting the former grant, was not evidence, upon which he was also forced to go to the Master of the Rolls, and procure him to send the roll of the first grant, which he did; and the Court in the mean time stayed and proceeded in other points of the assize.

LENTHAL against LENTHAL.

Gaoler suffers a voluntary escape in A. who comes back to prison, and escapes again in the time of a succeeding gaoler, he is chargeable. S. C. 3 Keb. 487. Bull. N. P. 69.

Debt against William Lenthal, son and heir of Sir John Lenthal, Marshal of the King's Bench, for the escape of one committed in execution in the life-time of his father, by whose death that office descended to the defendant; and alledges that he had him in execution, and suffered him to escape; upon nil debet the cause was tried before Hale Chief Justice, and was thus: The father suffered a prisoner to make a voluntary escape, the prisoner came back in a small time after to prison, and there was actually in prison at the death of Lenthal the father; and so continued afterwards in the son's time, till he suffered him to escape again: and whether he should be charged for the escape in his own time, after a voluntary escape before suffered by his father? was the question: for it was urged for the defendant, that after the voluntary escape by the father, he could not take him again in execution, though the party himself might, if done without his consent; and though he returned to prison, yet he was not thereby a prisoner, neither could either the father or the son detain him there. But for the plaintiff it was said, that it might be very mischievous, if he should be allowed to execute himself in such a manner, for the marshal commonly suffers prisoners in execution to go out upon security, and when he is sued for escapes, he pleads fresh pursuit and recaption; and so they go out and return at their pleasure; and if the successor might thus excuse himself, by saying, that his predecessor suffered the party to make a voluntary escape, though the successor had him actually in prison, all the creditors in England, of prisoners committed in the time of a former gaoler, may be thus cheated; for it will be easy for the successor to prove a voluntary escape [110] by his predecessor, though the creditor may not prove it voluntary; upon this the matter was found specially, as was also the same point between other parties the same term. And postea Trin. 27, upon consideration of 1 Roll. 902, Lord Robert's case, and Hob. 202, Sheriff of Essex's case, the Court having as they said, considered the matter, scilicet, Hale, Twysden, Wylde and Rainsford, without argument at Bar, gave judgment for the plaintiff in this case of Lenthal and Lenthal.

Executor wastes, and dies, his estate is not chargeable for this devastavit. S. C. 1 Vent. 292.

The sittings after the term this case was tried before Hale at Guild-hall; an executor wastes the goods of his testator, and died, leaving assets, and this defendant his executor: and whether the defendant should be charged quoad these assets? was the question: and Hale held the devastavit to be a personal tort, which died with him that did it. But upon the importunity of Saunders, of counsel for the plaintiff, he suffered it to be found specially. And afterwards Pasch. 27 Car. 2 it was adjudged by the whole Court according to this opinion of Hale.

Administrator sued for debt in proprio jure, and for another debt as administrator. S. C. post, 228.

Assumpsit naming herself administratrix of J. S. and declares that the defendant was indebted to her 30l. but does not say he was indebted to her as administratrix.

But then declares of another debt due to her as administratrix, and that upon account between them the defendant was found indebted to her in another 30l. which he promised to pay; upon non assumpsit a general verdict was given, and entire damages. Whereupon it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the first promise is, and must be intended of a debt due to the plaintiff in proprio jure, for [111] although she names herself administratrix, and in the end of her declaration produces letters of administration, yet that is only to warrant the second declaration, which is in jure intestati. To which it was answered, that admitting the first promise to be in jure proprio, yet the last being grounded upon an account with herself, and the promise made to herself in her own time, both may be joined in one declaration, and a general verdict and entire damages given; also it may well enough be intended after verdict, that the first debt was due to her as administratrix, though it is not expresly so alledged. To all which Hale, Rainsford and Wylde agreed, and gave judgment for the plaintiff. Twysden totis viribus contra: upon which a writ of error was brought immediately. But I never heard what became thereof.

Indictment for forging and publishing a deed at Chester, sent to Chester and there tried, and found guilty de transgressione & forgeria præd. And this was found to be insufficient, for nothing is found as to the publication. Sed non allocatur: de transgressione prædicta includes it: as a trespass of assault and battery, jury finds him guilty de transgressione & insultu præd., this includes the battery, and so it has been adjudged. Another exception was, that the mittimus was sent to the Justices of Assise at Chester, and not to the Chamberlain as it ought: sed non allocatur, it ought to be so in writs of process, they are directed to the Chamberlain, to command the sheriff to execute them, but not to command the Judges to try a cause; for all indictments, informations, records, &c. to be tried, are immediately sent to the Judges in all Counties Palatine, and not to the Chamberlain, &c. [112] THE KING against THE INHABITANTS OF THE COUNTY OF NOTTINGHAM.

Repair of a bridge in Nottingham, tried in Middlesex. Two inhabitants appear for them and the rest.

Information was against them for not repairing a bridge upon the Trent, between Newark and Mansfield, comitatu Nottingham, which time out of mind they have and ought to repair: two of the inhabitants in name of themselves and the rest, pleaded, that the Lord Limington, and other persons, owners of certain lands, called Bridglands, ought to repair it ratione tenuræ; absque hoc that the inhabitants of the county, time out of mind, have and ought to repair it: the Attorney General replied, that the inhabitants ought to repair, &c. absquæ hoc that the Lord Limington ought, and they rejoined, that the Lord Limington ought, &c. ut supra, and so issue was joined: upon which the Attorney General surmised, that all the inhabitants are chargeable; and after trial by an indifferent county, per assensum partium præceptum est vicecom. Middlesex, &c. upon which a trial was at Bar by a Middlesex jury, to try the right of repairing this bridge in Nottinghamshire, who found the defendants guilty.

Nota, This record, issue and trial. First, The defendants did not plead non culp. but that another ought to repair, and traverse that they ought, as per Hale, they must in this case of a bridge, that it may appear to the Court who ought to repair in case they ought not. Secondly, A traverse taken upon a traverse, and the issue joined upon the last traverse, that another ought to repair: and thirdly, The defendants nevertheless found guilty upon this issue, joining it to the first traverse, that they ought not to repair. And all this by the direction of Hale Chief Justice, with whom the other justices agreed.

Three joint-tenants of goods, two bring trover; defendant pleads non culp. and they recovered for two parts. Stra. 820. 4 Bac. Abr. 660. 5 Bac. Abr. 200. Cowp. 219. Bull. N. P. 35.

Trover by the plaintiffs, assignees of the commissioners of bankrupts, for divers goods, was tried in Middlesex upon non culp. before Rainsford and Wylde, ægrotante Hale: it appeared that the commissioners before this assignment to the plaintiffs had assigned the same goods to the plaintiffs and one Squibb: but that this assignment was afterwards cancelled, and a new one made to the plaintiffs only. And both Judges held, that though the cancelling of the first assignment does not alter the property, but it still remains in them all three, and Squibb is no party to the action, yet these two, non culp. being pleaded, shall recover damages by this action for two parts of the goods, and shall not be nonsuit. But the defendant might have pleaded this matter in abatement to the writ quoad tantum, which having not done, but pleaded non culp. they, though joint-tenants with another, shall recover damages for their shares: to which Sir William Jones for the plaintiff submitted, sed hæsitanter. But after the plaintiffs were nonsuit in this action, because they could not prove the party a bankrupt before an execution executed for these goods at the suit of another.

[114] SIR SAMUEL BERNARDISTON against SIR WILLIAM SOME, LATE SHERIFF OF SUFFOLK.

Case of a double return of members to Parliament. S. C. 3 Keb. 365, 389. Pollexf. 470. Nelson's Lutw. 32.

Case, and declares that a writ issued out of Chancery to the defendant, then Sheriff of Suffolk, to elect a knight of the county for the Parliament, and that the plaintiff was chosen by the majority of freeholders, and that the defendant returned the writ with an indenture of the said election, but maliciously intending to deprive the plaintiff, de fiducia & præd' falso & deceptive, una cum indentura præd' retornavit unam alteram indenturam in Cancellaria præd' specificant' quod aliæ personæ liberi tenentes vel major pars liberorum tenentium elegerunt quendem Lionellum Tolmach, ubi revera præd' Lionellus non fuit electus per majorem numerum liberorum tenentium, ratione cujus the plaintiff was kept out of the House of Commons, and put to great charge to prove his election in the House of Commons. The defendant pleaded non culp. and upon trial at Bar, Twysden Rainsford and Wylde held, and so directed the jury, that if this double return was made maliciously, they ought to find for the plaintiff, which accordingly they did, and gave him 800l. damages, though the evidence as to the malice and falsity was very slender. For the poll was granted, upon which the matter seeming doubtful, whether some of them who voted for the plaintiff had sufficient freehold to qualify them to give their votes, the sheriff by advice of counsel then present, and of some members of Parliament there also, made this double return to prevent an action for a false return, in case it should appear that some freeholders that voted for the plaintiff had sufficient freehold. And after upon examination in Parliament, the election of the plaintiff was adjudged good, and the defendant committed by them for making this double return: and now it was moved in arrest of judgment by North Attorney General, and Scroggs King's Serjeant, that this action lies not, and that no such action was ever [115] yet maintained in this case; for the case of Nevil and Stroud was never resolved, but in respect of difficulty sent to Parliament, where it never received a determination: and the reasons they urged against the action were, First, Because the falsity or verity of the return is only examinable in the House of Commons, who are the sole judges, and will punish such falsities, and accordingly they have so done in this case, by committing the sheriff; and he ought not to be twice punished for the same fault; and before the statute of H. 6. no action lay for a false return, and that only gives an action of debt for 100l. Secondly, The right of the party is not considerable in this case, for this is not an office of profit, but of trust concerning the State. Thirdly, What the sheriff does in this case, he doth as a judge; for he is judge of the election, and therefore no action lies against him. Fourthly, What the sheriff doth in this case is propter difficultatem upon his doubtfulness of the matter, and Judges of Assise may propter difficultatem adjourn an assise; the sheriff hath done no more in this case than laid the matter before the House of Commons, that the validity of the votes may be there deliberately examined. To which it was answered by Maynard, King's Serjeant, and Sir William Jones, Solicitor. First, That here was malice and falsity in the sheriff, and thereby damage and charge to the plaintiff, and all this found by the jury, which is sufficient to maintain an action in all cases, whether there has been a like action in such case or no before; for actions upon the case are founded upon the particular case, which is mostly new. And the case of Nevil and Stroud was not for a double return, but for making no return; for there two were elected, and the sheriff made no return as to one, and for that he brought the action. Secondly, The commitment by the Parliament is only to punish the contempt of the sheriff as to them and the State, but not to repair the party for the damage he sustained, and thus in several respects one may be twice punished pro uno delicto, as it falls out often in many cases, particularly in criminal matters, wherein the party is punished for the King by indictment, and by the party for the special damage he sustained. Thirdly, The sheriff is not a judge of the election in this case, but a minister to take the polls, of which in point of sufficiency the House of Commons is judge. Fourthly, Though the statute of H. 6 gives to the party the 100l. [116] penalty, that will not prove this action does not lie at common law. The Parliament intended only to give a certain penalty to the party, which was considerable then, though not so considerable now, and not leave them to a jury's discretion altogether for damages. Et adjournatur ad proximum terminum, when Hale being in Court, he, Twysden and Wylde, for as much as the return is said to be falso & malitiose & ea intentione to put the plaintiff to charge and expence, and so found by the jury, held the action lay, and gave judgment for the plaintiff, Rainsford doubting; upon this a writ of error was brought in the Exchequer-Chamber, where, by North Chief Justice, and five other Judges against two, the judgment was reversed upon the matter in law, that the action lies not.

TOMLES against CHANDLER.

Proviso in a mortgage to redeem, obligation to perform all covenants, conditions, &c. Non-payment is a breach of the condition, &c. 1 Bac. Abr. 529.

Debt upon an obligation conditioned to perform all covenants and conditions in an indenture of mortgage, where there was a proviso, that if the mortgagor pay the money at the day, that the mortgage should be void; and for breach assigns the non-payment of the money at the day: hereupon the defendant demurred; and for the defendant it was objected, that this was no forfeiture of the bond, but of the estate, and that this condition is annexed to the estate for the benefit of the mortgagor, in order to have his estate again upon payment of the money, but not to oblige him to pay the money. Of this opinion was Hale, but Twysden contra, and he cited the case of Westbrook, Hill. 22 Car. 1, B. R. Rot. 116, to be so adjudged: upon which it was adjourned; and after at another day he brought the record of that case into Court; whereupon Hale changing his opinion, gave judgment for the plaintiff. See 2 Cro. 281, and Yelv. 206, the like case, and the like judgment.

[117] ASTMAL against ASTMAL.

View denied quia constat Curiæ the husband died seised. S. C. 3 Keb. 360, 394. Vide 3 Lev. 169.

Error of a judgment in dower unde nihil habet in Durham. The tenants demanded view, whereupon it was entered, quia satis constat Curiæ that the husband died seised, negatur visus. Upon this the tenants pleaded ne unque seisie que dower, and thereupon issue, and verdict for the plaintiff: but the jury found that the husband did not die seised, and gave no damages: judgment hereupon for the demandant. Upon this error was brought and assigned, that the Court ought not to have denied a view, upon this constat Curiæ that the husband died seised, but the plaintiff should have counterpleaded the dying seised. But upon view of the books, 25 E. 3, 17 a. 2 Inst. 481, the Court held that this being in a writ of dower unde nihil habet, the view was not by common law grantable in this case, and where in the books view of dower is counterpleaded, that must be intended in a writ of right of dower; and they affirmed the judgment; yet quære hereof. But note, inasmuch as in this case the tenant pleaded, he thereby took upon him notice of the lands, which peradventure cures the want of view. 1 Cro. Wickam against Enfield.

REA against BARNES.

The name mistaken in the breach and amended. S. C. post. 124. Court denied leave to discontinue in debt upon an obligation, for the plaintiff may have an action of covenant.

Debt upon a charter-party made to George Rea master of a ship, by Anne Rea his administratrix, wherein are divers covenants between him and the defendant, and in the end thereof each obliges himself to the other in 1000l. for performance of covenants, and declares right till she comes to assign the breach, and then it is idem Georgius in facto dicit, for eadem Anna in facto dicit, upon this declaration the defendant demurred; [118] and now his exception was, that here no breach is assigned by reason of this mistake, in setting the name of George the intestate, for the name of Ann, the administratrix. But all the declaration being right before, and in the end it being eadem Anna profert in Curia literas administrationis, the Court held it meerly the default of the clerk, and amendable by the statute of H. 6. Vide 2 Cro. 587, where such a fault is held not amendable after verdict. But after the plaintiff prayed leave to discontinue for other faults in the declaration, which the Court would not grant for want of the defendant's consent, this being an action of debt for the penalty, and he is not without remedy, for he may have another action upon the covenant.

[119] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 26 & 27 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

CORNY AND CURTIS against COLLINGWOOD.

In consideration the bishop would absolve the defendant's mother at the request of the defendant, from an excommunication, the defendant promised to pay him. S. C. 3 Keb. 359, 434.

Assumpsit by the plaintiffs nuper guardian ecclesiæ de Deeping in com. Lincoln, and declares that whereas the mother of the defendant anno 21 Regis nunc, being an inhabitant at Deeping, and taxed towards the reparation of the church, was excommunicate for non-payment; that the defendant afterwards, 1 Junii anno 23 Regis nunc, in consideration the bishop at the request of the defendant, would assoil her, promised to pay the money to the plaintiffs: and after verdict for the plaintiffs it was moved in arrest of judgment by Jones and Wingfield, that the consideration was insufficient, for nothing is here done or suffered by the plaintiffs at their request, but at the defendants request. Also it is not shewed that they were churchwardens at the time of the promise, for nuper churchwardens might be at any other time. Sed non allocatur, for per Hale & Curiam, the mother hath a benefit by the absolution, which it cannot be supposed the bishop would have done, if the defendants had not promised to pay the money. Also it shall be intended the plaintiffs were then churchwardens, and prosecutors in the Spiritual Court, for otherwise they could not be concerned either to take the promise or receive the money; and it shall not be intended that the bishop would oblige the defendants to promise payment to those who had no right to receive the money; and after this had been twice moved, the Court gave judgment for the plaintiffs.

[120] CRAGGE against NORFOLK.

Assise taken by default, and after tried. S. C. ante 108. Bull. N. P. 121. Defendant in such case cannot plead or challenge, but may give in evidence.

Assise for the office of Serjeant of the Mace to the House of Commons. The plaintiff arraigned the assise the first day of the term: but the tenant being demanded made default; ideo capiatur assisa per defaltam. Then the demandant counted and shewed the King's patent for the office, which was read; and the jury being not yet sworn, day was given till Wednesday prox. when per Curiam, the defendant may give what evidence he can, but he cannot plead either in abatement or in bar of the assise, nor challenge. On Wednesday the cause was tried at Bar, and the plaintiff's evidence of seisin was, that one being committed by the Commons to the custody of Norfolk, the prisoner compounded for the fees with Cragge, and gave him 20s. which was held good seisin, though Norfolk was in possession of the office long before and after; for Cragge could not be disseised of the office but at his election. Also Cragge being in the lobby of the House of Commons, near the door of the House, laid his hands upon the mace, then in the hands of Norfolk, in order to take it, but Norfolk hindered him, which the Court held was good evidence, both of his seisin and disseisin; and the recognitors gave their verdict for the demandant.

LORD EURE against TRURON.

Error in Parliament, returnable a whole term after the teste of the writ.

Judgment was given in B. R. last Michaelmas term for Truron against the Lord Eure; upon which the Lord Eure brought error tested 26 Novemb. returnable in the House of Lords ad proximam sessionem 13 Aprilis proximi: upon which Levinz prayed the opinion of the Court, whether Truron the plaintiff might not take execution, here being a whole term interposing between the teste and return, during which time nothing can be done, so that for the apparent delay this writ of error ought not to be a supersedeas; especially in ejectment, and after verdict upon non culp. in which there can be no probability of error, and therefore [121] unless the defendant can shew an apparent error, as was done in Flowrdew's case, Pasch. 1 H. 7, pl. 5, & Pasch. 21, of this King in this Court, in the case of Wortley against North, and as was held Mich. 25, of this King, in Goston and Sedwick's case, the plaintiff ought not to be delayed of his execution. But Hale & Curia would give no rule for execution, bidding us to take it at our peril if by law we could; for executions are of course without rule of Court: but if the other side had moved for a supersedeas, peradventure they said they should have denied to grant it.

JENNINGS against HUNKIN.

Trial where the action is laid of a matter arising in another county.
8 C. 3 Keb. 350, 371, 509.

Case for calling him perjured knave, and laid the action in Devonshire. The defendant justified, because the plaintiff made oath in Cornwal, that he knew not that J. S. was plaintiff in such an action, ubi revera he knew it. Issue de injuria sua propria absque tali causa. And Sir William Jones now Attorney General, moved that this was a mis-trial, and that it should have been tried in Cornwal, where the justification arises: to which it was answered, that this being tried in the county where the action is laid, it is well enough, by the express words of stat. 16 Car. 2. Hale Chief Justice, Though the words of the statute are so, yet the intent and meaning of the statute is, that it may be tried in the county where the matter in issue to be tried arises; for it is not reasonable to imagine that the Parliament intended to alter the whole course of trials, and to have things tried in foreign counties where the jury are meer strangers to the parties, to the evidence, and to the point in issue; it being the great foundation of trials by juries or per pais, that they might not be strangers. But the intent of that statute was only to cure trials by improper venues taken in the same county where the matter is to be tried; and the other justices agreed, that this was the reasonable intent of the statute: but then Hale said, that knowing or not knowing is matter transitory and triable in any county, although the making oath before a Judge in [122] Cornwal be local, and then so the issue here containing two matters, scilicet the making oath, and the knowing that J. S. was party in such a cause triable in two counties; a trial in either of them is good per stat. 21 Jac. which hath been ruled to extend to cases where the matter in issue arises in two counties, and the trial is by one only, as well as where the matter in issue arises in two places in one county, and the trial is by one only. To which Jones answered, that no place is here alledged where the oath was made to fix the issue as to that in Devonshire, so all may be tried in Cornwal, and that the local matter ought to draw the transitory to it, and not the transitory matter, of which no place is alledged, the local. But if issue had been taken upon the knowing, the trial had been good; for then the local matter, scilicet the making oath had been waived: Curia advisare vult.

HAWES against SMITH.

[Disapproved, Segar v. Atkinson, 1789, 1 H. Bl. 104.]

Executor in consideration the plaintiff at his request accounted with him promised to pay; charged de bonis propriis.

Error of a judgment in assumpsit in Com. Banco against the defendant as executor, wherein the plaintiff declared, that whereas the testator was indebted to him, the defendant assumed in consideration the plaintiff at his request had accounted with him, and was found so much in arrear, to pay it. The plaintiff had judgment in Com. Banco de bonis propriis of the executor, and this was assigned for error; but over-ruled as no error, for the plaintiff was not bound to account with the executor, and yet he did account at the request of the executor. Et per Hale, Though a bare account will not oblige an executor to pay de bonis propriis, yet a promise in consideration of forbearance, will; and the case is all one, for it must be intended, that an express request was made to account, and thereupon an express promise to pay; otherwise the evidence would not support the declaration; whereupon judgment was affirmed per totam Curiam.

[123] LOMAX against ARMORER.

Pleas of franktenement cannot be without writ.

Error of a judgment in dower in the Court of Newcastle upon Tine, because it was given upon a plaint without writ: for pleas of franktenement ought not to be held but upon writs original. 3 Cro. 101, & 1 Roll. are cases in point, though a custom be there alledged for holding plea of them without writs original, which is not here pretended. Hale at first doubted, if a custom had been alledged; for in London they hold assizes of fresh-force by custom without original. To which it was said, their customs are confirmed per stat. R. 2. But he said, that in other places also they try assises of fresh-force by custom. But after argument of both sides, the judgment was reversed. Levinz for the plaintiff in error.

KIRKEBRIDGE against WILSON.

Bond of bail de com' Cumbr' to the sheriff, without saying de com' præd'.

Debt upon an obligation to the sheriff, which was: noverint universi, &c. Nos W. Wilson & Tho. Richards de comitatu Cumbriæ teneri Johanni Kirkebride vicecomiti, (without saying Cumbriæ or com' predict' ad respondend the plaintiff generally, but does not say in what action). The defendant pleads the statute, whereupon the plaintiff demurred: and First, It was held per Hale & Curiam, that the obligation was good, for though the statute directs the obligation to be taken by the name of his office, yet the bail being named de com. Cumbriæ he shall be intended sheriff of the county, and this will supply the omission of vicecom. com. Cumbriæ, or com. præd. Secondly, Though the latitat be in placito transgressionis, upon which the arrest was, and the condition is to appear generally; whereupon it was objected, that he is bound to answer all actions, whether debt, covenant, &c. yet the Court held the obligation good: for First, No other action shall be intended. Secondly, The [124] words of the statute require no more than an appearance, and no words ad respondendum, &c. so that they are but surplusage; and it was once a doubt, whether the sheriff could bind the party ad respondendum omnino. But afterwards by consent, the parties waived the demurrer, and went to trial in the original action, the defendant saving the sheriff against amerciaments. Levinz of counsel for the defendant.

REA against BURNIS.

Covenant to pay tantum per ton, breach in not paying for so many tons and a hogshead. S. C. ante 117, 118.

Debt upon a penalty in a charter-party, whereby the defendant covenanted to pay the plaintiff 3l. per tun for goods imported, and for performance, &c. each party obliged himself to the other in a penalty, and this action was brought for the said penalty, and breach assigned in not paying for so many tons and one hogshead, which came to so much. And upon demurrer the declaration and breach was ruled ill for assigning non-payment for the hogshead; for the covenant is only to pay so much per ton; aliter, were it to pay secundam ratam of so much per ton. But now the Court suffered the plaintiff to discontinue upon payment of costs, though the action is for a penalty, and the case had been argued.

GAVEL against SCUDAMORE.

Causes in Inferior Courts if removed per defendant, allowed more costs than damages, aliter if by the plaintiff. Post, 234.

Trespass in the Palace-Court ad dampnum 4l. 19s. The defendant removed the cause in B. R. where it was tried, and 15s. damages given by the jury: and the question was upon the new statute, whether he should have more costs than damages? For it was urged for the plaintiff, that this is not an original case in the Court, but brought hither by habeas corpus, which is not within the statute, as it has been ruled in Com. Banc. Curia. This seems reasonable, being removed by the defendant; otherwise, where the removal is by the plaintiff; for so every plaintiff may commence trivial actions in Inferior Courts, and after remove them hither, and defeat the [125] statute, and become more vexatious now than they were before the statute: they would advise with the Judges of the Common Pleas, that the same rule as to this matter might be settled in both Courts.

MONDAY against PORTON.

Induction not triable in the Ecclesiastical Court.

Prohibition, and declares quod placita de advocationibus spectant ad communem legem, & non ad Curiam ecclesiasticam; and that he was instituted to the church of D. and the defendant sued him in the Spiritual Court, libelling that he was instituted to the said church and inducted before Monday, and that Monday obtained a superinstitution upon him, which being a scandal to his title, he sued there to set aside the superinstitution; whereupon that Court proceeded, though this plea, there being induction, the case belonged to the common law. The defendant pleaded non prosecutus est contra prohibitionem. But pro consultatione habenda demurred. Et per Curiam, he ought to have a consultation, for though Porton was inducted, it does not appear Monday was inducted, and so the plea stands only upon the superinstitution, which is matter proper for the Spiritual Court. But afterwards it being shewed to the Court that Monday was inducted also, the Court stayed the consultation; so that the plaintiff might declare de novo upon his institution and induction. But upon this declaration the prohibition cannot stand.

WILSON against DONE.

Pleads that he made it appear, but does not shew how.
S. C. 3 Keb. 183, 393, 424.

Assumpsit, that whereas the defendant was bound in an obligation for payment of money, part of which was unpaid; the defendant promised, that if he made it not appear before J. S. that that part was paid, that he would pay it: the defendant pleaded, that he made it appear before J. S. that that part was paid, upon which the [126] plaintiff demurred, and had judgment in the Common Pleas, because he does not shew how he made it appear: and now in error upon this judgment here, the judgment was affirmed for the same reason.

BURDET against THRULE.

Account as receiver, and says not by whose hands. Account against one as receiver, when it should be bailiff is bad upon demurrer, but cured per judgment quod computet per default.

Account by the plaintiff a merchant, against the defendant a merchant, being his factor, de placito quod reddat ei rationabilem compotum de tempore quo fuit receptor bonorum & merchandizorum ad compotum inde ei reddend', and so declares of divers goods in particular, (but does not shew by whose hands) the plaintiff had judgment quod computet by default: upon which the defendant pleaded an insufficient plea before the auditors, whereupon a demurrer, and judgment for the plaintiff, and a writ of enquiry of damages. And now it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the declaration is ill. First, Because it charges the defendant as receiver, and does not shew by whose hands. Secondly, The defendant ought not to be charged as receiver in this case, but as bailiff, for he was to merchandize with the goods, and by consequence to have his expences, allowances and factorage; and judgment in account as receiver is no bar in an action of account as bailiff, Co. Litt. 172 a. 1 Roll. 119, nu. 9, ibid. 118. Let. B. nu. 2. 4 H. 6, 27 a. 43 E. 3, 4 b. 46 E. 3. But per Curiam, judgment was given for the plaintiff, for per Hale, though he should have been charged as bailiff, yet the defendant should have demurred to the declaration to take advantage of that, and this is now past by the judgment quod computet Levinz for the defendant.

HOW against STILE.

Lessor by lease and release, conveys his reversion to the lessee and J. S. to the use of himself. S. C. 3 Keb. 283, 309, 430, 452. 1 Stra. 34, 101. 2 Stra. 1092, 1253. Cruise on Rec. 48. 1 Burr. 79. 3 Bac. Abr. 452. Cowp. 704. 1 Term Rep. 741.

Ejectment, and upon non culp. and a special verdict found at Bar, the case was: Coke being seised, made a lease to Fountain for ninety-nine years and two years after by lease and release he conveyed the inheritance to the said Fountain, and another to the use of Coke and the heirs of his body, with divers remainders over: and whether by this conveyance the lease for ninety nine years was merged [127] in all or in part? was the question. And Pemberton argued for the plaintiff, that if there be any merger in this case, it is only for a moiety; and he said, the reason of merger by accepting of another estate, is not the admittance of the lessor's power to demise, as appears in this, that a new demise by the lessor to the same lessee, works no merger nor surrender of the first term, where there is an interposing term; but the true reason is, the coming of two estates together, which cannot stand together, and then the merger in this case extends only to a moiety, the other moiety of the new lease being to a stranger. Secondly, He argued, here was no merger at all, and that by the express words of stat. 27 H. 8, of Uses, which saves the right of him who is seised, to the use of another person. Weston contra, The true reason of merger in these cases is the admittance that the lessor hath power to demise. 5 Co. Ive's case. And so in this case the whole term is merged, for he has admitted a power in the lessor to demise the whole, though a moiety only to himself. And secondly, The statute saves the right of them who are seised, to the use of others. But here the lease is merged by accepting a lease for a year, before he became seised by the release to any other use, and so not within the statute. Adjournatur.

BIDDULPH against HARRISON.

One conusor in a fine dies before King's silver paid. S. C. 3 Keb. 393, 426, 438, 441.

Error of a fine levied by four conusors, and assigns the death of two, before the fine ingrossed, or King's silver paid. And whether the fine should be reversed in toto, or only quoad them two? was the question: and Newdigate Serjeant, argued it should be reversed in toto, because the writ abated, and so it is a fine without original, and cited Hill. 1662, B. R. Rot. 1179, Roe against Yeatly, to be so adjudged.

[128] TRAFFORD against TRAFFORD.

Suit pro rationabili parte may be in the Ecclesiastical Court. Q. 1 Vent. 259, 275. Raym. 470. Ante 100, 125.

Trafford sued his brother executor of his father, for his reasonable part of the goods of the father in the Spiritual Court, according to the custom of the province of York; whereupon Levinz moved for a prohibition, for this is a temporal cause, founded upon the custom, for which there is an original form in the register, and where there is a remedy at common law, the Spiritual Court is not to meddle, F. N. B. 53 H. But per Twysden, Rainsford and Wylde, absent Hale, the prohibition was denied, for in this case they said, and in the case of a pension, both Courts have jurisdiction.

THE KING against THE LORD LEE.

For ill usage of the wife the husband bound to his good behaviour.

Habeas corpus was granted to him the last term, to bring the body of his wife into Court, upon affidavits of ill usage, imprisonment and danger of her life, as was done before in the case of Sir Philip Howard; the Lord Lee brought his wife into Court, where the one charged the other with unkindnesses, and she made oath in Court, that she went in danger of her life by him; and notwithstanding divers affidavits were made in Court to the contrary, of his good usage, the Court offered to bind him with sureties, according to F. N. B. 80 & 239 B. But they declared they could do no more than bind him, and that they could not remove her from him.

THE KING against SIR ROBERT VINER LORD MAYOR OF LONDON.

Pluries hab. corp. returned nullum talem habeo in custodia mea, nec habui die impetrationis hujus brevis, ill.

Habeas corpus was directed to him to bring in the body of Bridget Hide, daughter and heir of a great estate to Sir Thomas Hide, which daughter he had by one that was afterwards the wife of Sir Robert Viner, and who is now dead, the daughter being of the age of thirteen, and left in the custody of Sir Robert at the death of her mother: and now it was alledged, that Sir [129] Robert had no right to detain her, her aunt being guardian; and that his design was to marry her to a great man, though she was already (as it was said) married by her mother to one Emerton, her kinsman. And now upon the pluries hab. corpus he returned, nullam habeo talem personam in custodia mea, nec habui die impetrationis hujus brevis vel unquam postea. Which return was adjudged ill; for it may be he had such a person die impetrationis of the first writ: whereupon he afterwards brought in the young lady by consent, to prevent an attachment, which the Court intended to grant, and the damsel being in Court, and asked the question, chose to stay with Sir Robert Viner, and not to go to her aunt her guardian in law, nor to Emerton her pretended husband: hereupon the Court would not remove her, but left her in the hands of Sir Robert Viner, upon his recognizance of 40000l. not to suffer her to marry while she staid in his custody; being ordered also, to let her aunt and the rest of her friends visit her, while she staid with him.

DEAKINS against SIR WILLIAM SCROGGS, KING'S SERJEANT, AND GILBY, IN B. R.

Serjeant and common person sued jointly, no privilege.

In battery against them; Gilby pleaded son assault demesne, Scroggs pleaded his privilege of serjeant to be suable only in C. B. upon which the plaintiff demurred, because he is not a sole defendant in this case, but sued jointly with another. It was argued on his behalf, that serjeants and their servants have privilege of being only suable in Com. Banco, 1 Cro. Serjeant Hoskins's Man's case. And further, as to the being joined in one action, that where the action is joint and cannot be severed, there if the defendants be sued jointly, the privilege of one is lost for want of privilege in another: but where the action is severable as in this case, the want of privilege in one defendant, ought not to toll the privilege of the other. Curia, A serjeant has no privilege against any Court of Westminster, and in fact they do practise in all Courts of Westminster, and are not confined to the Common Pleas. But if a serjeant be sued in any other Court than at Westminster, he may plead his privilege; whereupon a respondeas ouster was awarded.

[130] CITY against CITY.

Husband makes a voluntary assignment of a term, it shall not bar the wife's title to her customary part. 2 Jo. 204.

The father a freeman of London, being possessed of a term, by deed assigned it to his son, as a provision, and died; the mother sued in Chancery for her customary part: and now upon issue at a trial before Hale, after the term, whether the wife shall be bound by this assignment of the father, so as to be barred of her customary part? It was proved and found by the jury, that she is not barred thereby, it being voluntary, but has still a title to her customary part of the term: the same law of goods.

[131] TERMINO PASCHÆ, ANNO 27 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

OTTO against SELWIN.

Officer of the Admiralty justifies by warrant, without shewing the cause was within their jurisdiction. S. C. 3 Keb. 449.

Trespass and false imprisonment, the defendant justified by warrant out of the Court of Admiralty, which recites that a case was depending therein de re maritima, and commanded the defendant, their officer, to take the plaintiff; whereupon he took him. Upon this the plaintiff demurred: and for the plaintiff it was argued, that this plea is naught, for not averring that the cause was maritime, so as it may be tried whether it be so or no; for if the cause was not within their conusance, their warrant will not justify their officer; and cited 10 Co. case del Marshalsea. Sed per Hale & Curiam, it would be very hard to put the officer in all causes, to shew the matter was within the jurisdiction of the Court, to which they minister, it is sufficient for him to plead the warrant, which he is bound to obey; and in this case it does not appear but that the matter of the cause was within their jurisdiction. But in the case of the Marshalsea it appeared the cause was not within their jurisdiction; whereupon they ruled judgment for the defendant. Tamen vide Rolle's 2 Rep. 109, Martin against The Marshal, in case of an Inferior Court, (as in a justification by the officer of the Court of Equity at York) it must be averred that the cause of action arose infra jurisdictionem Curiæ.

[132] JAMES against PEIRCE.

Prisoner escapes and comes back, and is in prison, and a new warden is made, and then escapes; the plaintiff may sue the new or old warden for escape. S. C. 1 Vent. 4, 269. 3 Keb. 453, 463.

Debt against the warden of the Fleet for an escape, and upon nil debet a special verdict was found before Hale Chief Justice at Guild-Hall, and the case was thus: Peirce the former warden suffered a voluntary escape by one in execution; the prisoner came back and continued in prison till a new warden was made; he was turned over to the new warden, the now defendant, who had him in prison, and afterwards suffered him to escape. And whether the prisoner was so absolutely discharged by the first escape, that he could not be in prison again? was the question: and upon the first argument, and the authority of 1 Rolle 902, the Court was of opinion, that notwithstanding the first voluntary escape, when the prisoner was in prison again, he was so far in execution, that the plaintiff hath election either to take him as now in execution, and so charge the new warden for the last escape, or to admit him out of execution, and charge the old warden; but he shall not be obliged to do so, for the old warden may be dead, or perhaps not responsible. Yet before they would give judgment, they said, they would confer with the rest of the Judges, so that this point might be settled by all the Judges, wherefore they adjourned it for a week. But in the interim the plaintiff got an injunction out of Chancery, and so no judgment was given in this case.

But note, after this the judgment was given in the case of Lenthal against Lenthal, which see reported before, pag. 109.

Executor de tort, wastes and dies, whether his goods are liable to answer. S. C. 3 Keb. 533. Lex Testam. 523.

Debt against the defendant executor of A. executor of B. The defendant pleaded, that A. was never executor of B. nor ever administered as his executor; and issue thereupon, and a special verdict, which found that A. was executor de son tort to B. & si, &c. And the sole question was, whether A. being a tort executor, his executor shall be charged for the goods that the tort executor wasted, he leaving assets in the hands of the defendant? It was argued by Duncomb for the plaintiff, and Thompson and Hoyl for the defendant. And Turner Chief Baron, held strongly that he shall be charged, for B. having the goods, the tort in wasting does not die with him, but charges his executor; contrary to the opinion of Brown and Collins's case, antea in B. R. Et vide nunc stat. 30 Car. 2. Quære, If in this case upon the plea ne unques executor in another, the defendant shall be charged de bonis propriis, as he shall when he pleads ne unques executor himself?

ASHTON against JENNINGS.

Matter of precedence, where determinable. S. C. 3 Keb. 462. Q. Raym. 251.

Battery by the plaintiff a doctor of divinity, and his wife, against the defendant and his wife, for a battery done by the wife of the defendant, to the wife of the plaintiff: the defendant pleaded that her husband is a justice of peace and an esquire in the town of Plymouth, where the battery was done, and that the wife of the defendant ought to have precedence of the wife of the plaintiff, and that at such a funeral in Plymouth, the plaintiff's wife took precedence of the defendant's wife, wherefore she molliter manus imposuit upon the plaintiff's wife to remove her; upon this the plaintiff demurred. And now Saunders argued, that the wife of an esquire, and a justice of peace, ought to have precedence, and take place before the wife [134] of a doctor of divinity, for though a doctor of divinity takes place of an esquire (and as Wylde said, contends with serjeants at law for precedence) yet Saunders said, that was in respect of his degree in the university, which is personal to himself only, and not communicable to his wife; no more than the dignities of a bishop to the wife of a bishop, who is no lady, nor takes place as such, though the bishop himself be a Baron of Parliament, and takes place as such. Rainsford and Wylde being only in Court, said, they would not countenance such a justification, and that they were not Judges of precedence, but the Court of Honour. And without determining the right of precedence, or any regard had to it, gave judgment for the plaintiff, for that the defendant by his plea had confessed the battery.

HOWARD against WICKLIFFE.

Plea, no clear profits, repl. there were profits to 20l. Rejoinder, no clear profits: issue thereupon, and verdict that there were clear profits as the plaintiff replied, naught. S. C. 3 Keb. 466, 469.

Debt upon an obligation, conditioned to pay all the clear profits of a coal-mine; the defendant pleaded performance according to the condition. The plaintiff replied and said, that the profits amounted to 20l. and for breach assigns the non-payment of it. Defendant rejoins, there was no clear profits, & de hoc ponit se, &c. and the plaintiff similiter. The jury found there were clear profits, modo & forma, as the plaintiff replied, and thereupon judgment for the plaintiff in Durham, and error brought thereon, and the judgment reversed, because the replication does not shew there were any clear profits, but profits to 20l. which might be, and yet wholly swallowed up in the charges of obtaining it: and though the verdict finds there were clear profits, yet it is not found absolutely so, but with as the plaintiff had replied, whereas he did not so reply. And this is not cured by the last or any other Statute of Jeofails.

[136] RIDLEY against POWNELL.

Bishops may grant offices for one, two, or three lives, if so they did before the 1 Eliz. otherwise not. S. C. 3 Keb. 472, 505, 540, 560.

Case for disturbing him in his office of register to the Bishop of Bristol: upon non culp. a special verdict was found, that Bristol is a new bishoprick, founded in the time of H. 8. and taken out of the Bishoprick of Salisbury; and that this office is a necessary office, and hath been granted separalibus temporibus, since the foundation of the bishoprick to the grantee and his assigns for three lives: and that Robert the bishop, 1 Octob. 1639, granted the same to Israel Pownell, and found the grant, which recites, that John, bishop, &c. had granted it to Heape and his assigns, and the assignees of them for a term in the grant mentioned; and that Robert, bishop, &c. granted it to Israel Pownell, and his assigns, & idoneis assignatis suis, which grants by the opinion of some learned in the law, were good. That the present bishop in consideration of the surrender of these grants, granted it to Israel Pownell, and his assigns, and the assignees of them, for the lives of Nathaniel, Edward, and Israel Pownell; and that livery and seisin was made in the house belonging to the office by attorney, which grant was confirmed by the dean and chapter. And that Edward is still living, the bishop dead, and the present bishop his successor, granted the same to the plaintiff for life, and made livery as before, and the dean and chapter confirmed it. They also found stat. 1 Eliz. that all grants by bishops, of manors, lands, tenements and hereditaments, to their bishopricks appertaining, other than for twenty-one years, or three lives, whereupon the ancient rent should be reserved, are void. And if for the plaintiff, they found for the plaintiff, and if not, for the defendant. The case was argued by Weston for the plaintiff, and by Pawlett for the defendant. And Weston argued, that a lease for three lives cannot be good to bind the successor, and cited 1 Cro. Young against Stowell, & ibidem Young against Fowler, & ibidem Lambe against Walker, and Bolton's case, cited 10 Co. in The Bishop of Salisbury's case. In which cases it is said, the words usually grant, must be intended, granted time out of mind; which cannot be in this case, the See [137] itself being founded within time of memory: and though this bishoprick was taken out of the Bishoprick of Sarum, the prescription in the Bishoprick of Sarum, will not extend to this part derived out of the former, but remains in the old Bishoprick of Sarum. Farther he urged, that the verdict has not found any title or prior possession in the defendant, for though he be one of the cestui que vies, that gives him no title, admitting the grant were good, no assignment being found to be made to him; and there can be no occupancy of an office. Then the plaintiff being here put into possession by livery and seisin made to him, though there should be title in the assignees of Israel, yet the plaintiff in this case, (the defendant having no title nor primer possession) must recover as against a trespassor. Pawlett answered to the last matter first, and he said, the plaintiff declaring of a disturbance to him in his office, if the office be not his own, the defendant could not be guilty of a disturbance to him in his office, but shall be responsible to him that hath the right, if he himself has no title; and to the matter he argued, there was no difference between new and ancient bishopricks as to granting of offices, for they do not make grants by virtue of any prescription, but as owners, and by the power they have as being seised of the estates; and therefore before the statute, the bishops as well of ancient as new bishopricks, might alien their estates as any other person might: and if their grants of offices had been by prescription, the prescription should always have been pleaded, which is not done in The Bishop of Salisbury's case, nor in any other: offices of necessity are not restrained from being granted by any statute, and this is an office of necessity, neither is it any prejudice to the successor to have an officer ready in the office, of whom he is sure of by the office's being granted for three lives, and also surer of an able officer; in Young and Fowlers case, the grant of the register's place in reversion was held good for this reason. And March's Rep. 38, if an office was so granted before 1 Eliz. it is a badge of the necessity of such grants. And in Lamb's case, the reason why that grant was held void was, because it had not been so granted before the year 1609, which was long after the first of Eliz. But here it is found to be granted separalibus temporibus after the foundation of the bishoprick in Henry the Eighth's time. Hale Chief Justice, [138] Before 1 Eliz. there was no difference between the grant of offices of ancient and new bishopricks; both made their grants as owners, and not by prescription; and whether new or ancient, if they usually granted for three lives before this statute, they may grant so after. But this verdict is defective in this, that it does not find it was usually so done before 1 Eliz. but that it was so done separalibus temporibus since the foundation in the time of H. 8, which may be, and yet not till after 1 Eliz. to supply which defect he advised the parties to take a venire facias de novo. And he held, that this being taken out of the Bishoprick of Salisbury, there are the same prescriptions and appendances to this part which belong to the Bishoprick of Sarum. Cæteri Justiciarii inclined to the opinion of Hale, and that there was no difference between ancient and new bishopricks as to grants of offices, but that both do it as owners, and that neither ancient nor new bishopricks can grant otherwise than they did before the first of Eliz. But that they are all equally restrained by this statute; and that if it were not for the incertainty of the verdict in this point, they would give judgment for the defendant: but the defendant not agreeing to the proposal of a new venire facias, adjournatur: sed postea in Michaelmas term following the parties agreed to take a venire facias de novo.

BAXTER against DOUDSWELL.

Borough-English granted to a man and his heirs for three lives, it shall go to his customary heir, and not to the heir at common law. S. C. 3 Keb. 475, 486, 498. 2 Danv. 542, pl. 4.

Ejectment, and upon non culp. and special verdict the case was: one seised of land in Borough English, demised it to A. and his heirs for the life of B. A. died, leaving two sons, A. the eldest and D. the youngest. And whether the land shall go to A. as heir by the common law, or to D. as heir by the custom? was the question. Argued by Serjeant Maynard and Saunders, that it should go to the eldest son, for this is not a discent to him as heir, but a special limitation to prevent occupancy, and he takes it as a special occupant and a purchasor in this case, and therefore must be heir at common law. But it was argued [139] by Heneage Finch junior, that he takes in this case as heir, and so is 10 Co. Rep. Seymain's case, such an estate as this is taken as a discendable freehold. And then it ought to discend to him who is heir by the custom, which runs with the land, and guides the discent to the youngest son. And of this opinion was the Court, and gave judgment accordingly.

WEBB against BATCHELOR.

Church-lands subject to new charges by Act of Parliament. S. C. 3 Keb. 476, 507. 1 Vent. 273.

Trespass by the plaintiff a parson, for taking his beasts: the defendant justified by warrant from a justice of peace to take them for a tax for the repair of the highways. The plaintiff demurred, pretending the church-lands are not subject to such charges: but per Hale & Curiam, they are subject to new charges by Act of Parliament, as well as other lands, if they be not excepted; and gave judgment for the defendant.

THE KING against THE LORD FITZ-WATER.

Jeofails in informations, whether cured by verdict. S. C. 3 Keb. 459, 465, 485, 519, 555.

Information in nature of a quo warranto, for fishing in the river Thames, in a place extending to B. and seven parishes, as appear by the record. After verdict for the defendant it was moved by Maynard in arrest of judgment, that the venire is from one parish only, where it ought to be from all, and that this is not cured by the Statute of Jeofails, being in an information, which is excepted out of the statute, 1 Cro. Rex v. Talbott, and also the new statute of 16 and 17 Car. 2, contains an exception for all appeals, indictments and informations upon penal statutes. It was answered, that this is the fault of the prosecutor himself who sued out the venire facias, and therefore he ought not to take advantage of his own default. And the proviso except informations, &c. upon penal laws only, which this case is not. And to the opinion in Talbot's case they said, it seemed unreasonable to hold, that the King was not bound by the law quia not named in the law, for it appears by the exception, that the [140] Parliament took it the King had been bound, though not expresly named, for otherwise there was no occasion for the exception; and if in these cases the King had been bound but for the exception, he shall be bound in this case which is not excepted. Twysden and Wylde held this case was not cured by the statute. Hale seemed contra, & adjournatur. But afterwards in Michaelmas term the verdict was set aside, upon affidavits that the jury cast lots for their verdict, and gave it as the lot fell, and so the exception was not determined.

ROE against WILLIAMSON.

Ejectment of a lease for five years, and the lessor had only a term for three years. S. C. 3 Keb. 490.

Ejectment, and declares upon a lease for five years, and upon non culp. jury found that the lessor of the plaintiff had only a lease for three years, & si, &c. Hale held this verdict was against the plaintiff, for the judgment must be, that the plaintiff recovered terminum suum prædictum, which is five years, whereas the lessor's interest is not to continue so long, and perhaps the defendant may have the reversion after the three years expired, and so by this means the lessor of the plaintiff will recover the land for two years more than he hath right to hold it. And he said, that for this reason he before caused another plaintiff to be nonsuit. Wylde agreed with Hale, but Twysden seemed of a different opinion. Et adjournatur.

THE KING against PARKER.

Coroner's inquest finds that a man seipsum emergit & sic seipsum murdravit, quashed. S. C. Farsl. 16. Vide post, 152. 1 Vent. 239, 278. Sed 1 Sid. 90 & 101 contr.

The coroner's inquest super visum corporis, found that Parker felonice seipsum threw into a river, & in rivo præd' seipsum emergit, & sic seipsum occidit & murdravit: and this was quashed, because emergo is to arise out of the water, and not to drown himself in the water; and the felonice threw himself into the water does not cure it, for the going into the water does not make a felony, but the drowning himself in the water, and the conclusion & sic seipsum occidit, &c. signifies nothing, as [141] being without premisses; and to say a man murdered himself without shewing how, is insufficient: but then it was moved what should be done in this case, for the party being dead and buried for two years, there could be no other view in this case. Et per Curiam, that may be supplied by commission of enquiry; or the justices of peace, or of assize, may enquire of it without commission. But in either of these cases the inquisition is traversable, though the inquisition of the coroner himself in such case as the law is now holden, is not traversable. But Hale said, that anciently the coroner's inquest was traversable in this case, but never in fugam fecit. And it was ruled in this case, that the death should be presented next Assizes at York, and the inquisition traversed and tried the same Assizes, and so the matter determined, Information for usury, the defendant pleads another information of the same term. S. C. 3 Keb. 136, 426, 491. Post, 176. Ante 13.

Information for usury was thus: memorandum quod termino Sancti Michaelis, and so set forth the usury. The defendant pleaded quod ante exhibitionem hujus informationis, scilicet termino Sancti Michaelis (the same term) another person exhibited an information also against him for the same usury, and obtained judgment against him; upon which the informer demurred, and had judgment; for both informations, as here pleaded, refer to the first instant of the same term. But if another information was exhibited before, this same term, he should have pleaded that this information was exhibited such a day of the term, and that at another day before in the same term another information was exhibited, and judgment thereupon obtained.

Debt for scavage, and declares upon a patent of Edw. 4. The defendant imparles, and in a term after demanded oyer of the letters patents [which after imparlance he ought not to have] the plaintiff demurred quia placitum præd' in barra placitat' minus sufficiens, &c. The defendant rejoins, quod placitum præd. est sufficiens. Curia, This was no plea, and therefore does not warrant the demurrer in this form, ideo judgment for the defendant, & non quod replacitent, as was desired.

Grant of 20 of the best trees he has in his wood, to be taken by the grantee within 11 years, the grantor cannot take in the mean time. S. C. 1 Vent. 271. 1 Danv. 807, pl. 9. 2 Danv. 760, pl. 7. 3 Keb. 477. 5 Co. 25. Noy 32. Cro. El. 82. Yelv. 188.

The case was, one granted to another twenty of his best trees in his wood, to be taken at the grantee's election within eleven years: the grantor cannot take any trees in the mean time, at least not without a request to the grantee to make his election; and this is not like to Palmer's case in 5 Co. a grant to take twenty loads of wood out of his wood, for there all is wood, and if he leaves sufficient for the grantee to have his twenty loads it is enough: but here it is the twenty best trees, so that until he hath made his election of what he'll take for the best, the grantee cannot take any. Adjudged.

Stat. 14 Car. 2 appoints collections for poor by townships in Lancashire, Yorkshire and Derbyshire, this extends to no other counties. S. C. 3 Keb. 422, 460, 494, 539.

Trespass, a special verdict found stat. 14 Car. 2, 12. That whereas the parishes in Lancashire, Yorkshire, Derbyshire, and other counties there particularly named, and then hath the general words and other counties, are so large, that distributions to poor people cannot so conveniently be by parishes a stat. 43 Eliz. appoints, and therefore this statute appoints the provision and distribution shall be by [143] townships, and that the parish of Kenitworth in com. Warwick (being none of those counties named in the statute) is a large parish, having two townships; but it does not find it so large that distribution parochial cannot be well made. And the question was, whether the county of Warwick, which is not named in the statute, shall be taken within the general words, and divers other counties? And Hopkins Serjeant, cited a case to be adjudged in Com. Banc. two or three years ago, that the statute extends not to other counties, than those there expresly named: and to this Hale inclined, but the Court desired to see that precedent before they gave judgment, for which it was adjourned. But afterwards in Michaelmas term it was adjudged, the statute extends not to any other counties, but those only which are named in the statute.

HODGSON against THORNBOROUGH.

Copyholder leases for 16 years, rendering rent, the lessee leases part for ten years without rent, the last lessee assigns his term to the first lessor, he shall have the whole rent, without extinguishment or apportionment. S. C. 3 Keb. 500, 505, 518, 541, 557.

Copyholder made a lease for sixteen years, rendering 20l. rent, the lessee made a lease of part for ten years, rendering no rent, the under-lessee assigned his term to the first lessor: and whether the rent of 20l. shall be suspended or apportioned? was the question. And it was adjudged, that the rent shall neither be suspended nor apportioned, but that the lessor shall have the whole rent of 20l. per annum against the lessee; and Hale said, that if the lessee had reserved 5l. rent upon his lease for ten years, and he had assigned to the lessor without reserving rent, the lessor should have 20l. from his lessee, and the lessee should have 5l. from the under-lessor, and the under-lessor nothing against the first lessor, for each one shall have according to his contract, and there shall be no apportionment against the contract and agreement of the parties: also there can be no suspension or extinguishment of the rent of 20l. for that is always where the lessor enters wrongfully against the will of the lessee; and so Wylde said are all the pleadings, scilicet, that the lessor vi & armis entered: but in this case all is done by the agreement and contract of the parties, and therefore every one shall enjoy according to his agreement. And Twisden said, that what Coke says, that a rent-service cannot be suspended in part, and in esse for part, is without [144] reason, and without authority: and all the Court scilicet Hale, Twysden, Rainsford and Wylde agreed, that the lessor should have the whole rent against the lessee, and he nothing against his under-lessee, because nothing is reserved by him, nor shall the under-lessee have any thing from the first lessor for the same reason; for which they cited 17 E. 3, 16, vol. 56. Co. Litt. 148 b. 1 Rolle's 938. Dorrell against Andrews, 16 E. 3, anno 93. Brook's Extingu. 48, and the third resolution in Rawlins's case, which they said is not a point that judicially arises in the case, but a collateral opinion.

Case against the defendant, capital bailiff of Westminster, for an escape upon a mean process. Of fraudulent conveyances. S. C. 3 Keb. 526, 826.

Ejectment upon non culp. was tried at Bar. Ambrose Pudsy seised in tail, being under the age of twenty-one, scilicet of the age of twenty years, in the year 1649, married the daughter of Sir Thomas Davison, and had with her a portion of 2000l. Afterwards in the year 1653, Pudsy being extravagantly in debt 4000l. for which Sir Thomas Davison was bound; Sir Thomas Davison procured Pudsy to levy a fine, (wherein his wife joined not) of all his lands, to the use of Samuel Davison and Gascoign Eden, and their heirs; in trust that they with consent, and at the request of Sir Thomas Davison, should sell all or any part of the lands; the money raised thereby to be employed for payment of all debts, for which Sir Thomas Davison then was, or within fifteen years after, should be bound for Pudsy: and secondly, Of all such damages as Sir Thomas Davison should sustain hereby: and thirdly, Of all such proper debts of the said Pudsy, [not such as he was subject to as surety for others] as were then due, and should be certified by Pudsy and his creditors within a time limited; the remainder of the money, if any, to be paid to Pudsy, and the remainder of the land, if any, left to Pudsy for ninety-nine years, if he should so long live; the remainder to Samuel Davison and Eden, and their heirs, for the life of Pudsy; the remainder to the first and other sons of Pudsy in tail, the remainder to the right heirs of Pudsy. Proviso, First, That Pudsy may make a jointure for this or any other wife for life, not exceeding 300l. per annum. Secondly, That he may grant rent-charges to the younger [147] children. Thirdly, That with the consent of the said Sir Thomas and Ralph Davison, he may make leases of all or any part of the lands for any number of years, with or without any rent. A great part of the land to the value of 12,000l. was sold, and Pudsy and the trustees joined in the sale, and debts to the value of those for which Sir Thomas was bound, and that were the proper debts of Pudsy himself, were paid with the money. Afterwards he being in possession of the residue, (as by the deed was provided, so long as he paid the interest) sold 400l. per annum by himself solely, which the purchaser enjoyed many years together, without interruption or disturbance of the trustees. And in the year 1667 he mortgaged the manor of Bolton, the land now in question, having spent all the rest of his estate, to Gudgeon, who in the life-time of Pudsy, entered and assigned to Blackstone. Pudsy died, and the lessor his son and heir brought an ejectment, and recovered at York Assizes, the jury finding the settlement aforesaid to be good, and not fraudulent. Whereupon Blackstone the assignee of Gudgeon, brought a new ejectment, and the trial was now at Bar; wherein the jury by direction of the whole Court, found for the plaintiff, because the said settlement was fraudulent and void against the mortgagee for these reasons: for first, The continuance of possession, and the sale of 400l. per annum, by himself solely, notwithstanding the trustees joined in the sale of the other part, was a badge of fraud. Secondly, The proviso to make leases for any term without rent, with consent of the trustees, puts it in his power to defeat the whole settlement, and those were trustees of his own voluntary nomination. But whether this power gives him power to make leases presently, and during the fifteen years, was not resolved. Thirdly, The wife did not join in the fine, and therefore continues dowable: but if she had joined, it might have made the settlement to be upon good consideration, which otherwise is merely voluntary. Et per Hale, every conveyance prima facie shall be deemed fraudulent against a purchaser, but circumstances may alter the case.(1) Fourthly, Though it was proved that Pudsy upon the marriage promised to settle his estate when he came to age upon himself and his issue, (which it was agreed, was a sufficient consideration to avoid fraud, though an infant by law is not compellable to fulfil his promise) yet this settlement not being made till three or four years after he came of age, and not being [148] made directly according to the said promise, it shall not be presumed to be made in performance of the promise, without a direct proof to that purpose.

(1) Every voluntary conveyance is prima facie to be esteemed fraudulent against purchasers, but circumstances may alter the case. Promise by infant on his marriage to settle when of age, a settlement made accordingly, is not fraudulent.

CLERK against NETTLESHIP.

Promises to leave his wife 400l. if she will sell her land and let him have the money, his obligation for the 400l. not fraudulent. Ante 70, 146.

At Guildhall upon evidence at a trial before Hale, the case was thus: The wife having land as heiress, and the husband being a tradesman, and in debt, he promised his wife, that if she would join with him in a sale of the land, and permit him to receive the money for the use of his trade, to leave her 400l. at his death: they sold, and he had the money, and six months after being sickly and consumptive, he made an obligation to a stranger, conditioned to pay his wife 300l. after his death, and two months after died. And by the direction of Hale Chief Justice, the jury found the obligation not fraudulent quoad creditors, though in law a man cannot make a good promise to his wife, and though the obligation was made so long afterwards.

ST. JOHN against MOODY.

Case for disturbing him in his way quod habere debuit, without prescription or other title. S. C. 3 Keb. 529. 1 Vent. 274. Post. 493. 6 Mod. 116, 193, 315.

Case quod cum the plaintiff 27 Feb. 27 Car. 2, was seized in fee of a wood; the defendant machinans to disturb him of the profit thereof, dicto 27 Febr. in quodam clauso vocat. Lorkdowne, viam ipsius the plaintiff ducent' a præd. bosco par & trans præd. clausum usque D. quam ipse the plaintiff adtunc & abinde hucusque pro se, servis and carriagiis suis for the necessary use of the said wood per totum tempus præd. de jure habuisse debuit, obstruxit & quandam fossam ex transverso viæ præd. fodit & fecit, per quod ipse the plaintiff, via prædicta uti vel habere non potuit: after verdict for the plaintiff upon non culp. it was moved in arrest of judgment, that here is no prescription, nor any title whatsoever made to this way; and so the defendant cannot know what defence to make at the trial, and therefore the declaration is not good; it is not shewed [149] that ever he had possession of the way, but only quod cum de jure habuisse debuit; which in setting forth his title is not sufficient, as it might be in shewing the title of another person to whom he is a stranger. But Hale & Curia held it good, especially after verdict, and they compared it to the case of a water-course, que currere consuevit; and Twysden held it good upon demurrer; whereupon they gave judgment for the plaintiff. The defendant brought a writ of error in Cam. Scaccarii, and the judgment was affirmed. Pollexfen for the plaintiff, Levinz for the defendant in both Courts: vide postea such declarations held good upon demurrer.

WIGSON against GARRET.

Power to revoke by indenture sealed in presence of three witnesses, he by indenture covenants to levy a fine to uses, good revocation. S. C. 1 Vent. 278, 280. Raym. 239. 2 Keb. 366, 489, &c. Ante 127. 1 Lev. 30, & Bath & Montague, 3 Chan. Cases.

A settlement was by deed with power to revoke by indenture sealed in the presence of three witnesses. Afterwards the party without taking notice of his power, covenanted by indenture sealed in the presence of three witnesses, to levy a fine to other uses, and levied the fine accordingly. And after divers arguments it was adjudged by Hale and the whole Court, to be a good revocation; and yet the covenant of itself will not do it, because it neither passes an estate nor raises a use; and the fine itself will not do it, for that is not an indenture sealed in the presence of three witnesses; yet both together make a good conveyance and revocation of the use. This case concerned some part of the estate of the Earl of Leicester. Also it was said by Hale in this case; If there be tenant for life with power to make a lease for life, his lease for life without livery is good, and better than if livery be made: and so upon great deliberation it was resolved in the case of one Rogers. Twysden said livery in such case has been held to be a forfeiture, which Hale denied, for by the sealing of the deed the power is executed, and the livery void.

[150] SNELL against WEBLING.

I know what I am, I know what Snell is, I never buggered a mare; actionable by implication. S. C. 1 Vent. 276.

Action, for that the defendant habens colloquium of the plaintiff said, I know what I am, and I know what Snell is, I never buggered a mare. After verdict upon non culp. for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that the words are not actionable, for they do not charge the plaintiff with buggery. Curia contra, It is by implication a charge of buggery upon the plaintiff, which the by-standers satis intellexerunt, and gave judgment for the plaintiff.

WAKER against WAKEMAN.

Settlement of lands and tithes with a power to make leases, so that 5s. per acre rent be reserved, he leases reserving 5s. per acre for the lands, but nothing for the tithes. S. C. 1 Vent. 294. 3 Keb. 544, 547.

Settlement for life with remainders over, proviso, that tenant for life may make leases of all or any part of the premisses, so as upon every lease he reserved 5s. per acre for every acre of the premisses so demised; and the settlement was of divers lands, and also of a rectory, consisting only of tithes without glebe. He made a lease of the whole, rendering rent, which amounted to more than 5s. per acre for all the lands, but nothing for the tithes. And whether this was a good lease of the rectory? was the question upon demurrer. Saunders argued that it was, because the power is affirmative to make leases, and the restraint comes under the so that, &c. and that cannot be extended to render rent by the acre, of that which does not consist in acres; he cited Rolle, tit. Power, 262, as so resolved. Pemberton, King's Serjeant, contra, The usual powers to make leases are in the affirmative, as in this case, and the restraint under a so that, &c. and though, as here, the ancient rent be reserved, yet it is always held, that lands never demised cannot be demised, and yet it might as well be said in these cases, that the so that the ancient rent be reserved, cannot be intended to render the ancient rent where no rent was before rendered. Et adjournatur. Sed postea in Hillary term following [151] judgment was given that the lease was good, only upon the authority of the case in Rolle before cited. But Hale said, Si res esset integra, he should be perhaps of another opinion.

THE KING against WATTS.

Special bailiff not within the stat. 27 Eliz. 12, of taking an oath to execute the office.

Information against him for using the office of bailiff in arresting J. S. upon a writ out of this Court, not having taken the oath appointed by stat. 27 Eliz. 12. After verdict judgment was stayed, because it is not alledged that he was a general bailiff, and a special bailiff is not within the statute, Jones Rep. 249, and here the defendant shall be taken to be a special bailiff, because the charge against him is only for one single act. The Court inclined to this opinion, and stayed the judgment for the present; sed advisare volunt.

ELLIS against RUDDLE.

Lease of a bailiwick, rendering rent, void. Offices in fee not within the stat. Edw. 6, nor grants for life or years of them, rendering rent. 4 Com. Dig. 299. 3 Bac. Abr. 730. 1 Hawk. P. C. 313.

Debt upon an obligation conditioned to perform covenants in a demise of the bailiwick of the Savoy, by which inter alia, he demised to the defendant the goods of felons, waifs, estrays, &c. and made the defendant his deputy baily, rendering 60l. rent per annum. And upon demurrer the Court held the indenture void within the statute of Edward 6, against emption of offices; for though bona felonum, &c. may be legally demised, yet being joined with the making the defendant deputy bailiff, and a demise of the bailiwick to him, the whole is void. But because the truth of the matter was, that the King was seised in fee of the bailiwick, and demised to the plaintiff, who demised to the defendant; and offices in fee are excepted out of the statute, whereby under leases of such offices are also excepted inclusively, and for that the seisin in fee of the King does not appear upon record, the Court ordered a repleader.

[152] THE KING against ALDENHAM, ALDERMAN OF ROWEL.

Coroner's inquest of felo de se traversable, but not of fugam fecit. For want of the word murdravit quash'd, and a new inquest to be before justices of peace.

The coroner's inquest having found him felo de se, his executors moved they might traverse the inquisition. Et per Hale, Twysden and Wylde, silente Rainsford, it was granted; for the coroner's inquest finding one felo de se is traversable, 8 E. Bro. Traverse sans Ceo 229. But a fugam fecit found before the coroner is not traversable: afterwards the inquest was quashed for want of the word murdravit. And a new inquisition was appointed to be taken before justices of peace.

WISE against WISE.

Assumed to pay him the 20l. which he owed him by agreement inter eos fact.

Assumpsit by an executor, and declares that the defendant being indebted to the testator 20l. quas illi solvisse debuisset secundum agreamentum inter eos habit' promised to pay. After verdict for the plaintiff upon non assumpsit judgment was stayed; for this is no more than a general idebitatus assumpsit, because it does not appear what the agreement was, by deed or without deed, by obligation, or how.

EDLIN against BATTALY, IN CHANCERY.

Chancery relieves a purchaser of a term, who had been at charge in building against an old dormant title.

Bray possessed of a term for 100 years, in 1638 made his will, and Taylor, who married his daughter, executor; and devised the term to his own wife; the executor assented, she entered, &c. and after three years died. After her death the executor entered, and enjoyed the term till 1650, and then sold it to one who surrendered and took a new lease for 200 years, and laid out 250l. in building upon the premisses. Taylor died, and his wife survived him till the year 1669. Battaly, who married the daughter of Taylor, being beyond seas 20 years, and not knowing of his title, came into England in 1670, and being informed of this whole matter, and of his title in right of his wife, [153] took administration to the wife of Bray, and grandmother to his wife, and recovered by virtue of the term for 100 years in an ejectment. The purchaser and builder exhibited his bill to be relieved against this dormant title; and by Grimston Master of the Rolls; the possession going so long, and divers purchasers, and the last purchaser under the new term having no notice of the old, or of the dormant title to the residue of the term of 100 years: adjudged the purchaser should be relieved and hold the land till he be repaid his charges in building, discounting the profits received by the purchase; which Battaly perceiving, and that the value would not exceed 22l. per annum, and that the residue of the old term was only for 32 years, he agreed (by advice of the Master of the Rolls) to take 80l. of the purchaser, and to release his title to the old term.

FOWK against PINSACKE.

Indebitatus assumpsit pro præmio upon a policy, or pro salario.

Assumpsit, and declares the defendant was indebitatus 20l. pro præmio upon a policy of insurance upon such a ship; the defendant demurred specially, because he doth not shew the consideration certainly, what the præmium was, or how it became due; sed non allocatur; for this is as good as an indebitatus pro quodam salario, which has been adjudged good.

[154] TERM. SANCT. HILL. ANNO 27 & 28 CAR. II. IN BANCO REGIS.

PIGGOT against THE EARL OF SALISBURY.

Feme tenant for life, remainder to J. S. in tail, remainder to the husband for life, remainder over, baron and feme per fine sur concessit grant tenementa præd' pro vita baron and feme with warranty, which descends to J. S. Whether an estate for the life of baron and feme pass by the fine, or several and distinct estates for their several lives? S. C. 2 Mod. 109. 2 Jo. 88. 3 Keb. 695, 698. 4 Bac. Abr. 296. 3 Com. Dig. 350. 1 Term Rep. 738. Cowp. 179. Style 192, 193. 1 Roll. 855.

Ejectment upon the demise of Sir Thomas Leigh de 32 messuagiis in parochia Sancti Martini in comm. Midd. upon non culp. trial at Bar, and a special verdict found, the case was this: William Mintern seised in right of his wife Bridget, of a reversion in fee upon a term for years; they settled the tenements in question to the use of Bridget for life; the remainder to Francis Leigh an infant under the age of twenty-one, and Elizabeth his wife, the daughter of Mintern, and wife and heirs of Francis upon Elizabeth begotten; the remainder to William Mintern for life; remainder to the right heirs of Bridget: W. Mintern, and Bridget, afterwards viz. 7 Jac. by fine sur concessit concesserunt tenementa & totum & quicquid habent in tenementis prædictis ad terminum vitæ ipsorum Willielmi & Brigittæ & eorum diutius viventis, & illa reddiderunt al Haughton & Duncomb, tenend' sibi & hæredibus suis per totam vitam Willielmi & Bridgittæ & eorum diutius viventis with warranty, and this was in trust for Robert Earl of Salisbury, who intended to purchase the inheritance; upon which fine lessee for years attorned. And afterwards eodem term. 7 Jac. Sir Oliffe Leigh, father of Francis, and William Mintern and Bridget levied a fine sur conusance de droit to the Earl of Salisbury, with warranty by Sir Oliffe, which descended upon the lessor, son and heir of Sir Francis, son and heir of Sir Oliffe; and whether Sir [155] Thomas the lessor be barred by this collateral warranty of Sir Oliffe, descended on him? was the question. And all depended upon the fine sur concessit, of what operation that is; for if that inure as a grant of the estate in possession for the lives of William and Bridget, then it displaces the remainder to Francis, and makes way for the warranty to bar; but if it pass only the estate for life of Bridget in possession, and the remainder of William for life, as a remainder, then it does not divest the estate of Francis in tail, and so that is not barred by the warranty: and it was argued at Bar for the plaintiff, that only the estate for life of Bridget, and the remainder of William, as a remainder, pass in this case, and not an estate for life of William and Mary in possession. First, Because the words & totum & quicquid habent will otherwise signify nothing in the fine; for a grant de tenementis prædictis for the life of William and Bridget, had been sufficient to pass an estate for their two lives in possession. But the words & totum & quicquid habent were added to qualify the foregoing words that the grant might only pass totum & quicquid habent in tenementis; and it was said to be usual in fines sur concessit, when the grantor hath an absolute estate in fee, to grant tenementa prædicta: but when he hath a particular estate, then to add & totum & quicquid habent; and in Altham's case 8 Co. particular words put after general, qualify the general; as if a feme dowable of lands in D. and S. release to him in reversion all demands necnon dotem suam in D. this does not release her dower in S. Secondly, Where words are doubtful, they ought to be taken in such a sense as no wrong be done; as if tenant in fee lease for life, and does not say for whose life, it shall be taken for the life of the lessee; but if tenant in tail or for life makes a lease for life, without expressing for whose life, it is a lease for the life of the lessor; and the law regards a lesser estate by right, more than a greater estate by wrong, 6 E. 3. 17 Co. Lit. 42 a. 182 a. b. Thirdly, Such construction ought to be made in this case, because the party seemed to intend so to pass the estates; for otherwise a fine by William and Bridget, and Sir Oliffe Leigh had been sufficient, and they need not have levied two fines of the same term, which cannot be for any other purpose than to prevent a forfeiture of estate to Francis, then an infant, and no party to the fines, if they had granted the whole estate in possession; for thereby they have devested the estate of Francis, and given to [156] him title of entry, for by the attornment of the tenant for years, the fine sur concessit was executed, as was agreed per omnes, and the estate vested as if livery had been made. Finch contra, The words of the fine pass an entire estate for the lives of William and Bridget, and they ought not therefore to pass by fractions; and it is not to be considered what the parties intended to do, but what they have done; he cited 1 Co. Rep. Bredon's case, 1 Cro. Baker v. Hacking, Style, Garret v. Blisard. And this fine is well executed by the attornment, and therefore it devests the remainder to Francis, whereby the warranty descending upon Sir Thomas his heir, he is barred by the warranty, being collateral to his title. Hale and Wylde held clearly, the intent of the parties here was to prevent a forfeiture, and therefore not to devest the estate in remainder. But whether the operation it shall have, whether to pass an entire freehold for both their lives, or one divided estate, they would consider, & adjournatur. Afterwards the case being long delayed by privilege of Parliament, Sir Tho. Leigh took 2000l. of the Earl of Salisbury, and conveyed his title to him; and in truth as it seems the Earl was to purchase the estate, for he had built upon it all the houses in question: but Sir Francis being under age could not join, whereupon this conveyance was devised for the present, and Sir Francis died afterwards without joining. Levinz pro querente. Note, The parties afterwards agreed.

TERRY against STRADWICKE.

Trespass for entering his close, and taking a load of hay, not saying ipsius fœnum, naught after verdict. S. C. 1 Vent. 278. 3 Keb. 524.

Case, for that the defendant obstructed a watercourse, and turned the water into the plaintiff's land, whereby it was overflowed & viginti carectat' fœni adtunc & ibid. existent' corrup't fuerunt. After verdict for the plaintiff upon non culp. and entire damages, judgment was now staid upon the motion of Serjeant Hardress, because it is not said fœni ipsius the plaintiff, and so it does not appear to whom the hay belonged: et nil capiat per billam entered. And in another case Mich. term. ante, inter Holland & Ellis in trespass for entering his close, & blada, viz. tant' carucat' de wheate adtunc & ibidem existent' cum averiis depast' fuit, judgment was also staid for want of saying blada ipsius the plaintiff, and yet in both [157] cases the hay and corn were in the closes of the plaintiffs; whereupon it was objected they should be intended the hay and the corn of the plaintiffs: sed per Curiam, that is not sufficient. And Jones Attorney General, who said, he would move the case of Holland again, upon this judgment in Terry's case, did not move it.

COMBERFORD against BIRCHE.

Settlement, proviso, that if none of his brothers or their children be alive, then immediately, or after the term for 21 years, to remain to his brothers successively, two of his brothers died, the other alive, the term expired, yet it shall not remain to the brother. S. C. 3 Keb. 543, 548.

This case came out of Chancery by direction of that Court, to have the opinion of the Court here in this point; and upon demurrer in this Court the case was, William Comberford being seised of the lands in question, 3 Car. 1, settled them to the use of himself for life, remainder to John and Robert, and others his brothers successively in tail male, remainder to the lessor of the plaintiff, with power of revocation. And afterwards 16 Car. 1, he revoked and made a new settlement to the use of himself in tail, and afterwards to trustees, and of the residue to make leases for twenty-one years upon certain trusts, to make provision for the children of his brothers, and in default of them to make provision for his own sisters; and in case none of his brothers or sisters, or their children be living, then immediately, or after the term of twenty-one years expired, to the use of John, Robert, and others his brothers successively in tail male, remainder to the lessor of the plaintiff ut ante. William died without issue, John,

Robert, and the other brothers without issue male. But there are daughters of John and sisters of William still living. And whether any estate should rise to the lessor of the plaintiff? was the question: it was argued for the plaintiff, that the clause if none of his brothers or sisters, or any of their children be living, that it shall remain to John and Robert, who are his brothers, is impossible, and to be rejected rather than the whole settlement of the remainders defeated; and the intention of William, which for thirteen years together was to have such remainders, appears by both conveyances, and this part of the disjunctive, then immediately, depending upon the impossible clause precedent, scilicet, if none of my brothers or sisters, or their children be living; the conveyance may take effect well enough upon the other part of the disjunctive, scilicet, or after the term of 21 years; [158] and so the conveyance may well stand, and all the remainders arise upon the determination of the term of twenty-one years; and so the plaintiff hath good title. But it was answered and resolved by the Court, that all is one sentence and on condition precedent, if none of his brothers or sisters, or any of their children be then living, which condition is not in this case, and so all the remainders void; whereupon judgment was given for the defendant. Levinz counsel for the plaintiff, Weston for the defendant.

PLUMMER against WHITCHCOTT.

Warden of the Fleet in fee grants the office for life to A. who suffered escapes, and is not responsible; the warden in fee is liable. S. C. 1 Vent. 314, 515. 2 Jo. 60, 61. 2 Mod. 119 to 128. 3 Keb. 591, 56, &c.

Debt against the defendant as superior, for the escape of Holt, in execution in the Fleet, in the custody of Duckenfield, grantee for life of the office by the said Whitchott, who was seised thereof in fee: and upon a special verdict found before Hale Chief Justice at Guildhall, upon nil debet, the case was thus: Sir Jeremiah Whitchott the defendant, being seised in fee of the office of warden of the Fleet, granted the same to Duckenfield for three lives, at the rent of 1000l. per annum, and took security by obligation of 4000l. to save him harmless from escapes. Duckenfield was admitted by the Common Pleas, and an entry made of his admission, and that he made it appear to the Court that he was sufficient. Holt and divers other persons being in execution for great debts under Duckenfield, and he it seems being a person of desperate fortune, suffered all of them to escape, and went himself beyond sea with one of them; now he not being responsible, whether Sir Jeremiah Whitchcott should be charged with these escapes, upon the rule respondeat superior, was argued this and several other terms after by Saunders, Levinz, and others for the plaintiff, and by Holt junior, Finch and others for the defendant. And Hale upon the first argument was clear of opinion for the plaintiff, and that the action lies. The objections made for the defendant were, that at common law no jailor was answerable for escapes, but the remedy that is in such case is given by statute. The first statute which gives a remedy in this case was Westmin. 2, cap. 11, which extends not to this case, of an execution for debt, but only for arrearages in account, and Whitchott [159] is not superior to Duckenfield in this case, but Duckenfield during the three lives, is as well warden of the Fleet during that time as Whitchcott is in reversion; and the rule respondeat superior does not extend to these cases, but to those cases where the officer makes a deputy subject to his controul, which Duckenfield was not in respect of Whitchcott, Duckenfield himself being officer to that Court during his time, Co. 2 Inst. 382. 10 E. 2, Fitz. Debt 152, 192. Noy 69. D. & Cha. de Paul's case, 16 E. 3, Dam. 81. Fitz. Det. 148. 2 Inst. 381, and divers other books were cited. But for the plaintiff it was said and agreed, that debt lay not at common law for an escape, but case lay as it lies at this day for escapes upon mesne process: and the Statute Westm. 2, though it mention account only, extends to other cases by construction, notwithstanding the provision be there special, as the Statute de Circumspecte Agatis de Rebus Tangent' Episcopum Norwicensem, by construction extends to all bishopricks. And after this statute and before the statute 1 R. 2, 12, which is the first statute concerning escapes, divers actions of debt were brought for escapes in other cases besides account; as 16 E. 3, Fitz. Dam. 81. Mich. 41 E. 3, pl. 1. 41 Ass. Bro. Escape 28, which proves that debt lay for escapes upon this statute in other cases than account. And statute 1 R. 2, 12, which gives an action against the warden of the Fleet, extends to all other prisons and their keepers. And this Statute of Westm. 2, which gives the action upon account, gives the rule also de respondeat superior; also statute 2 H. 6, 10, is general, that all officers of Courts put in such clerks for whom they will answer. And to the objection that Duckenfield is officer, and therefore the action lies not; it lies for this very reason, for it lies not when the gaoler makes a deputy, because the act of his deputy is his own act, and he must be charged in that case as for an escape suffered by himself. But here he is charged for an escape suffered by an officer put in by him, upon the insufficiency of that officer. And no action lies against the deputy for an escape, but against the Master; and the statute provides, that if the gaoler be not sufficient, respondeat superior, and a deputy is not a gaoler but a servant to the gaoler. And in The Dean and Chapter of Paul's case, the reason why the action lay not against the dean and chapter was, Hale said, not because the superior is not chargeable, but because the action ought not to charge [160] the superior generally, but specially, for insufficiency of the bailiff of the franchise they had put in, which was not alledged in that case as it is here. And for authority in point were cited 39 H. 6, 32, The Duke of Norfolk's case, & Rot. Parliam' 12 E. 4, Mem. 5. where an Act of Parliament was made to excuse the duke from escapes in the time of Brandon, his officer for life, of the Marshalsea; when the soldiers of H. 6 broke open the prison doors, and turned out all the prisoners in the time of the war betwixt him and Edw. 4. Co. 9 Rep. 98 a. Be the gaoler tenant for life or tenant at will, so he be but gaoler, the superior must answer for the insufficiency of the inferior, Co. 2 Inst. 182. The Mayor, &c. of London, shall answer for the insufficiency of the sheriffs, who have the gaol, and Co. 4 Inst. 114, the lord of a franchise shall answer for the insufficiency of the bailiff put in by him, which is a full answer to the case in Noy 69. And though he appeared to the Court of Common Pleas upon his admittance to be sufficient, that is not material, they might be misinformed: but Whitchcott at his peril is to put in a person sufficient to answer for all escapes, or otherwise he himself must answer. And afterwards term Pasch. 29, after all the arguments Hale being gone, and Rainsford Chief Justice, all the Court preter Twysden, who seemed to hesitate a little, declared that the action lay without doubt. But upon an objection started by Wylde upon the Bench, that the averment of insufficiency in Duckenfield is not well found by the jury; for it is, that he was insufficient at the time of his admittance, and when the escape happened, which though it were, yet if he became sufficient before the action commenced, the superior is not to be charged; whereupon counsel was heard again, who argued that the declaration shewing that tempore admissionis & adhuc he was insufficient was good, and that the finding being in a special verdict, is well also, for it shall not be intended in a special verdict, that he became sufficient after the admittance and escape, and before the action brought. But afterwards Trin. 29, a new venire facias was awarded by the Court for the insufficiency of the verdict, and so no judgment given in the case. And some small time afterwards Sir Jeremiah Whitchott died before a new trial could be had, whereby the action abated.

Advantage cannot be taken of error in a judgment till it be reversed. Feme executrix survives, she is chargeable for damages recovered against the husband for his devastavit, but not for the costs.

Judgment against baron and feme, executors, quod recuperent debitum de bonis (omitting testatoris) and damages de bonis propriis of the husband: and in debt upon this judgment, declaring of a devastavit, it was resolved, that though the first judgment be ill, yet it is well enough to maintain this action until it be reversed; for no advantage can be taken of the error while it remains unreversed. Secondly, It was resolved, that this action lies not, for though the wife if she survive, is chargeable for the devastavit of her husband, yet she is not chargeable for the costs recovered against the husband de bonis propriis; and therefore upon demurrer judgment was for the defendant.

One having three daughters, devised the land to his wife till his heir come of age, paying so much to his heir, &c. and so much to the other daughters, the eldest daughter hath the fee as heir. And if Susan my heir die without issue, to the other daughter. Susan is by this tenant in tail. S. C. Lex Testament, 489, 490. 3 Keb. 589.

Ejectment, non culp. and a special verdict, whereupon the case was, Remnant being seised in fee of the lands in question, and having three daughters, scilicet Susan eldest, Anne and Elizabeth, devised to his wife all his lands till his heir come of the age of twenty-one, paying to his heir 20l. per ann. and to his other children 20s. a-piece in the mean time. Item, He gave to Anne and Elizabeth 140l. a-piece, and if Susan his heir die without heirs before twenty-one, so that the land fall to Anne, then Anne shall pay Elizabeth the portion she herself was to have; and if any of her younger daughters die without heir before twenty-one, her portion to be divided between his heir and the other daughter. Et per Curiam, upon argument: this is a devise of the inheritance to Susan, and she shall have the whole exclusive of her sisters, by reason of those words in the will, which call her his heir, and often mentioning his heir in the singular number throughout the will; but by the words, if Susan his heir die without heir before twenty-one, so that the lands fall to Anne, then Anne to pay Elizabeth the portion which she herself was to have, this is only an estate-tail, and not a fee-simple.

THE BISHOP OF CARLISLE, &C. against WELLS.

Spiritual Court may appoint guardians to infants, having only personal estate. Vide post, 217.

Debt by the bishop and his commissary, upon an obligation to them made, conditioned, that whereas the defendant is appointed guardian of an infant by the Spiritual Court, if he safely guard the infant and his estate, and render him a just account of all his goods, lands, &c. to be void. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiffs pretending a power to take such obligation, took this extorsive colore officii, whereas they have no such power, and so the obligation void; upon this the plaintiff demurred, and Weston argued for the plaintiff, that the Ordinary [163] may appoint a guardian to an infant to take care of his person and estate, and therefore great reason he should be allowed to take security for performance of the trust, both to himself who hath the care of the infant, and to his commissary who is Judge of his Court; and cited Swinburne 102, 106. 2 Rolle 205. And this is not like the case of The Bishop of Exeter against Starr, where the obligation was taken for caution upon excommunication, for that concerns the King. To which it was answered by Levinz, that if the Ordinary hath power to appoint a guardian or curator to infants that have only personal estates, yet where the infant hath lands as here, he hath not as much power. Swinb. 96, 97, 98. 2dly, If he hath power to take such obligations, yet they ought to be taken to the King, Bradston's case Roll. 1 Rep. as the Judges do in the King's Courts, who take all recognizances to the King. 3dly, If the bishop may take obligations they ought to be to him only, not to his commissary, for if he should survive and afterwards die, the obligation will go to his executors. Hale, As to personal estate, the Ordinary may appoint curators, but cannot as to lands, here are both: and if the Ordinary may take an obligation to himself, it does not follow he may take it to him and his commissary; and he seemed of opinion the obligation was not good. Sed adjournatur, and so hung till Trin. 29, when Hale being dead it was moved again, and the Court inclined that the obligation was good.

Custom is never triable in the Spiritual Court, custom that all farmers of such a farm use to find cakes and ale at perambulations. S. C. 3 Keb. 606, 609. Ante 102, 103. Post, 187.

The plaintiff declared upon a prohibition to a suit in the Spiritual Court, that all customs are triable at common law, and that the defendant sued him in the Spiritual Court, libelling, that all farmers of such a farm have used to find cakes and ale at the perambulation of the parish, to the value of 8s. aut eo circiter, and avers there is no such custom, and that he so alledged in the Spiritual Court, but they refused the plea; the defendant pleaded that there is such a custom, upon which the plaintiff demurred: et per Curiam, adjudged a consultation shall not go in this case, for the custom in farmers is no more than a [164] prescription in occupiers, which is not good in matters of charge upon the land, 6 Co. Gateward's case: but as to the objection of incertainty in the libel, in saying 8s. aut eo circiter, that is not material, for all their proceedings are all so.

Traverse absque hoc que aliter vel alio modo vel al auter lieu issue thereupon bad.

S. C. 3 Keb. 552, 612.

Trespass for battery and false imprisonment such a day and place. The defendant justified at another day and place, by virtue of a writ and warrant from the sheriff, absque hoc that he is guilty aliter vel alio modo, vel at any other place. The plaintiff replied that he is guilty aliter alio & modo, and at another place. Whereupon issue was joined, and verdict for the plaintiff: but for the badness and incertainty of the issue, upon motion in arrest, judgment was stayed, and a repleader awarded.

ADDERLY against WISE.

Action laid in London, and issue upon a feoffment in Oxfordshire, tried at London.

Covenant, and declared, that the defendant Thomas Wise conveyed to him the manor of Steeple-Burton in com. Oxen. and covenanted against himself, William Wise his father, Eldred his mother, and all claiming under them, and says, before the defendant had any thing in the land, Wild and Darby were seised, and conveyed the same to Gerard Croker in fee, who conveyed to William and Eldred, the father and mother of the defendant, and to the heirs of the mother; and that by their death it descended to Wm. Wise, eldest brother of the defendant; and that he conveyed to Rowny and his heirs; and that afterwards William the brother conveyed to the defendant and his heirs, and so assigns for breach, that the defendant when he conveyed to the plaintiff had no title. The defendant confessed the seisin of Croker, but sayeth, that before the feoffment to his father and mother, Croker infeoffed Crook and Brampston, and after entered upon them, and infeoffed his father and mother, and that Crook and Brampston entered upon [165] them, and were seised de pristino statu, that his father died and his mother survived, entered and disseised Crook and Brampston, and died seised within five years after, and the tenements descended to his brother William, and he infeoffed Rowny, and that Crook and Brampston entered and infeoffed the defendant whereby he was seised, and being so seised, conveyed to the plaintiff, prout, &c. The plaintiff maintained the seisin of Croker, and so made title as he declared, absque hoc, that Croker enfeoffed Crook and Brampston, and so issue joined upon the feoffment. And this action was tried in London, whereas the action was local, supposing the conveyance to the plaintiff to be made there. And after verdict this was moved in arrest of judgment to be a mistrial, for a feoffment in Oxfordshire, of lands there, is local and ought to be tried there. But per Vaughan Chief Justice & Curiam, resolved this is cured by the Statute of Jeofails, 17 Car. 2, by the express words thereof, being tried in the county where the action is brought, & vide 1 Saund. 246. Trin. 22 Car. 2, B. R. Rot. 902, inter Croft and Boil in case for words at London, justification at Oxford, issue upon the justification, and tried at London, where the action was brought, and adjudged to be cured by this Act.
